Members of the Ram first string grid team convened last week and voted on an all-opponent eleven, selecting the players on opposing teams who caused them the most trouble during the past season.

Los Angeles Junior College placed more men on the team than any other one of the Rams' opponents, although they were defeated in their encounter with Sweet's men by the score of 20 to 7. Three members of the Cub squad were picked on the first team by a consensus of the opinions of the gridders.

Sacramento, conference champions and victors over the Rams, landed two positions, while the rest were divided among Marin, Pasadena, U.S.F. Frosh, San Mateo, and Modesto. The only opposing teams which were not represented were State and San Mateo.

Two players tied for the highest number of votes, Sartore of Sacramento and Johnson of Marin, both backs, each received twenty-four votes from members of the Ram squad. Gland, colored end from Los Angeles, was acclaimed the best end met this year, while Stepp, of Pasadena, was declared the best tackle.

The squads, as selected by the players on the San Francisco eleven, follow:

Radio Class Draws Student Interest

In an effort to give the student the most complete experience and knowledge possible in the field of radio, Radio 51A has proved to be one of the most invaluable courses offered in the college curriculum. With the arrival of all latest type equipment and the opportunity for students to work in a modern trade school with facilities unexcelled, it is possible for one to know all actual workings in radio and gain a foothold in that field.

"At present," stated Lowell Hollingsworth, instructor, "the students are just starting to learn the rudiments of radio. Radio is a very large field and many different phases of technical knowledge may be acquired. It is advisable for the student, who is interested in radio, by that I mean not merely for gaining credits, but has an active interest, to enroll in this course in his first semester in college. Thus he is able to take a full two-year course. By the end of that period, a thorough knowledge will have been acquired and he will have a good knowledge of the radio game."

At present, students are working on more or less simplified set productions, but as they gain this knowledge, work into more advanced radio production will be conducted. Later, different types of complicated sets will be built, such as super-heterodyne sets.

It is planned to stress next semester's work on learning the Morris code system. One of the many modern facilities, to be installed in the Samuel Gompers School is a code room, which is used for study code. Telegraph keys are located on long tables in the L-shaped room and students take their places beside a key. Each key is connected to an oscillator, which makes dots and dashes audible in order that they may be understood for the purpose of code learning.

Berman Commended For Nebulae Study

In the article, "The Rotation of Our Galaxy" in this month's Scientific American, Doctor Henry Norris Russell, President of the American Astronomical Society, cites Doctor Louis Berman, head of the college Astronomy Department, for his publication of his thorough study of the motions of planetary nebulae.

Says Dr. Russell, "Comparing the observed radiol velocities of planetary nebulae with the proper motions observed by Van Maanen, and utilizing also the observed brightness, Dr. Berman obtains by an ingenious series of approximations, estimates of nebulae distances ranging from 2500 light-years to almost 60,000. These computations make it possible to sort the nebulae into nearer and more distant groups."

Dr. Berman found among other things that the planetary nebulae themselves are large affairs with an average diameter of some 80,000 times the earth's distance from the sun. By an unhappy chance (for us) not one of the nebulae appears to be nearer to us than 2,400 light years. If a sample one was as near us as Acturus or Vega, it would look nearly twice as big as the moon and its total light would outshine either of these stars.

DAMAGED DOCUMENT

RAM'S HORN

Editor:

For the first time in the brief history of the San Francisco Junior College final examinations are to be given within a period of one week. No doubt this occurs because of the change of the school calendar enabling students to have a longer summer vacation.

Previously students of the college had to remain in school until the second week of June in order to receive final grades. By that time open jobs are scarce, because of other colleges and universities closing at an earlier date and their students filling the jobs.

Having the examinations given in one week is not the only new feature of the college. Also during this period students, particularly those of the department, must continue to go to class. The only exception to this is when you have an examination scheduled at conflicting times, the examination still has first call.

Many objections are being raised by the students. It is generally understood school is officially closed the Friday before examinations begin. This is the usual procedure at other institutions and seemed to be so up to now at the San Francisco Junior College.

Students depend upon their spare time between examinations to study for the next examination. Perhaps the college is trying to prevent "cramming", although it is only causing extra hardship to students in need of the extra time, by requiring them to go to class and do the required homework.

The only hope of the students is that this is only a temporary condition and will cease to exist after this semester, for by next semester the business department shall have ample opportunity to arrange its schedule, so as to not make it necessary for students to attend class during final examination week.

BUSINESS STUDENT.

(Ed.'s Note: The following letter was submitted to the Ram's Horn by Dean Edwin C. Browne to whom it was addressed.)

Dear Mr. Browne:

May I express my appreciation for the fine cooperation you and the members of the Executive Council gave in affording me the opportunity to participate in the Student Institute of Pacific Relations held at Napa during the Thanksgiving holidays. I am sure that it was extremely worthwhile for this college to be represented inasmuch as eight other institutions had also sent delegates.

Personally I feel that I gained a great deal from this experience, not only because I learned more about the situations and problems in the Orient but also because I now have a greater understanding of the racial problems of the Pacific area. Not only was there an opportunity to gain information at the convention, but I also found it most enjoyable to meet and talk with delegates from other schools and countries. This conference was most beneficial to me.

Thank you again for your assistance in providing this opportunity for the San Francisco Junior College to be repreaented.

Very truly yours,
WALTER THOMPSON.

Pierre Monteux arrived in San Francisco last week to begin rehearsals for the symphony season beginning December 10. And before the season has advanced any further he wants to know what the symphony audiences want. Last season there was a great deal of adverse criticism because of the amount of modern music played.

Now Mr. Monteux wants what might be termed a poll of opinion on this very pertinent question and we should like to present our letter to Mr. Monteux in the form of this column. This whole idea of modern or contemporary music is a much-discussed and often misused queation and cannot be discussed without a great deal of loss to both sides concerned. There are those who thoroughly dislike the dissonance that is characteristic of contemporary effort and who prefer the time honored masterpieces and the old novelties such as Ravel's "Bolero," and there are the others who care more for contemporary music, good or bad, and have little attachment to the classics. Both are unfortunate extremes.

The right attitude for the habitual music listener is respect for the masters and patience with the new, as one critic has put it. Such an attitude belongs in the symphony goer, but not always does. So the problem that faces a man in Mr. Monteux' place is one of balancing, and this balance will never be attained unless both new and old music are done. Certainly, a Sibelius should be heard and a Stravinsky.

Ex-Soldier's Tale of War's Pathos Caught By Candid Camera

Ed's Note: Seldom are cameraman and reporter on hand when a human interest story develops. But proving that the fates occasionally conspire to present the journalistic fraternity with a rare jem combining both the graphic and verbal evidence of a soul revealing human encounter we present the following: John Julius, Guardsman reporter, and Cameraman Marg were lolling on the steps of the Art Academy across the street from the Powell Street Extension Building when they were approached by that common but ever-interesting character, the old soldier. The horror and misery of a futile and shattered life has been unconsciously captured in the events that occurred as the two students talked, and as they talked took candid camera shots of the shabby looking human derelict. Marg and Julius have stumbled on a rich bit of human drama which we believe is worth presenting.

"Young man, can you sparadime. Hi want to forget." This emanated from a grizzled, emacialed character with an obvious limey accent, who was waddling up Powell St. between Pine and Bush during the busy 10 o'clock hour. He wanted to talk to everyone, and tell his story and at the same time he was trying to forget.

"Hi was born," said the character, "in St. Johns, Newfoundland, an' meself, me ol' man an' me two brothers worked a fish smack ofen the banks. We were all an' 'appy family 'til the war broke out. Meself, me ol' man an' me two brothers went over in one of the King's regiments an' me two sisters came along as nurses.

• • • •

"Things passed quickly, they did till the battle of the Argonne." A shudder racked his small body. "Here hi 'ad the top of me 'ead blowed off an' hi was gassed an' shelled an' shot hat. Me hand an' harm stopped a chamber of forty-fi's. Me legs were heavy—loaded down with shrapnel."

• • • •

As the ex-soldier went through his dramatic dissertation, he demonstrated by showing the wounds on his arms, legs, hands and chest. He also bared his bald head to show evidences that a silver plate had been inserted.

• • • •

"Hi woke up in a field hospital to hear them tell of the deaths of me whole family on the battlefield. Me mind went blank an' on the few times that I can remember, hi want to tell me story an' forget again."

• • •

He bowed his "'ead," then shook it as if to clear a cloud away.

"Can you gimme a dime? Or must hi hock the silver plate ofen me 'ead."

CLUBS

New Semester's Officers Elected By German Club

Officers for next semester were elected November 24 by members of Die Deutsche Verein, college German club, at its first business meeting of the present semester.

Walter Thompson was unanimously elected president, succeeding Benedict Osetenski, past president. Helen Nast received the position of vice-president, and Ronald Smith was elected secretary-treasurer.

The club constitution, which was drawn up at the beginning of the past semester, was read, corrected and approved, and was later accepted by the Executive Council. The constitution provides for three classes of members —active, associate, and honorary. Active members were those described as enrolled in the college at the present time. Associates are those members no longer enrolled in the college, and honorary are noteworthy persons to whom three-fourths vote of the club members is granted.

Plans for the semester were formulated at the club's meeting last night at Instructor Annamarie Delfs' apartment, at the Residence Club. Walter Thompson spoke on the influence of German culture in the world, and Helen Nast; music student, sang two German folk songs.

All Frosh Women To Take Same PE

For the first time freshmen women will all take the same sport, because physical education instructors have decided to place all entering freshmen women in freshman activities to afford the freshman an opportunity to become acquainted, and to give them a chance to try several sports before selecting the one in which they wish to try for a WAA award. Volleyball, a team game, badminton, an individual game, rhythms of the creative, tap, and social dance type, are to be a part of this course. A new and added feature will be a unit in Posture Education which is closely related to Personal Hygiene.

All women students who are planning to attend a state college and all Physical Education majors should plan to take the new course in Fundamental Rhythms, instructed by Laurine Bergin. This course is a lower division requirement for future teachers. A half unit of credit will be given.

Music Club Elects Officers Tonight

Election of Music Club officers will be effected tonight, 7:30 o'clock at the residence of Kay Warner, 640 39th Avenue, president of the organization. Bob Scott, chairman of arrangements has planned a well-rounded program and students who plan to become Music Club members next semester are cordially invited to attend. Miss Warner urges all members who have not yet paid up their club fees to settle with her at tonight's meeting.

Business Women's Club To Skate

To wind up a semester of growth and activity, the Associated Business Women, composed of students and graduates will form a skating party at Sutro's tomorrow evening.

"Next semester many such excursions are anticipated," said Margaret Flournoy, faculty adviser. "Members have selected sports in which they desire to participate as a group, such as hiking, swimming and skating. It is the wish of the club to maintain common interests outside of the actual business field."

Advanced business students are invited to attend the meetings to be resumed in January, said Miss Flournoy.

Spanish Club Feed Set For Dec. 20th

The club has met every other Tuesday night to exchange ideas, relate experiences and express opinions in Spanish. It is hoped that the membership, which was made up of approximately fifteen students, will be enlarged in the ensuing semester.

Chinese Students Banquet Fri, 17th

Members of the Chinese Club will culminate this semester's activities at a banquet on Friday, December 17, at the Shanghai Low on Grant near Pine at 8 o'clock.

There will be an extensive program with a floor show, dancing, and the installation of the new officers for next semester. These officers are: President, Andrew Auyong; vice-president, Louise Lym; secretary, Lillian Auyong;

WSS Group Enjoys Installation Dinner

Honoring the probationary members who were chosen to become regular members of the organization, the Women's Service Society of the college held its installation banquet at the Western Women's Club, Monday evening, December 6, according to Florence Murphy, WSS president.

"Following our installation ceremony," Miss Murphy said, "we enjoyed our semi-annual banquet at which Miss Turner, Miss Dougherty and several alumni members were our special guests. The banquet committee had arranged a very lovely table with a beautiful center piece and clever favors, the entire arrangement being carried out in the college colors of red and white."

Women asked to become regular members, according to Miss Murphy, include Annabelle Benson, Miriam Dunne, Lou Hagerman, Virginia Kwintt, Phyllis Learned, Betty McAllister, Jane Mitchell, Orellin Orsland, Gloria Swicegood, Betty Varni, Shirley Woodman and Marge Wright.

Phi Beta Rhos In Activities Discussion

Nominations of candidates seeking office next semester were delayed because the necessary one-third majority of the total membership were not present. Miss De Lano, treasurer of the college's only sorority, announced that henceforward all money belonging to the treasury must be kept on the school premises.

Time and place of the tea planned for the new members has not as yet been agreed upon. A joint meeting with the Beta Phi Fraternity is anticipated in the near future. The meeting closed with the members avidly discussing the tea to be held for the faculty of the college next semester.

French Club Again Misses Theater Trip

Members of le Cercle Francais, college French club, will again have to postpone their attendance at the French comedy, "Marius," which was scheduled to open November 19 at the Andre Ferrier Theatre d'art. The unfortunate illness of one of the leading characters in the play makes it impossible to offer the production at this time. However, plans formulated at the club's meeting yesterday, provide for attendance at this comedy, besides many and varied activities to be enjoyed during the coming semester.

Newman Club Plans Christmas Party

Entertainment, such as a monologue by John Verducci, will feature the Christmas tree party to be given by the Newman Club shortly after finals. President Bob Fex is also arranging for some first class outside entertainment, but no definite word has been received as yet.

Moffett Field Scene Of Army-Navy Visit

Leaving the city at 9:00 o'clock Sunday morning, December 5, members of the college Army-Navy Club arrived at Moffett Field about 10:30. Here they were met and escorted around the post. The group then journeyed to Alum Rock Park where they had lunch and spent an enjoyable afternoon.

The next meeting of the club will be held Tuesday evening, December 21, at the home of John Stewart, 2320 California Street.

Dinner Planned By Italian Club

In its last regular meeting of the semester held at Galileo last night, the Italian Club discussed plans for the gala banquet to be held after finals, and began a firm program of speaking Italian whenever possible during the meetings, to familiarize the students with the language. A successful beginning has been made in the establishment of the club this semester, and a full program is planned for next term. Much credit is given by club members to Fred Solari who organized the club. Solari, recently elected president, has worked hard to foster the club and hopes to materially increase the membership next semester.

Astronomy Students Culminate Semester

Culminating a quiet, but successful semester, the Astronomy Club, which comprises the Astronomy 2A class, made its last observations for the fall semester last Monday night at the Galileo Observatory.

Elizabeth Rehbock, president of the club, expressed the hope that next semester there will be more students who will take advantage of the facilities for observing the celestial bodies. These facilities are not restricted to astronomy students, and all persons interested in star-gazing are invited to take part in both the scientific and social aspects of the Astronomy Club.

"Unfortunately," said Miss Rehbock, "few students have taken advantage of our astronomical apparatus at Galileo Observatory. However, it cannot be denied that those who have taken the opportunity to make observations have felt the satisfaction that comes from learning; and this learning is unique in that it deals with material uncommon to the world."

Music Group Holds Party Next Friday

Climaxing activities for the semester, A Capella choir members and the Men's Glee Club will be feted next Friday night at the home of Dean and Mrs. Edwin C. Browne.

Commenting on the activities of the Music Department for the present semester, Flossita Badger, music instructor, said: "The A Capella choir has done remarkably well, considering that two-thirds of its members were unfamiliar with A Cappella singing at the beginning of the semester. Their performances at Martinez, at the Congregational Methodist Temple and before the West Portal Women's Guild were well received. A number of attractive offers have been made for A Capella performances next semester, among them a Music Festival, to be held at the College of Pacific, Stockton, in May."

These men are popular enough in the world at large to command attention and when the conservative members rise to shout them down and put what little power they have to work against further Stravinsky and Sibelius they are not only jeopardizing the pleasure of others, but, we think, cutting off their nose to spite their face.

Mr. Monteux would like to present both old and new music on each of his programs this season and such a plan is not only widespread but the wisest solution possible.

Of course it is simple for the audience of today to relinquish its inheritance of new music and delve only into music written prior to 1900 of 1850 saying, contentedly, at least our ears are not offended and our minds are not bogged down with a constant stream of new ideas or old ideas in new form and shape.

Ram Quintet In Double Win Over Squads of Palo Alto and Church; Curcio Stars

[illegible] Victories In Close Games; Fex, [illegible] Blackfield, and Egan Also Show To Advantage

[illegible]odel made its debut last Friday [illegible] winning both ends of a double- [illegible]ort Shop and Westside Christian [illegible]32, while Westside was turned [illegible] their initial performance of the season displayed promising potentialities, [illegible] with speedy forwards, rugged guards, and a promising center in Harold Fischer. The tilt with San José was the main event of the evening's festivities, and Coach Conlan indicated what will most likely comprise the starting lineup this season by using only eight men in the battle. The starting men were Tracy Slattery and Bill Blackfield at forwards; Harold Fisher, center, and Bill Phelan and Ed Curcio, guards. The three others who saw action were Joe Opalinski, Warren Egan and "Bull" Burroughs.

The shining light in this tussle was Curcio, the rugged guard. Curcio secured innumerable rebounds, led the scorers with fifteen digits, and turned in a generally efficient game. Slattery and Opalinski performed well at the forward posts, the former tossing ten points through the net. Opalinski, former Commerce High star, displayed the classiest floor game of all the Rams. He was below form in ringing the hoop, but his dribbling and pass work set up many scores. For the Palo Alto hoopsters, Johnson was the most troublesome to the Red and White. He kept five Rams in the game during the first half when he tanked three in succession from dead center. The Rams led 30 to 4 at half time.

In the opener with Westside, Coach Conlan used the entire squad with the exception of the five who started the second tilt. Of this crew, Bob "Bullet" Fex was the class. He dropped five field goals through the hoop, all of them one handers. This contest was a case of five men being too much for one man, Westside being clearly outclassed with the exception of Barney DeBischop, former Lowell and State luminary. DeBischop was all over the court—passing, faking, dribbling, and intercepting passes. Nearly every basket scored by Westside was due to a direct piece of finesse by DeBischop.

An unusual situation took place during the first half of the battle. Neither team could coax the casaba through the hoop until twelve minutes of playing time had elapsed. Kalfain finally broke the ice by tanking a foul shot to give the Rams a 1 to 0 lead. Another feature of the Westside tussle was the brave stand played by the erstwhile pigskin toter, Walt "the Moose" Boitano. Walt did not break into the scoring column, but he cleared the way with several well-timed and devastating blocks.

Berman Commended For Nebulae Study

In the article, "The Rotation of Our Galaxy" in this month's Scientific American, Doctor Henry Norris Russell, President of the American Astronomical Society, cites Doctor Louis Berman, head of the college Astronomy Department, for his publication of his thorough study of the motions of planetary nebulae.

Says Dr. Russell, "Comparing the observed radial velocities of planetary nebulae with the proper motions observed by Van Maanen, and utilizing also the observed brightness, Dr. Berman obtains by an ingenious series of approximations, estimates of nebulae distances ranging from 2500 light-years to almost 60,000. These computations make it possible to sort the nebulae into nearer and more distant groups."

Dr. Berman found among other things that the planetary nebulae themselves are large affairs with an average diameter of some 80,000 times the earth's distance from the sun. By an unhappy chance [illegible] not one of the nebulae appears to be nearer to us than 2,100 light years. If a sample one was as near us as Acturus or Vega, it would look nearly twice as big as the moon and its total light would outshine either of these stars.

RAMS' HORN

Editor:

For the first time in the brief history of the San Francisco Junior College final examinations are to be given within a period of one week. No doubt this occurs because of the change of the school calendar enabling students to have a longer summer vacation.

Previously students of the college had to remain in school until the second week of June in order to receive final grades. By that time open jobs are scarce, because of other colleges and universities closing at an earlier date and their students filling the jobs.

Having the examinations given in one week is not the only new feature of the college. Also during this period students, particularly those of the department, must continue to go to class. The only exception to this is when you have an examination scheduled at conflicting times, the examination still has first call.

Many objections are being raised by the students. It is generally understood school is officially closed the Friday before examinations begin. This is the usual procedure at other institutions and seemed to be so up to now at the San Francisco Junior College.

Students depend upon their spare time between examinations to study for the next examination. Perhaps the college is trying to prevent "cramming", although it is only causing extra hardship to students in need of the extra time, by requiring them to go to class and do the required homework.

The only hope of the students is that this is only a temporary condition and will cease to exist after this semester, for by next semester the business department shall have ample opportunity to arrange its schedule, so as to not make it necessary for students to attend class during final examination week.

BUSINESS STUDENT.

(Ed.'s Note: The following letter was submitted to the Ram's Horn by Dean Edwin C. Browne to whom it was addressed.)

Dear Mr. Browne:

May I express my appreciation for the fine cooperation you and the members of the Executive Council gave in affording me the opportunity to participate in the Student Institute of Pacific Relations held at Napa during the Thanksgiving holidays. I am sure that it was extremely worthwhile for this college to be represented inasmuch as eight other institutions had also sent delegates.

Personally I feel that I gained a great deal from this experience, not only because I learned more about the situations and problems in the Orient but also because I now have a greater understanding of the racial problems of the Pacific area. Not only was there an opportunity to gain information at the convention, but I also found it most enjoyable to meet and talk with delegates from other schools and countries. This conference was most beneficial to me.

Thank you again for your assistance in providing this opportunity for the San Francisco Junior College to be represented.

Very truly yours,
WALTER THOMPSON.

After Dark

By John Ward

Pierre Monteux arrived in San Francisco last week to begin rehearsals for the symphony season beginning December 10. And before the season has advanced any further he wants to know what the symphony audiences want. Last season there was a great deal of adverse criticism because of the amount of modern music played.

Now Mr. Monteux wants what might be termed a poll of opinion on this very pertinent question and we should like to present our letter to Mr. Monteux in the form of this column. This whole idea of modern or contemporary music is a much-discussed and often misused question and cannot be discussed without a great deal of loss to both sides concerned. There are those who thoroughly dislike the dissonance that is characteristic of contemporary effort and who prefer the time honored masterpieces and the old novelties such as Ravel's "Bolero," and there are the others who care more for contemporary music, good or bad, and have little attachment to the classics. Both are unfortunate extremes.

The right attitude for the habitual music listener is respect for the masters and patience with the new, as one critic has put it. Such an attitude belongs in the symphony goer, but not always does. So the problem that faces a man in Mr. Monteux' place is one of balancing, and this balance will never be attained unless both new and old music are done. Certainly, a Sibelius should be heard and a Stravinsky.

These men are popular enough in the world at large to command attention and when the conservative members rise to shout them down and put what little power they have to work against further Stravinsky and Sibelius they are not only jeopardizing the pleasure of others, but, we think, cutting off their nose to spite their face.

Mr. Monteux would like to present both old and new music on each of his programs this season and such a plan is not only widespread but the wisest solution possible.

Of course it is simple for the audience of today to relinquish its inheritance of new music and delve only into music written prior to 1900 of 1850 saying, contentedly, at least our ears are not offended and our minds are not bogged down with a constant stream of new ideas or old ideas in new form and shape.

Ex-Soldier's Tale of War's Pathos Caught By Candid Camera

ED'S. NOTE: Seldom are cameraman and reporter on hand when a human interest story develops. But proving that the fates occasionally conjure to present the journalistic fraternity with a rare jem combining both the graphic and verbal evidence of a soul revealing in human encounter we present the following: John Julius, Guardsman reporter, and Cameraman Marg were lolling on the steps of the Art Academy across the street from the Powell Street Extension Building when they were approached by that common but ever-interesting character, the old soldier. The horror and misery of a futile and shattered life has been unconsciously captured in the events that occurred as the two students talked, and as they talked took candid camera shots of the shabby looking human derelict. Marg and Julius have stumbled on a rich bit of human drama which we believe is worth presenting.

"Young man, can you sparadime. Hi want to forget." This emanated from a grizzled, emaciated character with an obvious limey accent, who was waddling up Powell St. between Pine and Bush during the busy 10 o'clock hour. He wanted to talk to everyone, and tell his story and at the same time he was trying to forget.

"Hi was born," said the character, "in St. Johns, Newfoundland, an' meself, me ol' man an' me two brothers worked a fish smack ofen the banks. We were all an' 'appy family 'til the war broke out. Meself, me ol' man an' me two brothers went over in one of the King's regiments an' me two sisters came along as nurses.

* * * *

"Things passed quickly, they did till the battle of the Argonne." A shudder racked his small body. "Here hi 'ad the top of me 'ead blowed off an' hi was gassed an' shelled an' shot hat. Me hand an' harm stopped a chamber of forty-fi's. Me legs were heavy—loaded down with shrapnel."

* * * *

As the ex-soldier went through his dramatic dissertation, he demonstrated by showing the wounds on his arms, legs, hands and chest. He also bared his bald head to show evidences that a silver plate had been inserted.

* * * *

"Hi woke up in a field hospital to hear them tell of the deaths of me whole family on the battlefield. Me mind went blank an' on the few times that I can remember, hi want to tell me story an' forget again."

* * *

He bowed his "'ead," then shook it as if to clear a cloud away.

* * *

"Can you gimme a dime? Or must hi hock the silver plate ofen me 'ead."

Astronomy Students Culminate Semester

Culminating a quiet, but successful semester, the Astronomy Club, which comprises the Astronomy 2A class, made its last observations for the fall semester last Monday night at the Galileo Observatory.

Elizabeth Rehbock, president of the club, expressed the hope that next semester there will be more students who will take advantage of the facilities for observing the celestial bodies. These facilities are not restricted to astronomy students, and all persons interested in star-gazing are invited to take part in both the scientific and social aspects of the Astronomy Club.

"Unfortunately," said Miss Rehbock, "few students have taken advantage of our astronomical apparatus at Galileo Observatory. However, it cannot be denied that those who have taken the opportunity to make observations have felt the satisfaction that comes from learning; and this learning is unique in that it deals with material uncommon to the world."

Music Group Holds Party Next Friday

Climaxing activities for the semester, A Capella choir members and the Men's Glee Club will be feted next Friday night at the home of Dean and Mrs. Edwin C. Browne.

Commenting on the activities of the Music Department for the present semester, Flossita Badger, music instructor, said: "The A Capella choir has done remarkably well, considering that two-thirds of its members were unfamiliar with A Cappella singing at the beginning of the semester. Their performances at Martinez, at the Congregational Methodist Temple and before the West Portal Women's Guild were well received. A number of attractive offers have been made for A Capella performances next semester, among them a Music Festival, to be held at the College of Pacific, Stockton, in May."

CLUBS

New Semester's Officers Elected By German Club

Officers for next semester were elected November 24 by members of Die Deutsche Verein, college German club, at its first business meeting of the present semester.

Walter Thompson was unanimously elected president, succeeding Benedict Osetenski, past president. Helen Nast received the position of vice-president, and Ronald Smith was elected secretary-treasurer.

The club constitution, which was drawn up at the beginning of the past semester, was read, corrected and approved, and was later accepted by the Executive Council. The constitution provides for three classes of members—active, associate, and honorary. Active members were those described as enrolled in the college at the present time. Associates are those members no longer enrolled in the college, and honorary are noteworthy persons to whom three-fourths vote of the club members is granted.

Plans for the semester were formulated at the club's meeting last night at Instructor Annamarie Delfs' apartment, at the Residence Club. Walter Thompson spoke on the influence of German culture in the world, and Helen Nast, music student, sang two German folk songs.

All Frosh Women To Take Same PE

For the first time freshmen women will all take the same sport, because physical education instructors have decided to place all entering freshmen women in freshman activities to afford the freshman an opportunity to become acquainted, and to give them a chance to try several sports before selecting the one in which they wish to try for a WAA award. Volleyball, a team game, badminton, an individual game, rhythms of the creative, tap, and social dance type, are to be a part of this course. A new and added feature will be a unit in Posture Education which is closely related to Personal Hygiene.

All women students who are planning to attend a state college and all Physical Education majors should plan to take the new course in Fundamental Rhythms, instructed by Laurine Bergin. This course is a lower division requirement for future teachers. A half unit of credit will be given.

Music Club Elects Officers Tonight

Election of Music Club officers will be effected tonight, 7:30 o'clock at the residence of Kay Warner, 640 39th Avenue, president of the organization. Bob Scott, chairman of arrangements has planned a well-rounded program and students who plan to become Music Club members next semester are cordially invited to attend. Miss Warner urges all members who have not yet paid up their club fees to settle with her at tonight's meeting.

Business Women's Club To Skate

To wind up a semester of growth and activity, the Associated Business Women, composed of students and graduates will form a skating party at Sutro's tomorrow evening.

"Next semester many such excursions are anticipated," said Margaret Flournoy, faculty adviser. "Members have selected sports in which they desire to participate as a group, such as hiking, swimming and skating. It is the wish of the club to maintain common interests outside of the actual business field."

Advanced business students are invited to attend the meetings to be resumed in January, said Miss Flournoy.

Spanish Club Feed Set For Dec. 20th

The club has met every other Tuesday night to exchange ideas, relate experiences and express opinions in Spanish. It is hoped that the membership, which was made up of approximately fifteen students, will be enlarged in the ensuing semester.

Members of the Chinese Club will culminate this semester's activities at a banquet on Friday, December 17, at the Shanghai Low on Grant near Pine at 8 o'clock.

There will be an extensive program with a floor show, dancing, and the installation of the new officers for next semester. These officers are: President, Andrew Auyong; vice-president, Louise Lym; secretary, Lillian Auyong; treasurer, Harry Loui. The new officers plan for a full schedule of activities for the spring term including a skating party, dance, a hike, and numerous other informal social gatherings.

The retiring officers who have worked efficiently under the auspices of President Allan Toy, are: Vice-president, Lillian Auyong; secretary, Lena Way, and treasurer, George Ching.

WSS Group Enjoys Installation Dinner

Honoring the probationary members who were chosen to become regular members of the organization, the Women's Service Society of the college held its installation banquet at the Western Women's Club, Monday evening, December 6, according to Florence Murphy, WSS president.

"Following our installation ceremony," Miss Murphy said, "we enjoyed our semi-annual banquet at which Miss Turner, Miss Dougherty and several alumni members were our special guests. The banquet committee had arranged a very lovely table with a beautiful center piece and clever favors, the entire arrangement being carried out in the college colors of red and white."

Women asked to become regular members, according to Miss Murphy, include Annabelle Benson, Miriam Dunne, Lou Hagerman, Virginia Kwiatt, Phyllis Learned, Betty McAllister, Jane Mitchell, Orellia Orsland, Gloria Swicegood, Betty Varni, Shirley Woodman and Marge Wright.

Phi Beta Rhos In Activities Discussion

Nominations of candidates seeking office next semester were delayed because the necessary one-third majority of the total membership were not present. Miss De Lano, treasurer of the college's only sorority, announced that henceforward all money belonging to the treasury must be kept on the school premises.

Time and place of the tea planned for the new members has not as yet been agreed upon. A joint meeting with the Beta Phi Fraternity is anticipated in the near future. The meeting closed with the members avidly discussing the tea to be held for the faculty of the college next semester.

French Club Again Misses Theater Trip

Members of le Cercle Francais, college French club, will again have to postpone their attendance at the French comedy, "Marius," which was scheduled to open November 19 at the Andre Ferrier Theatre d'art. The unfortunate illness of one of the leading characters in the play makes it impossible to offer the production at this time. However, plans formulated at the club's meeting yesterday, provide for attendance at this comedy, besides many and varied activities to be enjoyed during the coming semester.

Newman Club Plans Christmas Party

Entertainment, such as a monologue by John Verducci, will feature the Christmas tree party to be given by the Newman Club shortly after finals. President Bob Fex is also arranging for some first class outside entertainment, but no definite word has been received as yet.

Moffett Field Scene Of Army-Navy Visit

Leaving the city at 9:00 o'clock Sunday morning, December 5, members of the college Army-Navy Club arrived at Moffett Field about 10:30. Here they were met and escorted around the post. The group then journeyed to Alum Rock Park where they had lunch and spent an enjoyable afternoon.

The next meeting of the club will be held Tuesday evening, December 21, at the home of John Stewart, 2320 California Street.

Dinner Planned By Italian Club

In its last regular meeting of the semester held at Galileo last night, the Italian Club discussed plans for the gala banquet to be held after finals, and began a firm program of speaking Italian whenever possible during the meetings, to familiarize the students with the language. A successful beginning has been made in the establishment of the club this semester, and a full program is planned for next term. Much credit is given by club members to Fred Solari who organized the club. Solari, recently elected president, has worked hard to foster the club and hopes to materially increase the membership next semester.

FROSH SMOKER, BRAWL HEADLINE EVENTS SET FOR ORIENTATION WEEK

Tonight's Entertainment Promises To Be Gala Affair; Semi-Annual Soph-Frosh Battle And Friday Night's Dance To End Week's Events

Combining to present an innovation in Freshman welcoming, the Men's Club and Head Yell Leader Stan Adams are introducing Orientation Week, which commenced last Monday. Feature events on the titanic program are the Freshman Smoker slated for tonight at the California Hall, the inter-class brawl on Friday afternoon and the semi-formal that same evening at the Clift Hotel.

Men's Club President Al Williams has completed arrangements for tonight's Smoker which will be open to all freshman men and men faculty members.

According to Williams, the program will include several movies, a magician, acrobats, and a session of community singing conducted by Deane Edwin C. Browne. Refreshments are offered in the form of doughnuts and hot chocolate. Cigarettes will be given away and admission is free with student body cards. California Hall, scene of the affair, is located on Clay Street between Polk and Van Ness.

BRAWL HELD FRIDAY

Plans for Friday's Brawl, which will be held on the Soldier's Parade Ground, Van Ness and Bay, indicated that it should be an exciting struggle. The low freshman class, under the direction of their newly elected president, will compete with the sophomores in a series of events, the winning group to be presented with the Men's Club Trophy. Although the Freshman class has won the trophy but once in the past five semesters, AMS leader Al Williams intimated that torrid competition is expected Friday.

The events include the traditional tug-a-war, the sack race, and a new feature, the flag rush and mud hole. In this last named contest the freshmen will be armed with a fire hose and will attempt to prevent the hordes of sophomores from capturing the class flag. The Brawl will start at 2:30 o'clock, according to Williams. Joe Amori, adviser to the AMS will act as judge.

WILLIAMS SAYS

"This is a very spirited freshman class and I am sure that they will enjoy slapping the dignified faces of the upper classmen no end when they all meet on the great leveling ground of the Brawl. We have worked hard to make the arrangements as perfect as possible, and I hope this will be the greatest Brawl in the history of the college," Williams said.

To aid him in the work of handling the many details, Yell King Adams has appointed a special rally committee to supercede the now defunct Cap and Meg Society. This Committee is composed of Hugh Waite, Art Nelson, Ed Fredmann, Will Dolman, Woody Lenes, Howard Cloud, Sims Hamilton, Ed Canepa, Paul Lebaron, Leo Balastracci, the president of the Low Freshmen class and Williams.

Events for the remainder of the week, according to Adams, are the Smoker tonight at California Hall at 8:00 p.m., and tryouts for assistant yell leaders tomorrow afternoon at 2:00 o'clock in the Galileo Auditorium, the Brawl on Friday afternoon, and the Semi-formal Friday night at the Clift.

EX-COUNCIL TO IMPROVE ITS DECORUM

Outlining a three-point program for the semester, namely, reorganization of the Associated Students' constitution, affiliation of the various clubs in the college and an improvement in the decorum of council meetings, the college Executive Council, under the leadership of Associated Student President Don Mix, held a short meeting last Friday afternoon.

After a brief discussion, it was generally agreed that the best time for Executive Council meetings was at 2:30 o'clock on Friday afternoons, and it was decided to hold them at that time for the remainder of the semester.

Following a short discussion of his plans, President Mix called upon various student officers for reports on the activities they had in mind for the semester. Norma Parent, Associated Students' vice-president and Social Committee chairman, gave a brief resume of a recent meeting of the committee, told the council of next Friday's dance and outlined tentative plans for future dances. Miss Parent explained the difficulties the college was encountering in obtaining orchestras because of certain Union rulings, but said that Dean Edwin C. Browne, faculty adviser for the committee, was meeting with Union heads early this week to make some sort of arrangements.

Al Williams, president of the Associated Men Students, gave a report on Freshman Week and told of a rally, dance and election to be held for Freshmen students as well as the semi-annual brawl and a special smoker for Freshman men and the men of the faculty. Williams said that the entire set-up would be topped by Friday night's dance and told of vague plans by the Men's Club for a cruise up the Sacramento River later in the semester and the possibility of making the semi-annual Men's Club fights into something big and holding them at the Civic Auditorium.

Barbara Randall, president of the Associated Women Students, told the council that she had been asked by President Cloud to give several teas similar to those given last semester. She said that plans had been made for a tea for all Freshman women, one for all the women in the college and a third for seniors in the city high schools. She also discussed the possibilities of a tea for all students who will graduate from the college in May and announced the definite intention of holding a dance sometime in April.

Explaining that the Cap and Meg had been abolished entirely because of its unconstitutionality, Stan Adams, head yell leader, announced that he had, in accordance with the constitution, organized a rally committee.

After a brief discussion between Williams and President Mix as to the method of making the necessary changes in the constitution, the meeting was adjourned.

CLASSES IN HOTEL AND RESTAURANT DIV. POPULAR

"Announcement of courses in food purchasing and food cost accounting, two subjects of vital importance in the hotel and restaurant industry, have resulted in notable increase in registration in the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division," according to J. Graham Sullivan, co-ordinator.

"These courses particularly appeal to the young man already employed in the hotel field who would broaden his knowledge of technical subjects," continued Sullivan.

From within the portals of the Alexander Hamilton Hotel comes Assistant Manager Paul Wendell, a graduate of Stanford University.

Wendell has enrolled in hotel stewarding and purchasing, food cost accounting, front office procedure and hotel administration.

The Palace Hotel sends Assistant Manager Clarke Matthews to study the technical angles of hotel protection, public relations and front office procedure.

Among the members of well-known business families that have signed up for classes are J. V. Huckins, a descendant of a famous San Francisco hotel family; Mitchell Hoffman, son of the general manager of Helwig's Bakery, and William and Clark Chittick, sons of a San Diego hotelman.

Also a new student of this department is Isle Ruth Somner, who hails from far off Germany. She has taken up permanent residence in San Francisco.

PRESIDENT EXTENDS WELCOME TO ALL

TIME IN ITS FLIGHT

PRESIDENT CLOUD

Long an outstanding figure in the field of education in San Francisco, Archibald J. Cloud (above) realized a long-cherished dream with the formal opening of San Francisco Junior College, as an integral part of the city's school system, in the Fall of 1935.

Working tirelessly in his efforts to improve and solidify the college's position, President Cloud succeeds in gaining the heart-felt admiration of students and faculty alike.

Students may find Mr. Cloud in his office in the far corner of Room 211. There he is ably assisted by his two aides, Secretary Edna Denhart and Assistant Paul Pitman.

In extending a hearty welcome to all newcomers and renewing acquaintance with all old-timers at the San Francisco Junior College, your President is tempted to don the mantle of a prophet, to close his eyes as in a vision, and to forecast impending events in the fortunes of the College. But, it has often bee said to be precarious is to assume the role of the sneer, and it may be more serviceable to us now and here to look to the future by means of a brief, backward glance.

We met first on August 26, 1935, and established classes during the next week. We had no campus, no buildings, equipment, or library of our own. Nor had we any student body organization, clubs, athletic teams, or college newspaper with "Ye Editor" appealing to "Ye Gentle Reader" when not denouncing him.

We had just two saving elements in the situation. One was the students; the other was the faculty. Soon they conjoined on the basis of mutual respect and confidence to form a college of undoubted superiority. The students were then and are now a body of young American men and women earnestly striving to take advantage of higher educational opportunities; the faculty, then and now, was constituted of highly trained professionals, experienced and skilled in guiding those young men and women toward the realization of their purposeful pattern of life.

We have gone forward appreciably in material ways since the time when we first met. Today we have a more elastic program than then, enlarged facilities, enriched curricular offerings, and, in general, better organization. Such considerations are important. But, far more important, we have maintained the same mutual confidence and similar cooperative relationships between students and faculty with which we started.

When entering the stately building to be erected in this year 1938 on our magnificent campus, we must hold fast to these fine things of the spirit which have been fostered during these creative days. Less we cannot do, if we are to show adequate appreciation to our Superintendent of Schools and our Commissioners of Education who have worked unceasingly in our interest, representing as they do the generous citizens of San Francisco.

Semi-Formal Dance To Open Semester's Events Friday Night

Officially opening the college social season for the Spring semester, a semi-formal dance sponsored by the college Social Committee and honoring the Low Freshman class will be held on Friday evening, January 14, according to Norma Parent, Associated Students vice-president and committee chairmnn.

"The dance," Miss Parent said, "will be held from nine to twelve in the Roof Lounge of the Clift Hotel, and with such a nice setting, our fine orchestra and attractive bids, every effort will be extended to see that all Freshmen attending have a grand time.

"Of course," she continued, "all upper class students are invited to be there too, but the Freshmen will be the honored guests and we expect to see them turn out in full force."

The following faculty members have been invited to serve as patrons and patronesses for this first dance, according to Miss Parent: Archibald J. Cloud, college president; Joe Amori, Gertrude Bolton, Jack Gaddy, Helen Kelly, Mary Jane Learnard, J. Paul Mohr, Ward Nichols, Joan Nourse, Robert Parker, Paul Pitman, Eileen Rue, Alden Smith, Helene Turner, Verrel Weber and Tom Wilson.

Speaking of future plans, Miss Parent revealed that Social Committee plans call for at least two more important dances during the semester and said that tentative plans were being made for some other sort of social activities.

"The committee and I," she said, "are anxious to witness the outcome of this first dance of the season, because the attendance at the first dance is usually an indication of the amount of general interest among the students."

Class Elections To Be Held Today

Election of officers for the upper classes will be held today at 2:00 o'clock, according to Edwin C. Browne, director of student activities.

The high sophomore election will be held in the Little Theater on the fifth floor of the Galileo Building. The low sophomores will name their officers in the Galileo Auditorium and the High Freshman contest will be held in the cafeteria, Browne announced. The incoming freshman class elected its officers yesterday.

The election meeting will be presided over by the officers of the previous semester, and the class faculty sponsor will tally the ballots. The officers to be elected are a president, vice-president, treasurer, and secretary.

Browne urged all students to attend these elections in order that each class will have representative leadership.

"For the benefit of the Low Sophomores in particular," said Browne, "it should be noted that the only representatives of the classes in the Executive Council are the class presidents."

NYA Time Slips To Be Due January 18

NYA time slips are due January 18. All students must have a certificate of scholarship eligibility from Helene Turner's office before starting to work. These slips are to be given to the instructor for whom the student is working. It is also necessary to procure a slip certifying that the government regulations have been complied with. These slips from Miss Turner's office must be given to Thomas O'Neill in the office at Powell Street before a student may be placed on the payroll.

Eddie Browne Jr. Becomes Editor

Jovial Dean of Men, Hon. Edwin C. Browne, was the receiver of copious congratulations early this week, following the announcement that Edwin Browne, Jr., sans the dean, was recently elected to the position of Editor-in-Chief of the as yet unnamed publication of Parkside Grammar School.

His response to a brief telephone interview with a Guardsman reporter was: "Sorry, we're having a meeting now.—Gotta get back," indicating that in the Browne family, business before pleasure is not only a motto but a habit.

Information Given On Routes To Take To Various Campi

With regular classes being held in four different parts of the city, The Guardsman offers the following information regarding the location and accessibility of the buildings being used by the college.

The University of California Extension Building at 540 Powell Street can be reached by White Front cars, 1, 2, 3, 4, and the Powell Street Cable Car. Transfers from White Front cars are honored on the cable line.

Galileo High School is located at Van Ness Avenue and Francisco Street. White Front car 19, and Municipal cars F and H go directly to the building. Students may reach the 19 car by transferring from Sutter cars at Polk Street.

Girls High School is on Scott Street between Geary and O'Farrell. Sutter Street cars will take students within three blocks of it. Geary cars run within half a block.

Samuel Gompers Trade School at Twenty-Second and Bartlett Streets has been used by Radio Engineering students for a semester, and can be reached by cars 9, 12, and 14 going out Mission Street.

The junior college library is divided into two sections, part of the books being kept in the college book store, and the rest located at the entrance of the Study Hall on the lower floor of the Extension Building.

1. Smoking is strictly prohibited in the building and on the walks around it.

2. Enter and leave the building by the Geary Street entrance. Go directly to your classroom. If the room is occupied, remain quietly outside the door until the class is dismissed.

3. Do not loiter in the hallways or around the entrances.

4. Women students may use the library and the cafeteria.

5. Your registration card is your passport at all times. Always have it with you and present it when requested to do so.

Registration For Current Term Sets New Record of 1658

Last minute registration figures show a record enrollment of 1658 students during the first week of school as compared with the total enrollment of 1644 students during the fall term of 1937. Returning sophomores rather than in increased number of freshmen have swelled the ranks of college men and women. More classes have longer waiting lists and students are faced with problems similar to those of overcrowded universities. Choice of courses will be more limited to late registrants.

Entrance examinations for late registrants will be held as follows:

Saturday, January 15, 1938—9:00 a.m.—Room 458.

Subject A (Reading and Composition) and vocational interest tests.

Saturday, January 22, 1938—9:00 a.m.—Room 458.

College aptitude tests and pictures.

Students are reminded by Registrar J. Paul Mohr to file their registration books on the date stamped on the cover. "Students are responsible for the courses checked on their trial study list and will not be given credit for any others," he said. "If a student fails to appear in class and does not take out a drop slip, he will automatically receive an "F" grade at the end of the semester."

CONSTRUCTION WORK AT BUILDING SITE BEGINS NEXT WEEK, SAYS BOARD

Recreation Commission Turns Over 25 Acres To Clear Way for Actual Start of Excavation Work; Board Meets Today To Decide On Bids.

By DICK SIMPERS

Actual construction work on the buildings for San Francisco Junior College will definitely begin next week, according to the latest reports from the Board of Education, which is scheduled to meet today for the purpose of deciding upon the various bids submitted by contractors. All the necessary land has been acquired, and work will start as soon as the Board has decided which contractor is to be entrusted with the job.

The last difficulty in securing acreage was overcome last week at a meeting between the Recreation Commission and the Board of Education, when the former body agreed to part with twenty-five acres adjoining the site at Balboa Park. The acquisition of this land raises the total area of the site to about fifty-five acres, enough to allow construction of all the proposed buildings and a large athletic field.

A resolution adopted by the Recreation Committee and by the Board of Education allows for the use of Junior College facilities by the Recreation Committee for its activities on Saturdays, Sundays, and holidays and during vacations, provided that such use does not conflict with the activities of the College.

RED TAPE AVOIDED

The Board expedited the beginning of actual work by authorizing Richard Doyle, physical properties committee chairman, to approve the successful bid as soon as it is transmitted by the Department of Public Works, thus avoiding red tape and delay, and allowing work to proceed with all possible speed.

The original plot plan of Timothy Pflueger, architect, was accepted in full by the Board, and, with a newly-acquired acreage, can now be carried through to completion. This fact was regarded as particularly significant by President Cloud of the College.

"The outstanding development, in my opinion," he stated, "is the adoption of the plan as a whole, which assures construction of the entire plant, rather than of only a single unit."

Adoption of the plan and the clearing away of the last difficulties marked the culmination of months of work by President Cloud, Major Joseph Nourse, Superintendent of Schools, Hon. C. Harold Caulfield, President of the Board of Education, and members of the Board, who have been trying to bring the project to completion for the past two years.

AD BUILDING FIRST

The first unit to be started will be the administration building, while the plan also calls for construction of several other buildings, among them a Students' Union building, a library, and a gymnasium. All will be located on the Balboa Park site, at Ocean and Phelan Avenues. It is proposed to get construction under way on the first unit before starting work on the others, so that it will be the first one finished, with the other units following in order.

The first work to be done on the site will be grading, as it must be leveled before the foundations can be laid for the buildings. Once this has been taken care of, work will be commenced on the buildings themselves, the plans for which are complete in every detail.

It is believed that students will be able to attend classes in the new plant not later than the first of next year, and possibly sooner, as it is intended to begin use of the plant as soon as the first unit is completed. When finished, the college will have an estimated capacity of 2500 students, considerably more than the present enrollment.

MILLS COLLEGE TO EDIT ART ANTHOLOGY

With a decade of successful history behind it, the California Intercollegiate Fellowship of Creative Art announces the publication of its annual anthology of student verse, "First The Blade," to be issued by Mills College in the Spring of 1938.

Any undergraduate student registered during the scholastic year of 1937-1938 in a California university, college, or junior college is eligible as a contributor. Three prizes for outstanding poems will be offered as well as additional prizes for the best poem in each of the following forms: sonnet, narrative, free verse, blank verse, lyric, and French verse forms.

Deadline for entries will be February 7, 1938, and all manuscripts, inquiries, and orders should be addressed to "First The Blade," Box 426, Mills College, California.

Founded under the direction of Professor Richard Borst of the Fullerton Junior College in 1927, the organization welcomes all literary clubs and students interested in artistic expression. All California colleges, universities, and junior colleges are eligible for membership.

The Fellowship chooses a different college to edit the publication for each year, and this year the honor went to the English Club of Mills College. Previous publishers of the anthology include Fullerton Junior College in 1928, University of Redlands in 1929, Scripps College in 1930, San Bernardino Junior College in 1931, Pasadena Junior College in 1932, San Diego State College in 1933, Los Angeles Junior College in 1934, Santa Ana Junior College in 1935, Santa Rosa Junior College in 1936, and Mount Saint Mary's College in 1937.

Heading a distinguished list of judges for this year's volume is E. O. James, professor of English at Mills College. The list includes Robin Lampson, California poet; Wilinm Rose Benet, New York poet and literary editor; Joseph Henry Jackson, author and literary editor of the San Francisco Chronicle; and E. J. Robins, professor of English at San Bernardino Junior College. Betty Campbell, Mills senior from St. Louis, will be editor-in-chief, and Dr. Sidney L. Gulick, Jr., faculty adviser.

The list of rules for contributors is as follows:

1. All poems must be the original work of the contestants or original translations of ancient classics.

2. Five copies of each poem, typed on separate sheets, are to be submitted. One side of the sheet only should be used.

3. To be considered for one of the

PEACE SOCIETY MEETS TONIGHT

Meeting for the fist time this semester, members of the San Francisco Junior College Peace Society will gather this evening at the home of Doris Speroni, 441 Fair Oaks street, between Guerrero and Dolores streets near 26th street. The group will convene at eight o'clock.

Business of the meeting will be election of officers and amendments to the constitution and by-laws of the Society. Plans for the semester's activity will also be made. The meeting has been called to get organized for the new year and to begin functioning immediately, according to Fred Vast, president of the organization.

"All students are welcome to join," Vast said, "and the more people that join, the better. There is always room for students interested because peace is a problem that is of vital concern to all of us and the more people that are active in promoting peace, the more effective will we be in our efforts.

"The object of the Peace Society," he continued, "is to study the methods of maintaining and establishing peace and to carry on activity for peace."

STATEMENT OF POLICY

BECAUSE it occupies the highly important position of being the sole factor of unification among the farflung campi of San Francisco Junior College, and functions as the official organ of the Associated Students, it is the duty of this newspaper and its editors to pursue any course which will allow San Francisco Junior College to achieve a higher degree of efficiency in operating as a unit that will fit smoothly into its place to cap the school system of this city.

The conditions under which the splendid faculty of this college are working, and have worked for the past two years, are well known and have come to be more or less accepted, but the fact remains that to attain the greatest measure of efficiency, it is absolutely necessary for every member of the college, whether of the faculty or of the general student body to cooperate and work with one another "for the greatest good of the greatest number."

In accordance with custom, which requires any new regime to outline its program or state its motives, the editor wishes to convey the following message to readers of The Guardsman:

First—The Guardsman will strive to build a greater San Francisco Junior College, not only within the student body and faculty, but in the world at large.

Second—The Guardsman will seek to promote a greater feeling of fellowship among the students, and to inspire them to a greater pride in their college.

Third—The Guardsman will endeavor to present a newspaper containing full coverage of all student activities and matters of general interest to the college.

Fourth—The Guardsman will cooperate with the members of the faculty, the Executive Council and any and all organizations in any movement, which seeks to further the welfare and prestige of San Francisco Junior College.

Fifth—The Guardsman will attempt, as far as possible, to give the Associated Students a thoroughly non-partisan review of both sides of any and all issues pertinent to the affairs of the college.

Sixth—The Guardsman will remind its readers that the Ram's Horn column is available each week to a limited number of letters of sincere and honest discussion, and in addition will invite from time to time the opinions of prominent faculty and student leaders to be expressed in guest editorials in this column.

Seventh—The Guardsman will extend to all clubs, groups, or any other organization within the college, equal opportunities for expression through the medium of its pages.

Finally—Any opinions expressed in this column are to be regarded as those of the editor and should not be construed to represent student opinion in any sense of the word.

NEW YEAR'S RESOLUTIONS

The custom of making fine-sounding vows at the first of every year, and then a few weeks later forgetting all about them, is very likely traceable to the ancients.

One would do well to make simply one resolution which would contain two or more clauses, first and foremost of which might be, "I firmly resolve to KEEP my New Year's resolutions, and to ADD any during the year which may help me to get more out of life, and to give more to the world in return."

IT WON'T BE LONG NOW

Coincident with the beginning of this, the sixth semester of the college's existence, comes the happy announcement that the "powers-that-be" have finally agreed on the land to be set aside for the San Francisco Junior College buildings.

The important thing to be considered is not so much the fact that a building will now be constructed, but the gratifying knowledge that now the future existence of the college is at last a thing of absolute certainty.

To many people the significance of the announcement will be lost, but to those of us who have waited and prayed, it is a major step ahead. The president of the college, Archibald J. Cloud deserves the heartfelt gratitude of all those who have been interested in the future of this college, as he has worked tirelessly since the college's inception in an effort to establish a suitable campus for the city's newest institution. It finally begins to look as though his labours have yielded fruit.

TRADITIONAL WELCOME

Another item, which must be added to the first issue of any semester, is the customary welcome to the entering students and other newcomers. Usually this is tempered with a bit of friendly advice as to the best method of applying their time while at college.

The editor of The Guardsman takes pleasure in welcoming back the old students, and extending, on behalf of the entire Guardsman staff the hand of friendship to the newcomers.

Get acquainted, get interested, get around, and most important, get the most you can out of your first semester in college.

TO THE ASSOCIATED STUDENTS

Students of San Francisco Junior College enjoy many advantages which are not present at every college, whereas at the same time there are numerous difficulties to be encountered.

With as fine a faculty as is assembled in any college, an alert and energetic group of student leaders, and a fine background for an institution with so short a life, the Associated Students of this college should feel no qualms about the certainty of individual futures, if they will avail themselves of the splendid opportunities for making lasting friendships, assimilating useful knowledge and adopting a more mature philosophy of life.

The difficulties of "borrowed buildings," "street car campi" and limited space may be dismissed by adopting a cheerful, cooperative attitude and "making the best of it." You can, you know.

TO THE FACULTY

Congratulations! "For a good job well done."

Largely upon them depends the future of this college, the future of the young men and women who look to them for their guidance. If they help them and counsel them in the future as efficiently as they have in the past, the community will continue to reap a fine harvest of graduates.

THIS SEMESTER; WHAT?

Many of us, if we could look into the future, might be disappointed at what we would see revealed. It is a great deal better to take the present as it comes and concentrate on making every task a product of the best and most intelligently directed effort of which a person is capable, than to spend idle moments building fanciful air castles.

A new semester lies before us. During the next six months, there will be many moments when students will wish they were anywhere but in a class room. Many will be tempted to let their studies slide as the "Spring fever" grips them.

The wise person will not WORRY over the future, but will APPLY himself conscientiously and diligently, safe in the knowledge that the benefits, which will be derived in the winter of life, more than warrant the abstinence from excessive frivolity of the type that made the poor old grasshopper envy the foresight of his friend, the ant.

Mental Mutterings
By Fem

LAMENTATION

Writing the first stint of the semester is something like nothing much, if we may be forgiven for sounding a bit Gracie Allen-ish. One arrives back at college only to find that he has lost track of any stray news that might have been floating around and, as the old head is usually still buzzing with fond memories of vacation days, there remains only a hunk of nothing which (heaven help us) must be converted into a column. It is at this point that imagination comes in and, if it just isn't in the mood to come in, the columnist in the case, (and we don't mean you) finds himself (if Mr. Benchley won't feel crowded) in a bit of a quandry.

However, the show must go on, the presses must roll and thirty days hath September, so there's nothing to do but make up something to write about, and with all the new little Freshmen in mind, we have decided to present a brief peek at some of the people about the college they should know:

PERSONAGES

The distinguished looking gentleman with the long legs and firm handclasp is The Chief, President Archibald J. Cloud. Since he is always particularly anxious to meet new students, don't be afraid to pay him a call some afternoon . . . the busy man with the big smile and glasses is Paul Pitman, Mr. Cloud's assistant and head man at our Powell Street branch. An extremely friendly person, he'll probably come up and introduce himself to you so why not beat him to the punch? He'll love it! . . . the tall dark man with the glasses is Tom O'Neil, Mr. Pitman's right hand man at Powell Street. It is Mr. O'Neil who will probably greet you at the Powell Street office when you come barging in with your questions and don't worry, he knows all the answers! . . . the good looking man with the engaging grin and curly hair, is Ward Nichols, head comptroller and keeper of the college bank. See him and his competent staff about money matters, but don't ask him to match pennies—you can't win! . . . any program difficulties will be ironed out by J. Paul Mohr, college registrar and his able assistant, Miss Mary Jane Learnard. Two very swell people, they know all about what you have to take to get here, how many "thises" you get for that and a million other things you'll want to know sooner or later . . . women students will find Miss Margaret Dougherty at their service in her capacity of Guidance Director. Miss Dougherty will give advice on programs, help girls get started in women's activities and generally be a real friend to all the newcomers . . . sharing the office with Miss Dougherty is Miss Helene Turner, assistant NYA director and one of our nicest people. Students interested in obtaining employment should see Miss Turner and if there are any jobs to be had you can be sure that she'll do all she can to help you get one . . . last, and far from least, is that very busy man you've seen rushing hither and yon with a bundle of I.O.U.'s clutched in his hand, Edwin C. Browne, Dean of Men, and director of the college's social activities. Dean Browne is always at your service (if you can find him) and men students, in particular, will find him a sympathetic and understanding friend when they need one.

We hope that our descriptions will help you find the right person, but if you happen to get a bit mixed up and approach the wrong one, don't worry about it. You'll find the entire gang, faculty, students and Miss Perry and her oh-so-swell office force, ready, willing, and able to assist you in any way possible. Good Luck and Happy Landings!

CABBAGES AND KINGS

By Dick Simpers

Since it seems to be the customary thing to do in the first issue of each semester, and as we have no desire to go about breaking precedents in this, our first effort at a column other than of the sports variety, we hereby extend a large and jovial welcome both to the newcomers and to the numerous old-timers who have returned to haunt the halls for another semester.

Despite the bombing of the Panay, a severe head cold, a strike in Seattle, and other evidence to the contrary, we are informed by those "in the know" that all indications point, as usual, to a successful semester, with all sorts of delightful events, social and otherwise, on tap for the coming months. We await their materialization with bated breath.

INDIGNATION, ETC.

Speaking of the Panay bombing, and disregarding the fact that it is rather stale news by this time, we have yet to talk with anyone, man, woman, or child, who is satisfied with the outcome of the affair, and we can't resist putting in our two cents' worth. A nicely-worded expression of regret from Hirohito and Co., no matter how neatly-phrased it may have been, falls a bit short of compensating for the loss of prestige, not to mention the material loss, suffered by Uncle Sam as the result of the episode. The solution to the problem is out of our province, but it does seem as though the collection of a juicy indemnity would salve the wound considerably. As matters stand at present, virtually everyone is pretty well disgusted with the whole business.

BEWARE!

A word of warning: don't stick that registration book in the drawer and forget about it, or you may find yourself in the unenviable position of having to lay out a dollar for "late filing fee." Last semester your correspondent came trotting blithely in with the book the day after the date stamped on the cover, and consequently had to dig into the old piggy bank to secure sufficient funds to complete registration. Benefit by this horrible example, and keep an eye on the calendar.

FUTILITY

Recent newspapers carried an account of another one of these eternal anti-bookmaker drives, with glowing descriptions of daring raids on "bookies" and their clients. One would think that the police would get smart and stop publicizing these events, as they only succeed in making themselves look foolish when the poolrooms open up again in a couple of days and carry on their business unmolested for another five or six months until the next "raid." There are a dozen "horse stores" and poolrooms running at present, within ten minutes' walk of our Powell Street campus, and their existence is not much of a secret to anyone. A person can place a bet on anything, from the winner of the "Hit Parade" to the third race at the Fair Grounds, at any number of places in town any day in the week, and still the papers persist in shouting about "clean-up campaigns" every time some establishment is closed up. The sensible thing to do would be to legalize the whole business and get it over with, or, at least, to keep still about it.

OUT OF THE FOG
By Mac

ANNOYANCE

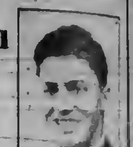
It isn't enough that we must be troubled by depressions, war scares, foo, funny men on the radio, columnists, chem labs, mid-terms, fallen arches, supreme court squabbles, and the myriad other ails that beset the world at every turn, but there is in addition a growing annoyance in the form of a group of people who like to refer to themselves as a psycho-analysts.

These insidious monsters-in-human-form constitute a danger that cannot be dismissed lightly. They are often hard to detect, so subtle is their approach. They may be either man, woman, or beast, or both (the first two are the same as the last anyway).

With a cunning that smacks of the candy-from-the-baby-thief, they attack and usually destroy the mental (if any) equilibrium of the innocent citizenry. Psycho-analysts are to be shunned like the plague, if one is to remain in a condition even slightly approaching normal.

The most favored hunting-grounds of the "brain doctors" are informal gatherings, parties, etc., but they may be encountered anywhere at any time.

Their common procedure is to corner some unsuspecting person, who appears to be slightly bewildered, or perhaps is only bored, and slyly ask him what he thinks of this or that, or practically anything. Any possible answer is immediately seized with a, "Hah! You have a 'complex'." It is the firm belief of all psycho-analysts that everyone has a complex, and they will even sniff with suspicion at others of their ilk.



Many people have gone off after a conversation with a psycho-analyst, muttering, "One of us is nuts, and he says he ain't. Oh, me!"

Although it is very likely it will be years before the psycho-analytical movement is stamped out by a universal boycotting of these needle-nosed "bloodhounds of the brain-fields," the individual may guard against their muscling into his mental territory and avail himself of an opportunity for some excellent sport at the same time, by merely turning the tables on his tormenter and cross-examining the interrogator. This will cause him to become slightly flustered, and if enough questions are fired at him, he will whine, "You're not fair. I'm supposed to do the analyzing." Disregard his piteous plaints, and with a masterful sneer, grab off the coup d'etat with, "Hah, yourself! So you have a 'complex'." This will send even the toughest psycho-analyst into a tearful retreat, and you will be the envy of your friends.

It is in order that the general public be aware of this nuisance and know the means of successfully combatting him, that this column, after hours of research and observation, endeavors to present this brief expose of the psycho-analyst, one of h u m a n i t y ' s latest scourges.

In conclusion, may we say that in the course of investigations we have found that every self-styled psycho-analyst is similar, either to a moron with a superiority complex, or to a genuine "brain storm" with an inferiority complex. However, perhaps we shouldn't be too hard on them, for science tells us that we're all a bit addled, anyway.

Men students of San Jose State College have opened a cooperative house to provide cheaper living for those interested in "cutting down" expenses, and at the same time help others to do the same. Each student at the house contributes four hours weekly to the housework and pay room rent of $18 a month. Furniture was provided by the local YMCA and other interested parties.

Presidential Notes
By Don Mix

We were warned by our journalistic colleagues that we were, to use the vernacular, "sticking our neck out" when we cast our lot in college politics. For the last three semesters we have written innumerable news stories, columns and editorials that severely criticized the activities of student officers. Now we have put ourself on the spot by getting into the same position that we formerly delighted in ridiculing.

Our only salvation is obviously to attempt to correct the flaws and weaknesses in student administration that we found so objectionable as a student journalist. Please note that we use the word "attempt," because there is no assurance that we will be successful. If something is accomplished, it will make all the efforts worthwhile—if not, it will have been fun trying, anyhow.

Innovations were promised. Our plans, such as they are, are aimed at three main objectives. First, this semester's Executive Council will be urged to revise completely the outmoded student constitution. Second, the student administration will sponsor a movement for the enlargment and cooperation of the various social, literary, scientific and cultural groups of the college, because it feels that by promoting a healthful condition in the extra curricular activities, a more sound and satisfactory educational institution can be developed. Third, and perhaps most important, and certainly the most difficult to accomplish, is the objective which hopes to correct and elevate the attitude of student officers. This sounds a mite presumptuous and officious but you may be certain that it is neither.

It is our own personal theory that the main fault with previous student administrations is that many elements in their composition either refused or were incapable of realizing fully the trust that was placed in them. Perhaps they were capable and well meaning, but many times they gave an outsider the impression that they were incurable buffoons.

Student officers may act as their conscience dictates until they enter the Executive Council or some other official function, and then they will find it to their best interests to be veritable models of decorum.

It is only reasonable to believe that a serious and quiet group can act with more dispatch and intelligence than a noisy crowd of very amusing but hardly earnest wags.

Decorum breeds efficiency. This may not be the most efficient Ex Council in the history of the college, but you may be quite sure it will be the most decorous and therefore, we hope, the most efficient.

We realize that there will be objections, but we also realize that anything that is truly worthwhile cannot be accomplished without a struggle.

EXCHANGES

Boxing has been officially recognized as a regular college sport at San Jose State College, and an increased enrollment of 232 have signed for the course. The pugilistic Spartans have placed more than once in the AAU circles but their future is uncertain because of a ruling of the Pacific Coast conference that no collegiate boxer can meet an AAU fighter and remain eligible for collegiate competition.

MIXING 'Em Up

By DON MIX

Sitting down to pound out a sports column after spending the last five months in the austere company of editorials gives one the same sensation as getting out of a dress suit and climbing into a comfortable sweater and a pair of slacks. It is a right pleasant feeling to be able to write about things that interest you—no fooling.

"How's the basketball team?" is a current campus query. The general consensus of that mysterious group on "the know", is that the hoopsters, while having fine potentialities, are still very much in the developmental stage with lots of rough spots to be worked over. A few more practice tilts are needed before any worthwhile opinion can be formulated as to the worth of Coach Louis "Dutch" Conlan's 1938 edition. Even if the Bucket Boys don't finish up close to the top the college sports followers can be assured of many an interesting evening out at Kezar Stadium watching the antics of such colorful athletes as Bob Fex, Treacy Slattery and Bill Phelan. Some vicious wag just bellowed that we might call them the Casaba Clowns.

Al Williams, the man of many secrets, has monstrous big plans afoot for the Men's Club fights which are slated sometime late this semester. Al refuses to talk but undercover agents who have trailed him for the last two weeks hazard an opinion that he proposed to stage an outdoor night sport festival in Civic Center with Joe Louis meeting Schmelling in the main event and Adolf Hitler and Eddie Cantor facing each other in the semi-final.

During registration week we encountered Jack Schmale, the college's energetic publicity man who was bubbling over with information. Jack told us that long lamented Utah trip has finally been definitely arranged, local college official having just signed a home and home agreement with Weber College of Ogden for next Thanksgiving Day. The game will be sponsored by the American Legion, the Ram gridders going East next fall and the Weber lads coming out here in 1939.

The remainder of the schedule includes a tussle with the Cal Frosh in Memorial Stadium on September 24, a contest down south against L.A.J.C. on October 14; the State game on October 28, and the Pasadena game here on Armistice day.

Other grid opponents will be the College of Pacific Frosh, USF frosh, San Mateo, Sacramento and Modesto.

There ain't no Santa Claus cause if there was he would a given my old chum "Fur Face" Pasquelette a razor for Christmas.

A controversial issue around the college at the present time is the question of an adequate award system. There has been much discussion pro and con and it is almost certain that the Ex Council will oppose the recommendation for a system of awards which will be given it by the athletic council in the near future. Among the possibilities the following are noted:

1. THE BIG FOUR-SYSTEM. This is the system favored by the athletic council and has the traditional big four eligible for major awards. Football, Basketball, Baseball, and Track receive the block "SF" while soccer and crew are relegated to the role of minor sports and receive circle "SF"s.

2. THE POINT SYSTEM—under this form of athletic awards all sports are credited points toward the block "SF". Those favoring this form argue that all competent athletes are thus rewarded and not merely those that compete in the highly-specialized types.

3. DESIGNATION SYSTEM—Blocks are awarded to all deserving members of college athletic teams but each athlete must have an oar, a winged track shoe, a basketball, etc., to show in which sport he competed.

4. PRESENT SYSTEM—Football, basketball, baseball, tennis, crew and soccer are considered as major sports while 145-pound basketball players are awarded circles.

There they are, take your pick, but, as an afterthought, we would like to offer a system of our own combining the features of several of the ones mentioned above. Let the big four reign supreme in the major sport field but instead of merely tossing tennis, crew, and soccer on to the heap of minor sports would it be possible to give them the blocks with designs on them (an oar, soccer ball, or tennis racquet) and withhold the privilege of wearing a stripe?

* * * * *

A useful circle system could be developed by giving them to the flying Lamb footballers, the embryo swimming team, and college boxers who engage in intercollegiate competition along with the 145-pound basketball team who are at present the only recipients of the minor award.

Herb Brotman, the amateur swimming champ, has returned to college to give some needed impetus to the organization of an aquatic team. Last year a hastily organized J. C. outfit was barely nosed out by the well-drilled Cal Frosh tank team, which proves something or other.

The hitherto hidden histrionic talent of Johnnie Verducci amazed a group of first-nighters recently at the annual fall drama fest of the Newman Club. Little Jawn, previously thought to be of little value when not behind a phalanx of interference or running back a punt, strode the boards in masterful fashion and literally out-Barrymored Barrymore with his gripping portrayal of the title lead in that much-loved piece, "The Villian Still Pursued Her."

Dialogue:

Going back to J. C. after Christmas?

I dunno, are you?

The masculine element of the college who wanted to sign up for Riding, Archery or Badminton were abashed no end when they found they had to sign up at the women's Physical Education desk. They had to endure the frightful ordeal of getting in line with all the sweet young things and having all the hunks of muscle that haunted the sign-up room, make goo-eyes at them, wave handkerchiefs and offer to escort them home.

* * * * *

Among the new athletic talent that found its way into our ivy covered halls are Bill James, former Poly High basketball star, and Bill Fassler, the loquacious hoopster from Mission. With the prospects of a fine football season ahead please pahdon us if we note a few of the gridmen who have jest jined up. Bill Simmons, former teammate of Amby Schindler at San Diego High; Frank Verducci, a transfer from San Mateo J. C., and cousin of our own John Verducci; "Jiggs" Greenwood of Poly and Aaron Adams of Balboa are the lads who are making Russ Sweet's heart bounce with joy.

A nasty rumor is circulating to the effect that a former half-back on the football team bet some of his pals a considerable sum that he would set a new college record in the mile run. Although this confidant lad has never ran in competition before he is usually a reliable source of information. It will be interesting to watch the rise of a new athletic immortal.

IN THE SPRING THE COLLEGE'S FANCY . . .

DI MAGGIOS, O'DOULS SIGN FOR BASEBALL

Prospective O'Douls, Di Maggios, and Cochrans are signing up right and left for positions on this year's baseball squad, according to Coach Lee Eisan.

"Catcher Dave Johnson, outfielder Paul Hjort and possibly Fred Baker, are a few of the boys who will be playing a second season for the college," he said.

Arnold Banta from University High in Oakland, made All-City twice. He and Sims Hamilton are expected to vie for the honors at first base. Ed Curcio, pitched at University High for three years, and the rumors have it that he has a lot on the ball. Baily, a catcher from Texas, will probably relieve Johnson behind the plate.

"From the looks of things at present, we will have to build this year's squad on new material," stated Eisan. "I have heard a great many rumors about the 'wonder men' around the college, all I want them to do is sign up."

FEX OUT

The loss of Bob Fex is a vital blow to the team. Bob broke his leg a month ago and is out of the lineup for the season.

The Baseball Cup which is given each year to leading batter on the team, was awarded last year to Dick Holmes who played third base. His batting average was .426, the highest on the team. Dick will probably help Eisan coach this year's nine.

"Due to the ineligibility of a few of our best players, last year's team came pretty close to the cellar," Eisan said, "but this year it should be different. With the influx of a number of experienced players from other schools and colleges, the prospects for a victorious season are excellent."

Eisan also stated that if the team came up to his expectations there is a chance of a game at Los Angeles sometime during the Easter vacation.

Coach Eisan urges all students with former baseball experience, and students who would like to get a little experience to sign up with him immediately as practice will start this week.

Amori Coaching New Gym Bowling Classes

Bowling classes, a new institution this semester, are well under way under the direction of Joe Amori, at the Golden Gate bowling alleys on Jones Street. Both classes are filled to capacity and Amori hopes to find enough talent among his pupils to be able to organize a team to represent the college in forthcoming tournaments.

Although a great many of the candidates are beginners at the sport, there are a few experienced and capable bowlers available who may form the nucleus for the proposed teams. Heading the list is the veteran pin-smasher, Dick Simpers, who will be assisted by such stars of the alley as Irv Amstrup, Jerry Flamm, and Bob Neal.

There are two sections in bowling, each meeting twice a week. A schedule has been figured out by Amori which will enable each contestant to bowl at least two strings each day, and the players will be divided into brackets according to their ability, so that beginners will not be called upon to compete with superior players, such as those previously mentioned.

Sweet Has Veterans And Prospects For New Squad

Several returning veterans as well as a number of new prospects greeted Coach Russ Sweet at a track turnout early this week at the High School of Commerce practice field.

Quick to limber up were a number of former bay region high school stars who Sweet hopes will fill up the gaps in the Ram track squad, which has been torn by graduation since last spring.

Encouraged by the early workouts, Sweet said, "Although our track leftovers from last year are few, they are evenly distributed in the sprints, runs, weights and jumps. I expect to use them as a nucleus upon which to build a track team for the spring meets. Since the present new men look good, I can probably find some varsity material among them."

Sweet also stated that it is not too late to turn out and also that it is not necessary to take track as physical education. Practice is at the High School of Commerce field every day at 12:30. All who have had any experience or who think they are especially adapted for track are urged to come out.

Outstanding among those returning is Walt Boitano who won a letter by placing in the 100-yard dash in the league meet last spring. Other veterans are Tad Kawaguchi and Peter Ida who came along quite well in the broad jump. Boitano started the season as a discus thrower and ended up winning a block SF in the century.

Probably majoring in the shot put and the discus throw will be Larry Korchett and George Bedrosian, stalwarts of last year. George Woodland and Charles Keyer are slated for distance runs. All of these boys were rapidly improving toward the end of last season and it is expected that they will be in top form for the coming meets. Fred Bitgood, a hurdler, will again hurdle for the Rams.

Among the prospects is John Carolan, a local boy from Washington High who ran the mile for some near records. Also Peter Ida, broad jump; Bob Lee and Scott Regan, 440; Bob Gamong, an All-City man from Commerce, throws weights, while Frank Miland, from Balboa, is a sprinter of good repute.

The above mentioned are just those who have registered with Sweet and who have former records. There are probably many, however, who have not yet signed up or whose fame has not been noticed. Also, says Sweet, it is possible, with special arrangements, to practice on one's own time in the event that one has classes through the noon hour. A number are planning to do this.

Special Rate Is Given For Ice Skating Fems

Sponsored and supervised by Bertha Keller, womens' physical education instructor, a group of students will meet at the San Francisco Ice Palace, 48th Avenue, near Latham, on Friday afternoons from 2:30 to 4:30 to participate in the winter sport for which will be charged a special rate of forty cents.

All students interested are invited to attend this newly innovated project, which is being instituted to meet an increasing demand for winter activities.

VETERAN SHORTAGE HITS GADDY'S CREW

With only two veterans returning from last year's title winning aggregation, crew coach Jack Gaddy is again faced with the problem of shaping up a winning boat with a group of novices. Graduation, ineligibility, and interest in other sports cut deeply into the college's rowing talent and left him with only Carl Brogger and Don Mix returning.

Lack of veterans is no new problem to Admiral Gaddy, however, since last year he coached a group mainly composed of neophytes into a conference championship. Bob Caratto, star crewman of last year, has registered for the Spring semester, but at the present writing has not definitely announced his intentions of signing up for crew.

Gaddy has no indication as to the ability of the twenty-five prospective sweep-swingers who signed up for varsity competition although a few of them were noted crewmen in prep school. Dick Simpers, Ken Pasquellete, and Johnnie Coon rowed for Lowell while several others rowed in AAA competition last spring.

Among the other talent noted were Charles Rice, Vic Garfinkle, Earl Fitzgerald, Marvin Berliner, Ray Rhonde, Al Goetjen, Joe Carter, Al Pelsche, Bill Green, and Stephen Q. Mills. Johnnie Verducci, famed footballer, is a candidate for the coxswain's job while Red Wright is slated to handle the tiller.

College crewmen will again compete in the California Intercollegiate Oarsmen's Association, meeting the crews from University of San Francisco, San Mateo Junior College, San Francisco State College, Oakland Poly and Marin Junior College, according to Gaddy.

Gaddy plans to purchase a set of special racing oars for the racing season that will open with the Washington's Birthday Regatta on February 22. The dates for the conference races have not been set but they will probably be held in March and April. New sweat-suits are also promised for the first boat.

The first practice period will be held on next Monday at Yacht Harbor at 12:30, Gaddy announced.

College Publicity Man Gives Information On Prospects of Hoopsters

By JACK SCHMALE

Conference casaba a-la-Conlan, will be served as a regular dish on the Ram sports menu very soon, in fact almost before you realize it.

Incoming frosh will receive their first opportunity to blast out their enthusiasm as rooters precisely at 8 p.m., Thursday, January 27, when the semi-veteran Marin five jaunts over the bridge to open the conference schedule against our Ram bucketeers.

In order to acquaint potential team supporters with the basketball situation in general at San Francisco's leading semi-collegiate educational factory, a word or two is due "Dutch" Conlan and his aspiring eagers.

Prospects were fairly bright when the bugle summoned said hopefuls into the Galileo gym for the initial workout a month ago. There was Veteran Bill Phelan at guard, Treacy "Slats" Slattery at forward, lanky Bill Fischer at

CASABA MEN TO POINT FOR FIRST SEASON REPEAT

By JACK SEGGERN

Looking forward to a third season of basketball the Ram Basketball Team is striving to better its last season record and equal its first year accomplishment. In doing this Louis Conlan, coach of the Ram Varsity, has a difficult task of building up a winning combination between now and the end of the month when the conference opens.

Entering into its first year of Basketball the Rams won their first conference championship. Hillsman, Cain, Nicco, Glynn, Loustalot and many others played outstanding basketball to win their gold basketballs. Last year, with a team of veteran sophomores that was potentially as great as the championship aggregation, the Rams finished the season in third place. On this team Loustalot, Kotta, Rippon, Mordecai, Bedrosian, Mass and others played championship ball only to be nosed out in the final two games of the season down at Modesto. Of the aforementioned ball players, only Ernie Loustalot gained All-Conference honors at center. Loustalot is now playing basketball at St. Mary's in Moraga Valley.

Returning with Bill Phelan for another season of basketball is Tracy Slattery. Although only substitute guard last season Slattery is playing first string forward. Besides being an excellent shot, Slattery plays a heads up ball game and is a real team player. Last year Phelan played center but this year Conlan has moved him back to guard where he can use his speed and ability to tank long ones from way out to an advantage. Phelan is probably one of the fastest members of the Ram varsity this year.

Outstanding among the newcomers this season are Ed Curcio and "Panther Bunnie" Blackfield. Curcio hails from across the waters of San Francisco Bay. Blackfield is a local boy trying to make good. Each plays guard and forward respectively. When Blackfield and Tom Pauli are paired together they form the long and short combination of the team. Pauli towers six feet seven inches while Blackfield when he gets off his knees is five feet six inches. Pauli is also from across the bay, he played for Berkeley High.

With Harold Fisher at center the Rams are able to floor a team that will in most cases be taller than its opponents. Fischer is six feet three inches tall and is a graduate of the High School of Commerce where he played basketball for three years. When Fischer leaves the game, his place will probably be taken by Red Burrows who reaches also over six feet, being only a fraction of an inch shorter than Fischer. Burrows starred last year on Tom Wilson's 145's, playing center. Burrows was also high point man for the lightweights playing first string ball all season.

Among the new candidates are several other outstanding basketball players. Bill Fassler of Mission High . . . gained All-City honors in 1933. Conlan is counting heavily on him to live up to his high school reputation. Bob Nicco was a member of last year's championship soccer team . . . Won his first block along with Fischer playing soccer. Is the younger brother of Guido Nicco who played on the first Ram basketball team. Tony Manov is a seasoned player from across the bay . . . He is hard to fool and has a sharpshooters eye to pick off baskets with. Alex Opalinski is another graduate of Commerce High . . . is also another All-City basketball player of 1936. Played at Commerce under Conlan who was coach at the time. Opalinski is a good shot and an excellent floor worker, having plenty of class. A newcomer to the team in the last few days has been Henry James, better known as "Jesse" James . . . Was All-City at Poly High four years ago, playing a steller guard position.

Among the missing this year on the Ram Varsity are Ward Eagan and Bobbie Fex. After returning to school for a short time Eagan decided to go to work and give up basketball for the time being. Eagan was a veteran from last year's team. Fex had shown plenty of ability after a year of sitting on the bench.

It appeared that Fex would be among the leading basketball players this season, but, after a month's practice he broke his leg playing baseball in an effort to steal second base.

FORMER PREP GRID STARS ENROLL HERE

The rising tide of hopes for a 1938 "wonder team" on the San Francisco Jaysee gridiron soared skyward still another step last Friday, when Joe Berges, former halfback star of Mission High and U.S.F. Frosh, enrolled as a transfer student from the latter institution.

Berges, a 190-pound tri-threat ace with plenty of experience, follows a parade of other former local prep stars signing Jaysee dotted lines this semester.

TERMINAL TOPICS

By ANNE RABINOWITZ

Merrily singing the old chant, "Rich man, poor man, beggar-man, thief; doctor, lawyer, merchant, chief," college entrants still refuse to look further than their noses, and consequently become misfits in the professions of law, medicine, engineering, science, or teaching, insisting that there are no other worthy vocations, so they must select one of the trusty five.

Students planning to graduate from a junior college must study many angles, the first consideration being the matter of continuing their education at a university, and second, the financial standing.

If the student is unable to go on to a four year college, and must support himself, he is unwise to select courses, which may qualify him for university admittance, but will totally fail to equip him for a position. Many plunge blindly through the two years, drifting from one "major" to another, and discover that the diploma has gained them little prestige and is no added asset in getting a job, when they lack skill and technical knowledge.

Two outstanding examples of well-planned curriculum offered at the college are the Business and the Hotel and Restaurant divisions. The former starts the student from the very beginning and offers more than actual training, adding personality development and education in business poise. The second course is a detailed, complete two year study, which has met with the approval of many outside hotels.

Misinformed are they who cling to the fallacy that women alone seek marriage as a suitable substitute for a distasteful career. After speaking to several college men, we reached the sorrowful conclusion that they wish there were more wealthy (single) women, whom they could convince of their worthiness as charming, but indolent, spouses. Although they admit this in a laughing vein, their underlying thought is discontent with the five over-crowded fields.

Offhand, however, one can mention several other promising careers for ambitious young people, but as they are not the old standbys, they seldom receive consideration as worthy of the training and thought necessary to the study of medicine or law. For example, radio, aviation, journalism, merchandising, social service, floriculture, forestry, and court reporting are but a few of many opportunities available to students today.

For students interested in the principles essential to the understanding of radio and in achieving the skill of the radio man, the college offers a year course in radio engineering, with ten units given for each semester. Classes are held at Samuel Gompers Trades School from 8:00 to 12:00 o'clock.

New opportunities in business are made possible for business classes by the institution last semester of a course in the use of Ediphone and dictaphone dictating machines, the mimeograph, mimeoscope, and dictaphone recording appliances. Practical study of these devices is given in Business 68, with the prerequisite of a typing speed of forty words a minute and Business 72 which may be taken concurrently.

Junior colleges can present courses for which there is a demand. Students alone can create that demand; therefore, by increasing their acquaintance with various types of livelihoods and learning the pleasure of doing the work they enjoy, college entrants will pattern a new curriculum for two year schools. This will mean adding extra courses to the old fields and instituting entirely different subjects for those who don't fit into the scheme of "dostors, lawyers, merchants, chiefs."

WOMEN'S SPORTS PARADE

By JEAN PAGE

With a hardy and efficient crew, the good ship WAA, leaves port to sail the seas of spring semester. New captain of the spring cruise is WAA president, Dot Canavan, and her crew, Gail Hanna, Ellen Cumming, and Dorothy Sanderson, council officers. All WAA members have free passage on the ship and have an equal chance to return to port in May with a WAA award.

* * *

First, some information about the WAA:

Thirteen WAA sports are offered this semester: archery, badminton, baseball, basketball, tap dancing, modern dancing, fencing, golf, ice skating, riding, rifle, swimming, and tennis. The highest award that WAA presents is membership in the Block Society and the white flannel jacket and circular emblem which denote that membership. The points considered in grading a possible candidate for the Block are: good sportsmanship, first team nominations, interest in WAA, neatness, scholastic standing and relationship with other women students.

There is also a first team award. The first semester that a participant in WAA is named on a first team, and providing that her scholastic average is a C or better, she is eligible to receive a first team "block" and the small triangular "chenille" which represents the sport in which she received the first team nomination. Eligibility for a first team is determined by excellence of technique in the sport, attendance of all the required class meetings with two unexcused absences allowed, as well as genuine interest in and pleasure from the sport.

* * *

The all-important WAA calendar for sign-ups and elections lists the following as red-letter days:

January 17 to January 21—Sign-ups for WAA sports.

January 24—WAA class meetings begin.

January 31 to February 4—Election of managers. Both returning and new students are urged to take advantage of the many sports offered by the WAA.

* * *

WAA handbooks were not available when returning students registered. However, any woman student who desires one of these handbooks which explains the award system, the purpose of the WAA, and give the time of WAA classes, may obtain one at the Galileo gym office.

* * *

Ice skating has been introduced into the list of coeducational activities offered this semester. The place: San Francisco Ice Skating Rink, the time: 2:30 to 4:30 o'clock on Friday, oh yes, the price: 40c a visit, with skates and shoes furnished. As the travel folder never fails to say, "A winter playground in your own back yard."

* * *

A survey of the popularity of the sports offered this semester shows that golf is attracting more students than before. There are more students enrolled in the coeducational sports, archery, badminton, rifle, and riding. Badminton drew more women athletes than did the team sports.

* * *

The college bookstore now offers for sale our standard gym suit in college colors, red and white. The physical education department suggests that entering students purchase this costume, as such a costume will be necessary for Freshman Activities. (Not a paid advertisement).

* * *

Baseball is again in season and the lads who knock them over the fence in Paducah, Illinois, will do it no more often than our own Home Run Hannas who will display their swatorial talents at Funston Field on Mondays and Wednesdays at 10 o'clock.

* * *

All students wishing to enroll for any elementary sport must attend the regularly scheduled classes from the first meeting of the semester (classes beginning January 10) in order not to miss essential fundamental instructions.

And so, bon voyage.

special prizes, each poem must name the type in which it belongs.

4. Manuscripts should contain no identifying mark, but must be accompanied by a sealed envelope with, on the outside, the title and first line of each poem submitted, and on the inside, the name and college of the contributor together with a certification from a college official that the author is a regularly enrolled undergraduate student for the year 1937-1938.

5. February 7, 1938, is the closing date for contributions to the contest.

The pre-publication price of the anthology, to be printed by the Eucalyptus Press of Mills College, is $1.25, if cash accompanies the order; otherwise, $1.50.

Officials at Mills College, in early press releases, have expressed the hope that contributions will be received from undergraduates in most of the institutions of higher learning in the state.

SERVICE SOCIETY STARTS YEAR BY AIDING REGISTRY

Elected at a formal banquet held at the close of last semester, officers of the Women's Service Society of the college, together with regular members of the group, have started the semester's activities by assisting the administration with registration procedure, according to Marion Yaker, now president of the group.

"Ever since the WSS was first organized," Miss Yager said, "one of our most important duties has been helping out during the hectic days of registration. As this is one of the few tangible ways in which we can offer service to the college, we look forward to it with great anticipation."

Speaking of the WSS scholarship, another of the group's activities, Miss Yager said that the money raised by last semester's chain card party had been laid aside, and that with whatever money the girls raise this semester will be presented to some worthy student at the college commencement exercises in May.

"We have not decided yet just how we will raise the remainder of our money," Miss Yager said, "but when we do it will be published in The Guardsman together with information for students interested in applying for our scholarship."

Men Requested To Make Applications

"Men students who filed applications for work last semester should rejuvenate their requests this semester by coming to see me so that I will know that they are still desirous of obtaining some employment," said Dean of Men Edwin C. Browne.

Indicating that the present business recession has hit San Francisco as well as other parts of the country, Browne muttered, "jobs are scarce, very scarce." He stressed that he is doing all in his power to find part time positions for students that need additional income to go through the semester. Men students having problems, financial or otherwise, should see the dean, —"they should call on me without hesitation."

Regis. Incomplete Without Med. Exams

Issuing a warning to late registrants, the physical educations department has announced that no registration is complete until arrangements have been made for a medical examination. Appointment blanks should be presented to instructors, if the medical appointment conflicts with a class.

Regular college doctors are: Dr. Alice Potter, woman's physician, and Dr. Dudley Friedlander, men's physician. Women are being examined at the City Health Department, and the men are being examined at Galileo, room 210. The college has been assigned a nurse two days a week to assist in the college's health service program.

The following women will have their physical examination appointments on Thursday, January 20, instead of January 19: Josephine Crull, Eunice Lawrence, Florence Brunink, Betty Jane Hale, Eva Trambley, Sadako Kitano, Elizabeth Townsend, Carmen Catarina, Elizabeth Newell, and Lillian Ryan.

WAA Sign-ups To Be Open One Week

Sign-ups for all WAA sports will be held on the mezzanine floor, Powell Street, and at gym A, Galileo from January 17 to January 21. Gail Hanna, vice-president of the WAA and in charge of sign-ups, urged all women to sign for as many sports as possible because all have a chance to be elected team managers or win a WAA award.

"We welcome all entering women students and invite both them and the returning students to take part in our program of activities," declared WAA President Dorothy Canavan. "The number and variety of sports offered in the spring semester should provide an opportunity for every woman student to take her favorite sports. Freshmen students are required to take a special gym course. The WAA give them a chance to enjoy sports which otherwise would not be open to them."

WAA class meetings start on January 24 and the election of team managers will be held from January 31 to February 4. Officers of the WAA for this semester are: Dorothy Canavan, president; Gail Hanna, vice-president; Ellen Cumming, treasurer, and Dorothy Sanderson, secretary.

All students desiring positions meet with Miss Margaret Dougherty, Room 211 Galileo High School. Stating that she would be available Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 2:30 p.m. to 5:30 p.m., Miss Dougherty also said, "I will gladly assist those students wishing employment to obtain it."

. . CLUBS . .

Mooney Case To Be Pondered by Forum

To discuss whether Tom Mooney should be freed, the college Forum will met Friday night, January 28, at the home of Margarita Williams, 2372 Broadway.

Defending Mooney will be Margaret Moore, while Henry Evans calls for his continued imprisonment. Fred Nast was elected chairman to succeed John Healy who served in that capacity during the Fall, 1937. The secretary-treasurer's post will be handled by Doris Speroni.

John Ward, editor of "Forum," the organization's literary magazine, reminded the group that the annual publication will appear at the end of this semester. All students are invited to contribute any literary effort they think worthy of consideration. Manuscripts may be either poetry or prose on any subject and should be limited to 1500 words. Students desiring more information on "Forum" sheuld see Ward, Vast, Dorothy Mercer, or William Goss. The latter two, Miss Mercer and Goss, are the faculty advisers to the Forum Club.

Last Friday night the group, which met at the home of Sociology Instructor John Ross, had a lively discussion on whether art is representative of the age from which it emanates. Ward and Miss Williams presented arguments pro and con on the subject and then the students and faculty present joined in the discussion and presented their own ideas on the subject.

Physical Education Club Makes Plans

At a meeting held at the home of Bertha Keller, club sponsor, last night, members of the PE Club formulated plans for this semester's activities. The physical education club is open to all women who are majoring in physical education. Prospective members should see Bertha Keller or Margaret Wormell, last semester's president.

Main activities of the club in the past have been the instruction in badminton given by club members to girls of Everett Junior High School and the wiener roast to which girls from all of the San Francisco High Schools were invited.

Officers of the club last semester were Margaret Wormell, president; Ellen Cumming, vice-president; Gail Hanna, secretary; and Ruth Gustaffson, treasurer.

Hancock Starts Pistol Class

Introducing a class in pistol marksmanship, this semester finds three classes of shooting activities offering physical education credit. The elementary section in rifle marksmanship, designed primarily for students without previous marksmanship experience, meets at the Galileo Range on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 4:30.

It presents the nomenclature of the rifle, practice in sighting and aiming, and instruction in the prone and sitting positions. The advanced section, specializing in the kneeling and offhand positions, fires on Monday and Friday afternoons at 4:30. The newly organized pistol class meets on Mondays and Fridays at 3:30. Enrollment in the latter two sections is limited to students who have completed the last semester's work, or who have special permission.

Sponsored by the Junior College Rifle and Pistol Club, and through the cooperation of the United States Government, these classes are furnished rifles, equipment and instruction. Both men and women are eligible for enrollment, according to James S. Hughes, instructor in charge, and there are still places open in all sections.

Members of the colege rifle teams are selected, for the most part, from class members. "Much competition is scheduled for this semester," promised George Dieser, club president, "and all interested students should sign up for these classes in order to receive the instruction necessary for team try outs."

The college teams were successful last semester, beginning the season by winning three matches from Marin Junior College. The first team also won two out of three matches in its league. Although not as successful, the second team plans to make a good showing in its league this semester.

One of the oldest and most active organizations in the college, the Rifle and Pistol Club was organized during the Fall Semester of 1935 under the leadership of T. Gordon Sollman. The club, which last semester boasted over ninety members, then consisted of a few men and women interested in shooting. Application was made for membership in the National Rifle Association, and through the recommendation of that organization, the local club was put on the list for issue of rifles by the United States Government. After about a year the rifles arrived, and the members began preliminary instruction in marksmanship under the direction of Lieutenant William A. Hancock, 250th Coast Artillery, four times a member of the National Guard teams at the National Rifle Matches.

Star Gazers Have Two-fold Program

One of the clubs which is designed to pursue outside study together with recreation is the college Astronomy Club, headed by Elizabeth Rehbrock, and sponsored by Dr. Louis Berman.

The club meets every Monday, from 7 to 8 o'clock at the Galileo observatory. All students taking Astronomy and any others interested are invited to attend. One trip to Lick Observatory has already been planned as one of this semester's activities.

Deutsche Verein Meets Tuesday Eve

"Die Deutsche Verein," college German Club plans to have a general business meeting once a month and some form of entertainment every two weeks, with the first meeting being held at the home of the president, Walter Thompson, 335 Fourteenth Avenue, on Tuesday evening, January 18, at 7:30 o'clock.

The club constitution provides for three classes of members—active, associate, and honorary. Active members were those enrolled in the college at the present time. Associates are those no longer enrolled in the college; and honorary members are noteworthy persons whom three-fourths vote of the club members is granted.

Army-Navy Club To Meet At Sollman's

Opening another semester's activities, the college Army-Navy Club will hold a business meeting Friday evening, January 21, at the home of T. Gordon Sollman, club president, 1239 15th Avenue. Eligible students will be welcomed into the group, according to Sollman. "Applicants must have had some R.O.T.C., military, or naval experience, and must secure two sponsors for admittance," he explained. "Those who are interested and think they are eligible see Mr. Grant Marsh or Mr. James Hughes, faculty sponsors, or any of the club members," he concluded.

At the last meeting of the club, held Tuesday evening, December 21, last semester's officers were unanimously re-elected. They are Sollman, president; John Benton, vice president; Walter Thompson, secretary, and George Dieser, treasurer.

Chinese Students State Activities

The new officers of the Chinese Club: Andrew Auyong, president; Louise Lym, vice-president; Lillian Auyong, secretary; Henry Loui, treasurer; have formulated a full schedule of activities for the spring term, including a skating party, dance, a hike and numerous other informal social gatherings.

The club is sponsored by Edward Sandys, and functions as a purely social organization.

Debate Planned By Econ Honor Society

Plans have been made for a debate to be held within two weeks and Omicron Phi Pi's, president, Charles Vaughn, says that an extensive program is in store for the society this semester, including; a dinner and an initiation.

Those chosen to guide the club this semester are Charles Vaughn, president; Wm. Simmonds, vice-president; Mrs. Cecilia Elliot, secretary-treasurer; and Hyoko Junko, chairman of the committee on arrangement, and Bill Switzer, chairman of publicity.

Only students who have had six units of Economics together with a B plus average in Economics are eligible for this honor society.

Sorority To Drink Tea On January 15

Phi Beta Pho, the only sorority of the college which is purely social, is having for the first affair of the semester, a Tea, Saturday, January 15, at the Residence Club.

The club plans to have a joint picnic with Beta Phi college fraternity with swimming, dancing and sports featured, plus a trip to Truckee for skiing on the Washington Birthday holiday.

The officers for this semester will be chosen at a meeting on January 10.

Brief Descriptions Of Groups Given

Other clubs which have not elected officers or whose plans for the semester's activities are still only tentative are:

The Newman Club, a Catholic group which meets at St. Mary's Cathedral. It is a purely social organization, and has as its sponsors: Catherine Musante and Thomas A. Gabbert.

Those women students who are majoring in P.E. are automatically members of the P.E. club. Bertha Mae Keller acts as the sponsor, and the club has many social get-togethers during the semester.

The A Capella Choir and the Music Club, are both under the direction of Instructor Flossita Badger. The choir sings at assemblies and rallies and is open to music students. The Music Club is open to anyone interested in music and it is a social group.

Members of the Chess Club, headed by William Switzer, spend most of their time competing with other colleges in matches. This organization is advised by Henry Ralston, and open to all students whether they can play chess or not.

The Spanish, French and Italian Clubs consist of those taking the languages, and at their meetings they present foreign films and lectures. They are sponsored respectively by: Thomas Gabbert, Helen Kelly, Ubaldo Maggetti and Edward Sandys.

Members of the college Service Society do just what the name implies—perform services for the college. This group presents annually at graduation two fifty dollar scholarships, so that two deserving students can continue their education in the college. This club is sponsored by Verrel Weber.

Badger Predicts Finest Choir Season

Declaring "the A Capella Choir has a number of new members possessing unusually fine voices which gives promise of the finest season yet experienced by the choir," Miss Flossita Badger, head of the Music Department, outlined the activities planned for this semester.

At some future date the choral society will make recordings at San Francisco State College. They are scheduled to perform at the Spring Festival held at the College of the Pacific and one or two radio engagements are in the offing.

Although the Men's Glee, the Women's Choir, and the Orchestra are overjoyed at the wealth of new material there are a good many places still open.

The first meeting of the Music Club will be announced in this paper, those students interested in joining should get in touch with Miss Badger.

A month later, however, prospects turned from plain bright to darned gaudy, when it was discovered that Bill Fassler, Mission High All-City center in '35; Henry James, Poly All-City guard the same year, and Dave Solomon, a forward from Lowell's 1937 titular campaign, had bounced out their six simpleans downstairs in the cafeteria, and henceforth and from now on were to be considered full-fledged freshies.

The three bundles of joy should establish Conlan as one happy individual, even if he did umpire the Sugar Bowl game. With material a solved problem at present, "Dutch" has only to experiment with various combinations until he solves the problem—the clicking quintet.

The starting lineup has been anything but stable since the Rams inaugurated their practice schedule with a win over the Palo Alto Sports Shop. "Dutch" has opened with combination after combination, and (here's a secret) he still isn't convinced just which one is the strongest. (Second stringers please note).

The Rams at any rate may be assured of a record following in the first Santa Rosa Conference battle, come February 18. For let it hereby be announced that plans are under way for another special train excursion to the Rose City on the Northwestern Pacific's steel strips.

After Dark

By John Ward

For the authors in the audience the attention is now turned to the coming publication of the Forum magazine, sponsored by the Forum club. This is the literary magazine of the Junior College and first was published in the Spring term of 1937. And being the literary voice of the junior college all student writers are invited to submit material for consideration.

There are no special forms—drama, essays, poetry, short stories—perhaps the 3-act play and the novel should be omitted—the word limit is somewhere around 1,500. Subject matter is limited only where the editors feel a matter of taste is involved.

It is with a great deal of pleasure that we announce that the weekly record concerts, begun last term, will be resumed this semester. The enthusiasm of those who attended these musical hours last term was such that the encouraged sponsor has made many plans for the coming semester. As before, each program will be accompanied by various oral program notes. It is planned to have outside speakers at times. All students interested in fine music are urged to attend. As we go to press, correct time for the program is unavailable, but the announcement may be found this week on the bulletin board at Powell Street.

The program for next week will consist of:

1. The Wadter Music Suite of Handel.
2. Facade—poetry of Edith Sitwell, music of William Walton.
3. The Rio Grande—of Constant Lambert.

College Library Hours Announced

All college students are eligible to use the school library. The Reserve Book Room, located east of the entrance to the Study Hall in the Basement of the California Extension Building, is open between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 12:00 noon. Periodicals and reference books may be found on the Mezzanine Floor at the rear of the Book Store, which is open for the issuance of books from 9:00 a.m. to 1:00 p.m.

College students residing in the East Bay may have access to the University of California Library on the Berkeley campus at any time for study and reference work. Merely by showing registration or student body cards, students will be given use of the library. However, no books can be taken from the building but may be studied on the premises.

Am. Legion Offers New Scholarships

Opportunities for scholarship sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary are being offered to students of the college, according to Gordon Sollman, president of the Army-Navy Club. Under the terms of the offer, only sons and daughters of World War veterans are eligible for the scholarships.

"We would like to see a large number of students take advantage of this opportunity," Sollman said, "because the scholarships differ from those usually offered, in that they are not awarded entirely on a basis of scholastic achievement. The individual need of the student is the main factor considered, along with the student's general attitude.

Two types of scholarships are offered, one in the form of an outright gift, and the other a loan. The former is not to exceed $50 and is to be payed semi-annually, while the loan may not amount to more than $200 a year. The interest on this loan will be 3%, and neither principle nor accrued interest will be due until the graduation of the student.

Application blanks may be obtained from American Legion Headquarters and presented to the District Educational Chairman.

BOWLING

Small green and white books with instructions on "How to Bowl" were passed out to those who signed up for the course, and Amori believes that, if his pupils study these diligently, they may be able to get somewhere in competition.

"My only worry at present," he stated, "is that Simpers will break most of the pins with his high velocity bowling. I plan on keeping him under wraps during practice so as to avoid the possibility of shattered balls and broken pins, which would run into considerable money if he were allowed to cut loose."

LOOKING IT OVER

Dean Edwin C. Browne and Assistant to the President Paul Pitman view the Balboa Park site. Last week, following an agreement between the Recreation Commission and the Board of Education, the total property was made available for the college campus.

TRADITIONAL BRAWL EMBROILS SPECTATORS; NAMED BEST YET

Enemies Given Run of Fort Mason Field; Wage Muddy Battle In Hilarious Style Affording Showers With Wild Fire Hose To Onlookers

Commencing prematurely with a blast of the fire hose which scattered spectators right and left and threw our decorous Associated Student President for a ten-yard loss, last Friday's brawl between the Sophomores and the Freshmen will probably go down in college history as the most spectacular ever held.

For the first time since the college opened, the lads were not required to confine their activities to the close quarters of the Men's Gym but were allowed the freedom of one of the larger corners of Fort Mason in the center of which was the "piece de resistance" of the afternoon, the now famous Mud Bowl.

Sweeping into a lead with the first event, a flag rush, the Sophomores followed through by winning the three-legged race, bowing down to the Frosh only in the tie-up event in which several of our more stately Sophomores found themselves tied up in knots and flung into the aforementioned mud hole, head first!

The fourth event, a little number called "Johnny-jump-the-horse," went, heads down, to the Sophs. The poor Frosh, who were playing horse in the event, hadn't a chance against the onslaught of two hundred and some pounds of Fifi Ballastracci and were so unhappy about the whole thing that they allowed the Sophs to walk off with the last two events, a jousting contest held in the mud hole and a tug-of-war in which each team attempted to pull the other across the powerful stream of the fire hose.

An interesting touch was the elegant radio music provided "through the courtesy of Lorraine Haffmeyer" and it was amusing to note that two of the numbers played were "I've Got You Under My Skin" and, after the Sophs had won the deciding event, "The World Is Mine Tonight." It was suggested by an interested onlooked that someone sing "Don't Be Afraid To Tell Your Mother" for the benefit of some of the more timid souls who were unable to remove all traces of their participation because of a lack of towels in the men's shower room.

DEBATERS JOIN PHI RHO PI SOCIETY

Affilintion to Phi Rho Pi, national honor debating society will mark this semester's activity of the college forensic group, according to Elizabeth Rehbock, publicity representative of the debaters.

Initiation of the San Francisco Junior College chapter and presentation of the charter will take place at a later date which has not yet been definitely set. Phi Rho Pi is the largest of any Greek letter society represented on the junior college campus, Miss Rehbock claims. Inter-collegiate debates will start at the beginning of February and include several California colleges and universities besides the usual junior college opponents.

Returning veterans are: Lorraine Johnson, Frank Bosl, Charles Vaughn, Joseph Meeko, David Levy, George Woodland, Morris Rabinowitch, Kenneth Germann, and Miss Rehbock. Together with new students Lloyd Luckmann, college forensics director, expects to form a winning squad of arguers. Anyone interested in debating should see Luckmann or attend the weekly meetings of the society, in room 462 at the Galileo building, from 2:30 to 4:30 o'clock.

Formation of a debating conference is being contemplated by Luckmann in which local schools will participate, sending their best orators and debaters for competition. The cream of the crop will be determined by a process of elimination. The conference question under consideration is the proposed Ludlow war referendum by the people. There will be only one subject which will be argued by all the debaters.

D. MOONIE WINS CHICAGO HONORS

David Moonie, San Francisco Junior College graduate of June, 1937, and winner of a scholarship to the University of Chicago, was recently distinguished in being the only student in the school of business to make straight "A," according to a letter received last week by Paul M. Pitman, assistant to the president here.

Nominated by the college for a scholarship to that institution, Moonie has been attending there since last summer. He was also recently initiated into the Chicago Alpha Pi chapter of the Phi Kappa Sigma business fraternity.

"This proves," said Pitman, "that Chicago made no mistake in selecting Moonie and that he is well representing our college. While he was attending school here. Moonie majored in business and I think that his record at the University of Chicago speaks well for San Francisco Junior College."

Women Riflers To Vie With Carnegie

A match between the college women's rifle team and that of the Carnegie Institute of Technology has just been arranged, according to word received from Coach William A. Hancock of the rifle and pistol club.

All arrangements have been completed except as to who will compete, said Hancock. It will be a "postal match," the scores of each team being sent to the other. The match will probably be conducted along National Rifle Association lines as both schools are members of this organization.

Ray Valdez Chosen Leader Of College Peace Society

Electing officers for the current semester, members of the Peace Society chose Ray Valdez to lead the group, at the organization's first meeting of the year, last week.

Other officers named besides President Valdez were: Elizabeth Rehbock, vice-president; Doris Speroni, secretary-treasurer; and Fred Vast, corresponding secretary. This group will compose the Society's executive committee. Net result of the election was that Valdez and Vast changed positions, Miss Speroni was retained at her post, and Miss Rehbock succeeded Paul Benson, who is now attending the University of California. Other business considered included an amendment to the constitution involving a parliamentary technicality, and a reduction of the size of the executive committee.

"I will do my best," Valdez said, "to pilot the society to a successful spring term. Although organized only a few months ago, we have accomplished a great deal and I am looking forward to a continuance of our record. Besides studying the methods of maintaining and establishing peace, our activity for peace this year must include a drive for more members. For with a larger group we will be able to accomplish more. All students genuinely interested in peace are welcome to join us."

Plans for the semester include a rally on the day when the annual nationwide student demonstration for peace is held, continued use of the bulletin board with striking posters to bring the message of peace to the student body, and meetings of an attractive, interesting, and educational nature. With these activities in mind the organization feels that students will see the value of such a group and will join it.

Having informally argued the proposed constitutional amendment for a war referendum, the society decided that its next meeting should be devoted to a thorough discussion of the proposed popular vote in event of a threat of conflict with another nation. Interest in the measure was increased when Congress recently pigeon-holed it to a committee. An attempt will be made to get two faculty members to present opposite sides of the question with a general discussion following. The meeting has been set for Wednesday night, February 2, at the home of Doris Speroni, 441 Fair Oaks street.

AWS To Hold Tea At Galileo Next Tuesday

Freshman Women Guests of Association At "Get-Together"

Inaugurating AWS social activities for the coming semester, a tea, to which all women students are invited, will be held at Galileo, room 212, from 3 to 5 o'clock, on Tuesday, January 25. The tea is intended primarily for the benefit of Freshman women who have not yet been given an opportunity to become acquainted with AWS officers and other prominent women students of the college.

Women who will serve as hostesses are AWS officers: Barbara Randall, president; Annabelle Benson, vice-president; Jane Mitchell, secretary; Miriam Dunne, treasurer; and Norma Parent, Florence Murphy, Frances Kauffman, Lorraine Haffemayer, Fern Muheim, Muriel Mills, Meadus Regal, Marie Louise McNutt, Betty McAllister, Barbara Allen, Ruth Vincent, Betty Ross, Ellen Cumming, Hazel Bouchter, and Lorraine Johnson.

"We invite all women students to attend our activities and we especialy urge freshmen women to come to this tea which is being held in their honor and which will give them an opportunity to meet we AWS officers and other women students of the college," explained AWS president, Barbara Randall.

Among faculty members who will attend the tea are President A. J. Cloud, Helene Turner, Dean Edwin C. Browne, Paul Pitman, Ward Nichols, J. Paul Mohr, Mary Jane Learnard, Alfred Agosti, Claire Cuneo, Alice Cooper, Ruth Gavin, and Annemarie Delfs. Home Economics classes will prepare the tea.

Women's adviser, Margaret Dougherty, who is aiding the AWS council in completing arrangements, expressed the hope that, "The tea will be as successful as the ones held last semester."

Plans of the AWS council for the coming semester include several other teas at leading hotels and clubs, and an informal dance to be held some time in the near future.

Block SF Men Open Activities Today

Block S. F. men are to hold initial meeting of the semester this afternoon. The meeting is to be held in the Galileo cafeteria at 2:00 o'clock promptly. The purpose of this first meeting will be to elect new officers and representatives to the Executive Council. Russ Sweet, track and football coach will preside over the meeting.

"All students, possessors of Block SF and circle Block SF awards are urged to attend this meeting as they are members of the society," said Sweet. "In keeping with the progress of other school organizations," Sweet continued, "it is the duty of members to attend and take an active part in the meetings of the Block SF society."

A new president must be elected to lead the Block SF men in what promises to be an eventful semester. After an uneventful term of office, Duke Worsham the former president from last semester has since left the college. Other prominent block men have also graduated or left school.

With those returning for another semester of school work, it is rumored Will Dolman, last semester's secretary and treasurer, will be a candidate for president. Other stalwarts of the football team, such as Merv Weiner, Bob Fex and Piggie Nelson will probably run for office.

Also at today's meeting, after the election of officers the next date for a meeting will be decided. At this next meeting the new officers will take over and no doubt the policy of the Block SF society will be formed and what participation of the block SF men in school social activities and affairs be determined.

Course Instituted In Personal Typing

Restricted to students who are not secretarial majors is a course in personal typewriting, Business 64, daily at 2:30 o'clock at Galileo High School, room 252. It is designed to train students how to type term papers, class notes, or special reports.

Winners of gold pins for typewriting last semester were Marcia Scobey and Robert Rea, business students. Awarded silver pins were La Verne Nelson, Estelle Rosenberg, Doris Devencenzi and Richard Oxtot.

MAN HUNT, COIN FLIPS - RESULTS OF CLASS VOTE

Amstrup Chosen Prexy of Hi Sophs In Balloting; Frosh Run Off Tie Today

By FRED VAST

Irving Amstrup was named to lead the high sophomores for the spring semester of 1938 at the semi-annual class elections held last week. Despite the super detective ability of a Guardsman reporter no traces of the new low sophomore officers have been found. All sources have been combed for information, but to no avail. One clue is being turned over to G-men in the hope that the results may be obtained.

The scribe reported that the only data at hand is that the new president is a woman and that she was the vice-president of the high freshman class last semester; the other officers are also women, it is said. Frank Verducci was elected president of the high freshmen. Malcolm Jacobs and Marvin Berlinger tied for the honor of being the pilot of their class. A run off vote will be held today at two o'clock in the Galileo auditorium.

EVEN COIN-FLIPPING

A flip of a coin gave the post of high freshman secretary to Betty Chrysler. Because of her superior prognosticatorial ability, Miss Chrysler was able to call more heads and tails than Marie Heiser, after they had received an equal number of votes, and thus she captured the position. Sims Hamilton was chosen by the last termers to act as secretary-treasurer. Joe Carter and Muriel Dodsworth were even in the race for low frosh secretary-treasurer. They will run again today in the auditorium. The low sophomore recorder and money handler is a woman.

HIGH FROSH THINK

The high freshman class thought it was important that the duties of secretary and treasurer be separated and given to two students. It was also thought by this class that it would be nice to have a yell leader. Miss Chrysler's stunning victory to assume the secretarial duties has already been mentioned. The position of treasurer will be handled by Frank Hospodarsky. Acting as yell leader will be Ken Pasqualette.

Excursion North Planned Feb. 18

A one and one-half hour boat trip and two hours on a Ram Special Northwestern Pacific train will be offered the college for one-twenty-five, when the College's basketballers invade Santa Rosa on February 18, it was announced this week by Jack Schmale, College Publicity Director in charge of arrangements for the trip.

This excursion will be similar to the Sacramento railroad conquest of last fall, and arrangements are under way to procure a dancing car and other entertainment. Tickets will go on sale at the Finance Office at Galileo shortly, at $1.25 per person.

Anthology Will Be Issued By Private Press

Publication of California Art Fellowship Called "First The Blade"

In operation since 1932, the Eucalyptus Press this year proves the value of college press facilities with the recent announcement that it has been selected by the California Intercollegiate Fellowship of Creative Art to publish the forthcoming "First The Blade," anthology of student verse.

Privately owned by Rosalind Keep, Assistant Professor of English at Mills College, the press has a high reputation for fine printing, and has produced several volumes written by faculty members and students at Mills College. The most recent publications were three volumes of essays, poems and plays, respectively, assembled in commemoration of the eighty-fifth anniversary of the college.

Now equipped with three presses, The Eucalyptus Press was inspired by a visit Miss Keep made to the famous Ashendene Press. Its first publication was a selection of addresses made by Dr. Aurelia Rinehart, President of Mills College.

Competition for "First The Blade" prizes is open until February 7, and all poems should be addressed to "First The Blade," Box 426, Mills College, California. Any undergraduate student registered during the scholastic year of 1937-1938 in a California university, college, or junior college is eligible as a contributor. Three prizes for outstanding poems will be offered as well as additional prizes for the best poem in each of the following forms: sonnet, narrative, free verse, blank verse, lyric, and French verse forms.

The list of rules for contributors is as follows, reprinted from last week's issue of The Guardsman:

1. All poems must be the original work of the contestants or original translations of ancient classics.

2. Five copies of each poem, typed on separate sheets, are to be submitted. One side of the sheet only should be used.

3. To be considered for one of the special prizes, each poem must name the type in which it belongs.

4. Manuscripts should contain no identifying mark, but must be accompanied by a sealed envelope with, on the outside, the title and first line of each poem submitted, and on the inside, the name and college of the contributor together with a certification from a college official that the author is a regularly enrolled undergraduate student for the year 1937-1938.

5. February 7, 1938, is the closing date for contributions to the contest.

The pre-publication price of the anthology, to be printed by the Eucalyptus Press of Mills College, is $1.25, if cash accompanies the order; otherwise, $1.50.

Physical Education Group Makes Plans For Big Semester

Beginning the New Year with a wind up of last semester's activities, the Physical Education Club elected new officers and planned an extensive social calendar for 1938, during a business meeting held January 13. The first event is a tea slated for February 3 to be held at sponsor Bertha Keller's home. Mrs. Florence Stephenson, instructor at State College, has been specially invited to give the majors helpful hints in teaching physical education.

Other activities planned for the semester include a debate, an alumni meeting to which charter members will be invited, a talk by Miss Pauline Hodgson, instructor at the University of California, and a big social affair at the end of the semester, the nature of which is as yet undecided.

The constitution will undergo an immediate change for the purpose of enabling any woman student to partake in the club activities, though she will not be eligible for office.

BOARD AWARDS BID FOR FOUNDATIONS; PG&E TO GIVE SPACE TO LIBRARY

Sutter Bldg. To House Overflow of College Reference Works

Part of the College library will hereafter be housed in the Pacific Gas and Electric Company building on Sutter Street, where arrangements have been made for the use of three rooms on the eighth floor where reserved books and publications used by students for reference work will be kept hereafter. Shelves are now being put in rooms 826, 827, and 828 to hold the overflow of books from the library at the Powell Street building.

NEAR CLASSROOMS

The P. G. and E. building was selected as the site of the extension because of its accessibility to the Extension Building on Powell Street. It is situated on Sutter Street, between Powell and Stockton, within a minute's walk of the students' classrooms.

Expansion of the library was made necessary by its continued growth and the inadequacy of its present quarters to take care of the demands of the students. With the new addition, students will be provided with a place where they can study in peace and quiet without being crammed into the small space which was all that was previously offered them.

Addition of this building to those already used by the college brought the total number of buildings housing classes to five. The others are the California Extension Building, Galileo High School, Girls' High, and Samuel Gompers Trade School.

Sibley Construction Company Submits Lowest Offer

Acceptance of the bid of the Sibley Construction Company for the construction of the foundation of the permanent Junior College plant was announced last week by the Board of Education. Various bids submitted by contractors were opened at the Department of Public Works last Wednesday, in the presence of Richard E. Doyle, President of the Board of Education and Chairman of the Physical Properties committee, who immediately gave his approval to the lowest bid, that of Sibley Company.

The arrangement by which Doyle was allowed to approve the bid caused a time saving of six calendar days in the beginning of actual work on the site. It was the first time in the history of the city that such an arrangement has been made in regard to the construction of a public school and shows the eagerness of the Board to get construction under way as soon as possible.

The Sibley Company received what is known as a foundation contract; that is, it calls for construction of the foundation for the buildings only, rather than of the buildings themselves. The contract for the actual erection of the structure will be awarded at a later date. It is customary, in such a case, for the whole matter to be deferred until a contract is drawn up for the construction of an entire plant as a unit, but, since speed is the primary objective in the case of the Junior College, the matter was rushed through so as to get work under way as soon as possible.

The approved bid was one of $30,000, for which sum the construction company undertook to do all necessary foundation work on the site and make it ready for the erection of the buildings.

Home Econ Society Meets Today 2:15

To discuss what will be their program of activities for the coming semester, the College Home Economics Association will hold a meeting today at 2:15 o'clock in room 317 at Galileo. All old members and all prospective members are invited to attend the meeting and give their suggestions for the HEA program. To join the HEA a woman must be taking a course in Home Economics or must have taken such a course at the junior college. Membership cards may be obtained for 25 cents from HEA officers, Cecil Thompson, president; Dixie McCormac, vice-president; Phillis Fullam, secretary, and Hazel Bauntam, treasurer.

"We hope that all women who are interested in Home Economics will come to our meeting today and help us to plan and enjoy our future good times," said Cecil Thompson, president of the organization.

This semester's activities began with a festive Christmas tree party held January 6, at the home of Claire Cuneo, Home Economics instructor. Miss Cuneo and women's councilor, Margaret Dougherty are the club's advisers. Club members will attend a San Carlo opera performance during the semester. Announcement of meetings, which are held once a month, will be posted on the Powell Street building's bulletin board.

WARNING GIVEN BY REGISTRAR

Registration will continue through Friday. Students are reminded that books must be filed on the date stamped on the cover, in order to avoid the $1.00 penalty for late filing fee. In case of doubt see either Mary Jane Learnard or J. Paul Mohr in the Registrar's office.

Last minute reminders from the registrar's office are:

1. All students who intend to graduate in May, 1938, must file their petitions on or before February 9, 1938.

2. The aptitude test will be given on Saturday morning, January 22, in room 458 from 9:00 o'clock to 12:00 o'clock for those students who have not completed it. "Late registrants should be there," said Mary Jane Leonard, "and students must be on time if they expect to take the test."

3. Wednesday, February 2, is the last day for removal of incompletes from the previous semester.

4. Wednesday, February 2 is also the last day for partial refund of incidental student body dues for approved withdrawals.

Hotel Management Division Offers Two New Courses

Two new additions were made last Saturday, January 15, 1938 to the long list of courses offered by the Hotel Management Division of the College. These were Meat Cutting, conducted by Chris Sarantis, of the Schweitzer Meat Company, and Hotel Office Machines, with instructions given by George Clevenger, Jr., of the National Cash Register Company.

Both courses are designed to meet the future needs of the hotel students, the meat course giving the pupil actual experience in meat cutting and instruction in purchasing and economical utilization of various cuts of meats. The Hotel Office Machine course offers the study and operation of various mechanical devices used in hotels and restaurants, ranging from the simple adding machines, calculator and cash registers to the complicated labor saving equipment such as posters, electrical bookkeeper and the food checker.

Both Sarantis and Clevenger are qualified instructors in their particular field, Sarantis being a man of many years experience in the wholesale butcher business and Clevenger, a successful member of the National Cash Register Company. Sarantis is highly in favor of the present training program and was one of the first persons possessing an idea of organizing such a teaching system. Clevenger has possessed deep interest in the hotel school of the college since its inauguration, and is one of the main boosters of the course.

Among the many courses attracting large crowds of professional hotel people as well as the full time junior college students is Hotel Protection, conducted by John F. Shea, secretary of the Northern California Hotel Association. This course covers a general discussion of the factors utilized in the safeguarding of hotel credits. Special confidential warning bulletins issued by local law enforcing agencies and credit organizations are also discussed.

DON'T LET IT BOTHER YOU

It is only the ignorant who dispise education.
—Publius Syrus.

TOO often nowadays comes the complaint, usually from non-college people, that college is a waste of time. The idea being "What good is a college education if one cannot get a job anyway?"

Young people, happy in their studies are oftentimes upset, and their whole mental outlook distorted by the narrow-mindedness of certain individuals, who, jealous because someone else is acquiring something they themselves either never had the chance to gain or were too lazy to make an honest effort toward, seek to poison their more ambitious brethren's minds by their irrational mouthings.

Unfortunately, it seems that this is a universal failing of mankind in general, and young students in particular must guard against allowing such opinions to influence them.

It is better to listen to everyone and follow the dictates of your own intelligence, than to let every well-meaning but totally mis-informed person control your actions with his dogmatic views.

The ability to learn, and by learning to better not only his place in the world, but his inner consciousness as well, as one of the birthrights of mankind, and through the ages, no one will ever be anything but richer for having acquired as much education as is possible.

A FULL SEMESTER

This spring will be a busy semester, especially in the matter of extra-curricular activities.

A point too often missed by some college students is the fact that participation in outside-the-classroom events constitutes as important a part of the education of the individual as the time spent in lectures; consequently it behooves the person who would be a well-rounded student to enter into the affairs of his college.

The many student groups within the college have a varied program for the coming months; the Executive Council, official governing body of the Associated Students, will arrange a number of interesting activities; the several varsity teams, baseball, track, crew, and basketball, will be fighting for their respective championships; all should be given spontaneous and whole-hearted student support.

Get in the swim. Come to ALL the affairs and yell with the rest! You'd be surprised to see how much fun it really is.

MARCH OF PROGRESS

Last week's appalling toll of dead in the tragic airplane disasters, gives rise to the usual run of comments from the die-hard, old-line school of conservatives to the effect that "aviation's a failure," "I wouldn't trust my life in a 'plane," and similarly futile arguments.

What the chronic pessimists fail to realize is, the fact that in proportion, automobiles exact a greater toll by far than airplanes did even in the first crude stages of their development.

In the passing of years with the accompanying advances in civilization, the farsighted individual will continue to smile with tolerance at the alarmist views held and believed by his more old-fashioned fellows.

ON PEACE MOVEMENTS

Certain individuals and groups of the moment are greatly concerned over the prospects of a major war among the nations of the world. They would have man believe that he is drifting toward an inevitable destruction. They make much of so-called international "incidents" in their frenzied efforts to awaken the peoples of the world to the reality of the impending cataclysm.

A more effective way to promote universal peace than those now being employed, might be to foster the education of the people to peace. Get people to feeling, thinking and LIVING peace.

The man who succeeds is the man who discounts the possibility of failure. It might be a good idea for the peace advocates to begin discounting the possibility of a war.

This does not mean closing of eyes and denial of the existence of danger. It means admitting the danger and quietly determining to prove master of the situation in a sane and calm course of action.

It has been said that you can make people believe anything. Then, make them believe there is going to be peace. No country ever fought a war of aggression without having to trick its people into favoring the war. If the people cannot be fooled, then there can be no war, except in defense of the homeland against an invader.

ONCE AGAIN

Every semester at this time, the first two weeks of the new term, numerous complaints and grumblings are heard from students about the high price of text books. The most vociferous of these objectors are members of the incoming freshman class. It seems that the sophomores take an indifferent attitude because they have had experience with the situation before, and have come to look at it as a matter of fact.

The purpose of this piece is not to attack the "student store," for we recognize that Mr. Patterson, manager of the business enterprise, has cooperated with the college whole heartedly. Rather the reason for this article is to point out that there is dissatisfaction with the present facilities of obtaining and disposing of books and to suggest a remedy. In discussing this subject the lack of building space must also be taken into consideration. Mr. Patterson is not to be blamed if prices are a little high. After all he is not in business for his health and as indicated above he has helped this institution in many ways. The mezzanine floor of his store is used for a portion of the library, the Associated Women Students have made a social room and a patio out of his basement and his backyard. Nevertheless the problem of the student to pay cheaper prices for his reading matter still remains.

Many solutions have been offered and much more protesting has been made, but in every instance there has been some flaw in the remedies suggested. The problem under our present circumstances can only be solved temporarily, and although any plan advanced can merely serve to alleviate the situation, it is of sufficient importance to warrant immediate attention. We understand that definite plans have been made for a cooperative student store when the campus becomes a reality. This shows that the administration is interested in making it economically as easy as possible for students to attend the college.

A method whereby a considerable sum could be saved by the student body would be the operation of a student exchange during the first two weeks of each semester. This book exchange could be directed by the administration to assure good organization and fairness. If space could not be found at Powell Street there certainly is room in the Galileo building. No plan for reducing student expenditures has yet been tried. The aforementioned proposal is feasible because it is simple and entails no expenditures or obligations. This affords us an opportunity at least to attempt to accomplish something that we all desire: the reduction of expenses.

Mental Mutterings

By Fem

The air is cold and the wind doth blow,
And it seems us if there should be snow.
So all the college he's and she's
Could whizz down Fowell on a pair of skis.

The ice skating class should do or dare
On a special rink in Union Square.
And basketball, these stormy nights,
Should be replaced by snowball fights.

But alas and alack, for our wildest dreams,
It probably won't snow, strange as it seems,
So make up your mind to shout and sing
And be very happy about the whole thing.

Emerging from a mental maze caused by attempting to read, alternately, books on the history of the Greek theatre, several restoration comedies and the "Adventures of Tom Sawyer," we felt called upon to give out with one of our nonsensical nothings known in the better poetic circles as Odious Odes. The oldies should be used to them by now and the newies should consider it all an unpleasant part of their initiation and learn to live above such things.

Sure signs of the times or something was the sudden descent upon our fair college of gobs of alumni. Not a bit impressed by the sight of Bob Neal and Don Mills, who can't seem to tear themselves away, we were pleasantly surprised to run into Ruth Johnson, former WAA president, Parnel Brown, who used to lead the Women's Service Society, Peter Vincent Jambruno, ex-Ram footballer, Pat Madden, a former fellow journalist and Bill Dillon, who, rumor has it, may once again haunt our halls. And all on the same day! Who said elephants are the only ones who never forget?

And while in a reminiscent mood, a big bunch of bravos to the lads who put on that impromptu jam session at the recent Monday afternoon clambake given to welcome the Frosh. Clayton Mitchell handled the piano, and when Mitch swings out, he really swings out! With Preovolos at the drums, the rug crushers got a chance to "truck on down" and didn't pass it up. Palms for the afternoon go to Joe Kelly, who showed the crowd some fancy dancin', but perhaps Al Williams should get special mention for that bit at the Frosh rally. Unable to sit still and face the music any longer, Al hurriedly left the stage and started doing his dance in the wings. With hardly any urging by Yell Leader Stan Adams, he waltzed right out on the stage and did his stuff, followed by Barney Viner, who isn't so bad either. It looks like that old debbil swing has really come to stay!

CABBAGES AND KINGS

By Dick Simpers

WITH the hectic activity of the first couple of weeks now a thing of the past, we turn resolutely to the prospect of four months of striving for grades, of wondering what to put in the column, and of slinging the bull out in front of school. Aw, shucks, maybe it won't be so bad after all. "Look on the sunny side" is our motto, even though the sun may be a trifle darkened by the grim spectre of mid-terms looming in the future.

"—WEST IS WEST"

The confusion and uproar caused recently by the radio program of a certain coffee company, which presented ae West in a skit about the Garden of Eden, appears, upon close observation, to have been rather unjustified. Only a person with a particularly dirty mind could have found anything objectionable in the act, and the chances are, that, if anyone other than Miss West had participated in it, it would not have caused a murmur.

Keeping the radio programs clean is, of course, a commendable undertaking, but there is such a thing as going to extremes of goody-goodiness. When a network as large as the Columbia Broadcasting System prohibits the use of the word "nuts" over the air and refuses to allow orchestras to play dance arrangements of "Ave Maria," as is the case at present, it seems high time to turn in the radio as down payment on a nice pipe-organ.

STAR GAZING

The Galileo observatory, rather a forbidding-looking structure by day, is transformed on Monday nights into a cozy little haven for a group of would-be astronomers, who foregather there every week for a peek through the telescope at the heavenly bodies (the moon and the stars). Quite a jolly time is had by all, according to reports, what with Refreshments, Jupiter, and Mr. Berman.

It's nice work if you can get it, but, not having the prerequisite, we couldn't.

AT LAST!?

It was with a huge sigh of relief that your correspondent received the news that work is finally getting under way on the new buildings for the Junior College. For the past two years we have had to cover all news concerning the new plant and it really was tiresome grinding out the same old line week in and week out, trying to think of different words with which to say the same thing "Construction to start in near future," etc., etc. Many is the night we have roused members of the family in the middle of the night by groaning in our sleep about "San Jose Avenue" and "30 acre site." Those days are gone forever we are assured, but we're keeping our fingers crossed.

By Mac

We wonder what's become of: . . . that screwy rage of last semester, that silly thing called "Foo," . . . the perennial freshman, the bombastic clown, Willy Weinstock . . . the little red and white jillopi that used to park on the sidewalk at Galileo . . . the mounted terror in blue that chased us from the front of the Powell Street hangout . . . all the hullabaloo that went the rounds and agitated for a student "co-op" . . . the guys and gals that continually holler for a dirt column and never respond when asked to turn one in . . . the cigar-box library they used to have at Galileo . . . the bum puns that appeared in this column . . . all the cars we used to sit in at Gal, now they leave 'em home, we guess . . . the controversy over the Peace Society . . . the little red and white chapeaus that graced the domes of Dick Cap and Meggers . . . the lovely love affairs that once gave the gals something to chew on in their lunch-time gossip-fests.

There's many more of them, but if we go on, we might have to change the name of this column to "Out Of The Mud."

It seems there's a contest on between a couple of our boys for the title "Oldest Student." If these fellows want to, we can conduct an election and get one of them the office of President of the Junior Class. (We should talk, after all we're a Pioneer).

Things we can never forget: . . . some of Jerry Flamm's columns of last semester (genius no less) . . . the hecklers who make putting out a paper, not only fun, but also give it the element of chance (there's a chance it'll come out) . . . the much publicized Sacramento trip of last Fall (anyone who missed it doesn't deserve to know about it, and those who went know all they need to know) . . . the choice weather we had the night of the Men's Club dance last Hallowe'en . . . the way Gene Blumenthal, then prexy, kept raving about the time the boys had when they went to Pasadena last year, (maybe we should have borrowed that fin and gone along) . . . the card stunts we put on at Kezar (from the press box, they looked like a torn-up program thrown in an empty-salad bowl).

Just as we were about to conclude this week's effort, the wag who interviewed this columnist last semester, stuck his head in the office and sneered, "I am still waiting for you to come 'out of the fog,' MacArthur, when are you going to get off the dime?" To which direct and pointed insult, we could only reply wearily, "That isn't a dime, it's only a Los Angeles street car token and besides as we told you before, it isn't what you say, it's how you say it."

If the little ferry boat continues to run back and forth each day, next week we'll tell some more Uncle Wiggly stories.

Under the all-meaning title of "Vest Pocket Foos," Mission High School's "West Wing" has gathered its pick of "cheree" poems and puns. We've done a bit more picking and present these few "foos":

Sardine—Czar's children.

Miscue — Daughter of Madame X.

Mallet—A species of duck.

Little Mary Jane, upon inquiry of what she had learned at school that day, replied:

"We studied grammar, and it sounds silly to me. Our teacher says that cats and dogs are common hounds, and you and I are proper hounds."

Salinas Junior College is now featuring a course in marital problems and their solutions, which goes back to the time when the only way the man got his mate was to go out and drag her "home" by the hair, on up to the present day manner, which seems to be exactly the opposite.

Presidential Notes

By Don Mix

The consensus of opinion in regard to the Noble Experiment, the Orientation Week, seems to stamp it as a success. Naturally there is a wide field for improvement and enlargement of the activities, but when you consider that it was a complete innovation, you must credit the accomplishments of the originators of the idea, Yell Leader Stan Adams and AMS President Al Williams.

There is a certain group that bemoaned the passing of the sadistic practice of paddling. However the only real value of the swinging swatters was to convince the neophytes of their inferiority to the upper classmen. It is a sound and healthy practice to inflict certain indignities on the newcomers but blistered breeches only serve to promote ill feeling.

When the Orientation Week can be enlarged so as to contain outstanding events on each day, it should be fully effective. Dances, rallies and smokers should make the low freshmen appreciate their college just as much as a burly group of mean tempered paddle swingers. We sincerely believe that Orientation Week will be a fixture in the traditional activities of the future.

INITIAL EFFORT

With the objective of attaching the problem of closer affiliation among the clubs and societies of the campus, the Executive Council will invite various groups to send representatives to discuss the aims and purposes of their organization and their own opinion of its place in campus activity. It is by a campaign of this kind, coupled with a drive to have all clubs legally chartered, that we hope to lay a foundation for the creation of a more sound and healthy extra-curricular development.

It is suggested that the Drama, Forensic, Athletic, and Publication Councils send representatives to the Ex Council meeting on next Friday, as it is possible that the weighty and all-important matter of the budget will be under consideration. Is that subtle enough?

Stanford University's Convalescent Home is having its wall decorated by Wolo, former caricaturist for San Francisco Chronicle. The pictures, however, are not the kind that Dali and his "crazy quilt" drawings, would be likely to approve. Wolo is drawing pink animals to provide amusement for the children in the home. They are somewhat in the same vein as Disney's (the difference being that Disney is a cartoonist) but each animal has been personalized. For instance, one scene depicts "Mammy Sea Lion" sitting on a cake of ice feeding her "kids" from a bowl of oat meal. Another scene shows a Zebra with a broken leg who is being given some milk by the Helpful Monkey. Reynard, the Fox (or the more prevalent form, the Rat) has acquired wings and a halo, and is being very polite about getting that bunch of grapes (we only get razzberries). The Nudy Horse with bleached platinum mane covered with blue bows is described by Wolo as a "woefully looking dame," and her nudity explained as a result of being in Hollywood. Among other scenes is a pink sea-horse sucking her finger, a yellow giraffe who has seemingly fallen in love with a fish, and a butterfly with a bushy mane.

State College Five Favored As Local Casabans Prepare For Kezar Tilt; Slattery, Curcio, Opalinski, Blackfield, Phelan Will Start Game

By JACK SCHMALE

Promptly at 8 o'clock this evening, Louis "Dutch" Conlan and his 1938 Ram casaba troupe will skip onto the Kezar Pavilion hardwoods to fulfill an engagement with the stalwart sons of San Francisco State.

Don't miss it!

State College, in event that the incoming frosh are not aware of the fact, provides local rivalry to Ram teams annually in football, basketball, ice hockey, cricket, volleyball, dramatics and debating. The Staters are pretty good rivals, too. When they succeed in downing one of our teams they proceed to tear the town apart, but fortunately, for peace-loving San Francisco, such occasions are infrequent.

STATE FAVORED

The Staters will enter tonight's battle slightly favored to trim the Ram basket-tossers. That, however, is no prediction. History may repeat itself tonight, as it often does.

Last year the Rams emerged the victors via the upset route in the two-game series. The first contest was measured at 49-31, while 53-38 told the story in the other.

State, at this writing, has lost but a single contest, that to the Fresno State quintet, which, they say, is nothing but a set-up. It was a last-minute victory for the Bulldogs, 49-47, and on the following evening S. F. caged a 40-35 triumph.

SIX VICTORIES

On the other side of the ledger the Staters smile at a string of victories sumbering a half-dozen. Victims of the Golden Tide's 1938 bucket brigade include several quintets recognized as members of Basketball's Who's Who.

Doings of the Ram hoopmen have been recorded steadily and consistently in these pages. A review, however, names Fullerton J. C., Glendale J. C., Palo Alto Sports Shop and Westside A. C. among those vanquished, while the Italian A. C. and Santa Clara frosh outpointed our casabans.

RAM STARTERS

Probable starting lineup for the Rams tonight includes Treacy "Scatsy" Slattery and little Willie Blackfield at forwards; Joe Opalinski at center, with Bill Phelan and Ed Curcio at guards. Opalinski, from Commerce, and Blackfield, from Lowell, are former all-city cagers, while Curcio starred at Oakland Tech. Phelan and Slattery, of course, are veterans.

For the opposition, which ranges in height from five-five to six-three and a-half, tiny Billy Hammond, fulfilling the former measurement, will open at a forward post, with huge Bill Plutte, the 6-3 individual weighing 240 pounds, at guard. Hammond's forward mate will be Joe Sanz, Balboa High's all-city "thin man" several years back, while Ken Johnson, six-one, starts at the other guard and George Thayer at center.

THREE VETS

Plutte, Johnson and Hammond are vets, while Sanz and Thayer are listed as freshies. A guy named Jack Madigan, but who is known to his more intimate friends as "Slip," stands six-three and is on call for a relief guard position, while Robert Bragg, a small five-fiver will be on hand to fill any forward vacancies which may arise.

Newcomers Henry James, a very fine guard, and Dave Solomon, forward, are certain to see action this evening. This is also true of "Red" Barrows, Tony Manor, Bill Fischer, and other Ram non-starting stars. Wait and see!

In case you want a good seat for this evening's hostilities, Tom Wilson's Rams let 145 pounders will be there to entertain you in a preliminary tilt against the State 145's, starting at 6:45 o'clock.

Art Ringholm, Prep Grid Star, Signs At College

Art Ringolm, star end at Balboa High School several years back, became the latest addition to the list of currently enrolling ace athletes here, when he signed our register last week. Ringolm played with the famous late Roy Yuretich for the Buccaneers for two seasons.

"Home Town" Ref Factor In Defeats

Coach Louis "Dutch" Conlan's barnstorming basketeers finished up their abbreviated tour of last week with one win and two losses. On last Thursday night, January 13, the Ram troupe marked up an impressive 38 to 24 victory over the A. G. Spalding Sport Shop quintet in a tussle held in Sacramento and they then proceeded to drop two close ones to Placerville Junior College on the succeeding Friday and Saturday evenings.

Local cagers played their best ball of the season to date when they put on whirlwind basket barrage in the second half of the engagement with the Spaulding hoopsters in the Capital City.

SLOW BREAK EFFECTIVE

Trailing by a score of 16 to 11 at half time Messrs. Treacy Slattery and Willie Blackfield took advantage of the smooth floor work of teammates Alex Opalinski, Ed Curcio and Bill James to filter through the Spaulding defense for the winning points. In the final periods the ball hawking Bay City boys coupled "game control" and an effective display of the slow breaking offense to tally 71 field goals and 5 free shots.

The potency of the Ram defensive tactics is evidenced by the fact that the Spaulding Swishers netted only 9 points in the second half.

In the two games series with the Placerville collegians Conlan's charges were victimized by that scourge of real athletics, the "home town" official. The loss of the first game in which the Rams were shortenders on a 31-30 count was directly caused by a foul of dubious nature called on Harold Fischer, giant local center, in the closing seconds of the contest. All told, 25 personal fouls were called in this game.

SEAMLESS BALL USED

The Placerville officials also insisted on using the new seamless basketball despite the fact that the San Francisco cans were totally unfamiliar with it. This type of ball showed up the home stormer's attack considerably, making their floor work sloppy and their ball handling uncertain.

Hitting the basket from way out the Village lads peppered out a 47-44 victory in the final game of the series which was held on last Saturday night. Les Trimbell, irrepressible Placerville guard, got "hot" and hit the hoop for 16 digits, most of them made on long shots not far from the center line. His mate, Nils Hansen, also displayed artistry at long range work, swished the casaba through for 12 points. Treacy "The Slat" Slattery, potent local forward, lead the Conlanmen's scoring list with 9 tallies to his credit.

The referee improved his "Blind Tom" performance of the previous night when he called a mere 35 personals in the second game. Several Ram players suggested the arbiter don a Placerville uniform but the official felt he could be more of an aid to the home town cause by remaining incognito.

Despite the two unfortunate losses Conlan expressed satisfaction with the team's performance and intimated that Slattery, Backfield, Opalinski, Curcio, James, and Manor are slated to play vital parts in the conference competition which will open next week.

SWEET'S ORPHANS HAVE NO PLACE TO DRESS OR SHOWER

Rumor Has It That Track Team May Shift Scene of Workouts To Kezar

Despite adverse conditions, the college track team aspirants are training daily at the High School of Commerce Stadium in preparation for the coming meets.

Lacking shower and locker accommodations at its present training grounds, the team is finding it difficult to exercise in proper fashion. The lockers beneath the bleachers that were to have been used by the College are unavailable and the squad has its choice of either practicing in street clothes or undressing in the open bleachers. Therefore it is evident that the trackmen are having difficulty in limbering their muscles.

It was reported by reliable sources that negotiations are being made with Kezar Stadium officials to procure the stadium as a training field for the squad. An excellent track, combined with shower and locker facilities, make Kezar an ideal place for the athletes, who have long waited for a good track.

The schedule for the meets has not yet been formed but it is believed that the first will come about the middle of February.

In preparing for the coming season, Coach Sweet is combining the few veterans left by graduation, with the newcomers in order to form a balanced squad. He plans much competition for the team and will hold trials regularly to keep the team on its toes. Aspirants who do not qualify for one particular event are asked to try out for different events, in the expectation that they might possess some hidden talent.

As there are many men out for the mile and broad jump, it is expected that the team will probably gather many points in these events in the various meets. In the broad jump such stars as Emery Ida and Kawaguchi have turned out. All these men have outstanding marks for this event. In the distance runs Mitchell, Nuthall, Pritchard, Lee, Regan, Woodland, Carolan, Eads, and Durggin have signed up, and there will be stiff competition among these men who are fighting for a position on the team.

Other returning veterans are Kortchet, shot put and discus; Sanderson, hurdler, and Hemlich, pole vaulter. These members of the team are experienced and will do much to aid the team in winning meets.

Twenty-five hardy young men have signed up for the new-beginning enthusiasm, and the squad is expected to increase to thirty-five by the end of the week, according to Crew Coach Jack Gaddy. The average weight of the gaily-slaves still falls below that of last year.

"Men weighing over 165 pounds are especially needed, but those in the lighter divisions will not be barred because of their weight," Gaddy announced.

The crew mentor is in the same position this year that he was at the beginning of last spring in regard to inexperienced crewmen. The 1937 champions consisted for the most part, of tyro oarsmen. The average weight of last year's aggregate, however, was about 175 pounds, hence the urgent need for brawn.

Gaddy is expected to build his first combination around returning veterans, Carl Brogger and Don Mix, for the Washington's Birthday Regatta on February 22. This will be the first encounter of the racing season. The California Intercollegiate Oarsmen's Association will meet some time next month to decide on the dates for the rest of the conference races.

Some of the members of last year's boat are back in school but because of "other interests" or "heavy programs," none except Mix and Brogger will row this spring.

PRETTY PATSY POSES

MIXING 'Em Up

By DON MIX

It is with a savage rumble in our throat and a snarl on our lips that we tote pencils and paper out to Kezar Pavilion tonight to record for posterity the dire debacle of the stemming of State's Golden Tide. Perhaps pity should dampen our brutal lust to see mayhem committed upon the hapless wearers of the oft soiled purple, but the persistent audacity of the alley-gators to spout their own praises makes us feel that it would be no less than poetic justice to see Slattery, Phelan, Fischer, Blackfield and company make the anemic Tide look like a mud hole.

We could hardly believe our fast-dimming eyes when we encountered "The veteran pin smasher," Dick Simpers (the high-speed velocity bowler sitting on the steps of the Powell Street Building intently scanning a book entitled "Bowling For Beginners."

Although some waggish lads may voice the opinion that the very fetching picture above this column had something to do with the sudden revival of the popularity of aquatic sports, the movement is really being sponsored by Russ Sweet. A couple of semesters ago a men's swimming team of sorts was organized and competed in several meets and Sweet feels that there is enough interest in such activity at the present time to make it worthwhile. Plans for the organization of a tank team are still in their formulative stages but all the prospective human fish are asked to contact Sweet as soon as possible.

Sweet will be aided in his coaching efforts by Herb Brotman, the amateur swimming champ. Herb informed us that it is planned to award the swimmers circle blocks. As an added inducement Brotman also intimated that those who display outstanding talent will be given consideration for an Olympic Club membership. Sounds a-mite alright, yes?

"There are no weight, age, or height limits on this Squad," Seggern bellowed. "If you lack the ability to make the varsity you can play for Mr. Wilson's jay vees regardless of how big you are, the size of your feet, or whether your father was a citizen."

• • • • •

Louis "Dutch" Conlan, the sage of New Orleans, recently informed us that he has hopes of developing a competent college golfing squad. A city champ from across the bay, and several locals with big reps will be the foundation with which Dutch hopes to build his team.

Last year's crew explained their fold-up in the closing races of the season by announcing that the only reason they were beaten was because San Mateo Junior College and USF freshmen used racing oars while Gaddy's Salts were forced to labor with abbreviated telephone poles. In order to prevent this disaster from recurring Admiral Jack is ordering a special set of super powerful, extra light oars. This time the vulgar boatmen will have to lay the cause of their defeats (if any) to sea weed on the rudder.

It seems a shame that the administration cannot find better facilities for the track team than the ragged accommodations that are offered at Commerce Field. The poor lads are forced to dress in public gaze, and then they can only practice while the high school is out to lunch.

Blockmen plan to organize again this semester under the Block "SF" Society. The muscle lads have been promising us huge things for the past few semesters but nothing ever happened. We've heard it is going to be different this time, maybe.

We can't vouch for its veracity but it does seem a bit amusing—anyhow the following tale is reported to us by Willie Schoenfeld, a former notorious Ram crewman, who now is throwing his talent away over at Berkeley. It seems that Irv Amstrup was working down-town over the holidays in his Aunt Lush's novelty store. On the way home on Christmas Eve, after being paid for his labors, Irv and his suit were held up by a robber and relieved of their earnings.

Irv excitedly sought a policeman and finally spied a huge red-faced guardian of the law standing asleep on the corner.

Our hero rushed up to the officer and blurted out, "A man has just stole my pay and my aunt's pay."

Former Prep Stars Swell Junior Cage Spring Title Hopes

Losing many players from last year's team, Wilson has only two returning veterans, namely Joe Tudor and Stan Tobiason. Lanky "Red" Burrows, star of last year's quintet, has graduated to the varsity.

The bright spots of Wilson's new Junior Varsity are prominent former local high school players including Floyd Lawrence of Balboa, Carlos Stewart and Roy Sklar of Lowell, and Bobby Owen of Poly. From across the bay come Joe Slavin and Jack Dapper.

Slavin towers over six feet, packs a lot of weight and holds down the center position. Stewart and Lawrence will probably hold down the guard positions, while the forward spots are still open. To date Yasuda, Ryan, Berns and Owen are making a strong bid for them.

While the Junior Varsity competes in no conference it has a schedule, meeting most of the local high school and prominent club teams, as a preliminary to Varsity games. They will also play the College of Pacific Freshmen, and meet State College 145's tonight. Last year they lost to College of Pacific and split the series with the Gators, winning the second game.

Going to Stockton to play the Bengal freshmen this year will be the high point of the season. Last year the 45's were defeated, and Wilson, a graduate of Pacific, hopes to turn the tables on his alma mater this time. Fifteen or more players will probably make the trip to Stockton, remaining over night at the college.

Since last December the Junior Varsity has been practicing at Funston Gym each afternoon and playing practice games. To date it has defeated Napa High and two club teams while losing to Poly High of the city and the Utopia Club. In these games the play of Berns, Van Desande, Stewart, Ryan, Slavin and Tauzik has been outstanding.

With a few more practice games and the working in of new players Wilson will have opportunity to pick out a combination that will be able to play winning basketball. To date Wilson has given them few plays, drilling mainly upon team play in practice and funda-

When the conference season opens this month, those desirous of seeing two basketball games in one evening will find it well worth their while to arrive at Kezar in time to see the preliminary game.

HOPEFUL TURNOUT GREETS BASEBALL COACH LEE EISAN

Material Makes Diamond Mentor's Eyes Bright; Title Hopes Soar High

By BOB FEX

The first Baseball get together of the semester was held on Monday, January 17, at the Galileo Gym. Coach Lee Eisan's eyes shone for it looked to be the best turnout for baseball since the beginning of the College.

Gone from the rolls of the Rams are such standout players as Larry Wilgus, the workhorse of the mound staff for the last two seasons and Jaquine Martinez, giant lefthander who was also a two year veteran hurler. Infielders who will be missing include Mickey Berman, southpaw first baseman, and Tony Scafani, who played two years at the second sack and during his college career was one of our outstanding athletes. Other infielders missing are Dick "Pepper" Holmes, leading hitter from last year's varsity, and Gene Kiley, a long distance clouter. Departed also are Ed Arvedi and Johnny Fitzgerald, last year's catchers.

Outfielders who failed to return to school this spring include Joe Arslanez, fast centerfielder and Jack Berutich, hard hitter who patroled the right field pasture last season.

The loss of all these fine men, however, does not dim the prospects of this year's nine, for returning veterans such as Paul Hjort, infielder, outfielder and general handyman, Dave Johnson, a smart catcher, and Fred Baker, hard hitting infielder, will bolster the current nine. Along with these men who are returning are such outstanding prospects as Lent Baird, shortstop from Poly High, Frank Nilan, infielder from Balboa, Arnold Banta and George Seley, infielders from the East Bay.

Footballers who are returning to the baseball game this spring are Allen MacDonald, Woody Lennis, Sims Hamilton, Randy Osborne, Harry Abe, Stan Bierwith, Jack DuFosse and Jim Molich.

The pitching staff this year looks unusually strong, listing such throwers as Bill Williams, a slim lefthander from Sacred Heart High School, Jackie Skahan, who did mound duty for Lowell a few years back, and Hugh Waite, a chukker from Poly. Stan Bierwith, another prospect, was quite an ace moundsman at Alameda High.

Prospects Bright For Tennis Squad

That prospects for a championship tennis squad are fairly bright was divulged by Tennis Coach Tom Wilson this week. Among those on the top of the ladder are Harold Mitchell, Harold Wagner, Bob Kuhn, Bob Lazare, Chandler Ennes, Alvin Altfield, and Ray Burns. These men and others will form the nucleus of the squad.

According to Coach Wilson's tentative schedule, the squad will participate in 26 matches, six in conference play and 20 outside.

On the proposed trip to Southern California during Easter week the team will meet Los Angeles Junior College, the U.C.L.A. Frosh, U.S.C. Frosh, Glendale Junior College and Santa Barbara State Frosh, in the southland and will tangle with Salinas Junior College on the return trip. On Saturday, April 9, the Rams will do battle with Modesto Junior College at Modesto in the first of the conference tilts and then continue south.

San Francisco, Modesto and San Mateo are the members of the A Division of the Northern California Junior College Conference. The Red and White will take part in four league matches, meeting each one of the other colleges twice. Coach Wilson has also tentative home and home matches scheduled with nine other bay area colleges.

The individual single and doubles titles of both A and B divisions of the Northern California Junior College Conference will be fought for on May 6 and 7 at Stanford University.

RAMS' HORN

Mister Editor:

It occurred to me last week, when I noticed the absence of this column (I hope you print this) that perhaps it might be wise to come forth with a definite policy in regard to letters to the Editor. As I understand it, in the past, the Editors have kept more or less rigidly to the following:

Any person, faculty member, or student, is privileged, or shall we say invited to express himself in a letter to this column.

The letters must bear the signature of the author, and under no circumstances will the editor print a letter written by an unknown person.

If a person requests his name be kept secret, then no one but the editor is aware of the writer's identity, and he is bound by honor to divulge the same to no one.

Letters themselves may be printed bearing a pseudonym, if they are free from any possible libel, and if any letter is too malignant in its tone, it will only be printed, bearing the true signature of the author.

No matter how many letters come in, in one week, all, if pertinent, will be printed free from any discrimination.

Furthermore, Mister Editor, it is my personal belief that this column is the best in the paper, and should be utilized by all persons who have any legitimate complaint or compliment against or for anything.

Of course I realize that you are a busy man, and cannot hope to answer the letters personally, nor should you expect to, but it would put a little more life in the column, if you acknowledge every epistle with some sort of editor's note, and not make the person feel that you merely printed his "beef" to fill up space.

All in all, Mister Editor, I think you could build this Ram's Horn into a highly worthwhile affair if you would take the trouble to enlighten the general student body on what it's all about, and what to do if they have an idea for a letter.

Why not have them leave all letters in the Guardsman mail boxes?

BOB MacARTHUR.

OMICRON PHI PI TO SELECT NEW MEMBERS SOON

Certain students this week will be receiving bids to the college's economics honor society, Omicron Phi Pi, according to Charles Vaughn, president.

"Many newcomers to Powell Street have asked us to explain the significance of the solid gold keys seen dangling from the watch chains of members of the faculty and a few fortunate veteran students," Vaughn said. "In answer to this query we announce that the actual meaning of the distinguishing emblem is a part of the ritual of the formal initiation."

The Omicron Phi Pi key is solid gold typical of college honor society keys. On one side, below the name of the college in which the chapter is located, are the Greek letters, Omicron Phi Pi; below these the possessor's full name is engraved. On the reverse side is an engraved gavel overlapping a quill. "Since economics plays a major part of our lives, no matter what age we may be, it was felt necessary that every student should be exposed to at least six units of econ. For those students who take their econ seriously enough to get a B-plus average, or better, it was deemed there should be some honor in store for them," Vaughn continued. "So Omicron Phi Pi was born, to give those students the privilege of being a member of the most active honor society of any Junior College in California."

By next week a list of those students eligible for membership will be available. In the meantime any student who thinks he is eligible may apply to any of the following officers for membership: Charles Vaughn, president; Bill Simonds, vice-president; Celia Elliott, secretary-treasurer; Bill Switzer, publicity and membership committee chairman; Michal Zarchin, faculty adviser; Karnig Kenchellian, chairman on eligibility.

WOMEN'S SPORTS PARADE

By JEAN PAGE

One o'clock Friday is the deadline for the WAA sign-ups which are held from 9 to 10 o'clock at Powell Street on the mezzanine floor and from 2:30 to 4:30 o'clock at the Galileo gym office, and dilatory women who have not yet signed up, although intending to, should do so immediately before the class in which they wish to enroll is closed.

* * *

The woman, young in years but old in experience painfully hobbled up precipitous Powell Street hill. She was not alone in her misery for several of her kind preceded or followed her footsteps. Pity was etched on the faces of the Powell Street lounge lizards who watched the procession, for they knew the cause of the suffering. The first-day exercise of physical education classes had again taken its toll in sore muscles.

* * *

WAA baseball has been scheduled at 11 o'clock on Saturday morning at the Palace of Fine Arts and women who are interested in both tennis and baseball may take tennis at ten and then baseball at 11 o'clock. The physical education classes in baseball, held on Monday and Wednesday at 10 o'clock are in dire need of more players, there being only enough at present to play "one-eyed cat."

* * *

In silent tribute to the excellence of the college gym instructors, a number of fifth-term students are taking sports, although it is not required the fifth term.

* * *

Button up your overcoat and come out for ice skating which men students, women students, and faculty may enjoy, and which commences at 2:30 o'clock next Friday at the San Francisco Ice Skating Rink. Students may skate from 2:30 to 4:30 o'clock; from 2:30 to 3:30 o'clock, or from 3:30 to 4:30 o'clock, as their little hearts desire. Skates are included in the admission price of 40 cents but students must bring their own skating socks.

* * *

Women who were beginning Freshmen last semester and who won WAA awards but could not obtain them until their grade average was determined, may now get their awards from any WAA officer.

* * *

Tennis again brings us such stars as Dot Canavan and Lily Phillips, and a new stellar performer, Jean Kelly, who should provide the old-hands plenty of competition. Opportunities for mixed doubles look promising this semester.

* * *

Here is the correct time for all WAA sports, the place, and the instructor:

. . CLUBS . .

Musicians Hold Initial Meeting

Wesley Pomroy, president of the Music Club, has named Wednesday, January 26th as the date for the initial meeting, to be held at the home of Flossita Badger, head of the Music Department and faculty adviser of the Club, at 1320 Lombard Street. Plans for the semester indicate a full program, the details of which will be found in a future edition of The Guardsman. Miss Badger urges that any student interested in music attend the meeting. Students need not be enrolled in a music course to be eligible for membership.

Results of the A Cappella Choir reveal the following students as holding offices: Harold Wacher, president; Margery Cusic, vice-president; Kay Warner, secretary, and Margery Meyer, librarian. For the first time in the history of the choir there is an unusually large tenor section which will make possible more varied programs.

Chinese Students Receive Freshmen

President Andrew Auyong, took charge of the reception, with Ebert Chan as chairman of the refreshment committee, and Lena Way Leong in charge of the entertainment, helping him.

Beta Phi Seeks New Members

The fraternity is rushing pledges at the present time and expects to increase its membership considerably this semester.

Wanted: Alto Sax Player For Band

Wanted, a player of the alto saxophone!

Not a piccolo, suzaphone, melophone, clarinet, tuba, drums or xylophone, but an alto saxophone. Thus stated Band Instructor Tom Kennedy yesterday, as he prepared to launch the biggest search in modern college history for an alto sax player.

"Our dance band would be perfect," deplored Kennedy, "were it not for the lack of an alto saxophone player. The only qualifications are that he must be an alto saxophone player and a good alto saxophone player!"

Although not at a complete standstill, the college dance band practice was slowed up considerably because of the lack of this important part of the good swing band, the alto sax player.

Aspirants for this position should report to the Galileo backstage any afternoon after 3:30 and must have the ability to play the alto saxophone.

Deutsche Verein To Present Play

Members of the college German Club Der "Deutsche Verein" plan to present a play, "Die Kleinen Verwandten" by Thoma, before the various German classes, according to President Walt Thompson.

The club extends its invitation to all German students to attend the club meetings which are held at the homes of club members, where the group converses in German and sings German songs.

Reception Planned By Catholic Group

Old members attended the meeting to make arrangements for a reception to be given for new members at the first meeting in February.

Forum Will Meet Friday, Jan. 28

Whether Tom Mooney should be freed will be the topic of the Forum Club's discussion Friday night, January 28, at 7:45 o'clock, at the home of Margarita Williams, 2372 Broadway.

The subject will be presented by Margaret Moore and Henry Evans. General discussion by the group will follow, each member being free to express his or her opinion on the matter. The question will not only include the actual case of Mooney and whether he is guilty or innocent but will also touch upon whether it is wise to keep California's famed prisoner incarcerated.

All students interested are invited to attend and become members. There are no requirements excpt that one must either be a student or faculty member of San Francisco Junior College. Informality is the keynote of the discussions.

Pawn Pushers Play California Frosh

Setting Friday, January 28, as a tentative date the Ram's Chess Team plans to meet the Cal Frosh for chess competition, according to President Bell Switzer.

Switzer requests that both men and women students who play chess or would like to know how are welcome to come to the meetings and attend the matches.

The next meeting will be held Friday, January 21, at the home of Henry Ralston, club advisor and state chess champion, at 1748 Tenth Avenue.

Rehbock Retained By Astronomists

This semester's officers of the Astronomy Club will be: Elizbeth Rehboch, reelected president; Sylvester McAtee, vice-president; Pat Robinson, secretary-treasurer.

The club is composed of the two sections of the night classes in Astronomy. The members of the 2B class who are: Mary Spring, Frank Bosl, and Elizabeth Rehbock. They are studying the spectrum and sun spots. The 2A class which meets at the Galileo Observatory at the same time, 7-9 o'clock Monday night is studying the constellations.

Amori To Speak Over KYA Tonite

Joe Amori, instructor of the College's new bowling classes, will be heard tonight on KYA in an interview with Ernie Smith, popular sports announcer, on his nightly air program at 7 o'clock.

BOWLERS BUSILY SMASH PINS IN DRILLS

Concentration on fundamentals marked last week's bowling drills, which were conducted by Joe Amori, instructor in the newly-instituted sport. Because of the fact that a great many of those who turned out are beginners at the art of knocking down the pins, Amori considered it best to work the class on fundamentals and the essential elements of the game, despite the fact that such drills are old stuff to the few experienced bowlers in attendance.

Bowling is done at the Golden Gate Alleys, at 115 Jones Street, where there are 19 alleys at the disposal of the keglers, although only about thirteen of them are in general use by the Ram maple smashers.

The location of the alleys, which are some eight or ten blocks from the college Powell Street building, has caused considerable trouble to a number of the aspirants so far, as those who have ten o'clock classes must travel at a break-neck pace down Powell Street unless they desire to be late, endangering life, limb, and pedestrians. It is hoped that some arrangement will be made by which they can be allowed to leave class a few minutes early and thus avoid this headlong dash through the crowded down-town streets.

Segregation of the bowlers into groups is being made this week, so that the superior bowlers will not be called on to play against the beginners, and those who need individual attention the most will be sure of receiving it. Amori plans to organize a regular squad to play in competition if he can manage to uncover enough bowlers of ability. Outstanding at present are Al Williams, Dick Simpers, Howard Cloud, Tom Burke, and Irving Amstrup, who have been burning up the alleys in recent workouts.

HANCOCK NAMES RIFLE TEAM OF SHARPSHOOTERS

Two women and four men were named late yesterday by Coach "Wild Bill" Hancock of the College Rifle and Pistol Club to represent that group in the coming intercollegiate matches of the National Rifle Association.

Hancock pointed out that many of the most important colleges and universities of the country will compete in this "postal match," so-called because the targets of all teams are sent in to the National Rifle Association headquarters.

Those chosen will, up to the time of the national match, take part in a number of "priming" matches with other colleges. The women are Virginia Kwiatt and Gail Hanna. The masculine Annie Oakleys are John Benton, Don Smith, Duane Peterson and Alvin Stolowitz.

Stolowitz, a low freshman, is one of the most promising of the new students of the rifle and if he continues to improve, has a fair chance to make one of the college teams, said Hancock.

Library Recognized For Achievements Despite Handicaps

Despite the fact that the college library is situated in cramped quarters and located in two buildings, it has achieved a position of importance among Junior College libraries. Commendation was attributed by the American Library Association and by Dr. Walter Crosby Eells, head of the American Council on Education, in an article appearing in the December issue of the Junior College Journal. From the ideal list published by the American Library Association of the first 7,000 volumes which a Junior College should possess, the college library has 47 per cent. The average collection for Junior Colleges throughout the country was 25 per cent.

Eisan Loses Man To Pro Baseball

Coach Lee Eisan's hopes for a baseball championship took a turn for the worse when Lee was informed last Wednesday that Bob Price, a candidate for the shortpatch of this year's nine, had signed a contract with the San Francisco Seals.

Price is the third Junior College baseball player to be signed by a professional club while attending college. The two previous cases were those of Odero Guisti and Joe Futernick.

Coach Eisan is considering writing a letter of protest to Judge Kensaw Landis, the high mogul of all baseball disputes, to prevent recurrences of such "piracy."

After Dark

By John Ward

Last December Pierre Monteux, conductor of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra, declared himself in a bit of a dilemma. He desired to include some modern music on each symphony program of the season but feared the powerful wrath of rich conservatives—that is, those box-holders who financially support the orchestra, and whose tastes are definitely pre-Stravinsky. Monteux asked for, in December, and presumably received letters from symphony goers, in general, discussing this pertinent and vital issue.

The actual result in figures has not been made public so far as we know, but a partial answer lies in the four programs given thus far in the season. That answer is very perplexing, for either Monteux received staunch support of classicism and none at all for new music, or a very mild support for modernism that was far out weighed by the reply for the classics. His answer has been mainly a make-shift that might satisfy both the conservatives and those with broader viewpoints.

Of the some twenty works done already, one has been contemporary, only four as recent as 1900 and the rest have been fine, full-fledged classics. All well and partially good—though not at all really satisfying—except that the one contemporary work was a piece of junk from an unknown peddler of poor tunes. What may be termed popular tripe.

One cannot be quite certain that Monteux meant this as a serious attempt to appease those of the audience who want new music or sought to trick conservatives with a gaudy, easily understood trinket. Whatever Monteux thought, he actually did nothing to solve the problem, for those who understand the modern idiom, the work said nothing, and they did not applaud because of what might be termed disgust. The anti-moderns didn't applaud even though they might have liked it, and the only section of the audience left to palm were the ignorant who applaud anyway.

All this may appear futile until the real problem bares its ugly face. Here is that meat of the prohibitionist, the obsession with things past and the dislike and disdain of things present. Here is that field for satire where a blind generation,—fortunately not so large as life—foregoing the new which is difficult to understand and taking only that which is old and easy to understand.

What answer there is to this view of things has always been, for us at least, to have respect for the old and patience with the new. The pity is that Pierre Monteux has not, or cannot, follow this theme. But it is Monteux whom we must blame most of all for completely selling himself to the periwigs and completely neglecting the music-lovers who want new ideas and new philosophies of music. And it is to Mr. Monteux that we turn our plea for it, asking as loudly as we are able for common sense and equality, not that we advocate anything but a small musical revolution.

By ANNE RABINOWITZ

Only to the individual, will the college diploma really signify something, if that person has drifted through without obtaining skill or specific training in some one thing. That same scrap of paper can be the first step to a successful life work if it symbolizezs work, effort, and preparedness for the profession or vocation selected.

Difficulty arises when energy must be expended on a task for which the student is unsuited, or about which he feels uncertain as to its requirements or assets.

Many young men and women study for a profession without ever finding out its advantages, qualifications needed, lines of promotion, or hours of work demanded. After wasting money and time, they find to their dismay that special experience or social contacts are out of their reach.

Visions of bored hours usually float before the eyes, when one is anticipating looking into gloomy books or periodicals to discover the information needed. If this type of research does not appeal, visits to the actual place where people are engaged in the occupation will do much to throw new light on the subject.

Things to find out about the profession, (and one's life work need not be a profession. All that is white collar doesn't glitter, or something to that effect!) are the daily routine of the work, possibilities for growth, hazards, training needed, possibilities for training on the job, and possible lines for promotion. That should all be carefully contemplated. Income granted will interest most people more than other aspects.

Charts are displayed in the college office at Galileo High School which present the percentages of workers in various professions.

Upon completion of junior college, graduates who have taken specific training can usually enter what are termed semi-professional occupations.

Some few fortunates have two years endowed upon them from a kindly (?) heaven which they may spend in any fashion. When these land up in the college and have no particular desire for becoming professionals or workers of any type for years yet, they can still fill their hours profitably, for many of the courses offer a two-fold advantage.

For example, students selecting typing and shorthand as extra subjects can use these skills outside of the office. The musically inclined will jot down songs or lectures from the radio by employing the latter technique, while many will find typewriting a boon for whizzing out term papers or other assignments.

If the profitable work of floriculture is not looked upon by some as their life work, Floriculture 65, (flower arrangement), will enable the neglected coed to fashion her own corsage from garden flowers or avoid wearing orchids upside down.

Landscape designing, which can prove remunerative as a profession, or interesting as a hobby, will be offered next semester, as a three-unit course, according to John Herman, instructor.

Once the student has decided to enter a certain vocation, his new slogan must be, "Never stop learning." This is especially true of the professions. What was sufficient education a few years back, hardly pulls one out of the illiterate stage in the eyes of the ever-changing world. Why this is so, is hard to tell, unless it is a method of elimination. However, knowledge increases interest, which in turn stimulates enthusiasm and "go-gettum."

It takes two years to acquire the diploma; it can be simply a distant relative to the ancient papyrus plant, or the admittance ticket to places where the poorly equipped must face a "Keep Out" sign.

CONSTRUCTION BEGINS!

BUILDING WORK AT LAST UNDER WAY; EXCAVATION TERMINATES LONG WAIT

By DICK SIMPERS

Work began January 20 at eight o'clock on the college building!

Unaccompanied by fanfare or publicity, witnessed only by a few workmen and four students who arose in the cold, grey light of dawn to fight their way through the slimy mud of Balboa Park to a windy hilltop that was the scene of activity, the first work on the site of the new college got under way last Thursday morning.

The Sibley Grading Company, awarded the foundation contract for the project, began the work of clearing and leveling the site chosen for erection of the first unit of the plant which, when completed, will cover an estimated area of 55 acres and provide accommodation for some 2500 students.

TREES UPROOTED

First to come in for attention were the numerous trees with which the landscape was studded and which had to be mowed down by tractors before grading could start. Once the site was cleared of these obstructions, work was rushed ahead on the task of leveling the ground and making it ready for the laying of the foundation for the first of the series of buildings to be erected.

Actual commencement of operations on the site came as the climax to two years of effort on the part of the Board of Education, President A. J. Cloud, and Superintendent of Schools Joseph P. Nourse. It marked the realization of a long-cherished dream of the college's founders, and the culmination of a campaign by The Guardsman, which has hammered away at the issue during the last four semesters with well-nigh monotonous regularity. It brought an end to a long period of delay, of deferment of work for one reason or another, and of attention to innumerable minor problems which kept rising to bar the way to the securing of a permanent home for the orphan institution. All this lies behind—the plant has been begun!

CONSTRUCTION SOON

Immediately following the completion of the grading operations, construction work will be started. It has not yet been ascertained which contractor will be assigned to this phase of the job, but this matter is expected to have been taken care of by the time the ground is in readiness for the actual erection of the buildings.

The central building of the group will be the first constructed, with the others following it. It is intended, however, to lose no time in transferring to the new quarters, and classes will start there as soon as the first building has been completed, as it will contain all necessary equipment for carrying on classes.

Supplementing it later will be the other buildings, a library, a Students' Union building, and a gymnasium. It is also planned to set aside part of the tract for use as an athletic field.

The site itself is on an elevation, and the central building of the college will be erected on the highest point of the tract, facing east and west. It will be flanked by two other buildings, and the section of the plant devoted to athletics will be constructed on slightly lower ground. The buildings will be of white re-inforced concrete, grouped so as to form three sides of a central court.

TO OPEN IN '39

Regarded as significant was the extraordinary speed with which municipal machinery moved once the obstructions had been cleared out of the way. The date of the beginning of active work was moved ahead a week by the authorization of Richard Doyle, Chairman of the Physical Properties committee, to approve the accepted bid as soon as it was announced, thus avoiding the delay of having it go through the usual rather lengthy procedure of approval.

The Sibley Company's bid of $30,000 for which sum it undertook to perform all of the work of grading and clearing the site, was the lowest of several received by the Board of Education.

Occupation of the plant is set for

Forum Issues Call For Literary Efforts

Issuing a call for student literature, the Forum Club has begun to work on its annual publication, "Forum," which will appear at the end of April, 1938. The tentative deadline for contributions has been set for April first.

All students are invited to submit original literary pieces of any sort. The magazine will consist of short stories, dramas, poetry, essays, and articles which may be factual, descriptive, satirical, or humorous. Reviews of stage and screen productions and books will also be included. Contributions are limited to 1500 words but should be shorter if at all possible.

John Ward is editor of the publication and will be assisted by an editorial committee composed of Henry Evans, Ely Chertok, Margarita Williams, Thomas Tillberry, Ray Valdez, Marjorie Cusic, and Fred Vast. Besides helping to select material, John Healy will act as business manager. There is room for one more member on the committee; anyone interested should see Ward. Dorothy Mercer, literature instructor, and William Goss, economics instructor, are the faculty advisers to the project.

Started last year under the leadership of Don Flash, the magazine met with undreamed of success from literary contributions, purchases, and financial donations. This year financial donations are unnecessary as the administration has seen the value of the publication and has agreed to finance it.

Students wishing more information or desiring to contribute should see one of the committee members or faculty advisers. Besides "The Guardsman," "Forum" is the only other publication at the college.

Further plans for the magazine will be made next Friday night, January 28, at 7:45 o'clock, at the home of Miss Williams, 2372 Broadway. Topic to be discussed will be whether Tom Mooney should be freed. Evans and Margaret Moore will lead the discussion.

Moving of Library Progresses Slowly

Slow progress is being made in the installation of part of the college library and study hall in the Pacific Gas and Electric Company building on Sutter Street near Powell, as announced in last week's issue of The Guardsman.

The Board of Public Works is now installing book cases in rooms 826, 827, and 828, and as soon as these are completed the study hall will be opened for student and faculty use. The new location will contain reserved books and magazines used for reference work.

Students will have an opportunity to study in peace and quiet and will have more comfort because of additional room for studying. Expansion was made necessary because of the growth of the college and of the library. The new space is expected to ease some of the tension and crowded conditions until the college campus is made ready for occupation. Though this spreads the area of the college a little more it is not expected to affect students very much as the P. G. and E. building is only a block from the Extension division.

We Thank You, Mr. Mayor!

Editor's Note:—Following is an excerpt from the text of His Honor—Mayor Angelo J. Rossi's annual message to the Board of Supervisors, delivered on Monday, January 17, 1938, wherein he recognizes the need for speed in the erection of a permanent home for San Francisco Junior College.

Our most pressing problem of public education today is to provide, at an early date, permanent quarters for the newly established San Francisco Junior College. An excellent site has already been located at Balboa Park, Ocean and Phelan avenues. The Board of Education has appropriated, awaiting plans and specifications for more than a year, a sum in excess of $600,000 for erection of the first unit of permanent junior college buildings. I am happy to report that the plans have been completed and within a few days a foundation contract will be awarded for the first building. Barring delays, junior college students will be housed in their permanent home at Balboa Park within the next year.

The campus of the new college was originally occupied as the county jail. After abandonment of the site by the sheriff's office, the land was placed at the disposal of the Recreation Commission without cost. This Commission now recognizes the urgency of the need for the Junior College and has transferred the land for use by the School Department to accommodate the college buildings and campus. Another section of the same site, comprising thirty acres, is under the jurisdiction of the Park Commission, which body has also recognized the needs of the new Junior College. It is hoped that transfers of this property to the Board of Education will be speedily executed.

To promote a lively spirit for the Marin Junior College basketball game, the first pep rally of the new semester will be held in the Galileo High School Auditorium 2:00 o'clock Friday.

Stan Adams, yell leader and chairman of the rally committee, believes, "This year's basketball team has been shown to be an outstanding one and it is only fitting for the students to encourage and support the team at its games. A team in order to win has to have the whole-hearted support of the entire student body. The purpose of this rally is to carry on the fine 'esprit de corps' that has been shown at the previous basketball games this semester. We have planned an extension program and hope that all students who can possibly attend will be there.

"Students who have 1:00 o'clock classes will be excused at 1:45 o'clock so that they will not miss any part of the program. The rally starts promptly at 2:00 o'clock and will continue to 2:45," Adams concluded.

Varied entertainment will be provided by students of the college. One of the outstanding events on the program will be presented by the Newman Club, a well-known organization of the school. Several members of the Newman Club will be on hand to deliver that farcical drama, "The Villain Still Pursues Her." As these students have been working hard preparing this play, it promises to be an exceedingly humorous skit.

Dutch Conlan, popular mentor of the basketball team, will speak on the game and possibly introduce the captain of the team and some of the players.

The college orchestra has arranged various musical selections and will be there to furnish the "swing" to the rally.

As a novelty, a girls' trio has been formed and the girls will sing several numbers. A few other features have been planned and will be presented if time allows.

HEA Plans Program Of Pleasure Events For This Semester

Future plans, which include such diversified entertainment as a Japanese luncheon and a trip to the opera, were decided upon at the last HEA meeting held on January 19. A deposit must be made, today, with Barbara Allen, Hazel Baunton, or Virginia Kwiatt, on tickets for the San Carlo Opera which members will attend on March 10. "Carmen" was selected as the opera which the club preferred to see.

Continuing the study of international costumes, food, and customs, which started last semester, club members will partake of a Japanese luncheon in February. Although the exact date of the luncheon has not been determined, it will be on a Thursday, from 12 to 2 o'clock. Over a bowl of sukiyaki those who attend will watch the rest of the meal be prepared before them, in Japanese style.

New members may pay their dues until February 1. Dues are 25 cents for old members and 35 cents for new members, who pay a 10 cent initiation fee. Notice of future meetings will be posted on the bulletin board at Powell Street.

Schmale's Choo-Choo Ride Offers Convenience Plus

Latest bit of gossip concerning the proposed choo-choo ride to Santa Rosa for the February 18th basketball contest was announced last week by Jack Schmale, college, publicity director, in charge of the trip.

For the convenience of those making the trip, it is planned to "spot" the train on the spur line tracks adjoining the Santa Rosa Junior College campus, reducing the transportation problem to a minimum.

There will be no extra charge for this intra-city "steam taxi service," according to Schmale, and the rate is still $1.25.

College Alumni In First Formal Meet

First formal meeting of the newly organized San Francisco Junior College Alumni Association will take place next Thursday night, February 3, at Galileo High School, according to Pete Jambruno, former Ram footballer and president of the group.

All former students or graduates of the college are eligible for membership and are invited to join. Plans are underway for many activities so that alumni will be able to continue acquaintances formed in college Jambruno indicated.

Amori Selected Hygiene Group Representative

Joseph A. Amori, hygiene instructor, has been selected by the American Student Health Association, to represent Junior College hygiene instructors from the eleven western states at the annual convention of the Association which will be held some time in November at the College of the Pacific, according to a report received last week.

The appointment came as the result of Amori's investigation of junior college health instruction in this state, which was conducted through a questionnaire to determine the scope and nature of the material being presented in junior college hygiene classes.

Dr. Walter H. Brown of Stanford wrote Amori a letter in which he informed him of his new post and asked for a copy of the questionnaire.

Well known in health circles, Amori made a research on the Fatigue of Athletes, the results of which were published in a national medical journal.

Dr. Edwin Lee To Visit College Friday

Dr. Edwin A. Lee, director of the National Occupational Conference, and former San Francisco Superintendent of Schools, under whom the college was formally opened in 1935, will be guest of honor at a luncheon on Friday, January 28, with Joseph P. Nourse, present Superintendent of Schools, and President Archibald J. Cloud acting as co-hosts.

Under the direction of J. Graham Sullivan, the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division will prepare and serve the luncheon.

Dr. Lee actively assisted in establishing the college and delivered the official address at its opening. He was succeeded in 1936 by Superintendent Nourse.

COLLEGE GROUPS SPONSOR WAR REFERENDUM DEBATE NEXT WED.

Discussion of the merits and demerits of a referendum on war by bay region colleges will feature the year's first assembly next Wednesday, February 2, at eleven o'clock in the Powell Street Lecture Hall. The meeting is being sponsored by the college Peace Society, Debating Society, Phi Rho Pi, and the Forum Club; it will be under the direction of Lloyd Luckmann, director of forensics.

Invitations have been sent to the debate groups of Stanford, California, Santa Clara, St. Mary's, San Francisco State, University of San Francisco, and Marin, Menlo, and San Mateo Junior Colleges to send a representative to discuss the resolution introduced by Representative Ludlow into Congress. Although pigeon-holed by Congress to one of its committees by a close vote a few weeks ago it is still the object of wide discussion throughout the nation. Arguments are flaring as to whether this measure would stop war.

"This assembly will afford students an opportunity," Luckmann declared to become familiar with the proposition and the pros and cons of the issue. All points will be presented and it is not to be limited to propaganda for either side. Speakers from the various colleges will be free to present any material and with such a number and variety that will take part students should get a comprehensive picture of the situation. This will be an innovation in our assemblies and students should not fail to attend."

The college will play host and a student from one of the three organizations participating will act as chairman. No San Francisco Junior College student will speak. This will be the first time that an assembly of this type will be held on such a large scale. A rally of similar nature was held last spring with peace as the subject; students from the University of California and San Francisco State participated.

The idea for a thorough discussion of the referendum on war and participation of other colleges was initiated by Luckmann. It gained the whole-hearted approval of Phi Rho Pi, and the Forum and Peace Society were then brought into the project.

Men's Club Making Plans For Busy Semester

With two successful functions already behind them and a calendar of gala events ahead, the officers of the Men's Club look forward to a busy semester.

Plans are being laid by Al Williams, president, and Joseph A. Amori, faculty adviser, to hold the semi-annual boxing and wrestling matches in the Civic Auditorium. Amori has enrolled twenty-five students in a special boxing class which is intended to train students for the fights. The worn out equipment used in the fights last semester has been replaced with new gloves and bags, and adequate training quarters have been supplied.

There is a possibility that the Men's Club dance this semester will be held on an excursion launch on the bay, according to Williams. Dances given in the past by the Men's Club have included barn parties and costume affairs but this would be the first boat dance to be given by the club.

The first week of school saw two Men's Club events, the sophomore-frosh brawl, and a smoker at the California Club. Both functions were part of "orientation week" for incoming freshmen, and were designed to acquaint the new students with customs and traditions of the college.

Amori received a letter recently from the Bakersfield Junior College requesting a thorough outline of the A.M.S. so that the southern institution could pattern a similar institution after ours. The letter was written by James Wade, an instructor at Bakersfield.

IT'S UP TO YOU

—Francis Bacon

REGARDLESS of the oft-quoted, "There is a divinity—," we get out of this life just what we put into it.

Many a man has bewailed a misstep of his past which assumes huge proportions in his future. The mistakes we make today are the ones we pay for tomorrow, and usually we have no one to blame but ourselves.

How many people today can look to an unblemished past and not find some action, which might have been carried out differently, to their decided advantage?

However, it is not the mistakes made in the past that are of primary importance, but the possible errors to be avoided in the future. They may be avoided by weighing situations and shunning snap judgments.

Youth is ever hearing from his elders, sage and serious advice along with the plea to profit by his parents' mistakes. They heard the same thing from their parents, but paid little heed, and youth never will.

It is no crime to make a mistake once or even make the same mistake twice, but any more than that is sheer stupidity. Realize once and for all that it's strictly up to you, act accordingly, and you canot fail.

STUDENT RADICALS

Every so often comes the cry from the good people who pay the taxes to the effect that all the college kids are a bunch of "reds," and they don't feel like supporting public schools which turn out such dangerous young radicals.

If the truth were known, all the propaganda concerning student radicalism, and campus anarchists probably comes from the headquarters of the groups which seek to foster radical tendencies among the youth of the country.

Actually, the average college student has little interest in world politics and doesn't care whether the Communist Party sinks or swims. He is much more concerned with the grade he is going to get on the next mid-term, or if he can date a certain coed, than he is with whether Italy writhes under the iron heel of Fascism.

No one is better qualified to judge the trend of student opinion than the students themselves, and any college man will tell you he doesn't give a dam who the dictator in Italy is, and furthermore will probably greet a newsreel of the great man with a round of Bronx cheers.

There isn't a college library in the country that doesn't contain a dusty, cob-web-covered volume of Karl Marx, while students read John Steinbeck.

WHAT WILL MOVE CHINA?

The rapid sweep of Japanese armies through great areas of China rouses a real wonder in the occidental mind as to the seeming indifference of the masses of population in that part of the Orient.

A clear light is thrown upon the difference between the oriental and occidental attitude toward political affairs in General Chaing Kai-Shek's autobiograph, recently published.

There it is revealed that during troublous years after the establishment of the republic, when for a time there was neither president, premier, or parliament, "everything proceeded as if nothing had happened, solely because the people went about their business without question, looking always to the heads of their clans in family affairs, and to their elders in affairs of towns and villages."

Such a condition would be unthinkable in a democracy like this, where officials are held under public scrutiny constantly, and where their forcible removal would be considered a calamity.

It is probably true, as has been said, that the great majority of the Chinese people are entirely unaware that a war is going on—and will remain so for years, unless the actual fighting gets into their own communities.

THE POST ENQUIRER

WOMEN IN THE SUPREME COURT

Cartoonists, perennial scoffers, sarcastic journalists and others are making much of the current rumor that President Roosevelt may appoint a woman to the Supreme Court bench. These critics of dubious judgment seem to think that the idea of a woman being a member of the nation's highest tribunal is a ludicrous one.

Yet even the veriest bar-fly will wax maudlin over the thought of his dear old mother and her sound advice that he didn't follow.

If a thoroughly competent woman spends the best years of her life studying and preparing herself for a position, whether it be in law or any other field, she should be accorded as much consideration as any male when a choice for that position is being made.

Perhaps, there would be considerably less radicalism and experimentation with crack-pot political theories in our government, if we had a few more able women in the high places.

THINK IT OVER

A former Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Maine, himself a graduate of a great university, once said: "In the case of a large institution, more boys go through the college, while in a small college, more college goes through the boys."

Students of San Francisco Junior College should take full advantage of the excellent opportunities afforded them to know their fellow students and their faculty. "The value," to quote Paul Pitman, "of the more intimate relationship between students and faculty of this college, as compared to the comparative non-existence of the individual at an Institution the size of the University of California, cannot be over-estimated."

Mr. Pitman is right in his contention. The friendships formed here, and the valuable person-to-person contact with the professors which the student may establish with very little trouble, contribute as much, possibly more, to the rounding of the student's education as all the books he may ever read.

GLEANED

Pity the young man whose teacher tries to command his taste, announces to him what is good and bad in literature! Lucky the student exposed to a critical intelligence aimed at demanding that he find his own gods! The treasures of the past can be offered only diffidently, as touchstones for self-analysis, not as models of perfection. No teacher can implant genius in barren ground, or kindle a fire from stones. What he CAN do is to fertilize the field with his knowledge, show his students where the kindling wood is stored. The academy can never give genius anything as precious as the kind of experience that Kipling gained from life at first hand; if the teacher is worth his salt he can shorten the apprenticeship of genius by sympathetic criticism—never forgetting that it is valuable only so far as it leads to self-criticism, which is the basis of all artistic expression

Mental Mutterings

By Fem

Having hours to kill and no weapon, we wandered into a nearby department store, and while gazing about the book section came across a table of so-called "Self Help" books. Going by titles alone, it would seem that there is no excuse for anyone to be unhappy, unpopular, unsuccessful or unfoo, for there, right out in the open and available to anyone with the price were the following valuable volumes:

"What's Holding You Back?" There is a title plus! What is holding you back? Could it be that you wear the wrong color nail polish or use the wrong blend of tobacco in your pipe? These and thousands of other such puzzling questions are answered in one small, slim volumn! Next!

"How to Turn People Into Gold" Now, there's where they've really got something! Suppose you could turn every slug who greets you with an oh-so-friendly "Hi Chum!" into a twenty dollar gold piece! Wow!

"Why Not Enjoy Life?" Well, sez we, why not?

"If You Want to Get Ahead" Here is one they forgot to finish. They say "If you want to get ahead......." and let it go at that instead of adding, "eat two apples every day," "count to ten before you think" or "go out for crew." That's bad!

"More Power to You!" Isn't that a nice thought? It's swell to know that somebody is thinking of you and spurring you on. Yeah man!

"Help Yourself to Happiness" And for years and years all good mothers have been teaching their children to wait until they are served! What is this world coming to?

Of course we could go on for hours and hours and give you some other choice titles, but at least you now have a vague idea of the power that lies within you all ready to leap out if you'll only invest in a few books. Aren't you glad you learned to read?

Yes, it's the unsung heroes, the fellows behind the big men, that really count!

Presidential Notes

By Don Mix

MY FRIENDS: We live in an age in which it is the politically "smart thing to do" to advocate sweeping reforms and foster economic and social panaceas. So widespread has been this disease that even tin-horn college politicians like myself have taken on the color of our big league contemporaries, and we too offer strategies that we believe are essential to student well-being.

In our initial presidential dribble we described our first cure-all remedy, which, briefly pointed at increasing the executive ability of student officers by deletion of the current popular notion that all ex-Council members must be supreme cutups.

Our second remedy aims at the wider field of the entire extra-curricular set-up of the college. We hope to establish as an integral part of the College a Club Council or Forum, composed of all social and cultural groups of the institution.

THE PURPOSE: To enlarge and strengthen extra-curricular activity by a carefully planned program of unification and cooperation among all college groups.

THE METHOD: Fostering round table discussions by representatives who will be empowered to exert authority over club groups, subject to ratification by the Ex Council. This group will be encouraged to bestow awards for outstanding works in fields such as language translation, literary endeavors, social affairs and so forth.

CABBAGES AND KINGS

By Dick Simpers

RESTRAINING ourselves with a bit of an effort from launching into a poetical rhapsody about that sunset we just witnessed through the Golden Gate, we drag ourselves back to the somewhat prosaic matters of everyday life and the urgent necessity of finishing our weekly stint in time to meet the deadline. Carry on, Simpers old chap, carry on.

DREAM AWHILE

The rather definite defeat of the much-heralded Ludlow Referendum by the House of Representatives disposes, it is to be hoped permanently, of another of the impractical and sensational measures which are brought up every so often in Congress. The idea of having everyone vote on whether war should or should not be declared sounds very fine and democratic, but could hardly work. The delay and fuss attendant upon the conduction of a nation-wide election is, in itself, enough definitely to eliminate such a plan from serious consideration, and, anyway, the persons in whose hands the ultimate decision rests are elected by the people and are supposedly representative of popular opinion. Under the present set-up, a scheme such as that proposed would onyl serve to complicate matters and accomplish nothing that wouldn't have been accomplished more quickly without it.

"—THE LOW ROAD"

No longer must we stand hesitating for weary minutes on the curb of Bay Street, trying to summon up courage enough to make the dash across to the gymnasium. No more must students risk life and limb daily among the whizzing vehicles which hurtle down the thoroughfare between Galileo and the locker rooms. Gone are the surly workmen who chased us out of perfectly good parking space with loud shouts of rage. The underpass (tunnel to you) with which men in overalls have been fiddling for months is finally completed. Hallelujah!

IN THE RED

When the present fiscal year began, it was confidently announced that the end of it would find the national budget with a tidy balance instead of the usual bulky deficit. Well, in the President's recent statement to Congress, he announced that, sad to say, the government was going to find itself more than a billion dollars deeper in the hole at the end of the year, marking the ninth consecutive time that it has wound up on the wrong side of the ledger. Maybe there's some excuse for not making money, but why must someone always be predicting profits? They never materialize, and the persons that predict them must know d...... well that they're not going to. It gets pretty tiresome listening to the same old drool every year from the politicians and never having the budget balanced.

UNEASY MOMENT

Standing in the middle of the Twin Peaks tunnel with an out-of-town companion who suddenly pipes up, "Are you bothered much by the earthquakes here?"

RAM'S HORN

Before I begin to voice my complaint, be it understood that I have other things to do in this institution besides attending social affairs. Still, I maintain that the social life of any college is just as essential as any course, provided both are given due attention at the proper time.

Now I noticed that the last Guardsman had no mention whatsoever of the howling failure of the Freshman reception dance at the Clift Hotel. I say failure but suppose I should say over-success, for the affair was too well attended (by some—where were those connected with the publication) indicating that dances this semester will be even more popular than last and therefore should be conducted in a decent sized hall. The only really good spot picked last semester was the Palace Hotel at which was held the Soph Formal, and that was the worst dance both from a standpoint of finances (I see you took a loss on it) and from the tuxedo standpoint.

I, and many others, disapprove of formal dances because of the necessity of renting "tuxes." Make them semi-formal and watch your attendance as per the Frosh Reception.

Let's have a dance a month at least, more if possible. They are the one real chance besides some sports events where everyone who so desires (and there are plenty) can get together and have a few hours of relaxation from the routine of the classroom.

3. WHO took a loss?

* * *

Dear Editor:

All this semester I have had to push my way through a solid wall of flesh (dragging my books behind me) on the steps at Powell Street. I am fed up, and I would like to say so through the medium of the Rams Horn.

When I first entered The College many semesters ago I was told that the front steps were for students coming from classes, and that the stairway next to the bulletin board was for students going to classes. For a long time that was observed. Now, however, the rule has been forgotten and instead of the orderly procession of yore there is pandemonium.

There is a rusty old saying in the physics department which says "what goes up must come down." It could well be applied in this instance if it said "what goes up the side stairs must come down the front ones" and vice-versa.

There are three ways of handling a situation of this kind: First, use student police; second, have it supervised by a member of the faculty; third, let the students control the situation themselves.

Student police are almost always stooges. Having a member of the faculty boss one around outside the class room is faintly reminiscent of a grammar school recess. Students agreeing to conduct themselves in an orderly manner is to my mind the only answer to an almost impossible situation. SQUASHED TO A PULP

Editor, The Guardsman:

Dear Editor:

Though fully realizing the lack of a much needed campus, I think something should be done about the mob of students gathered on and about the steps of the Extension building at Powell Street. The crowd on the sidewalk is bad enough but it is next to impossible to mount the steps at the main entrance. It takes the agility of an Olympic athlete to squeeze through the small openings (if any) and to doge burning cigarettes, and the patience of Job to stand minutes waiting for some obliging person to move himself and his books out of your way.

The letters published by the Chronicle last semester indicate that people not attending the Junior College resent the stoppage of sidewalk traffic as well as the majority of college students do.

If I am not mistaken there was a letter similar to this in last semester's Guardsman. However, nothing has been done about it. Why?

OUT OF THE FOG

By Mac

Before anyone reads further, may we warn the few who had a bit of faith in us, that we are not strictly responsible for what follows.

Notwithstanding the fact that all of our literary minded ancestors would toss in their tombs at the thought of our writing a "dirt" column, we have been heckled, browbeaten, and badgered enough. There hasn't been a day passed, that some well-meaning soul has not asked why we didn't write a smut column. We grew weary and stoop-shouldered from the strain of fighting off these persistent people. We patiently explained that sooner or later everyone begins to hate a "dirt" columnist. We carefully showed them that such a piece stirs up trouble, arouses criticism, and breeds discontent. We pointed out the fact that the people who get their names in "dirt" columns also get their feelings hurt, and the ones who don't get their names in a "dirt" column get their feelings hurt too.

All to no avail. Everywhere at every turn we were postered with the same request. Therefore, in desperation, we write the following, including only the names of people who wanted a dirt column.

Things we'd like to know about! . . . where Al Williams got the red block sweater he's wearing . . . which came first, the chicken or the egg . . . who is Hector . . . what happened to Jerry Flamm's "gold mine" that went to Galileo . . . whether Merv Weiner ever thought of claiming the world's championship for scrambled features . . . will Edith Dorcey ever land the newspaper fellow she's after . . . why all the boys are taking the sudden interest in SWIMMING . . . when Miriam Banks is going to throw another party . . . why people read this column (if they do) . . . where Master Preovolos gets all the bum jokes he pulls . . . how much "Fifi" really weighs . . . what became of Schmale's blonde . . . if there is anyone who hasn't driven Lorraine Haffmeyer's car . . . why the AWS doesn't give a (they could call it a tea if they had to) free feed for the boys sometime . . . why Bob Neal didn't go to a co-educational school . . . why a certain columnist doesn't shoot himself . . . if Stan Adams is going to take lessons in DIVING.

Well, there it is, you asked for it, you got, and we hope you don't like it.

Remember, if you really want more, this is tame.

At the end of this column, you will find a ballot. If you wish this to be a "dirt" column, sign your handle to the ballot, turn it in to either of the college offices, and let's not have any more fuss about it.

He had one arm upon the wheel,
Quite joyful was his ride,
The other arm was wrapped around
The "cutie" by his side.
A "copper" yelled, "Use both your hands,"
In a voice that carried far.
"I can't," the modern youth replied,
"I have to steer the car."

CASABA LEAGUE OPENS

STATE'S PLUTTE HAS VERY SAD EVENING AT KEZAR

Action in the Ram's upset win over State College last Wednesday night at Kezar Pavilion. At the left "Alex The Great" Opalinski (number 11), local center, is shown tanking a bucket in the hectic overtime period after dribbling past the frantic looking Bill Plutte (number 14), the gent who is wildly waving his arms. At the right Treacy "The Slat" Slattery (number 7) star Ram forward, pivots around the constantly foiled Mr. Plutte, on a trip into 'Gator territory.

By DON MIX

The annual conference casaba derby begins tonight with the local entry, the Rambling Rams, strictly in the Dark Horse class. The Modesto Hoopsters, who came down the stretch in front last year, are heavy favorites to repeat while Sacramento and San Mateo are considered the teams to beat. Advance reports, which really mean not a thing, have it that Marin is merely in it for the exercise. We will know about that around ten o'clock tonight, however. Those who like to back up a good rider have laid a few clips on the Rams merely because that old wizard of cage magic, "Dutch" Conlan is in the saddle.

While sitting in on the training table at "Sloppy Harry's" we encountered several frosh grid satellites discussing with sad faces and sorrowful mien the arrival of many foreign footballers with lots of clippings and big reputations. The arrival of such sturdy timber as Joe Berges, Bill Simmons, Frank Verducci, "Jiggs" Greenwood, Aaron Adams and Art Ringholm will make it tough for the returning veterans.

But as one of the vets phrased it, "No use worrying until the first scrimmage, then . . . . ." We would like very much to see that scrimmage early next September.

Although baseball practice won't start until next week, Lee Eisan already has cause for joy what with the announcement of Mickey Berman that he has consented to return to handle the first base job. The loquacious "Mick" besides being good sports copy, is really a potent first sacker.

We would-be newspaper men scent a scoop in regard to possible feud between Baseball Coach Lee Eisan and Jack Gaddy, college crew mentor. The bone of contention is Sims ("Call me 'Tim'") Hamilton, giant star of last year's rowing aggregation. It seems that Tip has forsaken his first love and will seek fame and fortune on the diamond.

Gaddy has been conducting a whispering campaign which aims at convincing the much sought after ex-crew star that Eisan has five former all-city men signed up for the position that Hamilton is seeking. Eisan blasted his foe Gaddy in a sensational, exclusive interview when he stated, quote "I don't care!"

Block SF Society To Meet Tomorrow

Reorganization of the Block SF will be affected tomorrow at two o'clock in the Galileo Cafeteria according to Russ Sweet, track and football coach and head of the men's Physical Education department.

"The meeting is being called for the purpose of starting activity for the new year," Sweet said, "Election of officers will be the main order of business. All wearers of Block SF's should not fail to attend. This is a very important meeting," he emphasized.

Gaddy's Crew Holds Initial Rowing Drills

New Talent Uncovered In Boat Drills Held At Yacht Harbor

Intensive drilling on form and stroking precision occupied the college crew in its initial workouts of the season which were held during the last ten days, according to Jack Gaddy, rowing mentor.

Some thirty potential boatmen have been working out on alternate days under the direction of Gaddy and last year's coxswain, Will Cordano. There has been no attempt as yet to segregate the rowers into a first and second boat but Gaddy said that he will begin to concentrate on a varsity lineup within the next week or so.

TALENT UNCOVERED

Chief among the new talent uncovered in the drills is Dick Simpers, slender rowing stylist, who handles the port stroke, position Ken "Fur Face" Pasquellette, pudgy bowman, Ed Cregi, fast improving port sweep swinger, and Malcomb Jacobs, who shows promise of being a capable number 4 man.

Urgent pleadings by some 1600 members of the student body and constant coaxing by Coach Gaddy has begun to break down the resolve of Bob Carotto, Paul Bunyan figure of local rowing circles, to refrain from athletics during the current semester. From a reliable source it was learned that Colossal Carotta will be in his customary position of stroke by the time the actual season starts.

It is also expected that Tip Hamilton, self-styled demon of the diamond, will forego the lure of the horsehide sport to take over his old position at Port 3.

Art Nelson, the rumored antelope like lad from Daly City, has also returned to the fold and should become a fixture at the starboard stroke job. All two hundred pounds of Merv Weiner, another vet from last year's aggregation, will be working for the glory of the Ram Navy, Gaddy disclosed.

Baseball Coaches Meet At Galileo

A special meeting of the Northern California Junior College Conference baseball coaches was held at Galileo, Thursday evening, January 13. The meeting was called to order at 7:30 by Commissioner of Athletics Paul Mohr.

The following were present as official delegates:

This meeting was held to rearrange the baseball schedule because of the addition of three schools to the baseball conference. The new colleges are Placer, Salinas and Menlo Junior Colleges. Placer and Salinas are newcomers while Menlo returns to the diamond sport after the absence of one year.

Coach Lee Eisan of San Francisco Junior College presented a new baseball schedule to include the three new teams. After considerable discussion it was accepted.

AMORI'S BOXERS WORKING OUT IN GYM AT GALILEO

Flying Levisons have been filling the air in the Galileo boxing room each Wednesday at noon of late, where Joe Amoria faithfully and hopefully works his aspiring sluggers in quest of fame and fortune in the squared circle.

Chief in prominence among the College mittmen is Mel Chicazola, San Francisco Golden Gloves light heavyweight champ. "Chick," by the way, is a very versatile fellow, having debuted as assistant yell leader at the State basketball game last week. He now aspires toward Collegiate glory in the ring.

The fly in the ointment, it seems, is the fact that Amori's other outstanding candidate, is likewise a 175 pounder. He's Ray Greenwood, a good fighter, but alas, no yell leader!

Amori announces that an elaborate list of new boxing and wrestling equipment has been ordered, slated for delivery soon. Arrangements are under way for team matches with such fistic organizations as San Jose State, Stanford, California, S. F. State and Italian Athletic Club.

Berman Back On Baseball Team

Hopes for a baseball championship looked brighter with the return of "Mickey" Berman to college. Berman is a southpaw first baseman and an exceptional fielder around the initial sack, he is also a very good hitter who comes through in the pinch.

Another welcome addition to the horsehider's will be Ed Curcio and Treacy Slattery, these boys will turn out for baseball at the close of the basketball season. Both of these prospects are pitchers and from reports Curio is a wonder, he is a lefthander with plenty of stuff. Slattery throws from the right side and is said to have a good fast ball.

Practice games for the Rams are being arranged with Santa Clara, St. Mary's, Stanford, California, and San Jose State Freshmen teams during the early part of the season. Games are also to be played with some of the local high school nines.

Williams, Cloud On Air

Following the successful interview of Joe Amori, College bowling Instructor, on the Ernie Smith program last Wednesday night over KYA, Allen Williams and Howard Cloud, ace Ram pin smashers, will be Smith's guests tonight.

Listen in to KYA this evening at 7 o'clock.

Schmale Gives Impersssions On Ram's Overtime Victory

By JACK SCHMALE

Seven seasoned sturdy sons of San Francisco State sorrowfully saw "Scattery Slats" Slattery, SANS SALT, skillfully shoot several sure skyward shots, scoring sufficiently, surprisingly submerging sensitive State, satisfying several score spellbound spectators sitting securely in the spacious Stanyan Street sports stable!

Such, Rams and Ramettes, is a "Fibber" McGee version of the local hoop quintet's thrilling 44 to 40 overtime victory over the salt-eating Statesmen last Wednesday eve at Kezar Pavilion.

SLATTERY HERO

It was the afore mentioned Slattery, commonly known as Treacy previous to his herein described feats, who caused the State five considerable unhappiness.

Trailing, 36-35, with three minutes to gun-time, Treacy dribbled the length of the court and whipped a split-vision pass to Bill Phelan, whose resulting tip-in shot handed the Rams a one-point advantage. Shortly thereafter, however, Hammond retalliated semi-similarly with a free toss to knot the count again.

Sanz dropped one for State, but Henry James, not to be denied, sneaked through and again tied things up with less than one minute remaining.

EXTRA PERIOD

Next: the gun. A rest period proceeded the five-minute overtime session, launched as the scoreboard showed 39-39.

Calmly the Rams worked the casaba basketward. Came the physchological moment and with it the instinctive unspoken command: "Commence firing!"

Slattery broke across the court to meet a well-timed pass from Phelan. The situation tensed! With reckless abandon touched with a sprinkling of audacious confidence, Treacy let it fly, left handed! Eyes closed, fingers crossed, and breathing ceased as the Slattery contribution toward victory took its flight. And then—swish—it pierced the mesh; 41-39.

FINAL INSULT

Sanz dropped a one-pointer, Slattery did likewise: 42-40. Then came the insult to State's injury. About a minute's worth of basketball remaining, "Slats" fired a cross-court pass at lanky Harold Fischer, who had merely to relay it into a waiting basket to wind up the evening.

The Rams clicked nicely throughout the evening, Joe Opalinski leading the bombardment with 17 markers, Slattery caging 11. Sanz proved State's handy man, collecting 15.

When last heard from, the State casaba contingent was considering the use of pepper to replace the sodium chloride diet, which was proven not worth its salt.

Junior Varsity In Close Win Over Statemen

Downing a strong basketball team, the college Junior Varsity defeated State's 145's. The game was played at Kezar Pavillion preliminary to the Varsity's encounter with State's Unlimiteds.

Wilson's outfit gained a comfortable lead in the outset of the game mainly due to the sharpshooting of Roy Sclar and Ray Berns, both forwards. With the beginning of the second half State kept hammering away closing up the score. The State attack featured Ronnie English who got hot.

It was also at this time that the Jayvees were weakened by the leaving from the game of Lawrence and Slavin. Lawrence was the first to go when he suffered a cramp in the lower leg. Slavin was evicted from the game having commited four personal fouls. With Lawrence and Slavin out of the game the Jayvees had difficulty clearing the ball off the backboard, losing the control of the game. With the Junior College weakened State surged forward in a short lived lead. Playing heads-up ball, the Jayvees came back, recaptured the lead and held on to it for the rest of the game although State did manage to tie it twice before the game ended.

It was in the final minutes of the game, the Jayvees never seeming able to get more than a two point lead drove the assembled rooters from both schools to distraction. Rather than play safe both teams opened up with a wild barrage of shots that failed to help either team, neither seemed able to find the hoops.

Stewart, Sclar, Berns, Slavin and Lawrence, the starting quintet for the Junior College, played stellar ball. Sclar was high point man for the Jayvees, tieing English of State for individual honors. Both tanked twelve points. Ray Berns was next, scoring eight points.

TRACKSTERS TRY TO SECURE USE OF KEZAR FIELD

Negotiations on the plan whereby the college track team will use Kezar Stadium as a training ground have not yet been completed.

President A. J. Cloud has written the Park Commissioner on the subject and has not, as yet, received an answer. Nothing can be accomplished until some arrangement is reached between The Board of Education and the Park Commission. In the meantime the training ground deal is still "on the fire."

Until the plans have actually been completed, the team will continue to practice where they have been, at the High School of Commerce without the benefit of showers or lockers. A few of the boys who live in Oakland and Berkeley have been practicing at Edwards field, the University of California training grounds.

Russ Sweet, coach of the track squad, says, "the boys are on their own and I sincerely hope that they keep in shape in spite of their difficulties. After this trouble has been settled and we have a definite training quarters, I plan to have the team compete in inter-class competition. The teams will be divided into four groups, low freshman, high freshmen, and low and high sophomores. This style of competition is excellent in preparing the team for the very strenuous meets, as it is on the same general principle of the "Frosh-Soph Brawl," the case where the Freshman tries to win over the Sophomore."

The team is asked to try to get in as much practice as possible and any possible information concerning the training grounds will be posted on the gym bulletin board.

Rush of Incoming Athletes Continues

Will the parade of incoming star athletes never cease?

Grid mentor Russ Sweet was joyously asking himself that question last week, after Urban "Mace" Mason, star tackle from Iowa, had joined the student body.

Mason, a 185 pound individual, plays either tackle or end. He was named on the All-Southwestern Iowa State mythical prep eleven as a tackle in 1934, while starring for Hamburgh High. Later he enrolled in Iowa University, where he starred at an end position on the frosh team.

He is a transfer from the latter institution, and doesn't think of home every time he indulges in ground meat surrounded by bread!

RAM HOOPSTERS BEGIN CAMPAIGN FOR CAGE TITLE

Locals Face Marin Five In Two Game Series To Start Month's Play

The guest artist on this evening's program in the current Wednesday night series of Kezar casaba entertainment will be the 1938 Marin Junior College court crop, slated to lock grips with the newly-discovered all-star Conlan five promptly at 8 o'clock.

Marin is commonly accepted as a pretty good basketball school, year in, year out. Mentored by "Scoop" Carlson, the Mariners this evening will exhibit a semi-experienced combination in the opener on the Northern California Conference hoop menu.

The Rams will open with the lineup which proved so troublesome to State last week, namely Slattery and Blackfield at forwards, Opalinski, center, with James and Curscio at guards.

WOMAN'S SPORTS PARADE

By JEAN PAGE

NOTE: Women's Sports Parade slows down to a short hobble, henceforth. However, this is not to be regarded as either a lackadaisical attitude on the part of the columnist or as a shortage of news from the women's athletic department, which is certainly the most active of women's organizations. It is rather a command from above. Sorry!

* * *

The big news of the week is that WAA sign-ups far exceeded those of past semesters; 169 students enrolled in various WAA sports. Tennis was the mostmost popular with more than 40 enrolled for Saturday morning practice at the Palace of Fine Arts. Badminton retained its position as a favorite sport of of the colege and ice skating proved to be an immediate success. The women who served on the sign-up committees and who deserve congratulations are chairman, Gail Hanna, Dot Canavan, Margaret Park, Ellen Cumming, Dot Sanderson, Jean Lonkey, Virginia Kwiatt, and Elvira Oberti.

Students who neglected to sign up for WAA sports will have a chance to redeem themselves from January 26 to February 4, the week of late sign-ups. From January 31 to February 4, there will be nomination of managers. On February 7 picotres of the nominees will be taken and February 9, 10, 11 are the dates of the election of managers.

For those who wish to run for team managers we print a list of what their duties will be, if elected. Managers are expected to arrange extra activities, keep records of participants and attendance, and at the end of the semester, turn in to the WAA council a complete record of all events during this semester.

Record Registration Finished; Students To Be Examined Listed

"We are pleased with the enrollment this semester," said J. Paul Mohr, registrar. "It is the largest in the history of the college, and if registration increases in the future as it has in the past the new College buildings will be filled to capacity."

The registrar's office is listing the names and appointments of all the men students who have not as yet had their Physical Examination. THESE APPOINTMENTS ARE FINAL AND MUST BE KEPT. Men who have not kept appointments previous to this date will find their names in the following list. Such a list will be printed every week until the examinations are completed.

HOTEL DIVISION ENTERTAINS SAN JOSE VISITORS

On Friday, January 21st, the Hotel and Restaurant Division again entertained distinguished visitors, Ambrose R. Nicols, Director of the San Jose Department of Vocational Education, and five members of the San Jose Board of Education were the guests of President Cloud at a luncheon held at Galileo High School, headquarters of the division. Director Nicols was interested in observing the type of program and method used at the college. A Chef Training Course is to be inaugurated in the San Jose Public Schools.

Registration of 57 students this semester topped last semester's 31 students. Of the 57 students a variety of localities are represented. There are 43 students from San Francisco; four from Oakland; two from Alameda; one from San Jose; two from Los Angeles; two from Berkeley; two from La Jolla; one hardy individual who commutes daily from Saratoga, and Isla Sommer from far-off Germany.

Wagner Wins Final Of Tennis Tourney

Finals of the intramural tennis singles championship of the college came to an end last week when Harold Wagner succeeded in winning by a narrow margin from Bob Lazare. The match went five sets, Lazart putting up an exceptionally good fight against Wagner, who is rated as one of the best tennis players in the state.

Coach Tom Wilson is planning a series of practice matches for the team, to start in the near future and prepare them for the conference season, which opens early in April.

Heading the list of those out for the team are Wagner, Lazare, Chandler, Ennes, Alvin Altfield, and Bob Kuhn. Harold Mitchell quit, and Ray Burns is considering a return to basketball as a field of athletic endeavor.

Faculty Group To Meet In Cafeteria

The Faculty Association will hold its next meeting 3:30 to 5:00 o'clock tomorrow in the Faculty Cafeteria. It will be a combined meeting with the Executive Committee and the Curriculum Committee attending. Discussion of "Junior College Problems," will be the main object of the meeting. Refreshments will be served as has been done in the past.

W. Hancock Praised By War Department Aide For Shooting

A letter from the Assistant Secretary of War commending him upon his shooting is the latest distinction for William "Wild Bill" Hancock, rifle and pistol coach of the college.

Hancock, a second lieutenant in the 250 Coast Artillery, California National Guard, shot with the state team in the national matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, last summer.

California's team placed high, but it was his individual shooting which won Hancock the Du Pont Trophy, the highest distinction in the United States for individual shooting.

Following is the letter:

The Assistant Secretary of War
Washington, D. C.

Dear Lieutenant Hancock:

It is a pleasure to congratulate you as the winner of the Du Pont Trophy in the Du Pont All-Around Match at Camp Perry, Ohio on September first.

The winning of this trophy is an indication of the patience you have shown in training for the match and the fine measure of the skill with the rifle you have thus attained.

Kindly accept my best wishes for your future success.

Sincerely yours,
(signed) Louis Johnson,
Assistant Secretary of War

Coach Conlan To Form Golf Team

In answer to the cry of "swing it Mister Conlan," a golf team is being formed, which will tread the links against squads of the various junior colleges.

As soon as enough men have signed up, Conlan will drag out his bag of sticks and let the boys in on the devious arts of the fairway. Conlan, who is no slouch with the niblick himself, should do a first class coaching job if any amount of material turns out.

A tentative schedule has been drawn up which includes matches with the Cal Frosh, Stanford Frosh, Menlo Junior College, and San Mateo Junior College, while other schools are not yet decided upon.

After the signup is complete, there will be an elimination to determine the six best golfers in school. Tournaments will then be arranged for the six man team and definite dates will be set.

SERVICE SOCIETY HONORED AT BANQUET

To be honored next week at a luncheon given by the Administration as a gesture of appreciation for services rendered during the recent registration period, members of the Women's Service Society have settled down to the serious business of finding a means of raising money for their scholarship fund, according to Marion Yager, WSS president.

"We feel greatly honored by the luncheon members of the administration have planned for us," Miss Yager said, "and also by the very nice letters of thanks we received from President Cloud and Registrar Mohr. It is always gratifying to know that your efforts are appreciated and next semester we plan to add to our service by instituting a "big sister" plan by which we will attempt to assist freshman students with the complicated procedure of making out programs."

Miss Yager said that with May and Commencement not far off, the group was beginning to think seriously of ways to raise money for scholarships that we plan to award at that time. She said that the Chain Card Party held late last semester had been very successful and that the group was considering the advisability of holding another Rummage Sale, similar to the one held last year.

For the benefit of new students, Miss Yager explained that any student in the college could fill out an application blank for the WSS scholarship at a date to be set later in the semester. When all the applications are in, they will be presented to a committee chosen from members of the club and certain faculty advisers and the person or persons judged most worthy from a standpoint of scholarship, character and actual need will receive the scholarship which is intended for use in completing work at the Junior College.

Ceremonies Feature Tunnel Completion

Ceremonies in the Galileo auditorium and yard marked the opening of the underpass connecting the main building and physical education plant last Friday afternoon.

2,000 students listened to speeches in the auditorium by Joseph P. Nourse, superintendent of schools, Richard E. Doyle, president of the Board of Education, and Principal C. A. Anderson.

The students then filed out into the yard and gathered in front of the tunnel where Mrs. J. J. Davis, president of the Galileo Parent Teachers Association, officially opened the $40,000 tunnel by cutting a ribbon. In addition the school band marched and played and was followed by the students through the underpass.

The celebration ended months of work on the tunnel which was built to eliminate the traffic hazard of crossing busy Bay Street.

CLUBS

Marksmen Elect New Vice-Prexy

An innovation in usual procedure was introduced early this week, when the control board of the college rifle and pistol club elected a man to the position of Vice-president in charge of social affairs.

An unnamed member of that group was heard to remark that it has been a traditional custom of the club to put a woman in this position. However, he said, circumstances forced by the resignation of regularly elected woman officers necessitated the hasty appointment of Gibson by the executive board.

The remaining officers of that organization who were elected late last fall are George Dieser, president; Edna Wedam, secretary; and Don Smith, treasurer. The remaining members of the board of control are Virginia Kwiatt, John Benton and John Stewart. The latter represents the ex-rifleers an organization of former rifle club members.

Smashing through to a decisive victory, the college first rifle team scored its fifth win of the season against the highly rated Company L state champion team of the 159 Infantry of the California National Guard.

Iota Chi Frat Elects Preovolos

Chosen at the first meeting of the semester held early last week, officers of the Iota Chi fraternity are looking forward to a semester of interesting activities, according to Jimmy Preovolos, newly elected president of the group.

"This evening" Preovolos said, "we are having a dinner for our pledges at the home of Russ Turver, last semester's president. As soon as rushing activities are over we will start considering plans for a dance to be held at one of the local clubs."

PE Majors Set Tea For Feb. 3

Among many activities planed by PE club members is the forthcoming tea to be held February 3 at sponsor Bertha Keller's home. An informal talk on teaching hints will be given by Mrs. Florence Stevenson, instructor at State College.

Along with other new courses offered to the Junior College students this year is Fundamental Rhythms, an important course for Physical Education majors, according to Miss Keller. Mrs. Bergin, instructor, gives information about it.

"The Fundamental Rhythms class is offered to Physical Education majors and elementary school teachers in order to make them familiar with those things both musical and motor that underly all types of dancing, except folk dancing, tap dancing, social and modern dancing. It should make them familiar with different types of dances and with the dance bibliography.

"Musical Instruments used are the tom toms, modern dance drums, wooden dance blocks, porcelain bowls, and the piano. The porcelain bowls are of graduating degrees in size and when tapped each produces a different sound."

Deutscher Verein To Rehearse Play

The club will begin to rehearse their parts in the play "Die Kleinen Verwandten" by Thoma, which they will present before the German classes later in the semester. There are still several parts yet to be assigned so any German students who would like to be in the play are invited to attend the meeting.

Members of the college Chess Club will play the University of California Frosh, Friday, January 28, at Stephens Union, the men's clubroom on the Berkeley campus, according to Bill Switzer, club president.

Barkley Jones, team manager; and Henry Ralston, club advisor; are choosing the order in which the club will compete. Those playing will be: Carl Christianson, Carl Von Herman, Paul Novich, Barkley Jones, and Switzer.

"Rushes" Attend Beta Phi Confab

At a Beta Phi smoker Monday night, the following men were given rushes, Stan Adams, Al Williams, Bob Balam, Harold Crofts, and Joe Whitnah. Several other boys also will be given bids to the fraternity. When the two week period of rushing is over it will be followed by four weeks of pledging. This in turn will be followed by a dinner given near the first of March.

Joe Amori, Dean Edwin C. Browne, of the faculty, and Dr. Sewell, the fraternity's faculty adviser, were also invited to attend the smoker, which was held at the usual meeting place, 2117 Leavenworth Street.

Omicron Phi Pi Meets Today

Officers of the economics honor society, Omicron Phi Pi will meet at Galileo in room 314 at 4:20 this afternoon, according to Charles Vaughn, president.

"B" plus average or better is required to join the society, and at present there are four students who are being considered for membership. They are Annabelle Benson, Mike Klebanoff Doris Speroni, and Lena Way.

Rally Planned By Music Students

Wesley Pomeroy, president of the Music Club, rather reluctantly revealed that there is a faint possibility of a Music Club rally. If all runs smoothly and there is no interference from the powers that be, at some future date there might be an assembly.

At least this much is certain, the date for the Music Club meeting has been moved to Thursday, January 27. It will be held at the home of Miss Flossita Badger, head of the Music Department, at 1320 Lombard Street.

Sacred and secular song recordings will be made by the Music Department of the San Francisco State College tomorrow for the college A Capella choir.

Recordings of similar songs were made last year by Sherman Clay and Company, to be kept by the college as a permanent record.

NEXT DANCE SET FOR NIGHT OF FEB. 19TH

Setting February 19 as the date for the next college dance, an informal to be held at the Veteran's War Memorial, the Social Committee met last Wednesday afternoon, according to Norma Parent, Associated Student vice-president and Social Committee head.

"We were very well pleased with the results of our first dance," Miss Parent said, "for, outside of a little congestion, everything turned out beautifully. It was gratifying to see the grand turn-out of Freshmen students and if this first dance is any indication of college interest we can certainly look forward to a successful social season."

Tentative plans were made at the meeting, according to Miss Parent for another semi-formal dance which will probably be held at the St. Francis Hotel on March 25. There is a possibility that the Committee may give a dance in conjunction with the Associated Women Students, but nothing definite has been decided.

Jensen's Class To Rehearse "Caesar"

Believing that the young actor grows richer through the study of Shakespeare than by devoting their time to more recent writers, Ruth Jensen, Instructor of Speech, at the request of the class, has chosen "Julius Ceasar" as the first dramatic vehicle for the young thespians learning the fundamentals of acting in Speech 21D. Miss Jensen says,

"Inspired by the New York revival of "Julius Ceasar" done in modern dress, the class expressed a desire to work on this play as its beginning project before attempting rehearsal on more modern material."

William Shakespeare, more than any other playwright, presents the student of acting the greatest variety of training in basic techniques, and the students discovering this fact have entered wholeheartedly into the undertaking.

Later in the semester, after the study of Shakespeare, the group will concentrate on a play by some modern dramatist. At present there are no definite plans as to just what author or play will be chosen.

Berliner Elected Low Frosh Leader

Marvin (Bud) Berliner was elected president of the low freshman class last week in a run off vote. He defeated Malcolm Jacobs for the position. Muriel Dodworth garnered more votes than Joe Carter to be named secretary-treasurer. Barbara Currier was chosen vice-president at the original election.

It was reported last week that the low sophomore officers were unknown. Since then they have been discovered, they are: Muriel Mills, president; Betty Nelson, vice-president; and Marie Louise McNutt, secretary-treasurer. Irving Amstrup is the leader of the high sophs and Frank Verducci heads the high frosh.

By Anne Rabinowitz

One common complaint was the fact that young people look for work in too casual a manner. Girls arrive at an office carrying books, or packages, many times, hatless, and inquire if there are any openings. Their job-hunting appears to be just one of those unpleasant things that must be done, all in a day's shopping.

Business employers analyze applications for more than the simple questions they contain. Handwriting, ability to follow directions, grammatical construction, and honesty are often revealed in the questionnaire.

People who go to an office in pairs are considered too timid or unbusiness-like for the job.

In the merchandising field we discover that tall girls have the advantage over their shorter sisters, and as most buyers must work up from the selling floor, height will sometimes make a difference in the career.

Theories offered in the college curses, Salesmanship, Retail Merchandising, and Advertising are valuable tools when entering into the employ of a department store.

Next week, if possible, before leaving the field of business, we shall try to present the place of men in the business. Most college boys dismiss the possibility of commercial work as a career, thinking it only a woman's job. Men, however, receive higher wages and are sometimes given superior chances for advancement.

To get that "after college" feeling (and it's a scarey one), we, plus pencil, pad and shaking knees, invaded several downtown offices in search of pertinent information. One executive volunteered that graduates from junior colleges, who were prepared intensively in the business field, were always preferred above high school graduates.

It is not surprising that most positions above ordinary stenographer cannot be reached without at least two years of higher education. These years must include, however, more than ordinary secretarial training, for the large establishments have found active participation in extra-curricular events provide for a well-rounded personality and keener intellectual powers.

Many employers request a past record of all awards, student-offices, and club membership of the applicant. Sports are declared a definite cure for awkwardness and self-consciousness. Swimming, tennis, or golf teach body coordination and do wonders for posture. They also develop that necessary quality of good sportsmanship.

the latter part of this year, or, at the very latest, the beginning of 1939, by which time it is believed that construction will be far enough advanced so that students of San Francisco Junior College will at least be able to attend classes in a buliding that they can call their own.

PGE ROOMS FOR COLLEGE STUDY OPEN TOMORROW

If present plans materialize as expected the library and study hall in the Pacific Gas and Electric Company building on Sutter Street near Powell will open tomorrow, according to Paul M. Pitman, assistant to President Cloud.

Painting, carpentry, and finishing touches should be completed today, and the rooms ready for use tomorrow. The rooms are located on the seventh floor, not the eighth floor as previously reported to The Guardsman. The room numbers are 726, 727, and 728. There is room for about 40 students. Members of the faculty will rotate in acting as supervisors of the latest addition to the college.

The new library will consist of periodicals, fiction, and duplicate sets of reference works. In place of the material removed from the Powell Street branch of the library new books that have been purchased and are now being cataloged will be made available for student use.

"The new library and study hall," Pitman said, "will be for students who want to study in a quiet place. Students who want to browse will now have an opportunity to do so. Faculty members on duty will be glad to consult with any students that desire same."

The expansion of the library is a result of the growth of the college. The new branch is a minute's walk from the Extension Division building, and marks the fifth building to be added to the increasingly scattered college.

WAA Managers To Be Elected Next Week To Plan Activities

Nominations of managers for the various WAA sports, which began January 26, will continue to Friday, February 4. Although class nominations have been completed, final selection which is determined by the WAA council, has not been made. Both Freshman and Sophomore women are eligible to be nominees, although Sophomore women are given a preference. After nominees have been approved by the council, election of the managers will be held, on February 9, 10, and 11.

Managers are expected to arrange extra activities, keep records of participants and attendance, and at the end of the semester, turn in to the WAA council a complete record of all events held during the semester.

Closely following election of managers, will be the semi-annual WAA orientation, initiation luncheon. Although the exact date has not been decided upon, it has been tentatively set for the second week in February.

National Rifle Association Memberships To Be Offered In Rifle Group Competition

Six gratis memberships to the National Rifle Association will be given by the college Rifle and Pistol Club to the winners of a competitive handicap match to be held soon, according to a decision handed down recently by Coach William H. Hancock, shooting mentor and range officer of the college.

Hancock's decision followed the overwhelming affirmative vote of the club, last week on this resolution. Membership in the National Rifle Association includes many benefits and privileges, it was pointed out by club members, and free membership represents a considerable cash saving.

MANY PRIVILEGES

"Any shooter or prospective shooter who intends doing any amount of shooting in the future will find an NRA membership indispensible," reiterated Hancock. "Also, one cannot buy a weapon from the government for shooting purposes or compete in any NRA match for awards without membership in that organization. This includes, of course, all intercollegiate matches."

Handicaps to be given will be determined by Hancock himself and will be exacted probably upon the shooter's record. The only qualification for entrance in this match is membership in the Rifle and Pistol Club of the college. Students interested only in the handicap match may enter the club for that purpose without any further attachment, if they so choose.

DATE NOT SET

Although the exact date for the match has not yet been set, it will probably take place next month over a period of several days, competitors firing when they have time.

Any student interested should contact any officer or member of the club or else come to the shooting range in the Galileo basement after 4:30 o'clock any day but Wednesday. Any college student may join and teaching and coaching will be given everyone, it was said.

30-CALIBRE

"Shooting with the 30-calibre rifle will begin soon for Rifle and Pistol Club team members," Hancock also said. However, only those whom he believes have achieved proficiency with the small-bore-rifle will be eligible for this new course, Hancock pointed out.

Practice will be held on the range of the Palo Alto Gun Club on the peninsula, and the 30-calibre rifles of the Rifle and Pistol Club will be used. Hancock himself will do the coaching as he has had much experience in that line in the California National Guard, having won national recognition for his firing in the last few years.

DEADLINE NEAR; POET PRIZES ANNOUNCED

Prospective contributors are reminded that the final deadline for all matter to be submitted to "First The Blade" is set for next Wednesday, February 7, 1938. Manuscripts should be addressed, "First The Blade," Mills College, California.

Latest press releases from Mills College announce the list of prizes for the "First The Blade," anthology of student verse, sponsored by the California Intercollegiate Fellowship of Creative Arts, which will be issued by Mills College in the spring of 1938. The prizes, as announced by the English Club at Mills, will include the Ann Bremer Prize of $25 donated by Albert M. Bender of San Francisco to be given to the outstanding poem submitted to the anthology; second prize is $10; third prize is two books of verse.

Special prizes which will be awarded for the best poem in the groups listed, are as follows: sonnet, $10; narrative, free verse, blank verse, lyric, and French verse forms, $5 each.

The anthology was founded at Fullerton Junior College in 1927, and has been published at a different college, each succeeding year since that date.

Any undergraduate student registered during the scholastic year of 1937-1938 in a California university, college, or junior college is eligible as a contributor.

For the benefit of persons desirous of contributing to the anthology, the contest rules are as follows reprinted from last week's issue of The Guardsman:

1. All poems must be the original work of the contestants or original translations of ancient classics.

2. Five copies of each poem, typed on separate sheets, are to be submitted. One side of the sheet only should be used.

3. To be considered for one of the special prizes, each poem must name the type in which it belongs.

4. Manuscripts should contain no identifying mark, but must be accompanied by a sealed envelope with, on the outside, the title and first line of each poem submitted, and on the inside, the name and college of the contributor together with a certification from a college official that the author is a regularly enrolled undergraduate student for the year 1937-1938.

5. February 7, 1938, is the closing date for contributions to the contest.

Trees Topple As Work Progresses On Building Site

Tract At Balboa Park Being Cleared of Obstructions; Grading Operations Begin

Long-deserted Balboa Park was the scene of hectic activity last week, as tractors rumbled and rolled over the uneven hillsides, uprooting the majestic eucalyptus trees which for years and years have towered unmolested over the barren tract, and clearing the ground in preparation for the foundations for the first building of San Francisco's new junior college plant. The denuding of the land was the first step toward the erection of the building which, when completed, will house the students of the institution which has, for three long years, wandered from one part of the city to another in search of a campus.

A wilderness of grass, trees, and crumpled buildings since long before anyone ever dreamed of a junior college, the desolate acres are being transformed with all possible speed into a site suitable for the construction work which is scheduled to begin in the near future. One of the major obstacles in the way of the workmen is a large tank, or cistern, of concrete, which must be filled in during the course of operations. Partially filled already by the trunks of fallen trees, the remainder must be filled in with dirt.

TREES BURNED

Smoke darkened the air from a number of fires which were built to dispose of the brush and undergrowth which was chopped down by brawny men with axes, the minions of the Sibley Construction Company, which holds the contract for the preparation of the site. Other men dashed thither and yon with saws and hatchets, chopping busily at logs and dismembering the last remnants of the once-mighty monarchs of the forest, fallen victim at last to the irresistible march of progress.

As The Guardsman went to press, no word was available as to the awarding of the contract for the construction of the buildings. The contract awarded the Sibley Company calls only for the clearing and leveling of the site, and some other firm of contractors must undertake the work of actually erecting the buildings.

That a conflict of dates had made it necessary to switch the next college dance from February 19 to February 21, was announced by Norma Parent, Associated Students and Social Committee head late last week.

Miss Parent said that the dance was to be given in honor of the High Freshman class and would be held in the Colonial Ballroom of the Hotel St. Francis.

"Because of our inability to obtain the Veteran's War Memorial at all during the month of February," Miss Parent said, "we decided to postpone our informal until March and hold our second semi-formal on the twenty-first. there will be no classes the next day which is Washington's Birthday, so we expect to have a large crowd.

"Frank Verducci, High Freshman president and his officers are assisting the Social Committee with plans for the dance," she continued. "Admission as usual will be one student body card per couple and we urge all women to wear formals instead of street clothes as the dance is being held at a hotel."

HOTEL STUDENTS SHIVER AT MEATY MEET

Restaurant Division Class Visits Meat Storage Plant

"Brr—isn't it cold? Where are my mittens? Poddon me, I dodd a code in my node." Remarks such as these could very easily be bandied about by the college students who attend class in an ice-box—yes, an ice-box.

Every Saturday morning from 10:00 to 11:00 o'clock, 15 brave souls may be found in a refrigeration machine at 828 Brannan Street with the thermometer reading thirty-five degrees. Just in case you are in a maze, they are students in Chris Saranti's meat cutting class, which has been inaugurated this semester by the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division.

Through the cooperation of Scheitzer and Company local wholesale distributers for Moffatt Meat Company, students from the hotel group are given experience in meat cutting. Various uses and cuts of the essential protein are demonstrated. At the Moffatt establishment the students are able to view and examine all types, grades and classifications of cow, lamb, pork, beef, and steer. As the semester advances and their skill increases the students will be required to demonstrate the art of meat cutting.

With the proposed referendum on war as the subject for discussion, the first assembly of the year will be held this morning at eleven o'clock in the Powell Street Lecture Hall. Featuring the conclave will be representatives from bay region colleges who will present their viewpoints on the Ludlow resolution. The meeting is being sponsored by the College Debating Society, Forum Club and Peace Society and is under the direction of Lloyd Luckmann, forensics instructor.

As The Guardsman went to press, replies had been received from the University of California, Marin Junior College, and the University of San Francisco. Wesley Hershey will come from California, John Downs from San Francisco; Marin did not state who its representative would be. While no answers in response to Luckmann's invitations had been received from Stanford, Santa Clara, St. Mary's San Francisco tSate, and Menlo and San Mateo Junior Colleges, it is expected that these institutions will send speakers without formal replies.

DEBATERS ON TAP

In the event that the aforementioned colleges do not send students or there are enough speakers present, Luckmann will have on tap members of Phi Rho Pi, the College Debating Society, to argue the pros and cons of having the people decide the question of declaring war.

Archibald J. Cloud, president of the college, will preside; he will be introduced by Fred Vast, Forum chairman. If the hour alloted for the assembly is not filled by the student speakers, the audience will participate in an open forum for the remainder of the period, Luckmann indicated.

"I hope" Luckmann said," that the program will be a success and pave the way for future meetings of a similar nature where the students of this college can have an opportunity to get the various slants on a subject of public interest.

"The purpose of today's assembly," he continued, "is to bring public debating to the Powell Street 'campus' and to demonstrate the contribution of public discussion to intelligent citizenship. It emphasizes the importance of the WHY of public speaking rather than the HOW. The confab will also serve to stimulate thought on the social problems of our day. It also becomes a clearing house for prejudices and eliminates them."

ISSUE CONTROVERSIAL

The question of a war referendum came to the force early this year when Representative Ludlow introduced a resolution into the United States House of Representatives calling for a constitutional amendment to provide for a popular vote before Congress could declare war to be fought on foreign soil. In case of a defensive conflict or invasion, the resolution provided that the people would be expected to enter into hostilities without balloting. Congress defeated the proposal on January 10, 1938, but widespread discussion on the matter has continued.

Because of the continued interest in the question Luckmann thought it would be pertinent to have an assembly and give students all sides of the controversy. Phi Rho Pi, the Peace Society, and the Forum Club then agreed to sponsor the assembly because it would serve the interests of all three organizations. It promotes forensics, student discussion, and consideration of a problem involving peace.

AWS, WAA JOIN STATE-WIDE MEETING

Representatives of both the AWS and WAA organizations plan to attend the annual AWS and WAA convention, to be held at Chico State College, on April 1 and 2. Throughout the state, junior colleges and state colleges send delegates to this convention at which women officers discuss problems pertinent to college women's organizations.

Although final selection has not been made as to who shall attend, it is known that the junior college will be represented by three AWS officers and two officers of the WAA. Margaret Dougherty, woman's adviser and Vera Spencer, sponsor of the WAA, are faculty members who plan to accompany the student officers.

An invitation to attend the convention was sent to Margaret Dougherty by Idell Christopher, AWS president, at Chico State college, which is acting as hostess college for this year's meeting.

At the request of Miss Christopher, Barbara Randall, AWS president here, submitted several questions which were interesting and vital to present women's organizations at college. The questions dealt with whether the AWS should collaborate with the AMS in co-educational schools or remain a separate unit, what type of affairs the AWS should give during a semester, what the AWS can do in orienting new women students, and whether the AWS should take active part in advising women students or should leave advising to college instructors.

AWS officers for the spring semester are: Barbara Randall, president; Jane Mitchell, secretary; Annabelle Benson, vice-president; and Miriam Dinner, treasurer. WAA officers are: Dot Canavan, president; Dot Sanderson, secretary; Gail Hanna, vice-president; and Ellen Cumming, treasurer. Barbara Randall, AWS president, and Dot Canavan, WAA president will no doubt be among the women selected to go to Chico. The remaining women will be selected from other officers of the two groups.

President's Nation Wide Ball Praised

Citizens of San Francisco joined with the nation in the annual celebration of the President's Birthday, at the monster ball which was held last Saturday evening, January 29, 1938, at the Exposition Auditorium.

The yearly fete, marking the birthday of President Franklin D. Roosevelt and which also serves to carry on the endless fight against infantile paralysis, was acclaimed by the huge number of people who were in attendance as the most successful of the affairs yet held.

Stars of the stage, screen, and radio were on hand to regale the merrymakers with a splendid program of entertainment. San Franciscans poured many thousands of dollars into the coffers of the campaign which is seeking to extend the battle front in the war on the dreaded malady.

Proceeds of the Ball will be turned over to the leaders in the national campaign, nine-tenths being retained in the community to carry on the local fight against the disease, while the remaining tenth will be sent, to the President's own project, The Warm Springs Foundation in Georgia.

Council Approves Budget; To Study New Constitution

With the approval of the college budget and discussion of a skeleton constitution as the main business of the day, the Executive Council of the college held its third meeting last Friday afternoon, January 28.

Turning the council into a quasi-committee of the whole for the first ten minutes of the meeting, President Don Mix read a proposed preamble to the constitution and asked for suggestions from the floor. After a brief discussion, it was decided to provide council members with copies of Mix's skeleton constitution so that they could read it over and have suggestions ready for the next meeting.

Immediately following this discussion, it was moved to dispense with regular committee reports and turn at once to the budget which was read to the council by Edwin C. Browne, college Activities Director and Dean of Men.

After deliberation, the council decided against awarding the Peace Council fifteen dollars to be used for publicity purposes on the grounds that such action would bring about dissension among other organizations that do not receive any money from the college.

After a decision was made to add ten dollars to the Rally Committee budget and increase the income of Jack Schmale, college publicity man to fifty dollars per month, the budget was passed and the meeting adjourned.

A complete copy of the approved budget appears on page four of The Guardsman.

COLLEGE ALUMNI TO HOLD FORMAL MEETING THURS.

Galileo Gathering Joins Former Students, Grads In Lasting Fellowship

Coming to life after a long period of tentative plans, the Alumni Association of the college will meet tomorrow night at Galileo. Composed of "old-timers" and graduates of former semesters, the Association is primarily a social one, designed to keep alive the acquaintanceships of college days among former students. The meeting tomorrow will be the first official one to follow organizational gatherings, hoped by the officers of the organization that the membership will be well represented.

Time of the meeting will be 7:30, announced the president of the Association, Pete Jambruno, at which time the business of the group will be attended to. President Jambruno emphasized the fact that any new members are welcome to attend, and that anyone is eligible for membership who has graduated from the college or has completed 28 units of work before leaving. It is not necessary to have formally graduated to become a member, and anyone who has transferred to a higher institution is eligible.

The Association, which now boasts a membership of about 300, was formed last June, and has as its officers Pete Jambruno, president, Ruth Johnson, vice president, Bob Sisco, treasurer, and Gordon Sollman, secretary.

One of the more important matters to be taken care of at tomorrow's meeting is the formation and acceptance by the members of a constitution, on which a vote will be taken. Committees will also be chosen during the course of the meeting, and plans for the many activities in prospect will be discussed.

Fewer Rallies Rule Of Administration Explained By Adams

Fewer rallies for this semester is the new ruling made by the administration, according to yell leader Stan Adams.

"The number of rallies this semester will have to be cut down," says Adams. "In the past we have run over our quota of assemblies, and those in charge have asked us to lessen the number of rallies for they interfere with our studies. We will have to change our plans somewhat to coincide with this new arrangement.

"Entertainment for the rallies that we do have will be provided by the Rally Committee which has been selected and which will meet regularly in a definite place and time. In having the Rally Committee well formed this semester, we will be able to present more finished programs. As we have more time between the rallies to prepare the various entertainment, it will be possible for us to "polish up" the different numbers. In the past we had very little time to prepare the program the way a college rally should be planned," Adams declared.

Speaking of the rally held last Friday afternoon in honor of the then approaching game with Marin, Adams said that he was more than gratified with the splendid attendance.

"It was really swell," he said, "to see the auditorium packed to the door with enthusiastic students who weren't afraid to let loose and yell when a yell was called for. If this is an indication of the interest and spirit inherent in Ram rooters, there is no reason why we can't look forward to a successful semester of activities."

East Bay Students Warned To Conform With Regulations

Eastbay students and others employed in the National Youth Administration who do not have their residence in San Francisco must be sure, in filling out time slips, to indicate the name of the city or town where they live or where they are receiving their checks. Many checks have been lost in the mail because students failed to do this.

Time slips will be due February 18, which is Friday, and should be in by 5 o'clock. Helene Turner will take the slips in the afternoon in room 211 at Galileo. No slip will be accepted over the week end or the next week. Loss of pay will result if slips are not in on time.

SAME OLD STORY

The following editorial answers a letter sent to the Ram's Horn. The letter was considered by the editor to be of sufficient importance that it be discussed in these columns. Although himself familiar with the situation, the editor consulted the one person whom he felt qualified to view the matter thoroughly. This editorial, therefore, was contributed by former editor of The Guardsman, William Rawson.

Long matters of common discussion and dissension, certain complaints against the Associated Student organization and officers have been set forth in a letter to the Ram's Horn, published in today's paper.

Although every one of the nine items could easily stand an editorial by itself, only brief answers are permitted here. In the same order found in the letter, the answers are as follows:

1. The president, vice president, secretary, and yell leader are elected by the entire associated student body, (at least every student has the privilege of voting) therefore, must be at least partially representative thereof. That certain class and other representatives may misrepresent the electorate is the fault of the individual, not of the organization.

2. The early Athenian government boasted one of the few perfect democracies ever known. Every citizen gathered to vote on every issue and thus was complete representation accomplished. In this college, whenever a meeting of the entire student body has been called for constitutional revision or amendment, the turnout has been the same found in elections—about 18 percent.

In other words, the greater majority of students does not care one bit whether or not it is represented or how.

(The parts of Athens erected by that "perfect democracy" has been no more than crumbling ruins for quite some centuries.).

3. They do not read the paper.

4. THEY DO NOT READ THE PAPER.

5. Too true.

6. These bums definitely should be ejected. It is generally understood that the Rally Committee, or some such group, is going to improve this situation. Such talk from such groups, however, has been heard since the college's first rally, and the deplorable situation still exists.

7. Who calls all these people either progressive or intellectual except themselves? It is to be feared that they are far less representative of the average student than the average normal but athletically inclined individual.

8. The students themselves elect the leaders. If they show such scanty interest in elections that inefficient officers can be railroaded into office, they have no right to complaints arising from acts—or lack of acts—of the officers.

9. By whom? Probably right, however.

Little sympathy can be accorded those who make such complaints as those which prompted the above answers, until such time as the complainants can truthfully say that they did their best to nominate worthy candidates for offices, voted for them, gave them a chance through support, and—have read and understood the constitution of the Associated Students, which, incidentally, was accepted by a suposed mass meeting of the entire associated student group, a meeting appropriately announced and heralded, and characteristically attended and handled.

MEETINGS ARE OPEN!

(Executive Committee meetings are held every Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in room 257, Galileo)

Very few students take an interest in their government, much less ever attend an Executive Council meeting. It is no wonder then, that there have been many charges against the ruling body.

These charges will continue until all students take an active part in their own government, and thereby aid in eliminating the defects, or in shattering the illusions if the fault be only imaginary.

The Executive Council can not always know the wants and wills of the students at large unless representatives of those groups not regularly represented on the council attend its meetings to voice their opinions.

Unless they do this, members of the council, being subject to common human weaknesses, will tend to favor the particular groups responsible for their positions.

Again, let it be repeated: Executive Council meetings are held every Friday at 2:30 p. m., in room 257, Galileo.

FRED VAST

LEST YOU FORGET!

DESPITE many repeated and usually wholly unappreciated warnings, there are always a goodly number of light-hearted students who view approaching mid-terms with a deplorable attitude of nonchalance.

Mid-term examinations are given for a two-fold reason; first, to give the instructor a line on what the student is doing, and second, to give the student a line on what HE is doing.

Trite as it may sound to the general student body, one goes to college to learn. One cannot learn unless one studies. Unless one can learn one cannot pass the required number of units and therefore should leave college.

No one can do your learning for you. It's strictly up to you. Turn down a few parties and hit the books.

And don't forget, it pleases the folks at home!

CHRONIC MOANERS

Intelligent and well-dressed criticism is a proved factor in a good many successful ventures. Many times a thing fails because there were no dissenting voices in its administration.

However, many a worthy cause has been heckled and brow-beaten through its embryonic stage by the harpies who delight in scathing remarks, directed at something, which nine times out of ten, they know nothing about.

There are in the world today, unfortunately, types of critics who are neither qualified nor competent to pass judgment on the things they seek to up-root.

These self-centered individuals usually do nothing constructive toward remedying what may actually be an undesirable situation, but are content merely to retard honest improvement with their idiotic suggestions.

How much more pleasant the world would be for those who really desire to accomplish something, if society could find some effectual way of muzzling the chronic "gripes."

Since perfection is never achieved and rarely approached, it is probable that future generations will continue to stagger under the weight of unneccessary criticism.

Editorials and signed articles in The Guardsman reflect the opinions of the writer; they make no claim to represent official student or College opinion. All unsigned editorials are by the editor.

COLLEGIANA

A member of the San Francisco Junior College faculty has observed that there seems to be a fairly general tendency on the part of college freshmen to become rather boisterous in their exaggerated efforts to act the part of a "collegian."

The public usually pictures college students in about the light they are portrayed on the cinematic screen, and their resulting impressions are anything but flattering to the general run of our college students.

Strangely enough, first year students are not wholly to blame for this state of affairs. True, freshmen, in their attempt to become a part of their new college life, sometimes carry their conduct beyond the bounds of common sense, but they are to be helped only by a tolerant and sincere course of advisory action. Often times the crudest and therefore the most noticeable "clowns" in our colleges are upper classmen who have never matured and probably never will, simply because they either haven't the native intelligence, or they have never had the proper encouragement and mental training.

It must be remembered, if one MUST judge his fellows, that perhaps everyone has not had the advantages that the world may shower upon his more fortunate brothers. These individuals should be viewed with a sympathetic attitude rather than one of censure.

If college freshmen "cut up" and sometimes "get in the hair" of their elders, the sage and serious ancients must smile and remember "the days of THY youth."

Men's Club president Don Mix planned a super-colossal Freshman-Sophomore Brawl to be held in the Galileo Gym. The main event was an egg fight in which the spectators were on the receiving end of the eggs.

Rowland S. Miall of England, a student speaker who was in America to take part in an emergency peace campaign, was the guest speaker of the Forum Club in the semester's first assembly. Miall condemned the practice of private manufacture of munitions, and said that national armaments have not brought lasting security in the past, and are even less likely to do so now that weapons of attack have outstripped weapons of defense.

Mental Mutterings

By Fem

Yes indeed, it's March in January and not because we're in love but because our old friend and playmate Spring seems to have sorta crept up on us without so much as sending a telegram. Maybe it's really not Spring, but just our ofen-too-fertile imagination, but it seems that when you can come to school without a coat, walk out to Galileo without freezing your ears off and and stroll down Powell Street and see flower stands full of Violets, China Lillies and that real harbinger of Spring, Daphne, it can't be entirely imagination. Mittens, one of the "musts" of a few weeks ago have been put back into the moth balls and all the girls (and a few of the guys) are blossoming out in a snowy white footwear. Ah, yes, Spring is a-coming' and it makes this old heart feel about ten pounds lighter and even thoughts of approaching midterms can't dampen the enthusiasm.

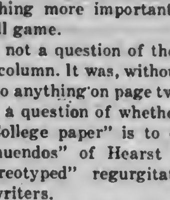
It may be a little late to bring it up, but some things seem to keep and this may be one of them. We mean the story about The Guardsman photographer who had the very embarrassing experience of forgetting that he wasn't working for the Green Flash. It seems that the scoop of the year was near at hand, and this photographer (we never mention names in stories like this) was sent out to the site of the soon-to-be junior college to get some pictures of the men starting work. Tucked into his little bag along with several flash bulbs and other equipment, was a certain very popular young lady about the college. On deadline day in marches our photographer with twelve very lovely photos in the center of which sat, stood, or knelt this aforementioned lovely lady. The Chief blew up! The story of the year and no picture! Quick-like-a-bunny, the picture snatcher was bundled into a staff member's car (minus his lady friend) and hustled out to the site to take the pictures which appeared in last week's paper. The funniest part of the whole incident, however, was the captions the lad had written on the back of each picture. They were a series of titles that would have backed the Rover Boys and Ruth Fielding off the map. For example:

---------- Makes the Wheels Go 'Round!



---------- Adds Life to the Scene.

---------- At Work Starting the New Junior College.

And so forth and so on, and oh, what a headache!

Presidential Notes

By Don Mix

After having spent a tremendously eventful month in office we have decided to take a momentous step—, to propound for the college in particular and the world at large our theories of the duties and underlying philosophy behind the office of Associated Student president. We fully realize that all 1745 members of the college undergraduate group have been waiting with baited breath for this vital proclamation, so in conscience we can withold it no longer.

Since the third of January, we have paraded around the college making futile attempts to apper terribly busy and have also tried so hard to look important. Every other junior college president had looked so busy and important and we hated to be the exception. Finally, however, our conscience has caught up with us and we decided to confess all. Try as we may we can find nothing to keep us very busy or give us a legitimate feeling of importance.

Such being the case we have conceived a comfortable, and we believe perfectly logical, philosophy of student leadership. We decided that perhaps it isn't necessary to keep perpetually busy since our only real duty is that of an overseer, and overseers are notoriously lazy. We aim to be competent, but refuse to work ourselves to a frazzle trying to dupe you poor lads and lassies into believing that we are moulders of destiny or any other such tripe.

We feel that this much discussed mantle of leadership will be a lot more comfortable during these warm spring months if we remove a little of the gold braid. In case you're wondering, this dribble is an attempt along those lines, my people.

CABBAGES AND KINGS

By Dick Simpers

SPURRED on to greater efforts by the announcement that a fund of $1,000,000 has been established to put deserving journalists through Harvard, we seize our pencil between blistered fingers and plunge once more into the production of flawless prose for the edification of the multitude. Who knows, perhaps some philanthropic millionaire may even now be hovering nearby.

JUST TOO BAD

The polishing off in Spain recently of a number of Americans who had made it their business to go busybodying around and fighting for the Loyalist army has aroused considerable moaning and sympathetic tsktsking among some of the more softhearted local gentry, who maintain that it is a dirty shame and very much too bad that this government should allow such goings-on. Said gentry are simply wasting their sympathy. Any American who is fool enough to go poking into a fight in which he has absolutely no concern deserves whatever he may get. By fighting under foreign colors, he automatically forfeits whatever claim he may have to the protection of the United States, and this government would be well-advised to keep hands off of the whole mess, rather than run the risk of becoming enmeshed in effairs which are liable to result in considerable unpleasantness.

INCIDENTALLY

Today, in case you weren't aware of the fact, happens to be Candlemas Day, also known as Groundhog Day. If you look in this evening's papers you will undoubtedly run across a jolly story about the groundhog coming out to look for his shadow, or some such rot. This is a subject on which editors never tire of running jolly stories. In fact, many editors look forward to Groundhog Day all year in anticipation of a jolly story. Just why there is such a day and why it should be of interest to anyone is rather vague—it seems to have something to do with the weather. Nevertheless, we have given you the information at its face value, and you are welcome.

This is not supposed to be a jolly story.

TO BE OR NOT TO BE

Quite a furore was created the other day on Powell Street when Student Potentate Don Mix, bulging with philsophical lore, persisted in arguing the point of whether or not we really exist.

The rotund executive persisted stoutly in his contention that all this hurly-burly existence is merely a figment of the imagination, and that we are really, to quote him, "things floating around in space." All arguments to the contrary were met with the defiant demand "prove it," and no one could. Still, it's rather a disquieting thought. Who wants to float around in space? How can one have a good time if he knows that he's not really having a good time but is imagining the whole thing? Why bother to write all this stuff, it it's only imaginary and the readers are non-existent (Say, there may be something in that!). Anyway, we'll take vanilla.

RAM'S HORN

PRESS, STUDY HALL, GO'VT. FOO-ED!!

To the Editor:

"Many a time and oft" have I hoped that fate would lift its lead heavy thumb and allow the "Guardsman" to come to life.

At the beginning of this present semester a regime took over our journal; shook it severely, and finally thinking it would be best to pursue a more tactful attitude, tried breathing into its fifty six point nostrils the breath of life.

On the surface, it must be admitted, The Guardsman has been altered. The ultra sensational bye of the front page has been eliminated to a pleasing degree. Bpt, my dear "Mister Editor" this was a false alarm of the most odiferous water.

The last issue The Guardsman topped its seemingly never-to-be-equalled folly by eliminating the only cultural column in the whole paper. A case of a modern Ruth in alien and very hostile corn. The rest of the staff and you Mister Editor, most of all were not at ease. It was apparent that the subject matter of this linoleum had no place in a "college paper." It is quite evident, therefore, that you believe culture to be out of place in a "College paper." You are giving the college the outward appearance of a conglomerate mass of barbarians who can think of nothing more important than a football game.

It is not a question of the quality of the column. It was, without doubt, equal to anything on page two.

It is a question of whether or not the "College paper" is to echo the "insinnuendos" of Hearst and the "hystereotyped" regurgitations of hack writers.

It is a question of whether or not The Guardsman is going to experience a "second spring," and when life does come, let us hope that it will not be of the nature of the "false dawn," nor that Fate, when lifting her thumb from the neck of The Guardsman will not let it come to rest on the tip of her proboscis, as it did with this present, shortlived, false dawn.

Henry Evans

Ed's. Note: (wearily) Ho Hum . . .

Dear Mr. Editor:

We pride ourselves (sometimes) by having established the precedent of making little trans-campus jaunts with our ears open and mouths shut. So, it is this precedent which is responsible for this "blow in the Ram's Horn."

Our receptive ears intercepted certain words which implied that student affairs are controlled by a "bunch of athletes" and other unacademic souls.

Before we could demand proof, the exposeers enumerated these statements, startling or otherwise:

1. The government of the Associated Students is undemocratic because not only does it misrepresent the student body, but the majority is not even represented.

2. Present representation is not only incomplete, but it is disproportionate. Each vote on the executive council, for instance, is considered equal, yet each representative represents groups of students ranging from 12 to 500 in number.

3. Ninety percent of the student body does not know who are its class officers and representatives.

4. Usually no one knows when a class meeting or rally is held until after the meeting or the day after.

5. Too often the executive has fallen back on the unfortunate but well-worn excuse of the disunity of the campi. Three years of this condition should have developed some adaptability.

6. Rallies are controlled not by the student president, but by ill-bred vocal disturbances emanating from a mass of equally ill-bred rowdies who regularly contaminate assemblies and lead directly to their ridiculous downfall.

7. Groups composed of progressive intellectuals, such as the Forum Club, Economics, Peace Society, Honor Society, have no representation on the ex council.

8. Student body officials look to the student body for suport, but fail to show many qualities of leadership.

9. Overwhelming stress is put on athletics, when we should realize that success for a college is more dependent on intellectual development.

Well, Mr. Editor, such discussions were a blow to our loyalty, and, should we meet the speakers again, what shall we tell them?

E. Rehbock.

Note: There is no need to tell a self-styled intellectual anything, for he is already sure that he knows all. If you want editorial reaction, however, read it in the editorial column—Ed.

Dear Editor:

—This morning, while attempting to study in our so-called study hall at our Powell Street institution, an incident occured which made me ask myself this question, "Am I attending a junior college or am I attending a junior high school?"

It seems that the present conditions under which one attempts to study are a farce. One is always being interrupted by incidents which disrupt one, such as the playful attempts of helping our present lighting conditions and persists in attempting to regulate and improve these conditions by turning the lights off and on.

I'm not trying to be a "kill-joy" or the like, but if the study hall is for the purpose of study, let's study! If it is for the purpose of having a good time I'll be the first to join the ranks of the funsters and get in on the ground floor. —"Wondering?"

Ed's. Note:

It must be admitted that the situation is as described, but you no doubt know that it must be remedied by the students themselves. We wish someone would suggest a course of student action.

* * *

Editor:

I should like to use the Ram's Horn to thank the administration and those members of the faculty who made it possible to have a quiet place in which to study, namely: rooms 726-728 in the P. G. and E. building.

Those students who work and have little time outside of school to study are more than grateful for this added opportunity so readily conceded by the kindly efforts of the faculty.

To show their appreciation, these reference and study rooms will be used to their full advantage, and students are more than willing to be compliacent to study rules.

OUT OF THE FOG

By Mac

Currently going the rounds is a mysterious something referred to as "the list." It seems that everyone wants to know if so-and-so's on "the list."

Taking it upon our foggy selves to do a bit of investigating on the matter, we gleaned the following facts. No one seems to have any definite idea as to what the advantages, if any, are to being on "the list." Now this is a sad state of affairs. We feel that if there is to be a "list," it should carry some honor, no matter how dubious.

Appointing ourselves a columnar committee, existing for the prime purpose of conceiving and publishing "a list" which might have some point, we break forth with the following:

THE LIST

"Furface" Pasquellette—wants to be a public address system.

Stan Adams—still wants to learn to DIVE.

Frances Kosta—wants a "dirt column."

Jerry Flamm—wants the title; "World's Champion Playboy."

Irv Amstrup—wants to be called an "Executive."

Merv Weiner—wants any kind of publicity.

Joe College—wishes the Freshmen year were three years long.

A certain columnist—wishes he could write.

"Stooge" McGillicuddy — "so what!"

"Goldy" Mine—hopes the price of gold will go higher.

And so on indefinitely. We're sure we have left out any number of deserving people, but a dead-line approaches, and our spy system is, as yet, still unperfected. More next week.

* * *

Sadly enough, as we go to press, we find that very few "dirt" column enthusiasts bothered to turn in one of the little ballots which we provided for their convenience last week. Let's get this thing straight now. As we see it, people want a gossip column, but they won't take the trouble to let us know about it. Come on! Write in or make it official in some way. We are prepared to bow to the inevitable, if the inevitable demands a "dirt" column. Let us know!

"The brain is a wonderful organ. It starts working the moment you get up in the morning and does not stop until you get to school!" —Pomona Chronicle

Now there's a thought. Probably that accounts for the difficulty one encounters in trying to stay awake in an eight o'clock class. Instructors please note.

From Hell to Heaven's Gate;
There's nothing so smooth as a woman's guile,
Or grim as a woman's hate.
No airs so gay as when women meet,
(Nor jealousy so green)
Nothing sweet as a woman is sweet—
And nothing so doggoned mean!
—Indiana Statesman

Maybe it isn't entirely true, but it's neatly said anyway.

"Just think," the coed shyly murmured, "Dan tried to put his arms around me four times last night!"

"My Gosh!" we replied, "what an arm!"

She was only a fisherman's daughter, so when the boys came around, she "reeled."

I took her to a night club
I took her to a show
I took her almost everywhere
A girl and boy could go.
I took her to swell dances,
I took her out to tea,
When all my dough was gone
I saw
She had been taking me.

DON'T FORGET THE GAME AT KEZAR FRIDAY

THE GUARDSMAN SPORTS

BOWLING BOYS TEMPORARILY BAFFLED! FOO!

SACRAMENTO NEXT FOE

RAMS INVADE CAPITAL TONIGHT; PANTHERS JOURNEY HERE FRIDAY

First of Two Game Series Starts Tonight As Conlan Takes Troupe North; Panthers Come Here Friday; Both Games Start at Eight O'clock

By JACK SCHMALE

For reasons "strictly conferential" Louis "Dutch" Conlan and his Ram hoopsters will trade trips with the Sacramento Junior College quintet this week.

Tonight finds the locals invading the Capitol City for the first half of the two-game series, with the Panthers returning the gesture by pointing toward the big city and the second contest Friday eve at Kezar Pavilion.

Eight o'clock, incidentally, has been set as tip-off time for both of the court engagements, which will figure prominently in the standings of the current Northern California Conference circuit.

Sacramento, if you'll believe the Sacramentans, this season boasts one of the strongest teams in the history of the school. That is a fact we cannot deny, not being acquainted with the Panthers' basketball historian, who MUST be an efficient historian, as historians go.

It might be well, however, for the originator of the expression to take in a little more territory in his researches of Sacramento Junior College basketball history, for a Solon roster reveals the home ports of several Panther stars as South Dakota, Iowa and Berkeley. They are Ernie Jacobs, Linn Wilde and Dean Cox, to whom a trip to San Francisco cannot possibly offer much in the way of excitement.

VETERAN TEAM

Del Dickinson and Bob Forbes will impress you as a pair of pretty good forwards, since they were mated at that position on last year's Panther five. Captain Johnnie Colla and Len Campbell, also veterans, check in as first string guards, while the frosh are represented by Bill Borcher, center.

They have a guy named Jim Addy playing forward, and another labeled Jack Adee cavorting at guard, and unless one was a typographical error in the College newspaper, there's a fine coincidence for you. And girls—there's a guy named Nelson Eddy—no kidding! He's a sophomore.

RAMS IMPROVE

The Rams, who seem to be clicking a little more smoothly each time out, will probably throw a starting lineup at Sacramento reading something like this: Slattery and Phelan, forwards; Opalinski, center; James and Curcio, guards.

The Sacs from Sac will travel cityward with the following on Friday night, including the college band and all the rooters who have spirit and $1.80, which, we believe is the excursion rate.

The usual preliminary between the junior varsity and an opponent to be named as we go to press is slated for 7 o'clock Friday.

MIXing 'Em Up

By DON MIX

We open up this week feeling humble and contrite of heart. In attempting to predict the potency of the various cage aggregations in the local junior college conference we make a definite error. We blandly announced for the benefit of those who lack our powers of prognostication that the Marin five were probably a nice bunch of kids but it was a cinch that they couldn't play much basketball. Our exact words were, in fact, "Marin is in it for the exercise." Over in the Kentfield Gym last Friday night this would-be representative of the fourth estate was forced to slowly eat that sentence while the Mariners Allen, Hoberg, Smith and company looked on in unrestrained glee. From now on, gentle reader, your guess will be just as good as mine.

* * *

Marin played winning basketball in both games and deserved the victories but we believe that the locals have a legitimate squawk over the fact the Kentfield college only provided one official for the second game of the series. Far be it from us to raise a question as to the degree of Referee Oklberg's blindness but even if he had eyes in the back of his head no one man can efficiently handle the fast brand of basketeering that is produced in the J. C. circuit.

* * *

The baseball performers began their chores yesterday with a goodly turnout of likely looking specimen's giving their all to impress Headman Eisan of their individual potency. We remember that there was considerable individual talent on last year's team, too, but somehow they just couldn't win any games.

* * *

Duke Worsham and Ray Egelhofer, two jewels from our education mill, returned to college in a very disgruntled manner after a very brief sojourn at Fresno State College. It seems that the Raisin City officials failed to recognize that capabilities of our two heroes and instead of installing them in a luxurious frat house, buying them books and paying their tuition, gave them the very unsatisfactory offer of (quoting the Duke) "a hayloft to sleep in and a bag of rice."

The Block "SF" group is making its semi-annual statement of a complete reformation. Same stuff with a new leader, will be the general campus opinion. Perhaps the Cyrano de Bergerac of the college, Jerry Flamm, will be a different president and do something.

* * *

Pass word of the Week, "Was yah on de list, Bub?

* * *

The Damon and Pthyias of the local campi, Elwood Pearce and Wes Olson, are reported as heading for George Washington University next fall. Both Elwood and Captain Wes were first string all-conference grid selections.

Them that has gits.

* * *

After having soundly trounced our basketball lads on the court the Marin performers were forced to admit that the Conlanmen had the edge over them in the jigging that followed the game.

* * *

Short Shots . . . Willie Blackfield's only regret after the Marin game was that he wasn't allowed one more personal foul . . . Crew Coach Gaddy is beaming now that Bob Carotto has returned to the stroke position on the Ram Navy . . . the junior varsity basketballers have a complete schedule against unnamed opponents . . . the proposed swimming team has apparently died of a bad case of apathy . . . and so on infinitum.

Jayvees Win Close Stockton Hoop Tilt

The Junior Varsity in playing the game was handicapped by the fact that they had to play with a seamless basketball for the first time this season. Use of such a ball is an innovation in basketball this year.

Throughout most of the game the Jayvees had complete control, always managing to keep a two or three point lead.

For individual scoring honors, Ray Berns was tops, scoring fifteen points. Roy Sclar, the other sharp shooting forward was next with eight points.

Going to Stockton was the first trip the Jayvees had taken out of this town this season. Although nothing definite has been said, it is rumored they may travel to Sacramento with the varsity when it goes to play Sacramento Junior College.

FUNSTON TURNOUT PLEASES EISAN IN INITIAL PRACTICE

40 Batswingers Report For Session Yesterday and Hustle in Workout

Baseball practice officially opened yesterday at Funston Field with a turnout of 40 aspiring batswingers. Coach Lee Eisan was well pleased with this unusually large group.

The boys showed plenty of hustle in their first workout, and after going through some light exercises, hitting practice began with the lads really smashing the old stiched apricot. Paul Hjort, "Mickey" Berman, "Tip" Hamilton, and Ray Egelhofer looked unusually strong with the willow. These three boys are first basemen and it looks like a great battle for the initial sack. At this writing Berman seems to have the inside track with his classy fielding.

INFIELD LOOKS GOOD

Infielders went through a stiff workout and among the boys who looked good was "Arni" Banta at third base. Banta hails from University High, where he was chosen all-city third sacker for two years. Frank Nilan and Kent Baird put on classy exhibition at the shortpatch. Hugh Waite, who had aspirations of being a pitcher, tried second base and looked good, although a little inexperienced. First base, as was mentioned before will be well taken care of. Joe Aleo, George Seley, and Jim Molich were other infielders who showed to advantage.

JOHNSON TOPS CATCHERS

"Swede" Johnson, veteran, seemed to have the advantage by his experience over the rest of the catchers. Johnson is a smart receiver and should be a big help to this year's mound staff. Barney Viner, Bob Ballum and "Woody" Lennis showed that they will be pushing Johnson for the starting assignment. Viner has had quite a bit of semi-pro experience and looks like a comer. Ballum hails from Texas and although he hasn't played for a year, he should be ready by the time the conference season opens. "Woody" Lennis is a footballer who is a little green but is plenty rugged and a willing worker.

Coach Eisan called his pitchers aside and informed them that they are to take it easy for the first couple of weeks. "Just loosen up your arms," warned Lee. "I don't want any of you to get a sore arm this early in the season."

All men took two laps around the field before calling it a day and going in for their showers.

Junior High Students Consume Much Cake

Students attending Marina Junior High School have quite a sweet tooth if the consumption of cake during the luncheon hour is any indication. They have managed to make 15 cakes, concocted by the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division disappear completely every noon period.

Because of this immediate success of the products of the newly installed bake oven at Marina, the Hotel Division will establish a baking unit which will produce cakes, pies, pastries and such for the Marina and Galileo cafeterias.

Form Keynotes Gaddy's Crew Practice

Considerably strengthened by the return of Bob Carotto, the crew has now settled into the steady grind of practice, concentrating for the most part on form and the fundamentals of oarsmanship, rather than on attempting to break the oars with exhibitions of power.

Coached by Jack Gaddy and last year's coxwain Willy Cordano, the boat has been plying up and down the course and around the harbor while the instructors work on the task of finding a combination that will supply the needed rhythm and power.

Carotto, a last year's veteran, will probably handle the port stroke position. On the port side, Dick Simpers, Don Mix, Lefty Cregi, and Fuzzzy Pasqaulette have shown promise of great accomplishments, while Art Nelson, Merv Weiner, and Carl Brogger appear to be well entrenched in their positions on the starboard.

Co-ordination, a vital factor in a successful crew, is being developed rapidly, and Gaddy has high hopes of winning the regatta on Washington's Birthday, as well as retaining the conference title won by the Rams last year. New oars and uniforms are to be procured, and are expected to be available for the first race, the Washington's Birthday regatta, in which the Ram boat will race against the crews of several other bay region schools.

Facilities for the college track team were finally provided for by college officials last week.

Locker and shower accommodations at Kezar Stadium were arranged for the team and the members are free to use the track and the adjoining showers. The time established for the team to train is in the early part of the afternoon, daily and on Saturday. The only disadvantage is that college students must be out of the locker room by about 2:30 o'clock in order to make way for the afternoon high school basketball players.

This set-up is about the best that can be expected and all concerned are fairly well pleased. The track at Kezar is an exceptional one, being a quarter mile oval it is especially suited for the distance runners as they don't have to run around an excessive number of turns as they would have to on a smaller track.

The broad jump and the pole vault pits are well-known for their fineness as the runways are kept in good shape and the pits are always filled with a jar-resisting material such as sand or sawdust. The boys who are going out for these events will appreciate these good training conditions.

The showers and the locker room are unusually clean and are always kept sanitary by the excellent care that is given them. Lockers have not as yet been provided for, but it is believed that the team will be able to secure them after the basketball season is over.

Training will start in earnest early next week and after things have been going for a while and the boys become accustomed to their new surroundings, it is probable that many new stars will develop and win a position on the team.

Conlan Cage Team Loses Two Games To Marin Troupe

"Scoop" Carlson's Marin "Mariners," who were "in it for the exercise," completely vindicated their reported pre-season incompetency by taking both ends of a conference double-header from "Dutch" Conlan's Red Rams in games held last week.

On Wednesday night, January 26, the Kentfield hoopsters edged out the local talent 46-42 in a thriller at Kezar and then proceeded to wallop them soundly to the tune of 38-22 last Friday at Marin.

RAMS LEAD

In the Wednesday encounter the Rams held the lead throughout the entire first half, leaving the hardwood at the close of the first canto with an 18 to 12 lead.

As the second stanza opened, however, the Marin attack began to click mightily with Bud Smith and Johnny Allen as the chief factors.

With two minutes to play Allen tanked one from way out to tie the ball game at 40-40. Treacy "Harp" Slattery, fiery Ram forward, then executed a classy one hand shot to send the Conlanmen out in front but the ubiquitous Allen was not to be outdone and he repeated his previous performance of long range artistry to tie it again at 42-42.

At this crucial point, with mere seconds remaining, Harold Johnson, Marin guard, broke across the hole to sink the winning two points. Allen then added an unnecessary touch by sinking a "prayer shot" as the gun went off to make the final score 46-42.

The second game of the series saw the performers attempt to add a combined wrestling and grid technique to their basketball tactics. The Mariners were far superior in this type of modified football and literally swamped the Ragged Rams.

Labor Difficulties of Pin Boys Halt Bowling Instruction At Alleys

Temporary suspension of bowling classes was made necessary last week by a strike of the city's pin-boys, who walked out of the alleys and picketed them, demanding higher wages. With no one to set up the pins for them, Joe Amori and his keglers were forced to take a vacation until such time as the bowling alley proprietors and the pin-setters come to an agreement.

Just before the stopping of activity, Amori is reported to have come through a string with the sensational (for him) score of 89. It is said, however, that the instructor is one of the fastest improving bowlers in the section, showing an amazing aptitude for knocking down the maple sticks with the big, black balls.

The best score yet registered in the class was made by Howard Cloud, who completed a string of well over 200, although he fell down to about 115 on the following string. His mark is seriously threatened, however, by such aces as Al Williams, Jerry Flamm, and Dick Simpers, the "human catapult" of the alleys. Out of the 60 or 70 students enrolled in bowling classes, Amori hopes to recruit enough capable players to form a team to be entered in one of the local bowling leagues, preferably one where the company is not too fast.

Arrangements have already been made to enter two quintets in both the West Coast Bowling Congress at San Jose and the Mid-State Tournament at Fresno. Each of these events will take place in May.

WOMAN'S SPORTS PARADE

By JEAN PAGE

Women who haven't been nominated for a WAA managerial position still have a chance for extra WAA activities, through committee work. A sign-up book will posted in the Galileo gym and any woman who wishes to offer her services should do so immediately, for plans will soon be under way for the semi-annual initiation luncheon, to be held during the week of February 14 to 18. It is at this luncheon that Freshman women go WAA officially by signing the membership book. Past luncheons have proved to be one of the most successful social activities, sponsored by the WAA group.

* * *

Now is the time of the nomination of WAA managers.

Several women have been tentatively nominated by each class, although final selections, which rest with the WAA council, have not been made.

* * *

Free expression is the soul of modern dancing, so they say, but also discretion is the better part of valor and when an aspiring beginner, Pickering by name, swoops across a street car and settles down on a cream cake, it's really carrying free expression too far.

* * *

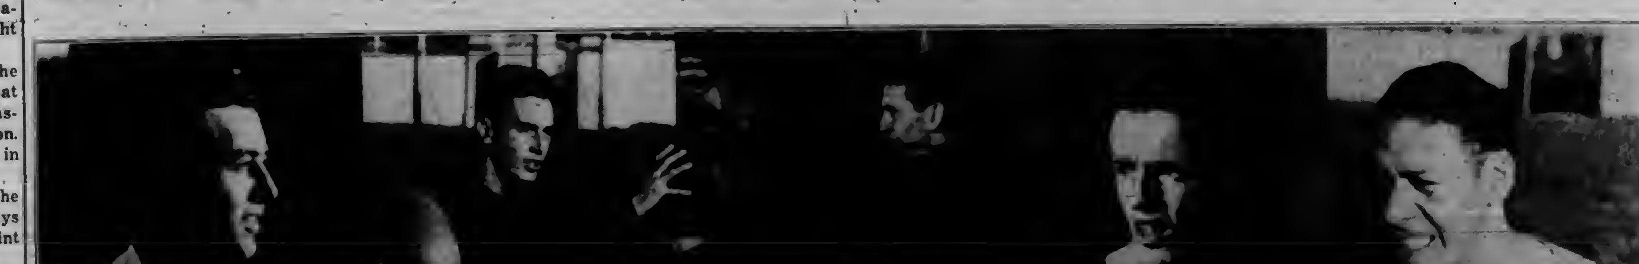
WAA tennis beginners should come at 9 o'clock on Saturday mornings while the advanced players are not due until 9:30 o'clock. This is to give the instructor, Bertha Keller, time to devote exclusively to beginners.

* * *

A new record for something or other was set by members of the latest WAA protege, ice skating, when at the first class meeting, even the beginners flitted lightly across the rink without a downfall of dignity.

* * *

More students are needed in the swimming classes, especially in the advanced and diving class at 12:30, Tuesdays, and Thursdays, and the lifesaving class at 1 o'clock on Tuesdays and Thursdays. A large sum is paid to the YWCA for the privilege of using the pool, and more women will have to enroll to make the continuation of the classes worthwhile.



Announce Saturday Practice In Tennis

Announcing that Saturday mornings are open for tennis team practice, Coach Wilson is hopeful that prospective tennis players will take advantage of this opportunity. The team practices at the Palace of Fine Arts in the Marina from ten to twelve daily. "Those who are unable to attend regular practice during the week because of classes and other difficulties but can practice on Saturday mornings are welcome to try out for positions on the team," said Tom Wilson.

No definite team has been formed as yet, affording ample opportunity to newcomers to try their hand at playing. Last season the college tennis team won its first championship in the Northern California Junior College Conference. Wilson is looking forward to another successful season having several members from last year's team returning. These veterans of conference play are namely, Altfield, Lazare, Ennes and Mitchell.

Sacramento Junior College has dropped from the conference due to the lack of material leaving only Marin, San Mateo and Modesto in the conference, which opens late this month.

MEET DUTCH'S BOYS—THEY WILL MAKE COMEBACK EFFORT

BILL PHELAN, star Ram forward, is one of last year's veterans who will lead the locals in their comeback effort against Sacramento in the series to be held this week.

ED CURCIO, freshman guard, is a trans-bay product who has performed in fine fashion under the Red and White banner. Curcio is noted for his excellent defensive work.

ALEX OPALINSKI, workhorse center, is the high point man of the Ram legions. Besides being an outstanding shot Alex is rated as a capable floorman.

TREACY SLATTERY, colorful forward, has been the spark plug of the team in all their efforts to date. "The Harp" is listed behind Opalinski for top scoring honors.

HENRY JAMES, [illegible] guard, is the smoothest ball handler on the squad and is a vital factor in the team's attack.

By Anne Rabinowitz

Perhaps even this moment, some young rebellious spirit is contemplating a society to "Bring Academics Down to Earth." If so, he will be happy to learn that aviation is one solution.

When an abstract subject fails to create interest, practical application may do much to liven the imagination and encourage ambition. Perhaps that is why the modern trends of aviation are such a boon to instructors of the "hard" courses. Aeronautics embraces a wide range of material including history, geography, arithmetic, algebra, geometry, astronomy, meteorology, materials, methods of construction, mechanics, electricity, and (no foolin') many others.

After her maiden flight from the mainland, the "China Clipper" inspired world-wide attention. The laying of this air line gave teachers an excellent basis for teaching geography and other matters concerning the Pacific!

Arithmetic and physics are blessed tools for the eager student of aeronautics, who develops much general skill and appreciation.

Only a limited number of those interested in aviation will eventually find employment in this line, but not because of a particular scarcity in openings. Many will find the glamor is erased by the daily routine of common duties, and will experience fatigue in repairing machinery. Those in quest of "hero-worship" will have to look elsewhere, for the day is passing when necks are craned at the hum of a plane, with fearful "oh's" and "ah's" filling the air.

Aviation employees, of course, possess skills and other abilities peculiar to the aircraft industry, such as extreme carefulness and dependability. Some individuals offer as reasons for wanting to enter the field: "I have kept our car in good repair," or, "I flew once and like it," and "I'm handy with tools."

Young men who contemplate employment in air lines, have in mind only such work as that done by the pilot, co-pilot, mechanic, and radio operator. Aviation, however, offers a great variety of work that differs little in ability requirements from the same work in other fields. For example, ticket-sellers have a responsibility similar to that of railroad ticket-men.

Flight personnel offers opportunity for pilots, co-pilots, stewards, hostesses, and pursers, while there are at least 50 group occupations under four ground personnel divisions: maintenance, transportation, traffic, and ground officers.

This does not include the non-technical office personnel, engineering personnel, manufacturing personnel, shop workers, factory maintenance, field maintenance department, and personnel and employment.

Information concerning requirements for pilots and co-pilots may be obtained by writing to the Bureau of Air Commerce, Washington, D. C., for a copy of Aeronautics Bulletin No. 7, Air Commerce Regulations, which is distributed free of charge.

Requirements for air line hostesses specify that an applicant must be a graduate registered nurse, (not because nursing is necessary but because nurses are schooled to serve the public!), must be not over 25 years old, and be from 5 feet to 5 feet 4 inches in height, and weigh not over 120 pounds, and possess an outstanding personality.

This column finds it difficult to leave the subject of aviation with so many gaps unfilled, but the "wing-ily" inclined can find a wealth of information, concerning aeronautics (and profits to be found in a profession of constructing model airplanes for large companies) by writing to the address given in a former paragraph, or by visiting the Galileo office of J. Paul Mohr, Registrar. Mohr is the possessor of an inspiring booklet, entitled "Aviation in the Public Schools." After dipping into its pages, we were mighty, mighty tempted to "do a Lindbergh."

Student To Address Hotel Organization

Lawrence Wong, student in the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division, has been invited to address the monthly meeting of the Hotel Greeters Association which takes place February 8. Wong's subject, "San Francisco's Chinatown," will be in conjunction with the Hotel Greeters' campaign to "See America First."

Activities of the Hotel group also include a tour of the National Cash Register Company and plans to attend a showing of a series of educational pictures issued by the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel of New York City. The pictures illustrate correct and incorrect hotel procedure. The pictures were shown at the Mark Hopkins Hotel under the direction of George D. Smith, manager of the local hotel.

Youthful Editor Tells Methods Of Publication

Recently selected editor of the Parkside School paper, Edwin Browne, Jr., son of the college's genial Dean of Men, proves that the lure of news reporting overcomes innumerable handicaps. Asked to describe in detail the steps through which he leads his staff, he fulfilled the request with the following.—The Editor.

BY Edwin Browne, Jr.

First the editors ask the teachers if someone in the class will write about what they have done. The editors gather their papers and hand it to Miss McCrystal to O. K. Then the papers go to the assistant editors and next to the editor in chief. I gather it and separate it according to classes and subjects. Next I typewrite it into columns and paste it to make a dummy copy. Then I take it to the mimeographers and they make the stencils. Then two assistants and I run it through the mimeograph machine, and then we clamp it together. Then we distribute it.

In the first issue we had something about the Clipper Disaster, Pres. Ball, Clean-up Campaign, Music, and Class News.

Rose City Excursion Tickets Go On Sale

Tickets for the coming Santa Rosa-Ram special train excursion, set for Friday night, February 18, will go on sale today at the finance office at Galileo at $1.25 apiece, according to officials in charge of the trip.

The exact time of departure for the Rose City and the Rams vs. Santa Rosa conference basketball tilt has not been agreed upon as yet, but Jack Schmale, college publicity director, and Bernard Harvey of the Northwestern Pacific Railroad have announced that the boat will leave the Ferry Building either at 4:45 or 5:15 o'clock.

Running time for trip is figured roughly at two hours, assuring the student body members time to partake of dinner in Santa Rosa before game time, which is slated for 8 o'clock.

If it is decided to leave at 5:15, however, it is probable that the game will be delayed until 8:15, if the transportation situation in Santa Rosa is not exactly rapid transit.

Returning, it is probable that the train will be waiting on a spur track about 100 yards from the gym. It is planned to leave Santa Rosa at 10 o'clock, arriving back around midnight.

Students desiring to make the trip should make their reservations early, as a minimum of 150 tickets must be sold in order to obtain the $1.25 rate.

Ten Unit Radio Course Enters Second Term

As the only ten unit course in college goes into its second semester, 28 radio engineering students are enrolled, according to Lowell M. Hollingsworth, instructor in charge of the course.

"The course is designed to acquaint students with the principles of radio engineering, and electricity," he said. "We try to keep up with the times as much as possible by working on late model sets."

In addition to doing repair work on radios the students are now learning the Morse Code.

OFFICE ISSUES EDICTS; WARNS OF MED. EXAMS

With the total number of students registered at the San Francisco Junior College reaching the record height of 1750, instructors and students have settled into daily routine after late entrance examinations. Students planning to graduate in May, 1938, must file their petitions on or before February 9, 1938. Wednesday, February 2, is the latest day for removal of incompletes from the previous semester, and also the last day for partial refund of incidental student body dues for approved withdrawals, the registrar's office warned.

The registrar's office is listing the names and appointments of all the men students who have not as yet had their Physical Examinations. These appointments are final and must be kept. Men who have not kept appointments previous to this date will find their names in the following list or one like it in succeeding issues of The Guardsman.

Other entertainment for the evening includes a magic act by Al Williams, singing by Charles Brinkley, and piano playing by Ed Carlson. A women's trio composed of Charlotte Zier, Oreallia Orsland, and Marjorie Cusic will give renditions of popular songs.

The entertainment will follow a brief talk by Father John Scanlon who will explain the purpose and origin of the Newman Club.

Fex expressed the hope that all catholic students in the college would attend the first meeting.

Army-Navy Meets Friday February 7

February 11, the first day of National Defense Week, has been set aside by the members of the Army and Navy Club as the date for their next meeting. Officers of the organization for the present semester are to be elected at the meeting and will be officially installed at an installation and dinner to be held on the following day.

The organization is planning a student assembly, open to the public, to be held in the Lecture Hall at the Powell Street Building on February 18, at 12 o'clock. Arrangements are being made for a military band to furnish music for the assembly. Admiral Hepburn of the twelfth naval district and General Malone will be the guests of the organization and will serve as the speakers for the occasion.

To be eligible for membership in the club, one must have had some military training. James Hughes, faculty adviser to the organization, will furnish information on this subject to any student interested.

HEA To Arrange Japanese Luncheon

Heartened by this semester's large increase in membership, the college HEA intends to arrange a social activity for each month of the spring semester. The date of the Japanese luncheon, which was chosen as February's big event, has been tentatively set for Thursday, February 17, from 12 to 2 o'clock. This date will be especially convenient for club members because it is during the week following the first mid-term period and will not interfere with examinations or study.

Eighteen women have made a payment on tickets for the San Carlos opera, Carmen, on March 10. Those who have not yet signified their intentions of attending the opera, although they wish to do so, should see Hazel Baunton, HEA treasurer, as it may not be too late to obtain a ticket. Membership in the club is still open to women who have taken a course in Home Economics at the college, or are taking such a course at present.

Those enrolled in interior decoration, part of the Home Economics division, have been visiting large department stores and obtaining first-hand experience in decorating, furnishing, and all the necessary attributes of a model home.

Music Club Elects Cusic And Boomer

Elections for secretary and treasurer were held at a meeting of the Music club last week at sponsor Flossita Badger's home. Marjorie Cusic, secretary, and Jean Boomer, treasurer, complete the list of officers headed by President Wesley Pomeroy and Dorothy Redenback, vice-president.

A variety show with "lots of class" according to Wesley Pomeroy will be given later in the term. Members were entertained during the meeting by Marjorie Cusic who sang "Calm Is the Night" and the "Florian Song." Arnold Chapin played two piano solos and George Hoffman sang "Me and My Little Banjo" and an Italian aria "Caro Mio Bien."

Varied Activities On Italian Program

During its first meeting of the semester held yesterday, the Italian Club discussed plans for social events to be given this semester.

The club will play a basketball game with the Maraschi Club of the University of San Francisco in the near future, according to Bill Solari, club president. Manager for the game will be Bob Nico. He will be assisted by Dave Lippi and George Pera.

The group also plans to attend an invitational convention for Italian Clubs sponsored by the University of San Francisco. All students desirous of attending this convention should see Phil Prigioni.

Beta Phi Busy With Pledging

Pledging will command most of the Beta Phi's attention in the next four weeks, according to Hughe Waite, fraternity president. The men who were given rushes to the fraternity will be the ones who participate in this particular instance.

Intense preparations for the dance to be given this semester by the Beta Phi are being made. It is believed that the dance will be presented sometime in the middle of March.

Service Group Holds Conclave

Discussing the method to be employed to raise funds for the annual scholarship award, the Women's Service Society held its semi-monthly meeting at the home of Phyliss Learned, 428 Belvedere. Marion Yager, president of the club, said; "It was very gratifying to have 100 percent attendance at the meeting. At some future date the Society will be the guests of Jane Mitchell and Betty McAllister, members, at an outdoor barbecue to be held in Berkeley.

Luncheon Club

Plans are under way for the organization of a men's luncheon club, according to "Bud" Berliner, low Freshman class president.

Those desiring further information should see Berliner or Jack Schmale.

Phi Mu Gamma To Convene Thursday

Pi Mu Gamma, college medical society, will hold its first meeting tomorrow in room 357 at Galileo.

Members of the organization have had visual education by means of medical films shown for them. For other means of education the club members have planned some field trips to various hospitals throughout the city, and they are conducting physiological experiments, according to Glenn Noble, club adviser. The group also plans to have a medical museum in the new college building.

Marksmen Plan Ice Skating Party

For its first social event of the current semester, the college Rifle and Pistol club, four-score strong, unanimously approved the plans of Vice-President Bill Gibson for an ice-skating party to be held on Thursday evening, February 17.

Even those members who have never been on the ice before are urged to attend, since there are quite a number of veteran skaters in the Rifle and Pistol club to teach, pick-up, or hold hands with the less fortunate.

The party will probably be held at the 48th Avenue rink. Gibson, who is working out the details of rates, and transportation opined that "This rink was chosen because preliminary investigation tells us that our club will be better taken care of here than any other place. Of course rates will be lowest and accommodations the highest."

Gibson also said that additional details will be "worked out" and that definite plans will be announced "this week sure."

German Society To Gather At Smith's

The club will continue rehearsals of the play "Die Kleinen Verwandten" by Thoma which will be directed by Patricia Rogers. There are still several parts to be assigned, any German students who should like to be in the play are invited to attend the meeting.

Keller Hostess At Gym Club Tea

Bertha Mae Keller, Physical Education club sponsor, will be hostess to the club at an informal tea to be given at her home tomorrow.

An informal talk on teaching hints will be given by Mrs. Florence Stevenson, instructor at State College. She will also discuss the activities of the State Physical Education Club.

CAFE STUDENTS PREPARE PLANS FOR NEW HOME

To gain practical experience, students of the Engineering Department of the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division have been designing plans for the cafeteria unit of the new quarters of the college at Balboa Park. Under the direction of W. R. Adams, instructor in charge of the Engineering group, and J. S. Larson of Miller and Pheulger, Architects, the plans are practically completed. They will include exact specifications for the laying out and installation of equipment for a dining room, a cafeteria, and coffee shop.

From another section of the hotel group Edmee Burgues, a student, was placed at the St. Francis Hotel last week to gain personal contact with the duties of hotel work. Miss Burgues is being trained in all departments under the supervision of the heads of those units.

J. Graham Sullivan, director of the hotel division said; "Within two weeks all the senior students will be given positions in the various hotels throughout the city." This arrangement is in accordance with the employment agreement entered into by the Hotel Group and Dan E. London, Manager of St. Francis Hotel and chairman of the Hotel Advisory Committee. "This practical experience is an essential part of the course and a requirement for graduation." Sullivan added.

Novelty Dance Next On Men's Calendar According To Amori

Next event on the Associated Men Students' calendar will be the traditional Men's Club dance, according to Joe Amori, faculty adviser to the club.

The Men's club has tried to make the dance a novelty affair in the past, with a new surprise each semester. At last semester's dance a nautical atmosphere prevailed, while the semester before that saw the Men's Club feature a hay ride down the peninsula.

Tentative plans for this semester's dance include a boat ride on the bay, according to Al Williams, president.

He also stated that if the excursion materialized it would be held sometime in March.

Other events on the Men's Club schedule are the boxing and wrestling matches, a treasure hunt, and Men's Club Day.

The fights will be held March 30, possibly in the Civic Auditorium, according to Amori. The weights will run from 118 pounds to the unlimited division, and as in the past medals will be awarded the winners.

The treasure hunt will probably be held at Balboa Park on the college property, Amori stated. The date is set tentatively for the week before Easter vacation.

Men's Club Day, which is a new innovation this semester, will take place sometime in April, it is believed. Officers of the Men's Club hope that the "day" will become traditional.

CHICAGO UNIV. OFFERS ANNUAL SCHOLARSHIPS; JR. COLLEGE ELIGIBLE

In a letter to President Archibald J. Cloud, the college was invited to participate in the sixth annual national competition for scholarships to the University of Chicago, on April 23, 1938. Two types of scholarships are offered: those awarded upon competitive examinations and those awarded for an exceptional academic record and college recommendation. Graduates of junior colleges throughout the country, are eligible to compete. The examination will be conducted by a member of the faculty or an administrative officer.

Twelve scholarships yielding full tuition of $150 will be awarded to graduates of junior colleges on the basis of competitive examination. Any student registered in a junior college who will have completed not more than two years of college work at the end of the academic year 1937-38, may with the approval of his president, compete in the examination. Mid-year graduates are also eligible to compete provided they have taken no further instruction in college subjects.

WIDE RANGE

The examination will cover a wide range of subject matter. The scholarships will be awarded to those candidates who receive the highest scores in the examination as a whole. It will be held at each participating college on Saturday, April 23, from 9 o'clock in the morning to 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Any section of the examination is optional, and the candidate may earn his total score either by writing on a few sections, in which he is well prepared, or on a number of sections in some of which he may have had only elementary instruction. It is not expected that any candidate will be able to write adequately on all sections of the examination. The six-hour examination will consist of questions from the following subjects: Language, Literature, History, Philosophy, Psychology, Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry, Botany, Zoology, Physiology, Economics, Political Science, and Sociology.

For permission to compete in the scholarship examination, application should be made to President Cloud. Direct application to the University of Chicago is not required of contestants in the competitive examination.

Thirteen scholarships yielding full tuition of $300 and approximately thirteen scholarships yielding half tuition of $150 are to be awarded on a basis of application and recommendation. These scholarships will be awarded to students of high scholastic standing who possess qualities of leadership and who give promise of rendering a high type of service in college and in life after graduation. Application for these awards should be made to the Committee on Scholarships, The University of Chicago.

BUSINESS SUBJECTS

The business school at the University has requested President Cloud to submit the names of one or two students of the graduating class who possess intellectual ability of a very high order and who plan to continue their education in business. It is not necessary for students to have majored in business subjects in their junior college work. It is preferred that candidates shall have confined their work in junior college to a broad, general education similar to that offered in the College of the University. Honor scholarships for next year will be presented by the School of Business to several outstanding graduates of junior colleges. These awards will be determined on the basis of merit as judged by the committee from the evidence submitted by the various candidates.

FULL TUITION

For several of the students best qualified, the award will include full tuition for a period of one year. A number of half scholarships will also be available and will be assigned on the same basis. Quarterly renewal of these scholarships is contingent upon the student's maintaining satisfactory scholastic standing, with due allowance for the fact that students who transfer from other institutions occasionally have some difficulty during the first quarter in making adjustments to a new environment.

David Moonie, a San Francisco Junior College student who was awarded a scholarship to the School of Business in June 1937, received a renewal of his scholarship and was highly commended for his excellent work at the University, by W. N. Mitchell, the Associate Dean. Moonie's success was no doubt a determining factor in the decision to again invite the college to participate in the competition.

PICTURE PAGES PLANNED FOR LAST PAPER

Plans for the publication this Spring of a four page rotogravure insert in the final edition of The Guardsman were announced at a meeting of the editorial staff last Wednesday.

As it was deemed unwise to attempt another year book until the college is in its permanent quarters, the pictorial section of this semester's final issue of The Guardsman will be the only souvenir that graduating students can take away with them.

Deadline for all pictures was tentatively set for April 11, 1938, the Friday before the beginning of Easter vacation. All groups, clubs, organizations, and graduating students should see next week's issue of The Guardsman, for the list of appointments for the photographs. Snapshots may be turned in to The Guardsman box at Galileo, to the office at Powell Street, or given to a member of the staff.

All persons planning to graduate this semester should arrange for their pictures soon and also to turn in a list of their free hours along with their names as they wish them to appear in the paper.

All pictures will be taken at the expense of The Guardsman, and although snapshots of feature value will be accepted, they immediately become the property of The Guardsman and no responsibility for their return will be assumed.

It is hoped by the editorial staff that it will be possible to have every group in the college represented in the rotogravure issue.

Hotel Division Asked To Give New Courses

San Francisco's leading Hotel and Restaurant Supply Companies have approached the college's hotel division seeking its support for a course in its field similar in design to Hotel Engineering.

J. Graham Sullivan, manager of the Hotel and Restaurant Division said: "The proposed unit of study will acquaint the student with hotel supply and equipment. The course will be conducted on an evening trade extension basis. If permission is forthcoming from Robert F. Gray, Deputy Superintendent of Schools, instruction will begin immediately at Galileo Evening High School under the direction of William R. Adams, instructor in hotel engineering."

An enrollment sign-up blank sent to the interested companies was returned with 50 applications. Houses petitioning the course include; Dormann Hotel Supply, Levinson and Company, John G. Ills Company, Engskell Company, Charles Brown & Sons and Mangram, Holbroke & Company.

STUDY IN SILHOUETTE

Expanded in its physical proportions as it is in present enrollment, the college claims but another building for its own, this time the Pacific Gas and Electric Company Building on Sutter Street. To house the overgrown library, afford quiet for study, and to shelter a few classes, there will yet be opportunity, as pictured, to go from the street entrance to Room 728, thence to the windows, from which the above earnest student, had she turned her head from her work, would have seen the city spread below.

New Library, Study Hall In PGE Building Prove Popular

New quarters of the college library and study hall in the Pacific Gas and Electric Company building, Sutter Street near Powell, opened last week and were immediately filled to capacity.

Although a portion of the library was also supposed to be moved to the new location, Rooms 726, 727, and 728, the shelves are still empty. It is expected that the periodicals, fiction, and reference works will be housed there in the near future. The new study hall affords students an opportunity to have a quiet place where they may do their studying.

Expansion of the library and study hall was made necessary by the continued growth of the college, and the inadequacy of present quarters. In place of the material that will be removed from the old shelves will be put new books that have recently been purchased and are now being catalogued.

"The new library and study hall now housed in the P. G. & E. building," Paul Pitman, assistant to President Cloud, said, "is for students who want to study in a quiet place and does not have the characteristics of a social hall as does the study hall in the Powell Street building. Students that sincerely want to study now have a place that is conducive to accomplishing something.

"The new location of the library will also afford students an opportunity to browse, conditions heretofore did not permit anything what was not strictly of a business nature. Faculty members will rotate in acting as supervisors of the new branch. The primary purpose for their presence will be for consultation with any students that desire it."

The P. G. & E. building was chosen as the site for the latest expansion of the college because it is only a minute's walk from the Extension Division at Powell Street.

Proposed Changes In Constitution Attain Unofficial Approval

Unofficial approval of the initial article of a proposed skeleton constitution was the main business of the fourth meeting of the college executive council held Friday afternoon, according to Don Mix, Associated Students president.

"After making a few changes in the content of the article," Mix said, "the council expressed its unanimous approval and decided that the next meeting would feature the consideration of Article II which concerns officers and their duties."

The major portion of the meeting was taken up with committee reports and a discussion of the problem confronting students who have most of their classes at Girl's High School. It had been pointed out that these "forgotten students" have no way of knowing just what is going on in the college and are not prepared for coming activities.

President Mix expressed his intention of investigating the situation and perhaps appointing a committee to see that something is done to rectify it.

Before the meeting was adjourned, Fred Vast, a member of the college Peace Society asked for the sanction of the executive council to a Peace Rally to be held on April 28. The group expressed approval and the meeting was adjourned.

MANUSCRIPTS COMING IN; FORUM ANNOUNCES APRIL 1ST DEADLINE

That several contributions for "Forum," literary publication of the Forum Club, have been received was revealed this week by John Ward, editor.

All the selections thus far submitted have been poems. Other types of writing will also be included in the magazine.

Articles which may be satirical, factual, humorous, or descriptive are expected to form an important portion of the journal. There will also be short stories, essays, and dramas. Reviews of books, stage, and screen will be given consideration.

"The 'Forum' gives an opportunity," Ward declared, "to campus dramatics, politicians, poets, and just plain writers to express themselves and present their views to the student body. Forum is the college's only literary magazine and met with tremendous success last year, its first year of publication. We have very good prospects this year. Now if students will only submit their literary efforts, a good issue this spring is assured."

Deadline for contributions is April 1. The magazine will apear at about the end of April, 1938. Word limit on articles is 1500 words, but writers should try to make their contributions shorter.

Jean Page, women's editor of The Guardsman, was added to the "Forum" staff last week making the editorial committee complete. Other staff members besides Ward and Miss Page are Ely Chertok, Tom Tillberry, Henry Evans, Margarita Williams, John Healy, Ray Valdez, Marjorie Cusic, and Fred Vast. The business manager's duties will be handled by Healy.

Anyone wishing more information should see Ward, or any member of the committee. Dorothy Mercer and William Goss are the faculty advisers.

Groups Urged To Join Club Affiliations

Mix Plans First Meeting Friday, 12 O'clock In Powell Lecture Hall

All active groups of the college will be urged to send representatives to the organizational meeting of the proposed Club Affiliation of the college, which will be held on Friday, February 18, at twelve noon in the lecture hall of the Powell Street building, according to Don Mix, Associated Student President.

Besides laying plans for the actual organization of this unifying body, the meeting will serve to clarify all potential members on the objectives and methods of the affiliation.

"The purpose of this new organization," said Mix, "is in general sense, to strengthen and enlarge the extra-curricular life of the college by a process of unification and cooperation.

"More specifically, this large affiliation will create an executive board which will be empowered to pass and review club characters, recommend new groups, and approve programs. This cooperative body would perform an essential function as an authoritative and manageable catalogue of extra-curricular activities which would be a decided improvement over the old system where clubs, like Topsy, just grew."

Administration leaders have approved the plan and have announced that they will cooperate to the fullest extent.

"When considering this plan please keep this in mind. The ultimate purpose of this endeavor is not particularly to create a better Italian Club or a better Forum—it is bigger than any particular organization. Our plan aims at the great whole that is the Associated Students," Mix said.

Leaders of the movement are attempting personally to contact all club advisers and presidents, but it is very possible that some will be missed and it is hoped that these leaders will support the plan by attending the first meeting.

The "all aboard for Santa Rosa" cry will be heard at exactly 4:45 o'clock on the afternoon of February 18 at the Ferry Building, it was announced last week by Jack Schmale, in charge of the pending excursion to the Rose City and the conference basketball tilt.

By leaving at 4:45, the Ram Special will arrive in Santa Rosa at exactly 7 o'clock, thereby giving the excursionists ample time to partake of dinner before game time, slated for 8 o'clock.

The train will leave Santa Rosa at 10 o'clock, arriving back in San Francisco at 12:18 (Ferry Building time). Tickets are on sale now at the Finance office at Galileo for $1.25. Make your reservations early, as a minimum of 150 must be sold to insure the reduced rate.

Many Social Events Planned By Rifle & Pistol's Committee

An extended program for the current semester was mapped out a Rifle and Pistol Club Social Committee meeting held late last week.

Vice-president William Gibson of the club, who presided ex-officio, announced as results of the meeting, the following events to take place;

An ice-skating party, to be held next Thursday. A formal dance at a leading hotel, to be held around Easter; a combination weenie roast and roller skating party at Penninsula Beach; a semi-formal dance at a hotel; and an "end-of-finals" party.

Details of all these events will be taken care of by the following social committee members: Bill Gibson, Edna Wedam, Lita Davis, George Deiser, John Stuart and John Julius.

The skating party, which will be the first social event of the Rifle and Pistol Club this semester, will take place at the 48th Avenue rink, according to Vice-President Bill Gibson, head of the social committee.

A very special rate has been obtained," said Gibson. "Namely 50 cents which will include skates, skating and transportation. If one has his own skates the price will be 35 cents. This includes use of the rink as well as checking privileges and transportation."

A large number of club members have already signed up. One reason for this big turnout was the concession given by the club officers that each member bring one friend.

"The money must be paid in advance," also said Gibson. This because of the special rate agreement with the rink officials. Money may be paid at the rifle range in the Galileo basement or to any Rifle and Pistol Club officer."

When the money is in, transportation will be allotted. All participants will meet on the corner of 1st Avenue and Anza Street at 7:30 o'clock sharp, Thursday. Further information may be obtained from any Rifle and Pistol Club member or officer.

ORGANIZATION OF HONOR SOCIETY CHAPTER TO BE OBJECT OF FRIDAY MEET

With the organization meeting scheduled to be held at 2:00 o'clock next Friday afternoon in the Little Theater at Galileo, the founding of a chapter of Alpha Gamma Sigma, California Junior College Honor Scholarship Society, will be come a reality.

After months of planning by interested students and faculty members, and receipt of many invitations from the society's headquarters and chapters in other junior colleges, the ground work has been completed and the college is now ready for the installation of its own chapter.

Alpha Gamma Sigma exists for the purpose of promoting and recognizing scholarship among students in the Junior Colleges of California. There are various types of memberships offered in the society; the temporary membership is open to a student who has for any semester not less than thirty grade points (exclusive of physical education, and with no grade lower than C, and who is, in all respects, recommended by the faculty of his particular college. Not more than ten percent of the student body based on average daily attendance shall be elected to temporary membership.

Persons eligible for election to permanent membership are students who have met the requirements for temporary membership during any three of four, or four of five semesters of his junior college course, who has completed sixty quantity units of recognized junior college work (exclusive of physical education) even though he does not graduate, who has obtained a minimum of one hundred forty grade points (exclusive of physical education) and whose grade point average is 2.3 or above for all four semesters in junior college.

Final selection of members is made by a secret committee of five faculty members who consider three factors in their selections; First, character as shown by conduct and general behavior; second, service, as shown by loyalty, and service to the school; third, leadership, as shown by activity in student affairs. The number of members so chosen shall not exceed ten percent of all those in the class who have completed the required sixty units of work so indicated.

Alpha Gamma Sigma, a state-wide organization, will hold its convention this year at Pasadena, March 19, 1938. It is hoped by those in charge of the installation of the local chapter, that the organization will be well enough under way to have San Francisco's Junior College's new chapter well represented at the state meet.

GRADING WORK NEAR END AT BLDG. SITE

Completion of grading operations on the site of the new junior college will have been completed by the first of March, according to the latest information from the contractors in charge of the project, and the site will be in readiness for the actual erection of the college buildings.

Beginning of construction will, however, be slightly delayed by the necessity of having the plans approved by the State Department of Architecture. It is expected that the process of approval by this body will be speeded up considerably because of the fact that it is already familiar with most of the specifications and should require but little time to make up its mind. Construction should start about the first of April, and the building will definitely be completed in time for the opening of the spring semester of 1939, if not earlier.

Timothy L. Pflueger, architect in charge, has a large staff at work on the plans at present, and every detail is being taken care of preliminary to submitting them for approval.

All possible short cuts have been taken by the Board in order to hasten the start of work, and it is estimated that about two months have been cut from the time that the process of approval would take ordinarily.

Classes Moved For Extension Activity

Holding of classes by the University of California Extension Division in rooms 201, 207 and the lecture hall has made necessary the changing of a number of junior college classes to other rooms or other buildings. Several classes were switched to the P. G. and E. building, and others to the Native Sons Hall at Mason and O'Farrell Streets, while one, Business 66, was discontinued entirely for a month.

The Extension Division is playing host for a month to a large group of teachers of recreational activities, and others interested in the subject of recreation, such as those affiliated with the Boy Scouts, Y.M.C.A., and similar organizations, who will attend classes to be held in three different fields, namely, music, nature study, and arts and crafts. The classes are being held under the joint sponsorship of the University of California and the National Recreation Council, in what is known as a regional conference. The conference will last for a month, at the end of which time the displaced classes may move back into their accustomed rooms.

Hotel Division Gives Luncheon To Group

With entertainment as its keynote of existence, the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division is at it again. On Monday, February 14th at 12:15 o'clock the California Northern Hotel Men's Association will be the guests of the hotel group at luncheon to be held in the Galileo Faculty Cafeteria.

President Archibald J. Cloud will preside at the meeting, the food for which will be prepared by the hotel students under the direction of Hilda Watson, instructoress in charge of the cafeteria department, and Chef Ernst Torth.

The date for the repast is the occasion of the regular monthly meeting of the Hotel Men's Association, which numbers 100 members consisting of owners, operators, and managers of the leading hotels of San Francisco and adjacent cities. J. Graham Sullivan, manager of the Hotel Division, said: "This is the first major activity in which the Association and the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division have cooperated to such an ex-

Loss Of Pay Threat Voiced By NYA Head

"Time slips will be due February 18, which is Friday, and must be in by 5 o'clock," Helene Turner, NYA head, has announced. "No slip will be accepted over the week end or the next week. Loss of pay will result if slips are not in on time. Mr. O'Neill will take them in the morning at Powell Street, and I will take them in the afternoon at Galileo in room 211."

Eastbay students, and others employed in the National Youth Administration, who do not have their residence in San Francisco must be sure, in filling out time slips, to indicate the name of the city or town where they are receiving their checks, Miss Turner said. Many checks have been lost in the mail because students have failed to do this.

FIRST ASSEMBLY

LAST Wednesday, anyone attending the War Referendum Debate, which was held in the Powell Street Lecture Hall and sponsored by the Phi Rho Pi debate society, the Peace Society and the Forum Club of this college, would have been treated to a very interesting hour of talks, and a program which was well presented.

The student speakers were a group of intelligent young people presenting intelligent opinions on a pertinent and timely subject.

The only regrettable factor concerning the assembly was the absence of any of those smug individuals with whom the college students of today have to contend, namely, the people who would have the world believe that college men and women spend all their time discussing sex and learning the latest dance steps.

It would have been interesting to note the reaction of these same people to a movement's conversation with any of the young student speakers, or any of the young men and women in the audience. They MIGHT change their opinions of college students.

RALLY ATTENDANCE

Especially cheering to the members of the Executive Council and other student leaders was the spirited attendance at the rally for the Marin game.

Since the founding of San Francisco Junior College, numbers of students and faculty members have worked tirelessly to promote student spirit. School "spirit" isn't a quality which can be administered. It must come spontaneously from the individual in appreciation for benefits received.

There is no question about the benefits reaped by students of this institution. There is likewise no question about the satisfaction that may come from appreciating these same benefits.

In the last analysis, the colleges belong to the students, and it is obvious that if it were not for them, and their desire for an education, there would be no need for the great centers of learning that exist in the world.

It becomes the DUTY, therefore, of every student enrolled in this or any other college to show HIS appreciation of the education and cultural opportunities being afforded him by supporting HIS college in ALL of its activities.

ON CURRENT EVENTS

Students often remark, "What do I care about those things; wars, strike troubles, foreign entanglements, gold standards, farm relief, and all the myriad things that fill the daily newspapers. They don't concern me."

Such people are laboring under a pitiful delusion. They are closing their eyes to the reality of the world about them. They are refusing to grow up and assume their rightful place in the world, and, as a consequence, are apt to find themselves being passed in the shuffle. The world doesn't wait for anyone, and all must keep abreast of the swiftly changing times.

College students should realize the paramount necessity of knowing the world into which they are shortly to be set adrift to make their own way. They should feel an interest in the things that their government (the same government that is making it possible for them to gain an education) is doing, and decide for themselves whether they think things are being done in the best manner.

Perhaps if there were more courses of the kind that some educators like to refer to as "practical"; more of the "orientation" type of lecture being offered in our colleges, there might be a sharp increase in the number of people voting in our civic and national elections.

The average age of the college graduate is well over the age at which persons become eligible to vote, and yet a survey of the number of college-trained men and women voting in public elections would very likely show a percentage little greater than the voting percentage of the general masses.

It isn't prudish to be well-informed on current events, and the sooner young college students realize this fact, the better off they and the nation as a whole will be.

COLLEGE SLANG

The following editorial appeared in The Minnesota Daily, student newspaper at the University of Minnesota, and is herewith reproduced for what it's worth:

"Contemporaries have kidded some of us into believing that college slang is being shunted down the groove into the ash heap.

"This is nothing more than the thinly-buttered guff of stoops (heels) and dropshods (heels who live in sub-basements).

"For proof, go to any popular collegiate juking joint in the South and meet charming belles who will be variously introduced as muffins, pinks, and skuttywucks.

"At Purdue, where the boys wear their beards on barrel chests, one will encounter harborlights (steady boys who lend a guiding hand to ships that pass in the night), mops (those who are especially fitted to absorb it), and pinks (young girls, out for shallow fun).

"In the West, the torch is carried on by strong men who label their women friends beazels, submarginal beazels, etc.; inebriated friends become skunk-drunk, stinko, or even the more prosaic blotto.

"Even an editorial writer could go on and on like this. Luckily, that won't be necessary. The case is clear. Our slang, bless it, lives on.

"This we say to our debunking contemporaries: Foo!"

This editorial as has been said, appeared in the student newspaper of one of our great universities.

Probably, it is from reading such drivel as this, that the long-suffering public gets some of its ideas regarding the dubious intelligence of the country's college students, and rightly so.

If such is the case, they are hardly to be blamed for the low esteem in which they hold some of the diploma-clutching products of our higher institutions.

Happily enough, however, the bulk of our students do not spend ALL of their time concentrating on a mutilation of the English language.

WHERE CREDIT IS DUE

As long as these columns are passing out compliments, the hard-working and deserving college orchestra which played so effectively at the above mentioned Marin rally may as well come in for its share of merited praise.

Facing numerous obstacles in the form of a dearth of instruments, persons willing to give the time, and helpful publicy, these busy fellows have overcome all, and are turning in a fine piece of work.

Many people cry for improvement in things, without ever pausing to acknowledge progress when it is made. Our embryonic "swingsters" have something, and should be given a great big hand.

YOU'LL ALWAYS HEAR IT

Editors in general love to preach and moralize. Some editors in particular carry this practice to extreme. But is will not be amiss to warn those who are still unaware of the fact that midterms are a cold and oft-times heartless reality.

All through life people are told what they must do and what they must not do. Most people would rather be told in the affirmative than in the negative.

On this assumption is based the warning: keep up with your daily lessons; know that you are going to pass your midterms, and at the end of the semester you can smile pityingly at the poor unfortunates who must worry over whether they have enough grade points or not.

It takes very little effort to do the wrong thing; to shirk one's assigned work. The man who lets his duties go by the board, in order that he may play for awhile, is really taking the easy path.

Mental Mutterings

Crawling out from under the pile of razzberries heaped upon us by various and sundry people because we committed the horrible faux pas of writing a paragraph of piffle about Spring in the midst of the stormiest 'stormy weather' in years, we extend our most 'umble apologies and promise to leave all future predictions to the sports department. We have one consolation, however, it was Groundhog Day (which has something to do with the end of winter) and several people did have on white shoes despite the rain, and two or three of our more rugged folk came without their mittens so we weren't altogether disgraced. Anyway, what if we were?

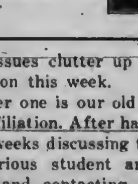
While browsing about "twixt the pages of our trusty Webster's New Peerless 'tother evening, we found something that might be of interest to those of you who have been addressed as, or addressed someone else as, "CHUM." Believe it or don't, it's all on the up and up and nobody's trying to force you into an unwanted Pal-ship. Chum, among five or six other things, means "A COLLEGE STUDENT." Happy now?



* * *

There must be a story behind it but if there is it's one we don't know. We mean the presence of a certain football star of last semester (who is fooling around with Crew) in the Girl's High Shoppe of a local department store. Seated on one of the comfy sofas scattered about, this chap seemed to be enjoying himself to the utmost. How about letting us in on it Johnny?

* * *

We wish, while on the subject of stories behind things, that some kind soul would tell us the true story behind THE LIST. Up to now we have heard five different explanations, each more fantastic than the other. We'd really like to know because it's very embarrassing to have people ask us about it when we can't tell them. Send your story to us in care of The Guardsman and if you put it in a sealed envelope with your picture pasted on the front, we promise not to open until Christmas.

Presidential Notes

Two issues clutter up the political horizon this week.

Number one is our old chum, the Club Affiliation. After having spent several weeks discussing the project with various student and faculty leaders, and contacting the major figures in the club life of the college, we are ready to act. As you are informed by a news story on page one the organizational meeting of the proposed body will be held on Friday, February 18, at 12 o'clock in the lecture hall at Powell Street.

Each club of the college is urgently requested to send its faculty adviser (if possible) and at least one of the organization's officers. All interested students will be welcome.

We shall attempt to clarify the doubting Thomases on the necessity and purpose of the affiliation, and shall formulate definite plans for formal organization.

Study of successful student government on other campi convinces us of the possible necessity for some sort of student judicial committee. This group would serve as an advisory board on all matters concerning student conduct.

Such an activity would necessitate cooperation of the faculty, who would report all cases of student misconduct such as cribbing, rowdyism, and the like to the judicial committee, which would make recommendation for punishment after careful study of the facts of the case.

If such an idea proves feasible it will be incorporated in the new constitution, and thereby be established as a permanent fixture in the machinery of student government.

If you were born in March or late February, you have a better chance of "getting to the top," and also will live 3.8 years longer than July, August, or September "eventers," this being a result of a research made by Prof. E. Huntington of Yale University . . .

CABBAGES AND KINGS

By Dick Simpers

BROWSING over a map of San Francisco the other day, we ran across a street with one of the most jolly-sounding names in the city—Merrie Way. The very name conjured up visions of a cozy, happy thoroughfare, filled with the laughter of children at play. Unable to resist its lure, we hastened out to inspect it, and what did we find? Well, whoever thought up such a name for it had a fertile imagaination, to say the least. It proved to be a muddy, unpaved, gloomy, little old path, winding off and losing itself somewhere in back of Sutro's, and without any evidence of usage by anything larger than a dog. Alas another of life's little disappointments.

ON EVERY MINUTE

Having just received another of those "sure-fire" tip sheets that have been arriving through the mail for the last couple of years, we pause to ponder whether anyone really takes the fool things seriously. Containing the names of a few "cinch" horses, and promising to send the name of a sure thing at 20-1 upon the payment by the client of $5.00, or some such ridiculously small sum, these pamphlets clutter up the mail-box every week and, since they remain in existence, must do some sort of a business, although how any reasonably intelligent person could be taken in by them is a mystery. Reason it out. If anyone knows that a horse is going to win and pay a big price, is he likely to peddle the information around for a few dollars instead of betting himself and making a packet? Very few people are that humanitarian. Why sell a fortune for five bucks? Nevertheless, the tipsters appear to flourish, further testimony to the gullibility of human beings.

CONFOUND IT!

We apologize. A glance at the paper, which has just arived, shows that the latest of the tips proferred us by the touts, and coldly rejected by us as unworthy, has just romped home in the second at odds of nine to one. And we didn't have him *!&!

SENSE OF HUMOR?

With the coming of the rains, there appears again in front of the Powell Street building that little group of sadistic monsters who stand and chuckle fiendishly as heavy cars slip and slide about attempting to ascend the hill. What sort of soul a person must have who could find amusement in such a spectacle is better left to conjecture.

THE HEAT'S ON

Unbelievable though it may seem, it looks as though the anti-vice crusade being conducted by the police department is actually having same results. Rouse from their usual state of lethargy, the minions of the law have really closed up some of the local resorts. How long they will remain that way is, of course, problematical. We hope it's forever but, recalling similar campaigns in the past, are inclined to be rather doubtful. Anyway, it's a step in the right direction, even though nearly all those connected with the cases got off with suspended sentences.

AT YOUR SERVICE

Picture of dejection: a check-room attendant floundering about in a mountain of coats and hats during last week's rainy spell. Seeking the hat of some impatient student, the poor chap had to burrow his way through a wilderness of overcoats and umbrellas, trampling fedoras under foot, in order to retrieve the weather-beaten relic from the very bottom of the pile. At times he was on the point of being swallowed up entirely in the tangled mess, but finally managed to emerge with the battered head-gear clutched tightly in his grimy fist. That's perserverance for you.

RAM'S HORN — PAPER SCORED, EXEC. COUNCIL COMMENDED

Note to writers of unsigned letters:

Let it be repeated here, the fact that every semester, the editor of The Guardsman cautions Ram's Horners that they must reveal their identity before their contributions will be printed. If the person who signed himself — "Indignant and agreeable" will come out in the open and reveal his name, we would like to print the letter —Editor

To the editor:

Hoping that you are not too weary, I am writing this letter desiring that it will provoke more than a mere fatigued "ho hum."

Specifically, I would like to bring to your attention the obvious lack of editorial policy in The Guardsman. Your editorial on "Student Radicals" was fine example of your indifference. You are aware of the status quo but have no desire to change it. You indolently point out that the student wants "marks" not education; that the student wants a "date"—not worthwhile experiences.

I think it will be readily admitted that if journalism is to justify its existence it must have progressive ideals. It is quite apparent also that the editorial policy of The Guardsman (if one exists) has no ideals. The editors are appealing to the baser instincts of the students. The editors are making no attempt to cultivate the tastes of students. Whether they realize it or not, the students are paying for The Guardsman. The editors should give the students not what the students have been misguided to want, but what sound judgment will tell the editors the students seriously need.

This college graduates its students with the certificate of "Associate of Arts." The editors of The Guardsman could easily give some truth to this certificate if it drastically changed the contents of The Guardsman.

P. S. To the Editor: I'm sorry if I have kept you awake.

Henry Evans

Ed's Note:

Well, Mr. Evans, the editors of The Guardsman feel that the time has come to remain awake and offer a bit of rebuttal. In the first place journalism, like anything else in the world does not have to justify its existence. However, if you feel that this editorial staff must have a beautiful set of ideals and a staunch policy, we'll give you one right now. This isn't our paper, its the students'. That's an ideal. Second, our policy is to print every letter, whether rational or not.

If you're still rankled by the dropping of the "self-styled" intellectual aspect of the paper, let us repeat an old maxim of journalists in general. "Give them what they want." Incidentally, Mr. Evans, "they" means the majority of the readers.

* * *

Dear Editor:

Sandwiched between something about journalistic scholarships and groundhogs, Mr. "Cabbages and Kings," hoped the American volunteers in Spain would spend a nice quiet evening at home. No doubt, this was no honorable mention to those who spanned a continent and an ocean to defend democracy.

Not so long ago, approximately 160 years or more, this, (OUR) country, was pounding the doors of every nation in the world for assistance against the tresspassers upon the right of Americans to govern themselves. Without the aid of France and others, we would still be buying Great Britain. No doubt, the French motive, profits, was less justifiable than the motive of those far-sighted Americans in Spain. Mr. Simpers would not condemn Lafayette for saying, "We have come,"— or would he?

From those who bemoan the widespread existence of democracy-squelchers, there is a heartened feeling for and extended hand to those who sacrifice personal safety and security, today, in order to crush the serpent 'ere he strikes tomorrow.

Robert Mason

Ed's. Note:

The reference in question was not to any national movement to uphold the cause of democracy, but rather to the activities of a few so-called "soldiers of fortune" from this country who made it their business to get into trouble in Spain and have no excuse whatsoever for complaining about whatever may befall them. It's on their own heads.

Dear Editor:

Last week's "Cabbages and Kings" column concerning Americans fighting for the loyalists in Spain showed the confusion that many people have about the issues in the war.

It is not a question of whether the United States is involved (and there's not reason why it should be), it is a question of whether the world and Americans in particular are going to permit Fascism to win another victory at the expense of democracy. The more than 3,000 Americans fighting for a democratic Spain and the numerous doctors and nurses aiding the loyalist cause are giving concrete support to the cause of democracy in the world wide struggle against Fascism, before it

Flash! Rumor has it that DAN WEICHERS had a date. We can't say who told us, but it seems Dan got taken — to lunch. She was a blonde, too.

. . . latest news tells us that the school will have lost one of its landmarks by the time this reaches the press. Bobby Fex has thrown away his critches.

. . . press agent Schmale whispers that the big attraction of the Belle of Marin whom the basketball boys rushed off her feet, was the big feet she put on for them, plus the fact that she was the proud possessor of a regulation size pool table.

. . . many of our "stoogents" have been very lax in turning in the little ballots we provided for their convenience.

. . . it has all come out at "list!" The LIST began as a roster of the guys and gals who partied at the home of a certain little Galileo maiden. Most of us would like to know when the next of this series of "rackets" is to be thrown. They must have been GOOD; we hear you had to pay to get in!

. . . soon to come off, if what we hear is true, is a monster picnic to be tossed by that scintillating society, "The List Club." For full details see "Head Man" Flamm, the "gold miner."

. . . "Chick" Chicazola (who turned in a request for a soiled pillar) in company with his front man, "Hairy-yet" Pasquallette, and the big bar and gum man, Pop have formed a group whose purpose is the supplying of local "color." Swing it, boys, we always enjoy a good laugh.

. . . 'tis said that "Moon" Burke's gold football is in the possession of a certain Galileo lassie!

CAUGHT ON THE FLY:

Tony Manov, another honest balloter, is a very elusive "man-of-mystery." We've been looking for him to get an interview, but couldn't make the grade. Where's Hector? (The (M)house detective).

Thanks to the following for ballots . . . we'll "dirty" you up yet, have patience:

C. Featherstone, Ely Chertok, Kay Evillitch, Mamie Hawkins, and Frances Kosta.

As soon as Hector turns in his first report, we'll give the readers the works.

MORE ABOUT GOLD FOOTBALLS:

"Duke" Worsham, Ram footballer, reveals the sad news that he had his little gold football, which is symbolic of the Ram's conference championship of last semester, exactly THREE hours. Come on, Duke, who's the lucky girl?

Hector did say that "Nellie" Nelson, the girl with the beautiful eyes, tried to land one of the boys' gold baubles, but met with no success. Better luck next time, Nellie!

NOTED WHILE STROLLING:

. . . that instead of going to school like good children of a Tuesday morning, Johnnie Verducci, small but deadly pigskin-packer, and his paramour, Ann Bertolucci, took in the movies. Ah, well, in the spring, etc., but who said it was spring?

. . . that "Bud" Berliner still persists in the belief that he can raise a moustache.

. . . that Merv Weiner still wants publicity of any kind. Well, all we can tell you is that Merv made us swear we wouldn't reveal the fact that he paid for his fame.

. . . that "Fifi" is a bit put out because we are writing a "dirt" column of a sorts. Seems there was a bet of some sort. Or something.

. . . that a lot of people tell us to stop putting their names in the paper and add under their breaths, "We love it."

. . . that Tom O'Neill, affable assistant to the assistant, wants an assistant. If this happened, think of the fun we could have with such a title. The trouble would then be, where would it all end, or would it?

ANSWERING THE CUSTOMERS' LETTERS:

To the unknown writer of the "Why" letter: Fine stuff, friend, but we repeat. If you're afraid to sign letters to this column, then at least edge up to us some place and whisper your name. We can't use any of that swell material until we know who the donor is. You have the idea, though, so get in touch with us. You can readily see the position we would be in, if any of the good people asked us who contributed the "Dirt." in order that they might do some nose-punching. We'll run it if we can use your name.

By JACK SCHMALE

Modesto's Junior College "wonder team" comes here for a two-night stand this weekend, and popular opinion warns that the Rams are in for as lop-sided a pair of shellackings as the Junior hoop conference has witnessed in many a season.

But what glory or satisfaction, we ask, can the San Joaquin Valley community, named for the virtue of modesty, possibly derive from a pair of victories over a genuine San Francisco team in the Friday and Saturday night engagements at Kezar Pavilion?

Modesto will send thirteen basketball players to San Francisca for the annual conference series, but not a single one of the 13 is registered from Modesto! Tie that!

"POINTS EAST"

Of the 13, three hail from Indiana, one from Chicago, and the following California cities each contribute one: Pacific Grove, Wheatland, Alhambra, San Francisca, Auburn, Berkeley, Penryn, Sonora and Ripon. Ripon, if our geography is all that it used to be, is the closest hamlet of those mentioned, situated about 20 miles north of Modesto.

Yet they'll be in there fighting for dear old Modesto!

Anyway, the Modestans are alleged to comprise the most point potent aggregation ever seen in the conference. They ran over Santa Rosa with little difficulty in their opening series.

RICKERT STARS

Jim Rickert, six foot, three center, is the leader of the Pirate offense. Hailing from Auburn (where there is a perfectly good Junior College called Placer), Rickert annexed all-conference honors last year, totaling 230 points.

Little Joe Triano, a frosh from Penryn, and Vernon Brown, 6-1, Richmond, Indiana, are slated to start at the guard positions, with Indianans Merlin Goodnight, 5-11, from Frankfort and Keith Lambert, 6 even, from Anderson, at forwards.

LOCAL BOY

Joe Johns is the San Francisco representative. He's a guard, 5-10, who played for Poly High a couple of years back. Deward Tornell, all-conference tackle last year, plays guard for the Modesto hoopsters.

"Dutch" (Louis to you) Conlan will insert a starting lineup of Slattery and Phelan at forwards, Opalinski center, and James and Curcio at guards.

JAYVEES WIN AGAIN; DOWN MERCO, 31-25

Tom Wilson's Jayvees continued their winning ways last Wednesday evening. At Kezar Pavilion they played the preliminary to the Varsity game with Marin Junior College. The latest victim was the Merco Athletic Club from the east bay. The final score was 31 to 25.

After trailing for the first six minutes the Junior Varsity, sparked by the outstanding play of Captain Stewart, closed up the gap and surged into the lead. After this point it was a nip and tuck affair, the lead changing several times before the half ended.

Coming out in the second half the college Junior Varsity played a steady game, tiring out the club team with a fast break.

By the middle of the final half the Jayvees had taken a large lead that was never less than four points and sometimes as great as ten points.

Barnstorm Planned By Tennis Players

Coach Tom Wilson's college team is to travel to Los Angeles on a barnstorming tour during this coming Easter vacation. "We will play Modesto Junior College, April eighth and then continue on to Los Angeles," said Wilson.

Contests with several southland schools have been arranged, among them will be U.C.L.A. Frosh and possibly the University of Southern California Freshman tennis team. On the way home, the traveling team will stop at Bakersfield to play the local junior college.

Six players, coach and manager, will make the trip by auto.

So far those only certain of making the trip are Wagner, Lazare, Altfield, and Ennes. For the other two positions of the team, there are three promising candidates, namely, Bob Kun, Ray Berns, and Nathan Liss. Although between now and eighth of April, much can happen as it is quite possible some newcomer may break into this combination and make this trip in place of one of those mentioned above.

With prospects of another championship team, coach Wilson is working steadily at the Palace of Fine Arts striving to build up a team that will equal that of last season. Last season, led by Amark, the college team won its first conference championship.

Big Downpour Stops Eisan's Baseballers

Although baseball practice has been impossible during the past week, the forty aspiring candidates for the horsehide sport are knawing at the leash to get going once again, but the rain makes workouts impossible.

The main reason the lads are anxious is that Coach Lee Eisan gave them more of an incentive to be one of the lucky ones selected for the traveling squad. Eisan announced that there is a possibility that the baseball nine will barnstorm to the sunny southland during Easter vacation.

Games are tentatively being scheduled with Cal Poly at San Luis Obispo on the Monday of the Easter Holidays. Tuesday will find them meeting Santa Barbara State at Santa Barbara, they will meet Compton Junior College at Compton on Wednesday. And to close the week they will meet the Los Angeles Junior College nine on Thursday at Los Angeles.

The veterans of the squad and some of the most promising members were given uniforms. Those boys who were lucky enough to get their suits were; Johnson, Berman, Baker, Hjort, Nilan, Baird, Banta, Curcio, Egelhofer and Balaam.

WOMEN'S SPORTS PARADE

By JEAN PAGE

With nominations for sports managers completed, elections come loping over the athletic horizon. February 9, 10, and 11 are the omnipotent election dates and may the selections made be wise, for those elected play an important part in determining how active and successful a sport will be during the semester. Among all campus officers, sport managers are the unsung heroes because they have more actual work to do than many of the highly balleyhooed class officers, yet are relatively unknown to the majority of women students. It is after election of managers, that the WAA really begins to function.

Those daffodils it has been raining the past few days, caused baseball, archery, and golf physical education classes to be postponed or held indoors.

The athletic heavens are dotted with feminine stars this semester. Golf discloses such promising satellites as Annabelle Benson, Dorothy Couch, Mildred Orendorff, Jane Mitchell, and Jeanne Smart. Golf instrutor, Laurine Bergin, plans to take the class to a driving range in the near future.

There will be two singles tennis tournaments during the semester. One will be for beginning players and the other for advanced players. A doubles tournament will be arranged later in the semester.

Women riflers who are eligible for the National Rifle Association Membership are Ethel Vizzard, Pauline Woodard, Gail Hanna, Virginia Kwiatt, Betty McKenzle, and Edna Wedam.

Sweet Plans Olympic Club Swim Competition

Initial aquatic competition for the college swim team will be held sometime next week in a practice meet against the Olympic Club Seconds, according to Russ Sweet, who is coaching the group.

Sweet is being assisted by Herb Brotman, national swim champion, who announced that all prospective mermen should contact him immediately.

Rifle Team Shines In Guardsmen Defeat At Galileo Rifle Range

Although they rang up a high score, the second rifle team of the College Rifle and Pistol Club lost to their powerful 250 Coast Artillery rivals 873 to 820 in a match last Friday night at the Galileo range.

"This score," said Coach Bill Hancock, "is 20 to 30 points higher than those being made by the college first team. Last week's match speaks well for the second team members even though they lost. Also, most of the members of the rival team are shooters of long standing, having been competing for years."

A TOAST TO BASKETBALL

When the frosty Fall season has faded,
And Spring time is nearly at hand,
Along comes the sport
Of the hardwood court,
A favorite throughout all the land.

The breath-taking swiftness of passes,
The thud of the ball on the floor,
The split-second thrill,
When a man takes a spill,
The adding of points to the score.

The swish of the ball through the basket,
The spirit and fight of the fan,
All these things combine
To make basket-ball shine
As a favorite all over the land.

Conlan's Lads Whack Panthers In Doubleheader By Big Margin

Ram basketball stock took a decided turn for the better when the locals whacked out a double victory over the Sacramento Junior Collegians in a series held last week.

The Conlanites took the opener when they tripped the Panthers by a 42-27 count on their own court last Wednesday night and then repeated the trick on Friday when they emerged with a 47-30 in an engagement at Kezar Pavilion.

REVAMPED LINEUP

Revamping the lineup slightly by inserting Willie Blackfield at forward and Harold Fischer at guard, the Ram coach, Dutch Conlan, has apparently hit upon a winning combination. Despite the fact the opposition afforded by the mild mannered Panthers was of the woefully weak variety the Powell Streeters displayed the best brand of basketball they have demonstrated all season.

Conlan's lads asserted their superiority early in the initial fray and established an early lead that never was threatened in the contest held in the capitol. Treacy Slattery, spark plug forward, and Al Opalinski, high scoring pivot man, led the scoring fest and along with Blackfield, Fischer and Ed Curcio proceeded to completely outclass the bewildered inland city boys.

RAMS NEVER HEADED

The first eight minutes of play saw the San Franciscans establish an 11-0 lead over the futile Panthers. The local attack eased up a bit at this point and by half time the visitors had whittled down the Conlanmen's advantage to a mere 3 points margin, the tally being 20 to 17.

As the second half opened however the Red and White team really began to click and soon pulled far out in front never to be headed.

The perenially grinning Opalinski again took the high scoring honors when he managed to account for 7 field goals and 6 free throws for a

Rain Forces College Trackmen To Forsake Early Season Work

Because of the rain that drenched San Francisco all last week, the college track team was forced to forsake practice.

As the field at Kezar training grounds was turned into a gigantic puddle by the torrential downpour, the members of the team were unable to train.

According to Russ Sweet, head mentor of the track team, there are two tentative dates on the team's schedule. On March 12, the team travels to Berekeley for a triangular meet with the strong California Frosh and another yet unnamed opponent.

The annual San Francisco State-San Francisco Junior College track meet will come off about April 30. Other teams to be considered in filling out the Ram's schedule are Santa Rosa, San Mateo Junior College, and Menlo J.C. It is probable that all these colleges named will appear on the list of the Ram's opponents.

Sweet, in speaking to the members of the team, warned them "The California Frosh always have a strong team and many outstanding stars and we need to be at our best to compete with them. State, our traditional rival, always affords intense competition. It can readily be seen that the team must put in as much practice as possible in order to be in good shape for these meets."

He also mentioned that if any other students thought that they might possess "talent" for any particular event to come out to Kezar and that he would welcome their efforts.

BIKE RACE RATE

Junior College students will be admitted to the current six day bike races at the special school rate of 10 cents during the afternoon session, according to Jack Schmale, college publicity man. Presentation of student body card is necessary.

RIFLE SHOOTING SHADOWS

Not "Silhouetts of Spain" or any other war propaganda but the shadows of three women members of the College Rifle and Pistol club practicing some offhand "dry shooting" in the Galileo stadium. These particular "Annie Oaklies" are members of the elementary rifle class sponsored by James Hughes and coached by William H. Hancock. It meets every Tuesday and Thursday at 4:30 with PE credit. Same coach and advisor also have an advanced rifle class and a pistol "male only" group.

However, any student may enter the club to shoot at his leisure, making himself eligible for the many social functions of this organization. Rifle and Pistol club teams compete in many Intersectional, intercollegiate and local matches winning many honors. Also, some members shoot with teams of various higher organizations such as the California National Guard. Rifle and Pistol Club information may be had at the firing range in the Galileo basement any afternoon after 4:30 or by seeing members or officers of that group.

MOTOR LAUNCH ADDED TO COLLEGE CREW COACH GADDY'S EQUIPMENT

With crew activities virtually halted on account of heavy rain and wind storms, coach Jack Gaddy augmented the present crew equipment with a motor launch to be used for coaching purposes, it was learned.

The launch will also be used to tow the crew to its starting place in races so that the oarsmen will not waste valuable energy, according to Gaddy.

The launch-navy, "liberty bot"—will be called the "Rambler," and will be painted white with natural wood trimmings, according to Howard Cloud, crew manager.

If the weather allows, crew practice will resume this week with Bob Carotto, Carl Brogger, Merv Weiner, Lefty Cregi, Ken Pasqualette, Art Nelson, and Charles Rice rowing in the first boat.

Money for new uniforms has been obtained and it is expected that they will be worn for the Washington's Birthday Regatta on February 22. The new suits are brilliant red with white trimmings and are part of a 210 dollar appropriation which included new oars, new oar locks, racing uniforms, practice uniforms, rowing pants, and the tow launch.

For the past few weeks, Gaddy has been concentrating on form, with special emphasis on the proper method of handling oars so as to get a maximum of power with a minimum of effort. He plans teaching the oarsmen the art of "feathering" their oars as soon as practice is resumed.

Johnnie Verducci, diminutive quarterback on last fall's football squad, is at present acting as coxswain in the first boat, and it is expected that he will continue at that position.

The Washington's Birthday Regatta was won last year by Gaddy's oarsmen, and he is extremely pleased with this year's prospects. Some of the veterans of last year's winning aggregate are Art Nelson, Carl Brogger, Don Mix, and Bob Carotto.

MIXing 'Em Up

By DON MIX

Nothing succeeds like success. After the Marin debacle the basketball men were just another group of clowns that lacked that vital "umph." But now, after sacking the Sacramentans, the Conlan Kids are "right up there." We'll climb on the band wagon and emit a mild cheer of sorts but, frankly, we're saving our big hurrah for that momentous occasion when the locals encounter the redoubtable Jim Rickert and his Modesto entourage.

We just hope we aren't saving it too long.

The biggest scoop in the history of The Guardsman sport page was recorded last week when "Five Star Final" Fex, ace reporter, masterpieced a bit concerning the initial baseball practice. Fex's story was complete with all details including several pertinent quotes. But what made the piece colossal was that no one else, not even the players attended the practice. There was a miniature hurricane, remember.

No need to be surprised if you see Messrs. Gaddy, Sweet, Eisan, Conlan, or Wilson, sporting a yachting cap. The school department has offered the college an ancient and venerable tub to serve officially as a coaching launch for the crew and unofficially as a fishing boat for the athletic department.

It has been disclosed that Headman Sweet will hold the first spring football practice since the college's inception sometime next April. If suitable locker and shower facilities can be obtained the training sessions will be held at the site of the new college at Balboa Park.

The possibility of innugurating a new grid system is the main reason for spring work, according to Sweet.

FLAMM CHOSEN BLOCK SOCIETY PREXY IN VOTE

Intellectual Athlete To Lead Group; Planning Reorganization Effort

Blockmen elected new officers for the spring semester at their first meeting of this semester, held in the Galileo Cafeteria last Thursday at two o'clock.

Russ Sweet, track coach, presided over the meeting. Lee Eisan, the baseball mentor, was also present. The only business covered at the meeting was the election of new officers.

At the next meeting, the date yet to be announced, the newly elected officers will take over, and make plans for Block SF activities this semester. The newly elected officers are Jerry Flamm, president; Bob Fex, vice-president; Sims Hamilton, secretary-treasurer. Other officers of the society are Preston Worsham and Stanley Tobiason, representatives to the athletic council. Jerry Flamm, the president, will also be the society's representative on the executive council.

Issues before the group were: The starting of a movement to obtain lifetime passes to all the college athletic functions for major block award winners, the drafting of a new constitution, which will be put up for approval of the members at the next meeting Monady night, February 14, in Galileo Auditorium at 8 o'clock; the possibility of taking charge of Orientation Week in the future; the setting of definite meeting dates; the beginning of plans for a Block Society Dance in the near future; and the importance of exemplary behavior at, and participation in school rallies.

With the enthusiasm and ambition shown, and with the promised reformation of a few of the so-called "Wild Guys" it appears as though the "Monogram Men" may really become "Somebodies" instead of just "Clowns" as Don Mix, student body president so aptly dubbed them.

LOCAL HOTTENTOTS TO MEET COLORED CLUB IN BASKETBALL FETE

Sports highlight of the year will be the basketball clash next Tuesday night at te Galileo gym between the San Francisco Junior College Hottentots, an All-Star squad recruited from among the outstanding athletes of this institution, and a barnstorming aggregation from Oakland, the Colored Giants, composed of some of the largest and most skillful colored players in the East Bay.

Reputed to have blazed a trail of destruction through all the opposition available in Oakland, Alameda, and Berkeley, the Giants, thirsting for more victims, turned their attention to this side of the bay, and contracted for a game with the Hottentots, who have been working out regularly between periods at the Galileo gym.

Representing the Rams will be Art Nelson and Dick Simpers at forwards, Jerry Flamm and Merv Weiner at guards, and Don Mix at center. All of the above are noted dead-eyes, and can be counted upon to give a good account of themselves against even so powerful an outfit as the Giants. Standing in reserve will be the Holmes boys, Dick and Frank, and Carl "Fatsy" Brogger.

The Giants will start a line-up consisting of a number of former all-city prep stars of tremendous size, averaging about 215 pounds in weight and six feet, four inches in height. Leading them will be George Porter, husky center, who ran up the amazing total of 42 points in the Giant's last game, in which they defeated the Lake Merritt A. C. by the score of 77 to 8. Others on the team are 'Rastus Schultz, Pedro O'Shaugnessy, George Washington Lincoln, and Meredith Bacigalupi.

By Anne Rabinowitz

If several students had not inquired of the administration about the profession of embalming, this column would not have braved the "question mark" glances of fellow "collegians" by rendering a discourse on the study. However, after delving into the subject, we are certain there is nothing facetious about the scientific embalmer, who must stand beside the physician in the field of preventive medicine. He is a master in the science of hygiene and sanitation, and the lives of millions of people throughout the country are guarded by his knowledge and conscientiousness.

Hundreds of years ago, before the germ theory was known and before the science of chemistry was developed, plagues and epidemics spread rampant among the people, causing deaths innumerable, because of improper work on the part of ignorant embalmers.

The modern embalmer, working quietly in his laboratory protects the lives of people with the weapons of pathology, bacteriology, physics, chemistry, and sanitary sciences. He is a professional man who can be of service to others at a trying time.

The California State Board requirements for a California license include two years' college work or possession of junior college diploma, two years' apprenticeship under a licensed embalmer and a nine months' course in an accredited embalming school.

Students preparing to enter the San Francisco College of Embalming should embrace in their pre-embalming course, the following subjects: English, Biology (Zoology, Comparative Anatomy and Embryology), Chemistry, Accounting, and any other electives that qualify one for completion of the sophomore year of college. The above applies only to those students who intend to practice in California, and is not an entrance requirement of the embalming college, which only requires proof of high school graduation or equivalent.

Another interesting vocation is that of the process server. For this exciting, but often risky, job, one needs the assets of legal knowledge, an understanding of human nature, the willingness to "grin and take it," patience, and—the ability to dodge.

Because all types of people are served, the operatives must fit into the scheme of any of these unfortunate individuals. If a hard-boiled mug, excuse, gentleman, who digs ditches or is an ex-champ, has to be served the unwelcome papers, it would be fatal to send around a little, undernourished scholar, who would land somewhere in an alley with several teeth badly in need of repair.

Instead of allowing such a sad thing to occur, serving offices take the precaution of hiring husky males for a case of the above type, (just in case), and also have a list of beautiful ladies, who could make the important business men declare themselves "not in conference."

Initiation, Banquet Planned By Omicron

To welcome the novitiates into the Omicron Phi Pi, college honor society, a banquet and formal initiation is to be given within the next three weeks, according to Dr. Michael Zarchin, the advisor of the society. "The banquet will undoubtedly be one of the most gala affairs presented by any organization in this college," Zarchin said.

Being lastingly impressed by a previous formal initiation, Bill Switzer publicity and membership chairman, said, "I cannot stress too strongly how fortunate any student is who is eligible for membership. No other organization in this college offers such lasting advantages. I only wish it were possible for every student to become a member of the Omicron Phi Pi."

Those pledges who have been selected for membership in the society are as follows: Annabelle Benson, Harry Frustuck, Dorothy Hamilton, Gus Boonas, Mike Klebahoff, Dora Sparoni, Lena Way, Elizabeth Rhebock, Yiezo Shioto, Tom Parkinson, and Jean Page. These students are requested to see Mr. Zarchin immediately.

Sorority Maidens To Ski, Sled and Skate

Planning a trip to the snow, several members of the Phi Beta Rho will leave San Francisco at 3 o'clock on the morning of February 11. Their destination is Pine Crest, near Strawberry Lake, where they will be guests of Ruth Graham, club member. The party is taking with them a seven passenger toboggan, skis, skates, and other incidentals.

Those in the party include Betty Nelson, president of the Phi Beta Rho, Barbara Randall, Lorraine Haffmeyer, and Ruth Nelson. Accompanying them will be Jerry Flamm, Tom Caldwell and Al Williams.

Twenty Women In Race For Eleven WAA Managerial Posts

Final selection of nominees for the managerial positions of the Women's Athletic Association sports shows twenty women running for the eleven offices open. The process of nomination involved nomination by members of each class, approval of nominees by the WAA council, and finally a check on eligibility of those running.

In three sports, ice skating, rifle, and tennis, a single candidate is running uncontested. Margaret Wormell, former WAA vice-president was selected as manager for ice-skating; Virginia Kwiatt, one of the most outstanding of women riflers, was chosen rifle manager; and Jean Lonkey, one of the women who won a first team award in tennis last semester, was chosen to fill the position of tennis manager.

Candidates for the remaining positions are: badminton, Miriam Fraiser and Elizabeth Rehbock; baseball, Ruth Gustaffson and Margaret Meader; basketball, Ethel Vizzard, Miriam Dickie, and Annette Schunick; dancing, Carol Pickering and Esther Tani; fencing, Margaret Parks, and Virginia Hein; golf, Gloria Swicegood and Mildred Orendorff; riding, Betty MacKenzie and Mardis Mullin; swimming, Jacqueline Kramer and Miriam Falconer.

ELECTIONS

Elections begin today and will continue Thursday and Friday. They will be held on the mezzanine floor of the Extension building in the mornings, from 9 to 1 o'clock and in the Galileo gym from 2:30 to 4:30 o'clock today and tomorrow. 1 o'clock Friday afternoon is the deadline for voting. Pictures of the candidates will be taken and posted. The elections will be conducted by WAA officers, Dorothy Canavan, president, Gail Hanna, vice-president, Dorothy Sanderson, secretary, Ellen Cumming, treasurer, and Janet Falconer. All women who were active in sports last semester or who plan to make WAA activities part of their program this semester, are eligible to vote.

Gail Hanna, vice-president and in charge of elections, declared, "We think this semester's candidates will be very capable as managers. The race for the various managerial positions should be close and if you are entitled to vote be sure and give the women you would like to see as managers, your support in the elections. A good manager is an important factor in the success of WAA activities."

Managers are expected to arrange extra activities, keep records of participants and attendance, and at the end of the semester, turn in to the WAA council a complete record of all events held during the semester. Upon election, they automatically become members of the council.

John Ward Directs Concerts In Rm. 104

Each Thursday at one o'clock, a record concert under the direction of John Ward, is presented in Room 104 to promote music appreciation and enjoyment.

Tomorrow the program will consist of Beethoven's Seventh Symphony. Recordings of other music masters including Brahms, Strauss, Ravel, Purcell, de Falla, and Stravinsky will be heard at succeeding concerts.

Each hour in the series will find something new and different. One of the characteristics of the project is the expression of opinion by the audience as to their thoughts on any particular piece. One of the programs to be presented in the future will be chosen by the assembled students. Most of the time, however, works that are not heard often will be played to acquaint students with the less popular pieces.

Another concert will be one without mention of the name of composer of the work.

The audience will then judge if it is good, bad or whether they are indifferent toward it. They will also guess who wrote it, what period it was written in, what form is used if it is programmatic, or pure (classical) music, and what it suggests, portrays, or tells. Also planned are programs of modern music and surrealism.

THREE UNITS OF INFORMALITY OFFERED

Informality is the keynote of the new English Course just added to the English Department as English 57. Margaret Brennan, speech instructor and Edward Sandys, instructor of English, are teaching the course.

English 57 is a three-unit course offering a combination of the study of Modern Literature and Composition. The art of creative writing will play an important part in the class assignments. The students are given leaway in their selection of topics and are allowed to write about any matter they choose.

Throughout the semester the class will study Modern Literature under the different classifications of Short Stories, Essays, Poetry, Novels, and Drama. No old masters will be studied.

Mechanics of grammar, such as parsing and diagramming of sentences will not be stressed. Grammar will be touched only in so far as it is pertinent to the discussion of different author's style, or in the correction of the students' own efforts at creating.

Both instructors are carrying out a system of group discussion and the class is conducted in a very informal manner.

Sandys has given his class a list of worthy modern fiction and non-fiction books to be read for class and also for the personal enjoyment of the students.

College Alumni Hold First Meet

Discussion of the constitution and making of plans for future activities took up most of the time at the meeting last Thursday of the College Alumni Association. Meeting for the first time in months, the Association was represented by some 50 former students, who were headed by Pete Jambruno, president, and Gordon Sollman, secretary.

After considerable debate, conducted mostly by Maury Schwartz and Tyler McHugh, it was finally decided that the constitution, as it exists is legal, and can be amended. Several amendments were proposed, the most important of which was one which would allow students who have completed ten and a half units of work to be eligible for membership. Heretofore it was necessary for members to have completed 28 units.

Donna McPherson was appointed as chairman of a social committee, which is planning a social event to be held in May for the members of the Association and also for this year's graduates.

Japanese Students Plan Activities

Under the leadership of Bob Uyeda, who was unanimously elected president for a second term, the Japanese Student's Club is looking forward to a very active semester. Many social activities and a general meeting at least once a month are anticipated by the club.

The highlight of the Frosh Reception, held on last Friday night, according to those present, was the initiation of Freshmen. Games, dancing and refreshments completed the evening's activities.

Battle Of Powell Set For Feb. 11

Approximately ten new members of the Army and Navy Club will go through that trying experience known as a "rough-house" initiation, when on the morning of February 11, they will subject themselves for treatment to the regular members of the organization.

Known far and wide as the Battle of Powell Street Hill, the skirmish is slated as one of those old time initiations where the spectators enjoy themselves fully as well as those undergoing the treatment. Advance rumors from the front, state that the new recruits will hunt for provisions by fishing in the gutters of Powell Street.

It is hoped that the new recruits will be sufficiently recovered to attend the formal installation and dinner on the following evening, Friday, February 12, at the home of William Carroll, 149 Kensington Way, San Francisco. There will be enough food on hand to feed an army, and that there will be no left-over food, since the army plus the navy will be on hand.

Students are urged to attend the "rough-house" initiation on Thursday, February 11. Spectators are sure to enjoy themselves by the actions of the initiated boys.

The club is going forward with its plans for the school assembly to be held on Friday, February 18. Prominent speakers will talk on National Defense in conjunction with National Defense Week.

Events Planned By Newmaneers

A great many social events are being planned for the Newman Club, by President Bob Fex and his fellow officers, for the spring semester. "Principally among these affairs will be a semi-formal dance to be given by the combined Newman clubs of San Jose State College, San Francisco State College and our own organization," said Fex.

Other activities planned by Fex are a St. Patrick's Day party, and a picnic at St. Mary's College in Moraga Valley on the first Sunday of May. Entertainment, refreshments, and dancing are planned to follow all regular meetings.

Fex again wants to remind any Catholic students who are not yet members of the club that they are welcome to come to any meeting. Meetings are on the first and third Mondays of every month, at 8 o'clock in the club rooms at St. Mary's Cathedral, Van Ness Avenue and O'Farrell Street.

HEA To Convene Wednesday, Feb. 16

Wednesday, February 16, has been selected as the date of the next meeting of the college Home Economics Association. The meeting will be held in room 317, Galileo, at 2:15 o'clock. All members are urged to be present, as final arrangements will be made for the Japanese luncheon, to be held on February 17.

On Friday, February 18, the Interior Decorating class will visit Sloan's Department Store at 12 o'clock, and hear a lecture on the different types of upholstery which are used at present.

Deutscher Verein Rehearses Play

President Walter Thompson announced that the next meeting of the German Club will be held on Tuesday, February 8, at eight o'clock.

"Die kleinen Verwanten," or "The Small Relations," the play which the club is planning to produce, is the story of a self-made man, whose daughter has a wealthy suitor. On the day that the suitor arrives to propose, he is interrupted by the arrival of relatives who cause complications, but the play turns out well for all parties concerned.

Chess Men Battle "Cal" On Friday

Because they need more training, according to Henry Ralston, Chess Club Advisor, the Chess Team will hold a match this Friday, February 11, at Stephen's Union on the University of California Campus.

Bill Switzer, president of the club, reminded the members of the plan to meet at his home, 1766 Walnut Street, Berkeley, from which they are to proceed to the club room at the Union. "We are going into this match with soaring spirits and a good knowledge of the necessary fundamentals so I have good reason to believe we will emerge victorious," said Ralston.

Chinese Prepare For Spring Dance

With plans being rushed, the members of the Chinese Club looking forward to their annual spring dance which will be held March 5, at the Chinese YMCA.

The Chinese Club met last Saturday evening at their Clubrooms in the YMCA with President Andrew Auyong presiding. A membership drive numbering already some fifty new members and a possible 75 will culminate the group's activities this month.

Service Group To Give Formal Tea

Plans for a formal tea to be held Saturday, February 26th, at the home of Jane Mitchell, were discussed at the Women's Service Society's meeting which took place Monday, January 31.

A rummage sale was tentatively decided as the means for obtaining funds for the annual scholarship award. Marion Yager, president of the club, said, "Although the sale has not been definitely agreed upon, I hope that everyone will scour storage rooms, cellars, and attics in search of material for the sale. The Society will appreciate all and any contributions.

French To Meet This Afternoon

Nominated at a meeting held last week, officers for Le Cercle Francais the college French Club, will be elected at a meeting to be held this afternoon in the lecture hall at 1:30 o'clock sharp according to Helen Kelly, club sponser.

The following students will be voted upon:

"This semester, the French Club will have a social program "non parcil," although it will be in keeping with French traditions," Helene Kelly exclaimed. The only requirement for membership is an interest in the language, and things French.

Italians Hold Next Gathering At Cafe

Paula Rossi, chairman of the entertainment committee, will present an excerpt from the play, "La Locandiera."

Those students desiring to attend the dinner are advised to see Dora Garibaldi, club sponsor, for reservations.

FOUR HOUR TEST THIS WEEK FOR RADIO STUDENTS

This week 26 students will take mid-term examinations in the only ten unit course offered by the college, according to Lowell Hollingsworth, instructor. The examination will probably take four hours.

At the beginning of the semester radio students built small one tube sets, and are now working on public address systems. By the end of the semester they will have had experience repairing super-hetrodyne sets, which are the last word in selectivity and reception, according to Hollingsworth.

He also said that after students complete the two-year course, they will be equipped to repair all makes of radio sets. Members of the class can learn code and other communications which will prepare them for examinations in the various branches of radio communication.

When asked if it would be possible for students to work on television sets, Hollingsworth said that the expensive equipment which is required for television, would make any class study in the field impossible, but that students who completed the two-year course would be able to learn television in a short time.

can go any further in its wholesale destruction of cities and civilians. The account of the bombing of Barcelona (of not military significance) shows the true barbaric character of the Fascist monster.

Letters from soldiers and doctors in Spain, recently published in the San Francisco News tell better than anything else why they chose to go to Spain. In fact they are doing for Spain what Lafayette was doing for America in 1776. They are, in a sense, repaying a debt to Europe and to Spain's aid to the 13 colonies during the revolutionary war. Incidentally, the News published an interview with Mrs. Marian Merriman (wife of Robert Merriman, University of California instructor, now chief of staff of the Abraham Lincoln Brigade) who just returned from Spain. She says there were no foreign troops fighting for the Loyalists in the battle of Teruel. In other words, reports that Americans were killed at Teruel are false.

The fate of Americans aiding the government fight fascism in order to preserve democracy and the fate of Spain is just as much our concern as is the Fascist threat here in the United States.

Democrat

Dear Editor:

My subject for a "beef," as they call it now-a-days, is the peace rally of February 2nd. As a peace rally this meeting turned out to be quite a debate on the vices and virtues of the proposed Ludlow Amendment to the United States Constitution. I fail to see the connection the aforementioned amendment would have with peace today.

In the first place Congress would have to debate on it, which would take quite some time, and in the second place a three-fourths majority of the states would have to ratify the proposition in order for it to become legally a part of the Constitution, during which time our country might become entangled in a foreign war, or the existing situation might become completely settled. To further my point, my idea of a peace rally would be a discussion of the existing situation, the desirability of peace, and reasons for and against maintaining peace.

In all fairness to the Peace Committee I must say they had acquired several excellent speakers for the day, especially the young man from the University of California, who had splendid material well organized. Our own Junior College was quite well represented, also, with three fine speakers.

All in all I believe this Peace Rally idea could be made into something well worth while for the Junior College, providing it contained less political debate, more definite peace ideas, and more educational but interesting speeches.

Yours for more and better peace rallies,

An Interested Student

Editor's Note:

Last week's assembly was NOT a peace rally, it was a Forum. The object of the assembly was to bring forth the various sides of a pertinent question. Past Peace Rallies have been on the line you suggest.

Dear Editor:

The assembly last week on the proposed referendum on war was a good one. I think more assemblies of this type, where social problems of the day are brought before the student body in an informative and provocative (to thinking) manner, should be held.

There are several reasons why there should not be a referendum which I do not think were brought out clearly, and which I think are important. They are: 1. the issue of whether a war should be fought can not be decided by a mere vote. Wars are in the making months and years before the conflict of forces comes to a head. Voting alone will not solve the question.

2. If enacted, the law of a war referendum would only lend encouragement to those nations that are interested in war. In effect it would say to them: "we, America, will not do anything if you pillage another nation, but if you threaten us we will take a vote!"

3. This is tied up closely to the preceding point. The referendum is a negative approach to the problem of maintaining peace. It signifies the tendency to wait until war is here before doing anything about it. The problem is to stop the forces that make for war by taking an active hand in the affairs of the world, and tackling the proponent of mass slaughter before he can gain any yardage.

While in itself the idea is a good one, the nature of the law and its provisions could be circumvented by the President, in other words it has loopholes.

Those are the reasons why the referendum on war, while a good idea, is not advisable, particularly at this time. What America needs is a positive peace policy such as President Roosevelt outlined in his Chicago speech last November.

Peace Advocate

Dear Mr. Ram:

For six semesters the darkened walls of Powell have echoed the moaning and the groaning of Junior College students who sit nonchalantly on their haunches, dissecting instruments in both hands, and disembowel our student body government. The operation is usually performed upon the executive council. With cruel precision, these intellectuals force their sharp scalpels into the "heart" of our student activities. With deft movements these pseudo - surgeons extract the "brains" of our organization. When their dissection is complete, the Junior College student body government much resembles the cadaver used by a medical student. The patient is a hull. That spark called living is extinguished.

Perhaps the above analogy is a trifle exaggerated. Perhaps the "life" if our student body government is not dead and buried. That is not a matter. The matter concerns a constant struggle by the student officers to generate and nourish this so-called "life." Better words may express this "life" as the morale, inner self, or school spirit. To investigate further let us segregate the student body as a whole in the individuals who are the component parts of the whole. It is here that we can find our "life." In some it is nonexistent, in many it is aflame, but in the majority it is merely smouldering. The student officers have been attempting to ignite the nonexistent and fan aflame the smouldering. This is being done by offering the students a program of varied activities such as rallies, athletics, excursions and dances. No one can deny this. In fact, a glance about you will show that our college offers more student activities than any other junior college on the Pacific Coast. Since this is true, no one can blame the student officers for the lack of "life" here. Surely the president of the student body cannot bring forth a hypodermic needle and by injecting a potent serum into each person, cause him to become elated with "life." Nor can the chairman of the social committee dose each person with a "Susie Q" pill to make him attend the dances.

The moaners and the groaners are wrong. Any non-existent spirit and morale in this institution is within the individuals who compile this institution. These chronic moaners and groaners are surely no help in trying to foster morale. They have the same effect upon the executive council as they would if they told some artist how terrible his work is when they themselves can do no better. Some argue that we have no "life" because we have no building. I once heard that Abe Lincoln was reared in a log cabin.

Sincerely,
Allen Williams

COLLEGE OFFERED MANY SCHOLARSHIPORTUNITIES

Alpha Gamma Sigma To Nominate Two To Pomona

First meeting of the local chapter of Alpha Gamma Sigma, California Junior College Honor Scholarship Society, last Friday coincided with the announcement by the Society that it will offer its members an opportunity to try for two scholarships to Pomona College next month.

Outstanding members of the Society will be nominated for the scholarships, which carry a value of $150 each. In addition to these given through the Society, eight others will be offered by the college itself, and the recipients will be determined by competitive examinations to be held on March 12. Interested students should consult James S. Hughes, social science instructor in the college, for further details. All candidates must be eligible for admission to Pomona College. All applications should be made before March 1.

MIX CHAIRMAN

Alpha Gamma Sigma launched its program by appointing a temporary chairman and a secretary and committees to act on nominations and the matter of formulating a constitution. Don Mix was chosen chairman, and Norma Lee Parent secretary. The foremost consideration is the drawing up of a constitution, as one must be in readiness by March 19, on which date it is to be presented to the Society as a whole for approval.

The Society is under the sponsorship here of instructors Alice Cooper and J. Paul Mohr, and the list of students eligible for membership was printed in last week's Guardsman. Qualifications for membership include the possession of a "C" average, good character, and student leadership.

PROMOTES SCHOLARSHIPS

Alpha Gamma Sigma exists for the purpose of promoting and recognizing scholarship among students in California junior colleges. Final decision on the eligibility of members is made by a secret committee of five Faculty members, who take into consideration the character, service, and leadership of the student, as well as his scholastic achievements.

The next meeting of the group will be held February 25 in the Little Theatre at Galileo, when plans will be made for sending delegates to the state-wide convention of the Society, which will be held March 19. Approximately 90 per cent of the students eligible for membership turned out at the last meeting, and it is expected that the representation at the next gathering will be fully as large.

Stanford University Added To Growing List of Donors

Stanford University added its name to the increasing scholarship offers by institutions of higher learning to the college. Other invitations received include the University of Chicago and Eight $300 tuitions will be awarded Pomona College of Claremont, Calif. to students interested in attending Stanford. The scholarships will be awarded on a competitive basis to students doing undergraduate work, two of the offers are for those entering the upper division. Applications close May 1, 1938, and winners will enter the University for the autumn quarter. The scholarships will be granted after consideration of the candidates' previous records, promise of scholastic success, and financial need. Students desiring more information and application blanks should write to the Scholarship Secretary, Stanford University, California.

CHICAGO OFFERS

The University of Chicago is offering twelve scholarships of $150 each on a basis of competitive examination. This opportunity is open only to junior college graduates who have completed no more than two years of college work. Thirteen scholarships of $300 and thirteen of $150 will be awarded on a basis of application and recommendation. The aforementioned qualifications also apply to the latter offers. Students interested in these scholarships should see Paul M. Pitman, assistant to President Cloud, for further details as to eligibility and examinations.

The business school of the Chicago institution has asked Cloud to submit the names of one or two students of the graduating class who have good records and plan to enter the business field. Anyone who feels qualified should also see Pitman. Although these competitions are of national scope students are reminded that last year David Moonie received one of the awards and has had his scholarship renewed for another year.

Ex Council Pores Over Constitution

Approving Article II of the proposed Associated Students constitution, the college Executive Council held its regular meeting last Friday afternoon.

"This article is one of the most important in the Consitution," Don Mix, Associated Students President, said, "as it concerns the officers of the Association and their powers and duties. At the next meeting we will take up the article that has to do with the Executive Council and its personnel. As this is a vital issue at the present time the discussion should prove very interesting."

Under old business, President Mix said that he had appointed a committee to take charge of the situation at Girl's High School, and that they would see that all college events would be publicized on a bulletin board placed there for that purpose. Chairmaned by Norma Parent, Associated Students vice-president, this committee consists of Kay Evelitch, Millie Farquhar and Doug Dowd.

After the council had voted to grant life-time passes to all junior college athletic events to all major block men, the meeting was adjourned.

Army-Navy To Hold Defense Week Rally

To be sponsored by the College Army-Navy Club, a National Defense Week rally will be held at Powell Street Lecture Hall, Friday at noon.

"Several prominent speakers, military, naval, and civil leaders, have been obtained," said Club officers who are planning the rally. "We also plan a varied program of a patriotic nature so that students who attend will get an idea of the real purpose of this nation-wide movement, National Defense Week."

"One of the best military bands in the city has been obtained through the War Department in order to give a patriotic touch to the proceedings," they also said.

PRESIDENT CLOUD JOURNEYS EAST TO SUPERINTENDENT'S CONVENTION

President Archibald J. Cloud will leave for Atlantic City next Saturday, February 19, to attend conventions of the National Education and the American Association of Junior Colleges as a representative of the San Francisco Board of Education.

Cloud will attempt to convince the NEA that San Francisco with its Fair, bridges, and united support of the city's schools' professional staff is the ideal location for that organization's 1939 convention. He has been a member of the NEA for 28 years and for more than half of that period he has belonged to its Department of Superintendents. His acquaintance with the Association and its leaders is expected to play an important part in that group's decision.

Besides attending the NEA conclave in Atlantic City on February 27 and 28, Cloud will deliver an address on "The Junior College and the Community" at the meeting of the American Association of Junior Colleges in Philadelphia on March 3, 4, and 5.

Accompanying Cloud to the meets will be four other San Franciscans: Richard E. Doyle, president of the Board of Education; Joseph P. Nourse, Superintendent of Schools; John F. Brady, Chief Deputy Superintendent; and Bertha Roberts, Deputy Superintendent.

While in the East, Cloud will visit New York to study that city's plans for its educational exhibit at its 1939 Fair. He is one of the directors of California's $300,000 education project at the Golden Gate International Exposition on San Francisco Bay in 1939.

Five-woman Rifle Team Will Vie In Intersectional Meets

Five feminine members of the college rifle team, designated the San Francisco Junior College Women's team, are scheduled to meet various Eastern and Southern college and university teams of similar membership in a series of intersectional intercollegiate postal matches this spring, according to word received late yesterday by William H. Hancock, shooting mentor and range officer of the college.

It was also stated that these women were selected on the basis of their shooting ability, and that they will shoot against the most highly rated women's teams in the country. Those selected are Virginia Kwiatt, Gail Hanna, Edna Wedam, Peggy Parks and Leta Davis, all members of the College Rifle and Pistol Club.

Although all of them are marksmen of no mean ability, the Misses Wedam, Parks and Davis are virtually novices, not having been shooting more than several months at the most. Being regular members of the college rifle team the Misses Kwiatt and Hanna have had somewhat more experience, especially in actual competition.

MEET MASS. TECH

The first match will be with the Carnegie Institute of Technology of Massachusetts. Women teams of that institution have always been the most highly rated in the country, judging from the publicity involved in their many intercollegiate victories. Carnegie women shooters also have been officially rated among the best in the country for the past several years.

Another competition will be against the team of Tennessee Junior College, a division of the University of Tennessee. "During their long years of competitive shooting, Tennessee women have drifted into the reputation of being the '20th Century Daniel Boones'." However, this holds no threats for "Hancock's High Shooters", the local western terrors, who, at the mere mention of their cognomen, make western shooting experts retire to the basement for more practice, opined George Dieser, Rifle and Pistol Club President.

MANY MATCHES

Although Club officers are negotiating for more intersectional competitions, nothing else is definite, except that both men and women shooters are sure to have a regular series of Rifle and Pistol matches through the spring to insure against their getting "rusty".

Hancock even now is planning for a return match with Marin Junior College to be held within the next few weeks. In the shoot against them at the Marin range last year, the College shooters decisively beat the Mariners in their three successive matches.

Definite arrangements have been made, however, for the College Rifle and Pistol Club to participate in the annual Examiner Match to be held at the National Guard Armory on the evenings of March 3, 4, and 5. Hancock will enter one women's team as well as two men's teams in this competition which, according to Hancock, has always "fared well with our college marksmen."

Among the high scorers of the San Francisco Small-bore League, the Misses Kwiatt and Hanna have also been the big threats of Hancock's Rifle Team. Therefore, experts expect much of them in the coming competitions.

Hotel Group Adds 4 To Guest Roster

The unending roster of visitors to the Hotel and Restaurant Division had four personages added to it this week. Evelyn Clement, Chief of Division Teacher Training and Certification, and Howard McDonald, Deputy Superintendent in Charge of Personnel, seem to have had the Midas touch. The student and faculty cafeterias of Galileo High School reached the greatest volume of business yet recorded, the day they visited the hotel group's headquarters.

J. Graham Sullivan, manager, said: "This week has witnessed the highest percentage of business in the history of the college management. It has set a goal which we shall strive to break at the first opportunity."

Other visitors were J. C. Beswick, Chief, Bureau of Trade and Industrial Education, and Ben Mallory of the University of California.

Besides having an enviable record of distinguished visitors the hotel group may be justly proud of two members of its faculty. Donald Perham, instructor in English, and Chef Stranberg, head of the pastry department, are the objects of the aforementioned feeling of elation.

Peham has been appointed assistant editor of the California Occupational Bulletin. In this capacity he has been gathering material from the junior colleges of California on technical institute courses. Chef Strandberg is able to boast that his name and fame are so far reaching that he has a student, Herman Fisher, by name, who left his home in Kansas just to study pastry cooking under the St. Francis Hotel Chef.

Self-approbation seems to be the inevitable course of events in the hotel group with Tully Cornick, a student, coming in for his share. He was given a front office position at the Hotel Durant, Berkeley. In addition to holding a full-time occupation, Cornick will continue his hotel work at the college. He has had hotel experience in Honolulu.

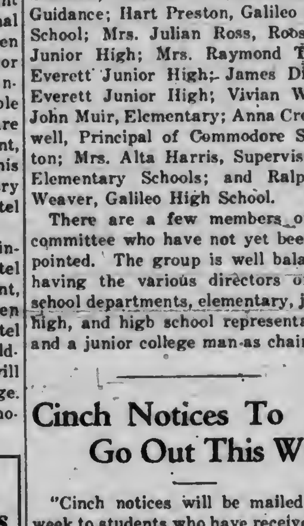
Pre-Legal Group Seeking Members

Sponsoring a drive for new members the Pre-Legal Society guided by Lloyd Luckmann, would like all students who are interested in joining the society and taking part in the group's activities to place their name and telephone number in Luckmann's box at Powell or Galileo High School, before 3:30 o'clock, Friday, February 18.

The group sponsors several assemblies during the semester with prominent judges and lawyers as guest speakers. It is a non-social group and all students are eligible to join.

Pitman, Power Lead School's Fair Exhibits

Cloud's Assistant Named Head of Committee To Direct Participation



Paul M. Pitman, assistant to President Cloud, was chosen last week to serve as chairman of the San Francisco Public Schools committee to arrange for participation in the 1939 exposition.

Pitman's appointment increases the college's active participation in Fair plans. President Cloud is one of the leading members of the State's Fair education exhibition committee which is headed by Joseph P. Nourse, City Superintendent of Schools. Selection of the two men is indicative of the growing importance of the college as well as recognition of their individual ability.

The purpose of the San Francisco committee is to set a policy for the city's exhibit. Assisting Pitman will be prominent education figures of the city. Alice Rose Power, principal of the Washington Irving School, is the directon of the $25,000 project. The exhibit will probably be of a live nature rather than the usual type, where a drawing of a second grade pupil is shown of what the boys in the high school auto shop accomplish.

COMMITTEE NAMED

Named to the city-wide committee those who will work with Pitman are: Aaron Altmann, Director of Art; Charles E. Barker, Director of Industrial and Vocational Arts; Ray Daugherty, Director of Physical Education;

CHAIRMAN PITMAN

Charles M. Dennis, Director of Music; Mrs. Edith Murphy, Director of Home Economics; George G. Mullany, Director of Publications; Edith E. Pence, Director of Curriculum; Charles A. Simonds, Director of Counseling and Guidance; Hart Preston, Galileo High School; Mrs. Julian Ross, Roosevelt Junior High; Mrs. Raymond Thiell, Everett Junior High; James Dierke, Everett Junior High; Vivian Walsh, John Muir, Elementary; Anna Croughwell, Principal of Commodore Stockton; Mrs. Alta Harris, Supervisor of Elementary Schools; and Ralph B. Weaver, Galileo High School.

There are a few members of the committee who have not yet been appointed. The group is well balanced, having the various directors of the school departments, elementary, junior high, and high school representatives and a junior college man as chairman.

Cinch Notices To Go Out This Week

"Cinch notices will be mailed next week to students who have received the grade of "D" or "F" during the first midterm period," warned Mary Jane Learnard of the registrar's office last Friday. "All parents of students attending the college for the first time will receive a letter from the registrar's office explaining the grading system and containing notices if the student's work is deficient. After the first letter, all warning notices will be sent directly to the student except when requested by the parents."

Although the last day for filing petitions for graduation in Spring, 1938, has past, any student who has neglected to file his application should report to the registrar's office immediately and request permission for late filing.

ASSEMBLY THIS AFTERNOON TO STRESS 'ON TO SANTA ROSA' CRY

'Pep Demonstration To Be Best in History' is Claim of Adams; Committee Promises Great Variety of Fine Entertainment For Rooters

On to Santa Rosa!

Such is the theme of the rally to be held this afternoon at two o'clock sharp in the Galileo High Auditorium, headed by Stan Adams, college yell leader, to promote the following Friday evening excursion to the Rose City.

Adams, in explaining the purpose of the rally, opined, "the rally Committee has seriously planned this program and as we have spent much time and effort in doing so, we believe that this assembly will stand out above all others in the past. The rally will be full of entertainment and variety to be provided by students of the College."

All 1:00 o'clock classes will be excused at 1:40, so that no student will miss any part of the program.

Topping the varied entertainment that has been planned will be that long awaited farcical drama to be presented by the Newman Club, "The Villain Still Pursues Her."

FEX STARS

The hero of this time-worn drama will be the popular three-legged collegian, Bob Fex. It is rumored that Fex will hobble about on the stage in the role of the hero, crutches and all. This will bring many a hearty laugh to the feminine followers of the cinema who fancy their matinee idols in the manner of Robert Taylor and Clark Gable.

Holding down the villain's position will be the mighty midget of football, Johnny Verducci. Verducci has been practicing his moustache twirling and sneering chuckle, and promises to bring forth boos and hisses from the audience. The heroine's role will be taken by Marge Meader. Miss Meader has been acquainting herself with the art of womanly fainting and heart-rending sobs, and it is expected that many a rugged individual in the audience will sigh in envy of the hero. Also included in the cast are, father, Al Flaherty, mother, Edithe Hickey; Susie, Jeanne Kelly; detective, Frank Verducci; maid, Toni Karsant.

HISTORIC EVENT

The Newman Club has given considerable practice to this act and it is probable that this play will go down in the history of the college as a superlative effort on the part of the students.

To please the music and "swing" lovers, the college orchestra will be present. They have planned numbers which will promise to lend much liveliness to the program. The orchestra in the previous rallies have always afforded much pleasure, and they plan to continue their fine work.

As something novel, which has not been done in the college before, it has been planned to hold a community sing. It is hoped that all lusty baritones and feeble sopranos will join in and try to raise the proverbial roof.

February 21 Set As Date For High Frosh Dance At St. Francis

Featuring the mellow music of Eddie Murphy and his orchestra, the college Social Committee will present the second dance of the semester next Monday evening, February 21, at the Colonial Ballroom of the St. Francis Hotel, according to Norma Parent Associated Students Vice-President and Social Committee head.

"We feel that we are very fortunate in obtaining Murphy's orchestra," Miss Parent said, "as they have a very fine style and have played at many of the better dances around the city to say nothing of an engagement last summer at the famous Redwood Bowl on the Russian River."

"The dance is to be semi-formal," she continued, "and admission as usual, will be one student body card per couple. I'd like to urge that all women who plan to attend wear formals instead of street clothes, because the dance is not an informal and a uniformity of costume makes a better appearance."

Miss Parent said that she and her committee had been greatly assisted in preparations for the dance by Frank Verducci and his High Freshman officers.

"The dance", she said, "is being given in honor of the High Freshmen, and I would like to see the entire class in attendance. There seems to be no reason why everyone cannot show up, because the following day is Washington's Birthday and there will be no classes."

Explaining that all faculty members are automatically invited to attend all college dances, Miss Parent said that it had become customary to send special invitations to a different group of instructors for each individual dance. Those invited for Monday's dance include: President Archibald J. Cloud, Paul Pitman, J. Paul Mohr, Mary Jane Learnard, Helene Turner, Thomas O'Neill, Laurine Bergin, Alice Cooper, Louis Conlan, Lee Eisan, Walter Forbes, Jennet Henderson, Lloyd Luckmann, Catherine Musante, Patricia Riccardi and Joseph Williams.

MIX AGAIN REMINDS OF CLUB ORGANIZATION MEET; URGES GROUP RESPONSE TOMORROW

All club representatives and club sponsors are again reminded of the proposed club affiliation of the college which will be held tomorrow, February 17, at twelve noon in room 206, according to Don Mix, Associated Student Body President.

Mix urges attendance at this meeting, for he will attempt to clarify for all potential members the objectives and methods of the affiliation which will strengthen and enlarge the extra-curricular life of the college, by a process of unification and cooperation.

This large affiliation, further stated Mix, will create an executive board which will be empowered to pass and review club characters, recommend new groups, and approve programs.

It is hoped that the following clubs will send representatives, and that their sponsors as named can attend: WSS, Verral Weber; Pi Mu Gamma, Glenn Noble; Hotel and Restaurant, Graham Sullivan; Omicron Phi Pi, Michael Zarchin; Forum, Dorothy Mercer; Army and Navy, James Hughes and Grant Marsh; Physical Education, Bertha Mae Keller; HEA, Clare Cuneo; Peace Society, John Ross; Philatelic Society, Carl Stough; Radio, Glenn Camp; Chess, Henry Ralston; Engineer's, Manuel Jacobs; Chemistry, Milton Pollisar; Pre-Legal, Lloyd Luckmann; Alpha Eta Rho, Alden Smith; Astronomy, Louis Berman; Music and A Capella Choir, Flossita Badger.

The language groups are: Filipino, Gertrude Bolton; Chinese, Edward Sandys; Der Deutsche Verein, Anne Marie Delfs; Le Cercle Francais, Edwin Cranston; Japanese, Gertrude Bolton; and the Spanish Club, Thomas Gabbert.

Leaders of the movement are attempting personally to contact all club advisers and presidents, but it very possible that some will be missed, and it is hoped that these leaders will support the plan by attending the first meeting tomorrow in Room 206.

STUDY OR GET OUT

NOW that the students who really wish to study have been given the rooms on the seventh floor of the P. G. & E. Building, it is hoped that the persons, who made the so-called study hall at the Powell Street building a place of gossip, eat their lunch, and do everything BUT study, will stay away from the new quarters.

Reminiscent of the famous "dog in the manger" is the attitude, sadly enough, of some of our college men and women. They do not care to study themselves, and will not shut up so someone else can make use of his spare time to get a lesson.

There is a time and place for everything, and no one wants to go around with his nose stuck in a book all the time, but there ARE people who are in college to get an education. These people must study, and since some of them work in the evenings and must get their lessons during their spare hours between classes, it is only fitting that they be allowed to do so.

If the people who are so fortunate as to have nothing to do but play all day will spend more time thinking of the OTHER fellow, they will find that more of the good things in this world will come to them.

It might be well to place a big sign in the new study rooms, which would read, STUDY OR GET OUT!

LET'S SHOW THEM

The Extension Division of the University of California has shown many a courtesy to the students of San Francisco Junior College in the two and one half years that the college has used its building.

Because the Division directors are now entertaining out-of-town visitors, the college is given a chance to show its gratitude to the Extension Division by avoiding congestion in the halls, aiding the visitors to find their way, and extending every courtesy to the out-of-town guests.

These people will return to their homes carrying with them a fine opinion of San Francisco Junior College, and San Francisco hospitality. The Extension Division will be grateful and will continue to help the college through these, our hardest, years.

Crowded classrooms, borrowed buildings, and long treks across town via street car are certainly not conducive to the best of humor. However, San Francisco Junior College students have amazed visitors from other colleges with their cheerful attitude and spirit of cooperation.

We have a fine record, so fine in fact, that the city is going to give us a building of our own. In the meantime let's show our appreciation to all those that help us.

COOPERATION

Much has been written concerning the value of cooperation. From the earliest days of our childhood we have inculcated in us the axiom that unified effort is far more effective than any individual activity. In fact it is possible to erect a truism stating that cooperation is an essential factor in the success of any widespread campaign. Such a campaign is at present being conducted in an effort to unify all the clubs of the college in a proposed affiliation. The success of this movement rests directly with the clubs themselves. If they will cooperate with the leaders of the proposal it is certain to be successful.

Your cooperation is asked because those who are leading the campaign feel that their brainchild will prove a benefit to the entire college. There is an admitted need for an authoritative guiding force in the extra-curricular life of the college. The Club Affiliation will attempt to satisfy that need.

It is sincerely hoped that each individual club of the college is sufficiently interested in the welfare of the college as a whole to extend to the affiliation the helping hand of cooperation, by having student and faculty representatives at the meeting tomorrow, Thursday, in Room 206 of the Powell Street building at 12 o'clock noon.

SUPPORT YOUR TEAM

Next week the varsity basketball team will journey north to engage the Santa Rosa Junior College in a game that should prove a thriller. They will be fighting to win, and if they are well supported, will fight that much harder.

The attendance at the home games has been gratifying, but the true test of loyalty comes when the supporters are asked to travel to an out of town game and cheer their team to victory.

A single basketball game, a single season, or a single championship won or lost is not the important thing; student body support of its athletic teams is the prime difference between an alert, wide-awake group of young men and women and a collection of dis-united bookworms.

It is the athletic teams, the dances, the various extra-curricular activities, that tie the students together and make for a fine institution where the students can learn how to behave among their fellow men as well as learn historical dates, mathematics, foreign languages and the rest of the matter gleaned from books.

Students who wish to get better acquainted with their fellows, have a swell evening's fun, and enjoy a good basketball game should plan to make the trip to Santa Rosa.

It's YOUR team! Support it!

DISCRIMINATION?

From certain letters appearing in the "Ice Box," student comment column of The Daily Californian, it would seem that junior college transfers to the university were being discriminated against in the social activities at that institution. Students have written to the "Californian" editor complaining that they weren't being given a chance; that junior college transfers could not hope to hold student posts.

At first glance, this would seem to be a deplorable condition, certainly it would, if it is true. What is more likely however is that junior college people, and particularly those who have distinguished themselves in junior colleges enter the University expecting to be received with open arms and many blessings.

In any institution the size of the University of California, a person must prove exceptional ability in order to achieve high position among his fellows. Students who enter as freshmen, and spend their first two years performing all the menial tasks necessary to proving ability and sincerity of purpose, must inevitably be granted first consideration when the student posts are being filled.

While there are many people who attend junior college for their first two years because they are financially unable to go to California, there are also many others who played during their high school years while their fellow students were working hard for the grades necessary to entrance in the university. It is barely possible that these are the students who are doing the howling about discrimination.

Only a very narrow-minded person can imagine students being discriminated against merely because they are junior college transfers, and it is hard to picture the university powers passing up a student who applies himself, quietly and diligently, and clearly demonstrates his fitness, simply because he did not spend his first two years at California.

365 DAYS AGO TODAY

Entering their first competition, students of the college art department sent ten selected pieces of their work to Mills College to be judged at an Exhibition. Richard Allman and Evans Ecke college art instructors selected pictures by Jack Miles, Ward Cox, George Cox, Robert Bettencourt, Doris Michels, and Louis Martucci, to be among those representing the Junior College.

Dr. William Randall, of the University of Chicago, visited the college library in connection with a study being made by the Carnegie Corporation Advisory Group.

Ten new members including: Serge Olferieff, Sylvester McAttee, Ted White, Hugh Waite, Bruce Bolton, George Harmon, Eddie Canapa, Howard Markowitz, Everett Abar, and Nick Vaughin were installed into the Beta Phi fraternity by President David York.

For the purpose of installing new officers and welcoming new members, the Women's Athletic Association under the direction of President Ruth Johnson, held a luncheon in the Galileo Cafeteria.

Jane Ferguson rescued a drowning Japanese girl at the local Y. W. C. A. tank. The near-tragic event took place in one of the women's physical education classes when the unidentified girl, attempted to master the tank's length apparently became exhausted and she began to disappear.

San Francisco Junior College was officially admitted to the California Oarsmen's Association at a meeting at the Whitcomb Hotel. The league includes crews from San Mateo Junior College, University of San Francisco, Marin Junior College, and the Polytechnic College of Engineering.

Setting a record for San Francisco basketball individual scoring, Paul Rippon netted himself the tidy sum of 21 points in the State Game. Ripp collected 15 in the first half, and six in the second.

OUT OF THE FOG

By Mac

We were seated at the typewriter awaiting an inspiration for a column, when in stalked Hector. He came swiftly across the room, peered over our shoulder for a moment and then growled, "Listen, Mac, why don't you give yourself up?"

"Why—why, what do you mean," we stammered in surprise, whirling around to stare white-faced at Hector's clouded countenance.

Hector sneered. "You know darn well you shouldn't be writing this kind of tripe. Why, my gosh, you only received seventeen ballots, and all of those were forgeries. Why don't you quit kidding yourself? No one wants this gossip stuff," he snapped.

Crestfallen, we sat dumbly and heard his fateful words send our house of cards crashing to earth about our ears. Alas, it was only too true. We had been fooling ourselves into thinking we could get by with it. The lovely dream world we had built up was something else in cold reality. Faced with the hard facts we came near to breaking. We must have presented a rather pitiful spectacle, for Hector patted us gently on the shoulder and said soothingly, "There, there, don't take it so hard. There's really no harm done. No one but you and I know the true state of affairs, and if you are careful, the public need never know."

We smiled our gratitude. "Thanks, Hector, old boy, maybe you're right. Maybe things aren't so bad after all," we replied, and after thinking for a moment, went on, "but what now? What shall we write about now?" we asked, hoping he would have an idea.

"Well," he arched one eyebrow and plucked at an imaginary piece of lint on his arm, then chuckled, "why don't you invite a guest columnist from time to time? Maybe some of these folks around here are just itching to write something. You might get some very good stuff." He sat down on the desk and waited expectantly for our answer.

The suggestion was a good one. Strangely enough it had never occurred to us before. We sat for a moment musing over the possibilities of such a plan, then we remembered something. "But heck," we said, "it's too late to get anyone this week, and we've got this column to write."

"All right," he returned, "get away from that typewriter, and let me write your column this week." With these words he tugged at our sleeve and as we rose, he slid into the chair and ran his fingers lovingly over the keys, like an organist getting ready to play something beautiful. "Sit down over there and quit worrying," Hector continued, "I've always wanted to get something in The Guardsman, and now's my chance. It'll help you out of a spot at the same time."

We picked up a copy of last week's paper, laid it over our face, and promptly went to sleep to the sounds of Hector's rapid pecking on our typewriter.

CONFESSIONS OF A COLUMNIST

By Hector

I am called Hector, simply that and nothing more. I am not a professional columnist. I am a black cat, with pure blooded Persian ancestry. This guy Mac is as stupid as the rest of his fellow human beings, and although it would be more fitting and more in keeping with the title of his column, if the space were left blank, we hate to see The Guardsman suffer.

The truth of the matter is this, I'm not an ordinary cat, I'm the ghost of the first columnist, and I haven't had peace since I joined the land of the shades, and was miraculously re-incarnated as Hector, the cat. The reason my spirit is so sorely troubled is the abundance of rotten columns which flood our journals today.

When I first began annoying readers, we didn't have any "Dirt" columns. CABBAGES AND KINGS

By Dick Simpers

LATEST reports from Harvard reveal the fact that students there are in a turmoil of excitement over a contest being conducted to determine the champion ice-cream eater of the University. Contestants are training vigorously, attempting to stretch their capacity for the gooey delicacy to the utmost, and win the coveted title. At present, a chap named Homer Peabody is in the lead, with a total of 19 plates at one sitting, but he is being hard pressed by several other greedy Harvardites, a couple of whom have already reached the 18-plate mark.

A survey of our own student body reveals several persons who might be considered as serious threats to Mr. Peabody's title, if ice-cream eating ever becomes an inter-collegiate sport. Practically a cinch for a block is the unidentified fellow we saw the other day in one of the sloppier eating places frequented by students. Without the slightest show of self-consciousness, he was consuming simultaneously a rather dubious-looking tamale, a mustard-soaked hot dog, a large vanilla cone, and a bottle of soda pop. What a digestion!

WANNA BUY A MULE?

Parked in the dentist's waiting-room last week, we were skimming through the December issue of one of those four-bit "society" magazines when our eye was caught by a novel advertisement for an "ideal Christmas present." Someone in Ohio was offering for sale a matched pair of mules, suitable for fox-hunting, plowing, and steeple-chasing, declaring them a perfect solution to the problem of what to give your loved one for Xmas. Imagine the joy of the receiver on Christmas morning when he finds under his tree not the usual array of ties and sox, but two lovely mules (price $1500). Oh Boy!

ART . . . ?

A bouquet to the General Manager of our fast-approaching World's Fair for having the courage to turn down several choice bits of "modern" statuary that were in line to be used as "decorations" for the Exposition. Grotesque models of flabby looking humans in silly positions, these atrocities may be "art" to some long-haired crackpots, but to the majority of the population they are nothing more than a pain in the neck. What enjoyment anyone is going to derive from gazing at such unbeautiful figures, even though they may "represent" all the virtues in the catechism, is beyond our comprehension, and it is extremely doubtful whether their presence at the Exposition would greatly enhance its chances of success.

WEATHER UNCERTAIN

The unpredictability of the weather at present is causing no end of trouble to those students whose desire it is to appear summery and debonnaire in advance of the regular season. Rising to find the sun beaming down brightly, these optimists set gaily off for class with the new white shoes gleaming conspicuously on their feet, and with new chapeaus perched jauntily on their heads. Comes ten o'clock and the usual downpour, with its resulting mud, while the forlorn and bedraggled dudes crouch in the doorway, waiting in vain for the cessation of the torrent, and remembering that mother told them to bring that umbrella. It is indeed a heart-rending sight.

Mental Mutterings

By Fem

It has been pointed out, at many different times and in many different ways, that the people who have most of their classes at Girl's High are considered the "Forgotten Forty". (Maybe that figure is wrong but it sounds better than the correct number would). Anyhow, these poor neglected creatures (Freshmen in particular) are said to be completely in the dark as to what, when, and why is going on around the college.

"Tsk, tsk", we tsk-ed, when we heard these reports, "Why don't they read The Guardsman?"

"Oh," said our informer, "They don't know that they get it free with their student body card."

Restraining ourselves from giving this person a hit in the head (and wondering if there really were people who didn't know when they got something for nothing) we said, in that soft, tender voice that always pops out just before we blow up, "Why didn't you tell them?"

"Oh"—blankly—"I never thought of that!"

Which is probably the reason for the whole situation, nobody thought of anything!

It really seems a bit silly to us that grown-up men and women who can read, write and ask questions should be in the dark about anything. With this thought in mind, we send the following message to the Girl's High-ers:

If, by some rare something or other, you can't make any sense out of The Guardsman, (there's them as don't) you can always question the old timers out there—"Normie Parent, "Katie" Evelitch, Douglas O'Dowd, "Camille" Condrotte, —they can all tell you what's going on and if you are unable to locate any of these people there is a very competent group of faculty members around. President Don Mix and his Executive Council are working out some sort of a plan too, and if, after all this, you are still in the dark, you'd better invest in a flashlight!

RAM'S HORN

HENRY EVANS, PEACE SOCIETY, TAKE BEATING

Dear Editor:

What's all this drivel and publicity lately about the activities of the so-called Peace Society? A group which has, actually, no place in the organization of a college, this crowd of illogical pacifists has been kicking up more fuss than a barrel of monkeys in its effort to secure publicity and get itself somewhere in the administration of student government. Why such an organization should have received a charter in the first place, or be allowed to exist at all, is beyond my comprehension. The spreading of propaganda of any sort, within the college, should not be countenanced under any circumstances, even though it may profess to be for the best interests of the students (a matter on which there seems to some element of doubt).

This is not intended to be a slam at the cause of peace or at the sincerity of the members of the society, but I fail to see why it must carry on all its business in such a ostentatious manner. If the members really are sincere, let them go ahead and enjoy themselves in their own little way, but it would be a relief to everyone if they would refrain from trying to impose their opinions on the rest of the college.

—OLD SUBSCRIBER.

Dear Editor:

Who is this guy Evans and what's the matter with him anyway? If he knows so much about how a paper should be run, why isn't he on the staff?

All the people I've talked to think he's crazy and are wondering why you bother to print his drivel. He said in his last feeble attempt at satirical comment that The Guardsman didn't have an editorial policy. Why didn't you refer him to the first issue of this semester, wherein you outlined a complete and detailed statement of policy.

He says that the editors of The Guardsman are "appealing to the baser instincts of the students." How does he know so much about "baser instincts?" If he knows so much about "sound judgment" and what the students should want, why doesn't he start a paper of his own?

All in all, I, and many others, feel Mr. Evans is just a crank who thinks he knows it all. We wish you would stop printing his trash or else give him a by-line and let him write the Ram's Horn as a column. It was good for a laugh (at him) but it shouldn't be taken too seriously.

—Woops, My Dear.

While not desiring to direct too much criticism at Master Evans, who undoubtedly means well in his own way, the Guardsman feels that "Woops My Dear" has some very sound ideas on the subject of the criticism which Evans has seen fit to fire at the Guardsman during the past two weeks through the medium of the Ram's Horn. In accordance with its policy, however, the Ram's Horn must continue to print the effervescences of anyone who may feel the urge to contribute, provided, of course, that it is aware of the identity of the writer.

Dear Editor:

While there is still an undecided situation concerning a proposed "dirt" column, I would like to offer a plan which may be successful, if properly executed.

A "dirt" column should never be undertaken by one person who inevitably has his finger pointing to a particular group. However, if several able journalists, (whose identity need be known to The Guardsman staff only) work together, it would eliminate the pre-stated difficulty.

In the January 26th issue of the Guardsman a ballot was proposed. The theory behind this plan is excellent, but how about reversing the process; that is, all those who DON'T want their names in print could sign a ballot.

Hoping this plan at least will be considered, I remain,

Sincerely, Sam Galstaun

• • •

Editor's Note:

The whole idea of a "dirt column" has been given up. Attempts to comply with student demands for such a column have failed to satisfy those who were most vociferous in their clamoring for it, so the entire project has been abandoned; given up as a bad job. It is hoped that this latest failure, not the first in the history of the paper, will serve to convince the advocates of a gossip column that such a feature has no place in a college paper, simply because the majority of the students do not approve of it and is not interested in it.

"dirt" columnist. For writing the very first of these idiotic pieces, I was doomed forever to wander the face of the earth in the shape of a black cat. My spirit could never hope for eternal peace. As an additional punishment, I was to have to try and argue every "dirt" columnist into giving up his madness.

I have often succeeded. Not so many years ago, I was able to persuade a young fellow by the name of Will Shakespeare into turning his talents to the drama rather than gossiping about the rakes of his [illegible] see he did prety well for him[illegible]o. There were many others [illegible]llowed my sound advice. [illegible]n't that I expect this kid Mac [illegible]unt to anything, but that I [illegible] see these people here at the [illegible] being forced to read such [illegible] It's a down-right waste of [illegible] If he follows my advice and [illegible]est writers, maybe we'll see [illegible]ing different. Let's hope so.

By Don Mix

Because of a conflict in dates we were forced to change the date of our club affiliation meeting and make it a day earlier. Here are the vital facts of the matter. An organizational meeting of all clubs of the college will be held tomorrow, Thursday, at 12 o'clock in room 206 at Powell Street. Each group is urgently requested to send a faculty sponsor, if possible, and one or more club representatives.

The meeting will be concerned with a discussion of the value and necessity of the affiliation movement and with the procedure of organizing all the clubs of the college into a single coordinating unit.

To reiterate for the 'steenth time, the purpose of this movement is to unify the extra-curricular life of the college into a single manageable unit in order to facilitate organization, direction and growth.

As to its more specific activities, the originators of the plan hope to have the affiliation resolve itself into several boards or committees to handle charters, publicity, sponsor inter-club activities and to select a representative (possibly the president of the affiliation) for the college Executive Council.

The Affiliation (or whatever you eventually choose to call it) will serve a definite need in the college so please cooperate with us to make it a success. Remember, Room 206, tomorrow at High Noon.

MIXING 'Em Up

WEEKLY DOUBT: "I won't be able to go to Santa Rosa on account of I gotta stay home and study."

• • • • •

The abbreviated deluge of the past weeks really put a crimp in the spring sports program. Trackmen kept their wind in shape by indulging in prolonged bull sessions in the Study Hall, the Crew made apathetic attempts to keep in condition by engaging in sporadic basketball games and the baseball team did their practicing by indulging in gruelling sessions of glove oiling in the locker room.

If the college fails to win any championships at least we will have a lovely hand-embroidered alibi.

Ram stock rallied considerably in local rowing circles when it was learned that the Powell Street navy had secured the services of that demon of the megaphone, Bligh "Captain Milton" Latz, veteran coxswain from Galileo. Latz is the personification of efficiency, coaching his lacidaisical charges on to new heights by the dint of biting sarcasm. Instead of keeping the rhythm by calling out the orthodox "stroke, stroke, stroke" Latz keeps time by jerking out in staccato sentences, "Carotto is loafing."

Yes, it is a very effective method.

After many weeks of hard work getting into condition, Joe Amori's boxing class has begun actual contact work. A visit to the gym during one of these workouts will show you that the lads have profited mightily from the long monotonous sessions that had to do with the fundamentals of blocking, jabbing, and footwork. Practically all of the members of the class handle themselves in a capable fashion while a few of the novice ringmen demonstrate the technique of veterans.

All of which gives evidence of a fine coaching job, my friends.

"Come to Junior College and see the world" might well serve as an advertisement for our institution. The football team is slated to go to Utah, the baseball squad will head for Los Angeles, the tennis aggregation will barnstorm thru southern regions and the crew goes over to row on lake Merritt.

INDOOR PRACTICE BY TRACK TEAM RESULT OF TOO MANY RAINS

Continuous showers last week again made it impossible for the college track team to get in any practice.

Track team aspirants not having much practice to date, were forced to train indoors by the medium of setting-up exercises.

According to Russ Sweet, track coach, "when the field at Kezar dries up, we will start to prepare for the meets seriously. Our first opponent, the University of California Frosh, which we meet on March 12, is a strong squad as it gathers its members from the former high school stars."

Some of these stars, as reported by The Daily Californian, are, Mel Long, high jumper, from Lowell High; Bob Musser, hurdler; distance runners, Don Lindsay, Bob Van Court and Wes Craig.

These stars coupled with an outstanding relay team, will make a potent threat to the Ram's track team and will provide an interesting if not exciting meet.

Lee's 'B-Boys' To Replace 'A' Team For Ball Season

Coach Lee Eisan after doing some deep thinking on baseball strategy has decided to use his "B" team in place of his "A" team this year.

Eisan's "B" team consists of "Bugs" Berman at the initial sack, "Blacky" Baker at the keystone bag, "Bashful" Baird covering the short-patch, and at the torrid corner he has "Bantam" Banta, and doing the catching will be Bob Balaam. This aggregation of "B" boys looks to be Eisan's starting infield.

Other boys who will see plenty of action on this "B" team are "Brilliant Dave" Johnson and Barney Viner, catchers. "Big Ed" Curcio "Beanpole Bill" Williams are Eisan's choice to handle the pitching.

Flychasers who Lee has his eye on are "Bubblesnose" Egelhofer in the right field pasture, and in the center field spot "Babyface" Paul Hjort. "Balboa Frank" Nilan has the edge over other leftfielders due to his blinding speed.

NEW TEAM MANAGERS ELECTED BY WOMENS ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

With a larger percentage voting than in any past semester, eleven women were elected to as many managerial positions in the Women's Athletic Association late last week.

The selection of both baseball and riding managers was decided by one vote. Margaret Meader defeated Ruth Gustaffson for the post of baseball manager and Mardis Mullin was elected riding manager, defeating Betty MacKenzie by the narrow margin of one vote. In four sports, rifle, tennis, dancing, and ice skating, a single candidate ran uncontested. The managers for these four sports are: rifle, Virginia Kwiatt; tenis, Jean Lonkey; dancing, Esther Tani; and ice skating, Margaret Wormell.

Other managers elected to office are: basketball, Ethel Vizzard; badminton, Miriam Fraizer; swimming, Marion Falconer; and golf, Gloria Swiegood. The race was close for all contested offices, with the majority of candidates well known from past semester's activities.

"We are all pleased at the interest shown in the election this semester," said Gail Hanna, vice-president and in charge of the election. "The large increase in the number of voters shows that the WAA is rapidly increasing in popularity with the women of the college. By this semester's activities we plan to prove that the interest of the college, in our sports was more than fully justified."

The elections were conducted by WAA officers, Dorothy Canavan, president, Gail Hanna, vice-president, Dorothy Sanderson, secretary, Ellen Cumming, treasurer, and Janet Falconer. All women who were active in sports last semester or who planned to make WAA activities part of their program this semester, were eligible to vote.

Managers are expected to arrange extra activities, keep records of participants and attendance and at the end of the semester, turn in to the WAA council a complete record of all events held during the semester. Upon election, they automatically became members of the council.

Crew Will Defend Trophy In Annual Regatta Tuesday

Oarsmen to Open Season With Race Against Local College and Club Boatmen

Defending the trophy they won last spring, Admiral Jack Gaddy's crewmen will race next Tuesday in the Washington's Birthday Regatta, to be held at the Aquatic Park.

Other participants in the event are the San Mateo crew, the Oakland Polytechnical crew, and crews from the University of San Francisco and San Francisco State College, according to Gaddy.

Because of heavy rain and wind, the crew has not been able to hold regular practice periods, but in order to keep the crewmen in shape, Gaddy will resume the daily workouts—rain or shine, he said.

ENERGY NEEDED

He also said that for the next few days emphasis would be placed on the development of endurance and form so that each man would have "that extra reserve of energy" in case of a close finish.

Most potent rival to the supremacy of Gaddy's champions is the University of San Francisco crew which took second place in last year's contest, and which has one of the strongest aggregations in the field.

Newest addition to the crew is Milton Latz, former four years coxswain for the Galileo crew, who will probably hold the tiller in the forthcoming regatta, according to Gaddy.

Nine of the twelve oarsmen who have been chosen to row in the first boat, are Bob Carotto, Merv Weiner, Carl Brogger, "Lefty" Cregi, Ken Pasqualette, Charles Rice, Don Mix, Art Nelson, and Dick Simpers. The remaining three oarsmen are not yet decided upon according to Gaddy.

The race, which is five-eighths of a mile long, is one of the toughest encounters of the season, Gaddy said. But he was optimistic about the chances of retaining the trophy.

RAIN AGAIN

"Our practice periods have suffered on account of the rain, but none of the other schools have been able to hold practice either so I believe we have an even chance of winning," he said.

It is not known whether Gaddy's recently acquired tow-launch will be in working order by February 22, but it was reported that the boat will be used for coaching purposes later in the season. Howard Cloud, crew manager, has been repairing the launch and getting it in shape. He said that it would be painted white with natural wood trimmings, and would be named the "Rambler."

Hottentot Game Held Up By Block SF Meet; Will Play Next Week

Postponement of the basketball classic scheduled for last night between the Junior College Hottentots and the Colored Giants, spectacular casaba troupe from Oakland, was made necessary by the fact that the Block SF Society met last night, and, since most of the players on the Hottentots are members of this organization, they were unable to play.

The contest, however, will be played next week at the gymnasium of Everett Junior High. Everett was chosen for the tilt rather than the Galileo gym because of its increased seating capacity. A huge throng is expected to turn out to support the local squad, as the facilities at Galileo were not considered adequate for its accommodation.

The Colored Giants are reputed to be one of the most powerful teams in the East Bay, besides being the largest, and will probably be favored over the Hottentots, although the latter squad is composed of several of this institution's outstanding athletes, and must be conceded a royal chance to stage an upset. Among the stars on the Hottentot quintet are Don Mix, Arthur Nelson, Dick Simpers, Dick Holmes, Jerry Flamm, Merv Weiner, and Carl "Distended Abdomen" Brogger.

Colored aces playing for the Giants include such basketball notables as Rastus Schultz, Pedro O'Shaugnessy, and Meredith Bacigalupi, former all-city star from Fremont.

Undefeated for the past three seasons, the Giants will be trying hard to preserve their record, but the Hottentots are fired to fever pitch, and all indications point toward a nip-and-tuck battle of the most thrilling sort.

RAM HIGH SCORER

Conlan's Doggedly Determined Rams In Second Game Victory

Dogged determination not to be beaten managed to break even with supposedly superior team play when Dutch Conlan's battling Rams split a doubleheader with the previously undefeated Modesto Junior College Pirates in games held at Kezar Pavilion last Friday and Saturday nights.

Blowing a seven point lead in the closing minutes, the locals dropped the first game of the series on Friday night by a 33-28 margin. On the following evening a Ram five fired to an unbeatable pitch outplayed the champions all the way to win by a 45-35 score.

In the first game it was a nip and tuck tussle between the scrappy Conlanmen's ball-hawking tactics and the smooth passing of the Modesto quintet. The shoot and follow method of the Red-clad cagers, motivated by some classy work under the basket by Alex Opalinski, center, and Ed Curcio, brilliant guard, proved a mite more effective in the first half, and the San Franciscans left the hardwood with an 18-16 lead.

OPAL, ED HOT

The ruthless Rams continued to outstrip the highly touted Bucs in the early minutes of the second stanza when Opalinski and lanky Ed Curcio both got their eye, and finally ran up a 27-20 lead.

The bubble burst at this point, however, and the Modestans led by the huge and capable Jim Rickert, finally began to click with their fast breaking attack. Tom Goodnight and Chuck Lambert, Pirate forwards, pierced holes in the tiring Ram defense and shot the inland city cagers into a 29-27 lead with but two minutes left to play.

Erratic passing caused by the pressure of the moment completely halted the Powell Streeters attack, and allowed Coach Jack Gardener's lads to hoop through two more field goals to make the final count 33-28.

DIFFERENT STORY

The second game of the series told a completely different story. The locals were no longer awed by the impressive record of the Modesto Pirates. They had come very close to upsetting the title holders in the first game and had the necessary confidence to win on Saturday night.

It was a fired up, grimly determined squad that took the floor. Their passing and ball handling was swift and sure, their shooting seemingly infallible, and their defense was dynamite. Playing their best game of the season the Conlanmen took the lead immediately and were never headed.

There can be no individual hero when seven men manage to give a history-making demonstration of perfect team play. One man, however, was particularly outstanding. It was big Ed Curcio from Oakland who had his "hot" night at the expense of the champs and gained high score with 18 digits. Treacy Slattery and Willie Blackfield, fiery forwards, both played sensational basketball as did Alex Opalinski, center, and Harold Fischer, giant guard. Bill Phelan and Henry James augmented the starting five and gave a fine performance.

College Bowlers Forced Into Aquatic Activity

Physical Education students who enrolled for bowling have been unable to attend classes during the past month because a strike of bowling alley employees caused cessation of all activity on the alleys. Consequently, the class activity has been changed to swimming until such time as the allays open. The classes, under the direction of Joe Amori, will meet every Monday at the Chinese Y.M.C.A. at 11 o'clock, and attendance is compulsory if a student is to receive physical education credit for the course.

RAM HOOPSTERS, STUDENT BODY JOURNEY TO SANTA ROSA FRIDAY

Willie Blackfield, Treacy Slattery, Ed Curcio, Alex Opalinski and Harold Fischer Again To Compose San Francisco Junior College Starting Lineup

By JACK SCHMALE

Louis "Dutch" Conlan and his entourage of Ram basketballers travel northward some 50 miles this Friday evening to encounter Santa Rosa in the current conference race. Just to make themselves "feel at home", the bucket tossers will have the student body in tow on a Northwestern Pacific special train which leaves Friday afternoon at 4:45 o'clock; BUT, don't forget that Santa Rosa's quintet collides with the Rams tonight at Kezar Pavilion at 8 o'clock sharp!

The Rose City institution this season is represented by a team composed mostly of freshmen. These freshies, however, include some very capable former high school stars, who were drafted from such surrounding communities as Sebastopol, Healdsburg and Napa, to say nothing of Santa Rosa.

Local interest has been rapidly mounting on the proposed railroad jaunt, which is offered for $1.25 a Ram. The special will leave Sausalito pier upon arrival of the boat, which leaves the Ferry building at 4:45 o'clock Friday afternoon.

ARRIVES 7 O'CLOCK

The Ram Special is due in Santa Rosa at 7 o'clock, allowing the excursionists one hour to partake of supper before game time, at 8 o'clock. It is scheduled to depart homeward at 10 o'clock.

This will be one of the most convenient sports excursions ever staged, as the train will leave for San Francisco from the Junior College campus! A Northwestern Pacific spur line runs through the Santa Rosa school's grounds, and arrangements have been made to have the train waiting on these tracks, which are less than 100 yards from the gym.

OPALINSKI STARS

The Rams, who have shown a constant improvement in their consecutive conference starts, will follow their ace pivot man, Alex Opalinski, into the Santa Rosa battles. Opalinski tallied 20 field goals and 11 free tosses in the first four games, for a total of 51 points. He stands second behind "Bud" Smith, ace Marin forward.

Around Opalinski will be found Treacy Slattery and Willie Blackfield at forwards, and the "skyscraper twins", Ed Curcio and Harold Fischer, at guards.

Tom Wilson's Junior Varsity will collide with an as yet unnamed opponent at 6:45 this evening.

WOMEN'S SPORTS PARADE

By JEAN PAGE

At long last, WAA nominations and elections have been completed. The new managers have now unofficially assumed their duties and responsibilities, the pomposity of official recognition being reserved for the WAA luncheon. Those in charge deserve a word of praise, for the elections were exceedingly efficient and successful, with more women voting for managers than in any previous semester, an indication of the growing popularity of the WAA. Here's hoping the new managers really make their women's sports parade for them this semester.

• • •

A committee has been formed to revise the WAA constitution. Chairman of the committee is Margaret Wormell, who assisted in framing the first constitution and who has had experience with all phases of the W.A.A. Other committee members are Dot Canavan, Dorothy Sanderson, and Janet Falconer.

• • •

An ice carnival, which everyone may attend, will be sponsored by the ice skating class sometime this semester. The journalistic stuff of life, namely place, time, date and details, still remains shrouded in that hazy fog of undetermined plans, but will be revealed later.

• • •

Gail Hanna and Virginia Kwiatt will compete in the Women's Rifle Championship match to be held in February, the former also shooting in the Tyro 50-foot Mixed Rifle Match in March. The aforementioned Hanna and Kwiatt will also shoot their way to glory for good old San Francisco in the Women's Intercollegiate Championship match during April, a match is being arranged with Tennessee Junior College and the entire women's team, composed of Edna Wedam, Margaret Parke, Lita Davis, Virginia Kwiatt, and Gail Hanna, will hold a match with Carnegie Tech. All the matches are postal, which means that the teams send their scores to each another instead of shooting at the same place, and everyone is very trusting, don't you think?

• • •

And if whoever counted the ballots in the recent WAA elections is wondering who voted for the "other girl" in ice skating when Margaret Wormell was the single candidate running for manager of this sport, let it now be known that Margaret herself was the guilty party. It seems that Margaret refused to submit to the inevitable and commit the political sin of voting for herself.

The WAA women's baseball team issues a challenge to any group of women who think they can form a nine of sufficient ability to afford the WAA group some competition.

COLLEGE MERMEN IN CLOSE VICTORY OVER WINGED O SECONDS

With the last event deciding the victor, the college swimming team defeated the Olympic Club seconds at the latter's pool. The meet was held last Wednesday, February 9, the final score being San Francisco Junior College, 38 and Olympic Club, 37.

Herb Brotman, star from last year's team and Marcus Hoffman played outstanding parts in downing the club team. Both enacted "Iron Man" parts by each winning their events and participating on the winning relay team, whose points decided the meet.

BROTMAN RETURNS

Herb Brotman, returning for his second year of competition showed that future teams desiring to defeat the Ram swimmers must find means of preventing him from entering the point columns. Brotman placed first in the 50 yard Free Style and the 100 yard Free Style. His times were 24.7 and 58 flat respectively. It was in the final event that he climaxed his afternoon's efforts by swimming the anchor lap on the relay team in the 400 yard Relay, bringing home victory to the college.

Marcus Hoffman was right on Brotman's heels for individual honors. Hoffman won the 220 yard Free Style and the 440 yard Free Style. The winning times for these events were 2:37 and 5:43 respectively. This is Hoffman's first year of competition for the college but he has had much experience swimming for other organizations, notably the Jewish Community Center. Hoffman also swam a lap on the winning relay team. All the team members showed plenty of fight along with school spirit. Without proper training facilities, the team has had to practice in various swimming pools in the city.

NEW TALENT

Coach Sweet is looking ahead to future meets but is still trying to strengthen the team. To date there has been a noticeable weakness in the backstroke and breaststroke events. Anyone having any swimming ability especially in the aforementioned events should contact Sweet or Herb Brotman.

Initiation Banquet To Be Held By WAA

Thursday, February 24, has been selected as the date of the semi-annual WAA luncheon. New members will take the membership pledge and sign the membership book at this, the first WAA social activity of the semester, and termed officially as the initiation, orientation luncheon. The recently elected managers will be introduced and the purpose and ideals of the WAA will be outlined in speeches by the organization's officers.

Women who have been selected to serve as chairman of the various committees are: Miriam Fraizer, general chairman; Marjorie Ilg, decoration chairman; Jackie Kramer, arrangements chairman; and Ruth Hacke, rearrangements chairman. The chairman of each committee will select her assistants from the list of women who signed up for committee work.

Group Debates Best U.S. Policy To Keep Out of New Dispute

Debate concerning the best method of maintaining peace occupied the major portion of last night's meeting of the Peace Society at the home of Doris Speroni.

Frank Matsumoto led the argument for an isolationist policy, stressing that the neutrality law and similar measures would avoid foreign entanglements. Elizabeth Rehbock presented the case for collective security, pointing out the necessity of cooperating with other nations to quell further outbreaks in the world. She emphasized that if America is to keep out of armed conflicts, war must be kept out of the world. Following Matsumoto's and Miss Rehbock's presentations of the questions that are causing extensive discussion throughout the country, the other students present gave their views on the subject.

"There is still room," Ray Valdez, leader of the Society said, "for students interested in peace to join the Society. We study the methods of maintaining and establishing peace and carry on activity for peace. Anyone in accord with our aims is invited to join the organization. The question that was discussed last night is a controversial one and is yet to be settled by the peace movement. For those people that were not able to attend the meeting and who would like to get both sides of the problem, I suggest that they read the February 2 issue of the 'New Republic.' It is available in the college library."

Besides President Valdez, other officers of the Peace Society are: Miss Rehbock, vice president; Doris Speroni, secretary; and Fred Vast, corresponding secretary. Faculty advisers to the group are: Gertrude Bolton, history instructor; William Goss, economics instructor; and John Ross, social studies instructor and coordinator of the new course dealing with the problems of war and peace.

Speech Students Visit Chinatown

Armed to the teeth with a candid camera and their most charming instructor, eight members of Speech 55, a class in the history of the theatre, braved last Thursday evening's storm and descended upon San Francisco's Chinatown to witness a performance in the world-famous Chinese theatre.

"It was swell" more talkative members of the party said, "even though we couldn't understand anything. We spent most of our time peicing the play together according to our own ideas and munching on rice cakes, dried watermelon and other Chinese delicacies."

According to the more modest among the group, the real menace of the evening was not in the play but one of their own little chums, a Mister Wenberg, who toted the aforementioned candid camera.

Forum To Feast In Oakland On Sunday

Featuring the next meeting of the College Forum will be a dinner, in addition to the regular discussion, at the home of John Ward, 533 Kenmore Avenue, in Oakland on Sunday afternoon, February 20, at four o'clock.

San Francisco members of the club will meet at three o'clock in front of the Ferry Building to make the trip across the bay. Cars will be waiting to take the group to Ward's home from the station. Because many of the organization's members live in the East Bay area it was decided to hold the next meeting at Ward's place.

"All those that will attend the meeting," Ward said, "should sign up immediately with Dorothy Mercer or William Goss, faculty advisers; Fred Vast, Forum chairman; or myself. Deadline for sign-ups is tomorrow, Thursday, at one o'clock."

Topic under discussion will be "Should the United States compete with private enterprise in the public utilities field?" Tom Tillberry will undertake to prove that it would be desirable for the government to compete with business, while Joe Lee opposes the proposition. Following the presentation of the pros and cons by Lee and Tillberry the group will argue the question with each member giving his or her ideas on the subject.

McAllister Wins French Election

Officers were elected last Wednesday for "Le Circle Francais", the college French Club. This semester, the organization will be led by President Betty McAllister, who will be assisted by Vice-President Elwin Marg and Secretary-Treasurer Esther Tani.

Last Friday the Club's members went "en masse" to see "Mayerling", which is considered one of the best French films yet produced.

"All students who wish to attend the Clay Theatre either for the current French film or any other feature production will be admitted for 25 cents upon the presentation of their associated students card," said Miss Helene Kelly, Club sponsor.

Soldiers, Goblets Scrub Hotel Steps

Washing the front steps of the Saint Francis Hotel was only one of the numerous obligations newly initiated members of the Army and Navy Club were subjected to, last Friday, during the rough house initiation staged by the organization.

New recruits played "Ring-a-round-the-Rosy" on the front steps of the Sir Francis Drake Hotel, much to the consternation of the stately looking doorman. They handed out transfers on cable cars, washed windows of taxi cabs, passed out meal tickets in restaurants, and generally created havoc and consternation wherever they appeared.

Compelled to drill up and down Powell Street, in true militaristic fashion, the new recruits disrupted traffic and sent civilians scurrying for cover.

Highlight of the occasion was the fishing party held by the newly initiated in the fresh water streams of Powell Street . . . only fish caught, however, were suckers.

New members were sufficiently recovered from their hectic ordeals to attend the formal installation and dinner at President William Carroll's home, 149 Kensington Way, on the following evening. T. Gordon Sollman, of the Hotel and Restaurant Division, was chief cook for the occasion. The fancy menu was supervised under his direction.

Present at the formal installation and dinner were former members: John Steward, Jim Fuller, Sid Farley, Chris Harnett, and Eddie Solliman. Mr. James Hughes, faculty advisor to the club and Mr. Stall, faculty member, were also present.

Deutscher Verein Hears Traveler

Der "Deutsche Verein", college German society, held its second annual meeting of the semester on Tuesday, February 8. Alfred Neel, recently returned from Europe, told the Club of his interesting experiences in Switzerland and Germany.

The next meeting will be held at the home of Helen Nast, 4124 - 24th St., near Castro. The meeting place may be reached by taking cars K or L and transfer to Eureka bus.

The future plans of the German Club include a report by Ronald Smith on recent readings of Germany, and an interview from Mr. C. R. Breull, Editor of the California Democrat, weekly German paper.

Banquet Planned By Fraternity

Conducted by President Ed Canapa, the Beta Phi Society discussed plans for an initiation banquet to be held the last week of February. The pledges to be initiated then will be: Steve Johnson, Marshall Swenson, Bob Baalam, Jack Jones, Harold Krenz, and Cliff Morgan.

Plans were also introduced for a dance to be held on April 1, but no definite committees were announced nor was the place where it will be held be decided upon.

Nipponese Cabinet Discusses Action

In keeping with its platform for the semester, the Japanese Club held a cabinet meeting on Monday evening to plan its future activities.

Joe Takashita, secretary of the Club, stated that the success of the recent Frosh Reception has served to spur the Club in its endeavor to promote more and bigger activities this semester. "The Club is working on several activities which will be announced at a later date," said Takashita.

Musicians Meet At Francis', Tonight

Meeting for the purpose of furthering semester plans, the Music Club will gather at Eva Francis' house tonight, 1695 - 12th Ave. "Dates for the Variety Show and other activities are still indefinite," said Wesley Pomroy, president. "After the meeting tonight we will be more certain about what we are going to do."

Faculty Gather At Galileo Thurs.

The Faculty Association will hold a meeting Thursday, February 24, from 4 to 6 o'clock in room 458 at Galileo High School.

Dr. Sewell will make a progress report on the recommendations of the Curriculum Committee and Charles Adams, prominent San Francisco attorney, will speak on "The Layman's View of an Ideal for the Junior College."

Business Women To Meet February 28

Associated Business Women of the college met for their monthly dinner and meeting at the Elizabeth Inn, January 31. The constitution of the organization was read, and amendments voted upon. Election of officers resulted in the following selections: President, Elfriede Buchwald; Secretary, Donna McPherson; Treasurer, Ruth Cotter. The retiring officers are: Ethel Flynn, President; Mildred Ross, Secretary; Dorothy Chase, Treasurer. In the absence of the retiring president Miss Doris Becker acted as president, pro tem.

Plans were presented for new interests and activities for the coming year. Appointed to head committees were Ethel Jones of the Program and Speakers' Committee; Geraldine Ford of the Recreation and Social Activities Committee.

All women members of the Business Department who might be interested in attending the next meeting Monday night, February 28, should get in touch with Margaret Flournoy, Business Department instructor, before the date of the meeting. Miss Flournoy predicted that the meeting would prove both beneficial and interesting to the guests, because each member will make a short speech discussing her experience in obtaining a position, the firm she works with, and the kind of work she is doing at present.

Initiation Set For Feb. 23 By Omicron

At the meeting of the Omicron Phi Pi Society last Wednesday, plans were discussed for an initiation of the new members, and the date set is Wednesday, February 23, according to Bill Switzer, chairman of the membership committee. After the initiation, a banquet will be held at the home of Dr. Michael Zarchin, to welcome its new members.

"Plans were discussed for an open forum discussion, at the home of each of the members at different times during the semester," asserts Switzer. At which time, one member of the Club will prepare a paper on some vital economic subject, to be presented at the meeting.

Service Women Prepare For Sale

Monday, February 14, witnessed the regular meeting of the Women's Service Society held at the home of Lou Hagerman. It was decided to have a rummage sale to raise funds for the scholarship award but the date of the sale has not been set yet.

Realizing that everything must have a beginning, members of the Club elected Jacqueline Kramer as Historian to preserve for posterity the record of the activities of the Society since its founding in August, 1936.

Skating Sign-up Deadline Today

Sign-up deadline for the College Rifle and Pistol Club skating party to be held tomorrow night has been set for this afternoon at Galileo or tomorrow afternoon for rare cases. All money must be paid Don Smith, Club treasurer, who will take a post between the lions, under the bridge, at Galileo. He can also be found, in the morning between classes, by the Faculty table at Powell Street.

College NYA Check Reaches $1875 Mark

The United States government allots San Francisco Junior College $1875 for payment of NYA checks, Helene Turner, National Youth Administration head revealed yesterday. "By the end of the month there will be 175 students working 30 hours a month and averaging $12.00 apiece," she said. "It is hoped that when our payroll is completely filled, and when we have taken care of all students who need it, that we will be able to increase the number of hours to 33 or 35 a month instead of the present 30 hours."

The government emphasizes the NYA as financial aid for those students interested completely in their college education, and because it gives the student an opportunity to work under actual job conditions and to receive vocational experience. Interests aroused by working on a particular NYA project sometimes leads to choice of that work for a life vocation, records show.

By Anne Rabinowitz

Sometimes the key to the selection of a career is the recognition of a need which an individual feels the world urgently requires, but which he can readily supply. It is often said that modern industry has driven out the old-time craftsman, but this cannot be true. Expert watchmakers are rare and receive surprisingly ample salaries. Violin makers, too, are much sought after.

The arts are supposedly the most difficult in which to succeed, and yet they offer the most novel livelihood of all. An artist who is not becoming famous in the usual way would still remain a misfit by switching to another skill. Instead he can follow the example of so many others by employing his talent in a novel, enticing manner.

One painter grew tired of haunting the abodes of collectors and dealers, so he loaded his pictures on a truck and went to the desert. At each ranch he would lean his paintings against the fences for the approval and inspection of all hands. These he sold for whatever he could get. If one hand purchased a picture, the others would enthusiastically follow suit, until he returned home, pockets full of money.

A musician, who was excellently equipped for a concert career, argued with his puzzled folks that because there were no musicians in his home town, he could help his fellow townsmen by opening a studio and teaching them what he had to learn by leaving home. In answer to his friends' protests that he could give concerts, he replied this was not a concert town. About becoming a conductor, he retorted that there is no orchestra here.

As soon as his pupils were advanced, he presented them with careers by having them prepare the younger pupils for him, and then included the youngsters in a concert group which he formed. Now he has a full orchestra which commands an audience of two thousand, with a low admission price as proceeds are divided among the players. The leader has the reward of knowing he has an anxious waiting list of pupils, and he has made his town musical.

The higher up the scale of social and business relations one goes, the greater and more varied become the obligations and privileges. The question is, however, how does one know if he is properly equipped? Two small booklets which help to banish many fears about social behavior can be purchased at the book store at 540 Powell Street, for the nominal price of 15 cents, each. One is entitled, "The Technique of Good Manners", and is a handbook for college men; the other is "Good Manners for Women". Both booklets are written by Mary Perin Barker.

HEA MEMBERS EAT JAPANESE LUNCH THURS.

Tomorrow, from 12 to 2 o'clock, members of the Household Economics Association will eat and be merry at a Japanese luncheon, to be held at the Yamato Hotel, 717 California Street. As twenty is the maximum number of women who can be accommodated at the luncheon, those who wish to attend, should see the HEA officers immediately. The meal will cost 75 cents, which is a reduction of the usual price.

The luncheon is part of a plan by the HEA to study international customs, foods and costumes. The Yamato is a typical Japanese hotel and those attending will eat sukiyaki and rice with chopsticks, sit on atamis (Japanese mats), and watch the meal be prepared before them. Of special interest, will be the interior decoration of the room in which emphasis is placed on one picture and one bowl of flowers, a style which is imitated in many American homes today.

"This would be a good opportunity for new members to discover how interesting our HEA social activities are," said Cecil Thompson, president, "and we hope that all women who are HEA members will come to the luncheon if possible. It is a good plan for new members to start from the first to attend and enjoy all HEA activities."

Last semester the HEA, in its study of foreign foods, visited Swedish, Japanese, and Chinese restaurants. The club also gave a Christmas party and inspected a Home Economics display at the University of California.

The regular monthly meeting will be held today at 2:15 o'clock, in room 317 at Galileo. The purpose of the meeting is to decided upon the nature of an event to be given during April. All members are urged to be present and give their suggestions as to what would constitute a novel and enjoyable form of entertainment.

USF ANNOUNCES ANNUAL GIFT OF 2 SCHOLARSHIPS

To promote higher scholastic achievement and to cement a closer bond between the University of San Francisco and the college, the University is again offering two scholarships in its College of Liberal Arts to sophomore men of the Junior College, announced President Cloud, upon receipt of a letter from Rev. Harold E. Ring, S.J., president of the University.

The scholarships, one for two years and one for one year, are to be awarded to the eligible students who place first and second in a written examination. Men students, who are completing their third or fourth semester and who have maintained a B average or better in their University grade studies, are eligible to compete in an examination, which will be given on April 2 at the University.

Local Committee

The University of San Francisco Scholarship Committee, composed of local faculty members, John Selig, chairman, Francis Colligan, Lloyd Luckmann, John Gaddy, and Mary Jane Learnard, will write the examination and grade the papers, its decision being final. Students will be tested in English composition and literature, current events, sociology, American national government, hygiene, public speaking, philosophy, and economics. The two winners will receive non-transferable scholarships.

No Discrimination

There will be no discrimination because of race or religious belief. As no outside college will compete with the sophomore men, eligible students have a reasonable chance of receiving this opportunity for higher education.

The two-year scholarship to be awarded to the student who obtains the highest grade in the examination, and the one-year scholarship, to be given for the second-highest achievement, will be presented to the winners at the annual commencement by President Archibald Cloud, of the college.

Two-Year Award

Awarded the two-year scholarship last year was Charles O'Gara, member of the Forum, and prominent in the peace movement, and given the one-year award was Bradley Schwartz.

Interested students will be given helpful information concerning the content of the examination and the offerings of the University by the members of the Scholarship Committee, Selig announced.

Expressing approval of the offer, President Archibald J. Cloud, of the Junior College, said that these scholarships ought to be of advantage to both institutions.

"We are pleased," he said, "that we should have again deserved this recognition in the eyes of the University of San Francisco. We are glad to work in complete harmony and cooperation with this institution which, as everyone knows, has attained a very high standard of scholarship. Students should have knowledge of this opportunity."

San Francisco Junior College is the first institution to receive scholarships from the University.

PEACE SOCIETY PONDERS PLEDGE

With collective security as a means of maintaining peace already endorsed, the Peace Society will discuss the Oxford Pledge, another important peace policy, on Wednesday night, March 9, at the home of Marion Turner, 2330 Larkin Street.

After heated discussion last week the Society decided to take a definite stand as to the best method of keeping war from spreading of the world. The policy of international cooperation to halt the aggressor was finally agreed upon when it became clear to the group that immediate measures must be taken to safeguard peace. The organization is convinced that collective security is the most feasible method for immediate results to meet an emergency. Letters will be sent to San Francisco congressmen, California senators, and the State Department in Washington urging support of such a policy to be followed by the United States.

The Oxford Pledge originated in Oxford University in England and rapidly spread throughout the world. The person taking the oath pledges not to Official welcome will be extended to new members of the Women's Athletic Association at the initiation luncheon to be held Tuesday, March 1, at 1:15 o'clock in the Galileo faculty cafeteria. All WAA members are invited to attend.

WAA To Hold Initiation Luncheon Next Tuesday

The initiation will be ceremoniously conducted this semester. By candlelight and while a pianist, Helen Nast, plays the new college song, "Alma Mater," new members will take the WAA pledge and sign the ornate membership book. The cafeteria will be decorated in the college colors, red and white. Each table will be decorated to represent a sport with managers acting as hostesses.

"We hope our first social activity for this semester will be as big a success as our recent election was," said Dorothy Canavan, WAA president. "The general chairman of the luncheon committees, Miriam Frazier, has worked diligently to make the luncheon as delightful as possible, and I am sure that all the women who attend will have a good time and reach a better understanding of the purposes and functions of the WAA."

The recently elected managers will be officially installed and introduced to other members. Women selected to serve as managers of the various sports this semester are, Margaret Meader, Mardis Mullin, Virginia Kwiatt, Jean Lonkey, Esther Tani, Margaret Wormell, Ethel Vizzard, Miriam Frazier, Marion Falconer, and Gloria Swicegood.

It is planned to have general chairman, Miriam Frazier, deliver the welcoming address. Other speeches will be made by Vera Spencer, club sponsor, in which she will explain the award system, and Dorothy Canavan, who will outline the purposes of the WAA.

The price for the luncheon has not been determined, but it will not exceed forty cents. Special guests who have been invited are, Margaret Dougherty, women's adviser; Helene Turner, NYA director, and Dr. Alice Potter, college women's physician.

Women who are serving as chairmen of the various committees are: Miriam Frazier, general chairman; Marjorie Ilg, decoration chairman; Jackie Kramer, arrangements chairman; and Ruth Hacke, rearrangements chairman.

PGE Study Hall Will Remain Open To 4:00

That the study hall in the Pacific Gas & Electric Building will remain open until 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon hereafter, was revealed this week by Paul Pitman, assistant to President Cloud.

This was made possible by Robert Gray, Deputy Superintendent of Adult Education, who sent Mrs. Gertrude Revely and Mrs. Mildred Benson to assist the college as it rapidly expands.

Mrs. Benson will help Marion Turner in the reserve room of the college library to handle the crowds. She will also supervise the PG&E study hall. Mrs. Revely will act as a hostess in the women's lounge.

War, Peace Problems Survey Introduces New Type Course

Although first introduced this semester, Sociology 55, "Problems of War and Peace," is proving to be one of the more popular courses in the college, if attendance is a proof. It consists of lectures by faculty members who are authorities in their field, and is under the direction of John E. Ross, social studies instructor.

The course was introduced into the curriculum at the requests of students and was actively campaigned for by the Peace Society which, together with a faculty committee, made final plans for instituting it.

First lectures to be given this semester were those by William Goss on the economic aspects of war and peace. He was followed by John Horowitz who dealt with the psychology of the problem. Henry Ralston proved biologically that man is not inherently war-like. The League of Nations and attempts to stop war were discussed by John Gerstung. Articles dealing with war and peace affecting the world and the United States in current magazines are assigned to be read. Students in the course have contributed to a magazine fund so that many publications with several copies of each can be obtained for a cheaper price than if each student bought his own magazine.

Both Ross and the students have praised the course highly. Besides the regularly enrolled students there are many who are auditing the class which meets on Tuesdays and Thursdays in Room 201 at 11 o'clock at Powell Street. "The lectures have been brilliant and penetrating," Ross commented, "and have been truly worthwhile." Robert Young, one of the students, declared that "the course has been very informative and very interesting; it is really good."

Tomorrow Lloyd Luckmann lectures on international law. He will be followed by Franklin Sewell, who will talk about American neutrality. James Hughes and Grant Marsh are slated to present the naval and military policy of the U. S. Government. Thomas Gabbert and Gertrude Bolton will discuss the wars in Spain and China. If time permits, other subjects will be worked into the course. The semester will end with a summary by Ross and discussion by the class.

Schmale's Burlesque To Keynote Friday's Rally For San Mateo

By Florence Murphy

Hailing it modestly as "The Epic of the Age," "the greatest since The Birth Of A Nation" and even as "pretty good," Jack Schmale, college publicity man and playwright of no mean sorts, will present his satire on Junior College life, "Joe's Junior College," as the high spot on the program of a rally to be held Friday afternoon, February 25, in honor of the approaching basketball games with San Mateo.

"Yes, sir," Schmale said, reluctantly, "I think we've really got something; We have three acts and a cast of about thirty of the college notables to say nothing of a very surprising theme. The drama takes place in a mythical junior college in Myohmy, Florida, known to the kids as 'Joe's J.C.' To tell very much about the plot would spoil the play for the spectators, but, not casting any reflection on last week's production of "The Villain Still Pursued Her," it will probably be one of the most gigantic, tremendous, and mildly colossal artistic attempts ever put on in Junior College history."

Cast Revealed

Schmale said that his cast included such veterans of the footlights as the Verducci boys, Bob (the hero, remember?) Fex, and Kenn Pasqueletti as well as Al Williams, dignified (except when he trucks) Men's Club prexy, Mel Chicazola and Hughie Waite, who, Schmale insists, will be a sensation.

For the benefit of those who resent the fact that no programs are handed out at rallies, The Guardsman herewith prints a copy of the complete cast, which may be clipped out and taken along to save confusion.

Adams Delighted

Stan Adams, college yell leader and chairman of the rally committee, announced his delight at obtaining the services of the Schmale players for the rally.

"It is a great privilege," he said, "to be able to bring drama down to the level of the general public. Never before, since the earliest days of San Francisco Junior College, has an attempt been made to educate the students into an appreciation of the finer things in life. Through this presentation of 'A Day At Joe's Junior College' (to give its formal title), we hope to cultivate a taste for classic entertainment and set a standard to be followed by future yell leaders."

Adams said that other features of the rally would be lots of yells and some more of that community singing that has suddenly become so popular at junior college rallies.

Debate Squad To Attend 4th Coast Meeting

Fechtner, Healy To Uphold Compulsory Arbitration At Student Congress

Six varsity debaters will attend the fourth annual Pacific Coast Student Congress at Berkeley next Friday and Saturday, February 25 and 26. Three students will journey to Modesto to participate in a forum at the southern city Friday, February 25.

Paul Fechtner and John Healy will uphold compulsory arbitration of labor disputes while Elizabeth Rehbock condemns the method at Modesto. Fechtner, Healy, Tom Tillberry, Charles Vaughn, James Armstrong, and George Woodland will represent the college at the debate congress at the University of California.

Besides listening to speakers and participating in round tables, delegates will also attend luncheons and a dance. Purposes of the conference are to establish collegiate academic relations, discussion of world events and conditions pertinent to every college student at round tables presided over by recognized authorities, and to stimulate deep realization of the college student's position.

Phi Rho Pi, the college debating society, accepted the proposal of Al Williams, AMS president, and Don Mix, Associated Students' president, for a discussion or debate by means of a forum on problems of student government. Varsity debaters and Mix and Williams will be the speakers. The date of the student assembly will be set by Paul M. Pitman, assistant to President Cloud.

Commenting on the topic, Lloyd Luckmann, forensics mentor and chairman for the assembly, said, "It is not improbable that, as far as student activities are concerned, this assembly will be the most important and fascinating of the entire semester."

Forum Deadline Now March 25 To Allow For April Release

Deadline for submission of manuscripts to Forum, the college's sole literary publication, has been moved forward to March 25, John Ward, editor of the magazine, announced yesterday.

Dramatists, poets, essayists, and writers of all types are urged to contribute their literary efforts to the Forum Club's annual book. As a well-balanced product is the aim of the editors. A selection of diversified material will be made, which assures students publication of their contributions if they meet the literary standards of the magazine. Word limit for "Forum" is 1500 words.

"Manuscripts are coming in steadily but not fast enough," Ward said, "and therefore we wish to remind prospective writers to submit their masterpieces as soon as possible. Contributions made earlier will be given primary consideration and if something is unsatisfactory it will be returned, giving sufficient time to the authors to improve their offerings. Writings of all types are welcome!"

For more detailed information, students should see Editor Ward, Business Manager John Healy, faculty members Dorothy Mercer and William Goss, or members of the editorial staff: Tom Tillberry, Jean Page, Ely Chertok, Marjorie Cusic, Henry Evans, Margarita Williams, Ray Valdez, and Fred Vast.

"Publication date was advanced," Ward explained, "because it did not give enough time for selection of material, stencil cutting, mimeographing, and other tasks that must be performed if 'Forum' is to appear at the end of April, 1938."

The magazine will include satire, humor, poetry, short stories, serious articles devoted to discussion of social problems, dramas, and reviews.

Club Representatives Acclaim Advisory Board Creation

Enthusiastic reception of the proposal for the creation of a Club Advisory Board was voted at the initial meeting of the group held last Thursday, February 17, in the Powell Street Building. Practically every extra curricular group of the college was represented at the meeting which was held for the purpose of explaining the purpose and methods of the new organization.

Structure Explained

The informal meeting opened with an explanation of the proposed structure of the new student government and the place of Advisory Board in this new set-up.

It was shown that the Board would consist of one representative from every club in the college with meetings held at approximately one month intervals. The activity of the body would in the broad sense consist of acting as a coordinating organ to the college Executive Council.

"It was also hoped by organizers of this plan that the advisory group would function as clearing house for the dates of club activity and thereby relieve the present difficult situation of conflicting dates.

Representation Given

"The unifying action among the clubs will give the intellectual and literary factions adequate student representation on the College Executive Council," it was stated.

The club group will elect a representative from among its own membership to serve on the Executive body as an actual voting member, according to plans.

Another function of the group will be to pass and review club charters, and to set up standards that must be met by an organization requesting approval. It is further hoped that through the medium of the affiliated clubs definite distinctions between clubs, societies and councils can be made.

Obnoxious Element

The meeting went off very smoothly with notable exception. One representative, took time to give a long-winded demand for mass representation and after it was shown that his plan had little or no support, he persisted in heckling the speakers. However, things went off well in spite of this handicap.

"We sincerely appreciate the fine spirit of cooperation demonstrated by the clubs in sending representatives and faculty advisors," said the organizers.

Radio Students Soon To Take Government Commercial Exams

Two radio engineering students of the college are preparing to take government examinations, which will allow them to hold jobs as licensed radio operators on shipboard, while three other students plan to be examined for their radio amateur licenses.

The students who will try for their commercial licenses are Fred Amigo and Robert Hansen. The two students have been given special projects by their instructor, Lowell Hollingsworth, and have been spending their time learning the things necessary to passing the examination. The two started early in the semester learning the various codes, which they expect to be examined on, and have gradually progressed to the more complex mechanisms in the field of radio communication.

The students who will go up for their amateur, or "ham", licenses are Vincent Sherman, Bill Williams, and Lee Bollinger. If they are successful in the examinations they will be licensed to send and receive messages on the short-wave air lanes. These three students have been studying the fundamentals of radio transmitters and receivers since the beginning of the semester.

COLLEGE AGAIN TO PARTICIPATE IN ART EXHIBIT

Artists of Northern California Junior Colleges will again participate in an art exhibit to be held at the De Young Museum, it was announced by Richard M. Allman, art instructor. The tentative dates have been set as April 1 to May 1 inclusive.

A special room has been reserved for the pictures at the museum, and Allman estimated that about one hundred and fifty students will show their work.

This exhibition is similar to one held last semester at the San Francisco Museum of Art in which artists of a dozen Junior Colleges throughout Northern California took part.

Faculty members of the art group will hold a meeting on February 25 to decide if prizes will be awarded at the exhibit.

ONE WONDERS

ANNOUNCEMENT of an $800,000,000 appropriation to build more battleships for the United States Navy might go unnoticed by the bulk of the tax-paying public; but there are a few people who will pause and think how wonderful it would be to be able to spend that money on something else.

There isn't any doubt that it is wise to build a powerful naval force in order to insure "domestic tranquility". It is admitted by all the peoples of the world's nations that the only sure means of keeping the peace is to build a greater armed force than the "other fellow." The only thing some people might wonder is where is it all GOING TO END?

It is very difficult for people who don't know where their next meal is coming from, or students who are struggling to get an education, to feel any direct and immediate benefit from the knowledge that the United States shall have a navy second to none.

Persons well informed on political conditions among the nations of the world and those who still retain a vivd picture of the last great international holocaust will understand the government's huge appropriation for naval building, but there are many others who will wonder why nations must prepare feverishly for war, while at the same time they are loudly crying for international amity and lasting peace.

Many fine universities, junior colleges, public parks, slum-eradication projects, or any number of other equally worthy enterprises could be financed with the tremendous sums that the world is now spending for armaments.

It isn't to be supposed that ONE nation alone could neglect her national defense. Such a move would be suicidal. But it is rather a discouraging thought to realize, that in this so-called civilized world, the men who people it must continue to play with guns.

Present generations can only hope that centuries hence, the world of their descendants will be free of hate, lust for power, greed, and warcrazy dictators.

DECORUM

President Mix, in his campaign for greater decorum among student officials, might do well to include the rally "rowdies" in his plans.

It seems as though we simply cannot have a rally without the antics of a bunch of tramps who feel they should assume personal charge of every program and conduct it themselves.

Since the college's founding we have had this same small group who delight in amusing themselves and boring the rest of the audience with their supercilious comments and idiotic heckling of speakers.

These clowns have no doubt heard the familiar, "there is a time and place for everything," but they are so conceited that they feel this adage does not apply to them. In high school and the lower grades, no one expected any better conduct from this type of buffoon, but in college their presence is intolerable.

Everyone enjoys a good quip at the proper time, but it is the height of crudity and a distinct reflection on intelligence to taunt and heckle someone who is doing his best to entertain.

If the puerile rowdies cannot be shamed into acting their age, perhaps it would be wise to appoint monitors to treat them like children.

NARROW-MINDED

One of the most narrow-minded attacks on any organization appeared in the Ram's Horn column of this newspaper last week. The person who signed himself "Old Subscriber," and so nonchalantly spoke for his fellow students in condemning the Peace Society of this college, had better keep his identity a secret forever, unless he feels he can stand the indignant wave of protest that should inevitably answer his letter.

The Peace Society is fighting for the most worthy cause in existence in the world today. It is grossly unfair to accuse such a cause, as being propagandist.

It is only a very naive person who can picture a world free of propaganda and certainly it is very hard to distinguish between good and bad forms of propaganda.

It is amazing that any person in college should so resent any cause whether considered good or bad, to the extent that he allow it to carry him beyond the bounds of "RATIONAL CRITICISM." It is certain that all people will not agree with the Peace Society, but for one student to feel that he can blithely express himself as representing the views of all his fellows, is pathetic.

Whether a person is in complete agreement with the Peace Society, or any other organization is beside the point; what does matter is that persons in college should cultivate a broad, tolerant viewpoint, particularly toward the things of which they have little or no understanding.

COLLEGE JOURNALISM

Like anything else, college journalism can never hope to please everyone. If a student newspaper conforms to anything which approaches that desired by the majority, it should be considered a success.

Yet, time and again, students in colleges everywhere seem to feel that they could do a better job than is being done by the persons who edit and publish their journals.

College journalists work long and hard for their newspaper. They very likely work harder in their particular positions than any other student officials. They never ask credit for these hours of tedious labor, for they are doing something they enjoy doing, and are learning at the same time.

However, when a small group, or an individual seems to feel that the job being done is a soft one and could be done much better, it is time to let the general public know that things are being handled as well as possible, and by the most competent people.

There are certain types of cranks in the world who delight in rapping any enterprise, great or small, and it is toward these persons that any criticisms should be directed. These self-centered, self-assured, egotistical crack-pots should awaken to the fact that they don't know everything and that there are some things about which others know more than they do.

Publication of a college newspaper requires much tedious work, and a willingness to assume endless obligations. The people who gather the news, write it, edit it, and finally assemble it in a printed form are as human as anyone else. They are very apt to make any number of human mistakes. They try to create as finished and correct a piece of work as is possible, yet there are always critics who howl that their final products are rotten.

If the people who delight in criticizing the work of their fellows would pay closer attention to their own shortcomings, they might accomplish more.

It is not to be thought that HONEST, INTELLIGENT criticism, given by a person in possession of all the relative facts, should be considered offensive, BUT it does become a bit galling to have to listen to endless reams of inane comments directed by some half-baked crank who will hasten to excuse himself if he is offered the chance to improve things by his OWN EFFORT.

Out Of The Fog

Last evening, yes, it was last evening, although it seems like a million years ago, as we sat in our lonely room, head buried in an Astronomy text-book, there suddenly came a tapping at the window. At first thought, there isn't anything so strange about a little window-tapping (other than the fact that it may sound a bit Poe-ish or "Ravenish"), except when one stops to consider that the windows of our humble room happen to be on the second story of the house.

We weren't particularly frightened, merely annoyed. We listened. Yes, there it came again . . . louder . . . more insistent. Finally, the unseen something gave an especially hard bang, and we rose, thinking perhaps we had better investigate and prove to ourselves that it was only the wind.

Wrecklessly we threw open the window and peered out into the blackness. An icy blast rushed into the room, bringing with it a misty, wraith-like figure of sizeable proportions. We stared in amazement, as the nebulous apparition seated itself in our easy chair and roared, "Shut that window, you dope!"

We recognized the voice, if not the form, of our filmy visitor; it was Hector's voice! Hurriedly closing the window, we turned and stared: "Well, don't stand there gaping," continued the spirit-like intruder, "sit down here and listen."

We sat down, and finally managed to stammer, "S-s-say, isn't it you, Hector, but if it is, what the heck has happened to you?"

"Well," said our guest, "yes, it's me, Hector, but I no longer have to roam around in the body of a black cat. You see, Mac, I was granted freedom from my bondage because you gave up the idea of writing a 'dirt' column. It seems that I was unaware that I only had one more reformation to go when I met you, and that winning you over turned the trick. I am now free to assume my own ghost form. My spirit no longer must be forced to the indignity of running about in the shape of a black tom-cat."

"Gosh almighty," we gasped, "that's swell, Hector. You must feel a lot better now," we added.

"Sure," he answered, "it is certainly swell to know that from now on, I can live in peace, free from the worry of redeeming my soul."

"And to think," we mused, "that we had some small part in helping you find your eternal peace."

"Yeah," agreed Hector, "that's why we came to see you tonight, to thank you for giving up that drivel you were writing. You know, Mac," he went on, "you'll probably find that there are a lot of people who are thanking you for dropping the 'dirt' stuff."

Remembering that we had a bit of writing to do, we sat down at the desk and dropped a piece of copy paper in the typewriter. "Well," we told Hector, "relax and give us the dope on what you are going to do now. What do you think of yourself, gadding about like a hunk of a cloud, or a bit of misplaced fog," we added questioningly.

Hector replied, "Huh, that'd take all night to tell, and you haven't room in your column for our tale anyway. It'll keep until next week, won't it?" he asked. (Looks like you'll have to wait, folks.)

Mental Mutterings
By Fem

Look carefully, my children, and you shall see
The birth of a piece of poetry.
A piece of paper, a pencil lead,
A sudden mental "hit in the head."
Some words that rhyme, like home and foam,
And the next thing you know, you've got a poem.
(That is, if you're not very particular!)

Well, didn't you, you and you, tell us that the column needed tuning up! Didn't you say we were slipping? Didn't you? Well, you should have! Anything, the above is something we writ in one of our classes last semester and in sheer desperation at lack of inspiration for something along more classic lines, we delved into an old binder and dragged it out. Yeah, that's what we think, too!

We hope no one will mind too much if we take a little credit for the sudden appearance of the sunshine after our long siege of dampness. Those of you who read last week's offering will remember a line which read, quote, Why doesn't it stop raining? unquote. You may also remember that the day this line appeared in the paper was one of the most summerish in weeks. It's all very simple. All we have to do is predict one sort of weather and the mean old Weather Man, who never liked us, anyway, turns right around and dishes out something altogether different. So we tricked him! Being very annoyed with what he did to our column on Spring, we stuck in a line about rain knowing he'd fall for it and make the sun shine. Well, it worked didn't it?

Appreciators of the "dray-ma," in it's highest form, are eagerly awaiting Friday's rally where Jack (You can call me Ziggy if you smile) Schmale presents his master production of college life—"Joe's Junior College" (or "Joe's J.C." to those in the know). With such stellar satellites as Mel (Spell San Francisco) Chickazola, Bob (Tri Delt) Fex, Sam (I ain't gettin' married) Pasqualetti and Ed (Ski, but I like the snow) Fredianni in the cast to say nothing of the versatile Verduccis, Hughie Waite and Preston (Duke) Worsham, it's really going to be a show! The line forms on the left and ladies will please remove their hats!

Stan (oh what a voice) Adams, the crooning yell leader, really has something there with his community sing idea. Most of us, though, wonder why Stan doesn't give the crowd a break and sing a solo. Construction was begun for the pedestrian underpass for students going to and from classes in the Galileo Building to the Men's Gym. This underpass was completed, and dedicated just last month by members of the Board of Education.

A sign in Galileo High School "cafe" read: "Look at the floor and think of the garbage can." It was suggested that the students were merely testing the theory of the great scientist, Galileo, for whom the school was named. You know: "Empty lunchbags of different size and weight, when dropped from an equal height, travel at equal rate of speed toward the center of gravity."

The track team had on its list a runner by the name of Don Brain. It was hoped he would oblige the students by pulling a muscle sometime during the season, so they could call him "Lame" Brain.

CABBAGES AND KINGS
By Dick Simpers

FRESH from listening to a particularly inane sample of the tripe which is being dished out to radio audiences lately, in the form of so-called "serials," we take the liberty of wondering how many people really enjoy the stuff. Every twist of the dial brings the listener to some childish skit, which would have difficulty in holding the attention of an intelligent eight-year-old, but which continues to struggle feebly along day after day, cluttering up the air and serving as a source of irritation to those who depend on the radio for entertainment and enjoyment. Why studios persist in broadcasting such idiotic slush, which doesn't appeal to one person out of five, is beyond the comprehension of the average listener. To be sure, there are a few serial programs which might conceivably be of interest to intelligent people, but their ratio, compared to that of the childish type, is dishearteningly low, and reflects rather unfavorably on the intelligence of the listening public.

GETTING IT OFF THE CHEST

Certain persons have recently been making it their business to do considerable monning and groaning about the way in which the affairs of this college are administered, circulating among their fellows and criticizing practically everything done by the Executive Council, Social Committee, and the various societies active in this institution. From the viewpoint of the majority of the student body they are simply making fools of themselves. Such chronic malcontents are to be found in any organization which professes to be run on a democratic basis, and shouldn't be taken too seriously. After all, it is the students themselves who decide how they are to be governed, and it is their opinion which they voice through the medium of the representatives whom they elect. A more democratic form of student government would be hard to find. The students who do most of the complaining are on a par with the ones who administer the affairs of the college; they are not being throttled, coerced, or forced into anything. If they know so d - - - much about how things should be done, why don't they do something, instead of standing around and muttering? The truth is, most of them are just trying to gain a little attention for themselves by slamming something on which, personally, they could not improve.

We don't say that student government, as it exists here, cannot be improved, but we are sick and tired of hearing it criticized by persons who lack the initiative and intelligence to undertake any constructive activity, and most of whom don't know what they're talking about anyway.

BETTER LATE THAN EVER

The executive body of San Francisco State College last week passed a resolution approving the appropriation of funds for cleaning off the fences of Roberts Stadium, which have been adorned for the past year and a half with huge inscriptions painted by Ram rooters before the football game of 1936. Old-timers will remember the escapade, led by Willy Weinstock, Ty McHugh, and other adventurous souls who allowed their school spirit to run away with them. You have to hand it to those folks at State, they're certainly prompt in getting around to things.

RAM'S HORN

Note: Because of lack of space, the first letters received, defending the Peace Society against "Old Subscriber", were given preference. The editor would like to thank the writers of unused letters for their interest

Dear Editor:

I desire to come to the defense of the organization and the individual attacked in last week's "Ram's Horn."

The individual in question, a former student of mine, is undoubtedly superior to the average "run of the mill." I have heard rather fulsome praise of him by other members of the faculty who regard him as highly intelligent. While I do not agree with many of his views I believe the criticism of him as a "crank" is unjustified. But I suppose all who have slightly "different" opinions from the stereotyped cannot avoid the characterization. Yet many of us instructors hope that students will develop more tolerance and vision than was shown in the onslaught upon this student—who apparently is interested in something else besides campus politics and football, basketball, etc.

The organization attacked in another letter also does not merit the criticism it received. Although I am not a member of the Peace Society, I know it debates "both" sides of the issues it undertakes to discuss. Therefore it cannot rightly be charged with propagandizing. True propaganda always suppresses the "other" side. Moreover, the resentment expressed because of the publicity which the Peace Society receives betokens an unfair attitude. If there is any problem at the present time more important than that revolving about the attempt to establish and preserve peace I should like to know what it is.

—John M. Horowitz.

Editor's Note: Quite right, Mr. Horowitz, and not merely because you're a faculty member, either. Why don't you point out these things in some of your classes? The masses need education along these lines. But remember, "true genius" is always misunderstood by the rabble.

Dear Editor:

Not only is the Ram's Horn letter of last week's Guardsman concerning the Peace Society, unfair, but it is utterly stupid and shows that "Old Subscriber" is quite ignorant of the activities of the Society. I feel that it would be a regrettable thing, not only to the prestige of the organization, but to the college as well, if such unfounded criticism were to go unchecked.

If we take an intelligent survey of the objectives and purposes of every extra-curricular activity on the campus, we can conclude that there is none whose aims are of any greater worth than those of the Peace Society. I will dare to say here that because of the inherent quality of their objectives, they represent ideas, the value of which is neither paralleled nor approached by any other organization now recognized at the college.

What cause is worth our energy which is not directed in some way toward the well-being of humanity? It is the design of the Peace Society, through educational methods, to help make this a better, saner world in which to live.

Pacifistic as its policies are, they do not extend to any ridiculous, illogical degree. The program of the Society is in complete harmony with democratic ideas and ideals; the members are realists, and are not dwelling prematurely in some imaginary "Lost Horizon," but realize the actual, present international conflicts and threats of conflicts. It was through their efforts plus the aid of interested and alert faculty members and the administration, that a course, known as Sociology 55 (Problems of War and Peace), is now being given at the college.

Every student and faculty member, once he realizes its true nature, will discover that the interests of the Peace Society are entirely compatible with the best interests of the college, and therefore deserve the support of the college. If "Old Subscriber" still objects, in the face of the above facts, then he and others like him, certainly do not belong in this college nor in any other American educational institution.

—Elizabeth Rehbock.

Editor's Note: See editorial column for comment.

Dear Editor:

It is evident that the Peace Society has, ironically enough, only stirred up trouble in its efforts to become recognized, BUT if Old Subscriber and his like would only cooperate and realize that he is doing just as the Society is, that is, taking one point of view and sticking to it, there wouldn't be so many protests against the Peace Society. Being personally experienced with the Peace Society, through home ties, I can't agree with you that the Society enforces its opinions on everyone and considers itself composed of the intellectuals of any educational organization, BUT when you oppose them you are inferring that you and your followers are the real intellectuals. The proof of the issue would be in a test of the two sides.

The only reason the Peace Society has put up a fuss is because you have put up a fuss in not wanting to recognize them as an organization of the college. You ask why they should receive a charter. Each organization has a purpose, whether for propaganda or just for chummy get-togethers of the few who belong to just certain sororities or fraternities.

Unless you have made a complete study of the Peace Society, how do you know they are illogical? I venture to say, you yourself can't understand them, won't take the time to, and therefore, sum them up as "illogical." Do you think opposing war is illogical? Do you think wiping out vice rackets and defending the people against monopolists

By Don Mix

Despite a bit of irrelevant discussion, which tended to confuse the real issues, the Club Advisory Board meeting, held last Thursday, was completely satisfactory. The fine turnout present agreed unanimously that there is a striking need for cooperative action among the clubs, and further assented (with one notable exception) that the proposed structure of the Club Board is adequate.

It was the intention of those who called the meeting to explain and clarify the plan, demonstrate its many benefits and receive suggestions from the clubs themselves. This was done—despite handicaps. The only point of dissention was really no point at all. A lone self-appointed crusader for the "real interests" of the clubs made what was commonly agreed a general nuisance of himself by talking long and loud for the cause of mass representation. The point lost significance when it was found that this modern Don Quixote had virtually no support for his proposal. Parenthetically we might remark that although we admire the sincerity of this particular representative, both his tactics and his logic are decidedly faulty.

For the benefit of those interested who were unable to attend the meeting, it might be well to explain the working machinery of the Club Advisory Board. The body will be composed of one representative from each extra-curricular group of the college with a presiding officer elected from the general assembly. The Board will meet perhaps once a month for the purpose of acting on the entire field of college student activity. The group will make recommendations for specific legislation, pass and review club charters, act as a clearing house for dates of club activity, and serve as an effective publicity body for every group in the entire college. The president or chairman of the Advisory Board will be a voting representative on the Executive Council.

The Club Board will be created by the new college constitution and will go into effect as soon as that document is completed and approved.

Thoughts after "Porgy and Bess"...

The much lamented, late George Gershwin has probably come in for more memorials than any other deceased American composer. From the concert hall and the radio and the variety stage, we have heard his virtues praised and his music played. For some five or six months now he has been one of America's heroes and justly: He was a young man of extreme talent who created a rather distinct type of American music. That Americans should have taken it to heart is natural; that they will keep it there is doubtful.

After Mr. Gershwin's delightful visit here last spring and the opening of his folk opera, "Porgy and Bess," here last week, we begin to feel he was a kind of artistic mistake. At heart he always seemed a tunesmith from Tin Pan Alley, by profession he appeared a sort of bridge from jazz to the concert hall. That he failed in his uniting process was imminent from the first. That what he created was neither black nor white, good nor bad suggests he had neither the preparation nor the genius to carry such an enterprise to success.

To elucidate: the opinion of many jazz authorities, the more educated ones, is that Gershwin couldn't write a straight forward dance tune if he tried. His music just wasn't cut from the same cloth. The opinion of serious musicians, on the other hand, is that Gershwin couldn't write a straight forward, classically-minded work if he tried. But, opinioned some ardent souls, Gershwin is in a place by himself and should be praised more than ever for having found a new medium, a new language that is neither classic nor popular, but both.

However, all art can be measured, to a certain extent by a few set standards and when such an ambitious work as Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" is judged by these standards it fails to fit any of them.

Those who have seen this opera probably remember it as nothing but a string of tunes, some good, some bad, that it had no middle (that is, climax), nor real end, that it was poorly handled throughout as regards orchestration, choral writing or recitatives, and that there was hardly an actual character in the whole score. There isn't space to give detailed proof, but one performance will readily show them. And if the process is carried further one will discover the same faults in

COLLEGE RIFLE TEAM SETS NEW SHOOTING MARK

MIXing 'Em Up
By DON MIX

The woefully weak San Mateo Bulldog will be carted into town this weekend via the ambulance route to fulfill a scheduled engagement with Maestro Dutch Conlan's thrice-tamed, but still potent, Rams. The spectacle is slated for the Kezar Slaughter House on next Friday and Saturday evenings. Since it is the season's finale a goodly portion of the local gentry will attend to bid a fond farewell to our very fine cagers, which is duly fitting and proper. However, from the standpoint of competition this series is a minus quantity with the ragged peninsulans and their record of seven losses against one win hardly on a par with the vastly improved Powell Streeters.

Add note of encouragement: Jerry Flamm and the Block Society are making sincere and intelligent efforts toward deserved recognition. The fine turnout at the night meeting of last week gives evidence that the membership is anxious to support the program of rehabilitation.

A potted geranium to a real guy and a genuine sportsman, Coach Dick Blewett of Santa Rosa. After the game at Kezar last Wednesday evening, some of the Rose City's tin horn sports became a mite obstreperous and threatened to commit mayhem on Referee Dirkee. As the official started up the runway, to the dressing room, one particularly stupid individual, backed by several cronies, grabbed the arbiter by the collar with the evident intention of doing some roughhousing. At this point, however, Blewett spotted the rowdy, raced up and yanked him away from the official.

"Listen, bum," bellowed Blewett, "my team knows how to lose like real sportsmen. Rowdies like you are a disgrace to Santa Rosa Junior College and the next time I see you at one of our games I'll throw you out personally."

CASABA CURTAIN COMES DOWN IN BULLDOG TITLE; DOUBLEHEADER AT KEZAR

By JACK SCHMALE

Opalinski, Curcio & Co. hang up their suits this week-end—and it looks like a successful finale.

For, ringing down the conference casaba curtain, it's our old friends from San Mateo slated to play the role of doormat to the rampaging Rams in the fadeout doubleheader at Kezar Pavilion Friday and Saturdays evenings.

For those who intend to be on time, we might add that in each case the tip-off occurs at 8 o'clock.

The San Mateo tooters this season have had but "one night to howl." The Bulldogs succeeded in pouring a snappy 38-32 upset into Santa Rosa on the evening of February 4. Otherwise, pickin's have been mighty slim down the peninsula way.

We are at a loss for any flashy advance press notices on the San Mateo cage aces due to the inefficiency of the Bulldog publicity department. This paragraph should serve as a lesson to other public relations aspirants who fail to produce requested data.

OPALINSKI STARS

Alexis ("Big Ople") Opalinski should drop 'em with monotony against the Mateans, whose defensive work thus far hasn't been all that it should be. If Alex doesn't rate unanimous all-conference, after his consistent performance all season, something is radically wrong.

If the Rams could have possibly finished the race in first, or even second place, Ed ("The Curse") Curcio would have been another cinch all-conference nominee. Curcio has been improving each time out, and of late has been clicking more than his share of points.

LAST GAMES

But while both Curcio and Opalinski are slated for another season on the Ram hardwoods, we predict a pair of big evenings for Treacy Slattery and Bill Phelan, forward standouts, who'll be winding up their local careers. If you remember, it was this pair that combined to upset State in that preseason thriller.

An attempt to have the seventh string varsity of Joe's J. C. on hand failed, but Tom Wilson announces that his Junior Varsity cagers will have other opponents, and entertain in the usual 6:45 preliminary on both occasions.

Frediani Announces Plans For Snow Trip

Plans for a gigantic "Ram Snowball Excursion" to the white-clad Sierras, in the vicinity of Long Barn, were announced last week by Ed Fredinni, who is cooperating with Russell Sweet on the proposed jaunt.

The one-day bus ride and ski party is planned for some Sunday during March, with a rate quoted at $2.50 per person for transportation. An optional trip, open to all students, affords a week-end in the snow, for $6.00, including hotel accommodations.

For detailed information those interested may contact either Sweet or Frediani, or sign up in Dean Browne's office, Galileo.

Picnic Idea Given Up By Men's Club

Plans for a Men's Club Picnic at Tiburon were abandoned yesterday because of prohibitive costs, according to Allen Williams, president.

The picnic would have taken place at the Crowly Amusement Park in Tiburon, and students would have been transported there on Crowly launches.

WOMEN'S SPORTS PARADE

By JEAN PAGE

All women who are enrolled in WAA sports are requested to check with the manager of the sport in which they are enrolled to determine whether they are physically eligible to participate in WAA activities. Sport managers should obtain the lists of physical eligibility in the Galileo gym office. Several women, who have been enrolled in the WAA before, must be re-examined.

* * *

Yummy-yum, the WAA luncheon is slated for next Tuesday. All new members of the WAA must come to the luncheon to be formally installed as members, and the old members, recollecting luncheons of former semesters, will be certain not to miss this one.

To Ethel Vizzard goes the honor of being enrolled in the largest number of sports this semester. Ethel is tackling seven: baseball, basketball, rifle, badminton, swimming, archery, and tennis. "Little lass, she'll have some busy days." Other women enrolled in four or five sports are Margaret Wurmell, Dorothy Canavan, Gail Hanna, and Virginia Kwiatt.

WANTED: A life saver to save a life saver. True to the "hang your clothes on a hickory limb" formula life savers at the Y.W.C.A. pool are not supposed to enter the water except in case of an emergency, but when a junior college life saver, namely, one Peggy Park, falls in the pool twice in one day, it's time something was done about it.

* * *

And don't forget that the Y.W.C.A. pool is also open to women who have not signed up for swimming, if they come during class hours. It is too bad that more women don't take advantage of such a good opportunity to swim or learn to swim free of charge.

WAAmblings:

Only three women are out for archery on Monday and Wednesday at 2:30 o'clock. Archers receive practically private attention in this class and some more women should come out. Incidentally, Dot Canavan has progressed to 40 yards in this class already.

Baseball: Rain

Golf: Rain

The intermediate tap dancing class is through with "Black Sam," and have started a new routine.

The numbers of tennis courts allotted to junior college women has been reduced but the tennis stars evened the matter up in some vicious doubles sets. Rumor has it that Jeanne Kelley and Betty Chrysler constitute the best comedy team in tennis yet. (We must Waamble out to see them play some day.)

PRACTICE AT FUNSTON STARTS EISAN'S BATSWINGERS; WERE HELD UP BY TOO MUCH RAIN

After losing about a month's practice due to the heavy rain Coach Lee Eisan's baseball team went at the first week of practice with a vengeance. Showing a great deal of hustle and enthusiasm the likely candidates showed that they will live up to early season predictions.

Pepper leagues were going on in all corners of Funston Field and found the turnout loosening up arms and sharpening of batting eyes to open a tough practice session.

Batting practice found most of the boys knocking the cover off the ball against the batting-practice pitching. Hits were smashed to all corners of the lot and gave promise that the team this year will be a hard-hitting aggregation.

INFIELDERS WORK HARD

Coach Eisan has been giving his infielders a hard workout in hopes of building a strong defensive club. Eisan has been using "Mickey" Berman and "Tip" Hamilton at first base. "Mick" shows signs of having a great season, he is fielding well and connecting solidly at the plate. Hamilton will be a good fill-in for Berman, although he is a little inexperienced.

Second base looks to be the only weakness in the Infield. Fred Baker and Hugh Waite are fighting it out for the starting spot; this position is new to both men and they find it hard to make the pivot on double plays. There is a possibility the basketball playing Henry James will steal the midway sack job from both Baker and Waite.

Shortstop finds a battle being waged by Kent Baird and Harry Aleo. Baird seems to have the edge by his classy fielding and strong throwing arm. Arnold Banta and Jim Coen are handling the third base position. Banta looks to be a cinch, Coen is a good fielder, but he looks a little weak with the willow.

The team is blessed this year with a great many good pitchers, principally among these is Big Ed Curcio, the huge lefthander from Oakland. He should be one of the starting hurlers. Fighting it out for the other starting role will be Bill Williams, another southpaw, Jack Skhane, Tracey Slattery, and Weaver Galbraith, all right-handers. Handling the receiving end is Dave Johnson, who will be assisted by Barney Viner and Bob Balaam.

GOOD OUTFIELDERS

Paul Hjort, Frank Nilan, and Ray Egelhofer look to be the best of a good lot of outfielders. The aforementioned trio are hard-hitters, good fielders, and each is the possessor of a good throwing arm. Stan Bierwith, Ed Griffiths, Bob Gardner, Wildred Bitterman, and Tom Pantages all show the makings of a fine group of flychasers.

Block Lettermen Become Active, Hold Gathering

The greatest gathering of Block Lettermen, since the inception of the organization, took place last Tuesday night in the Galileo Little Theatre, for the express purpose of passing a new Constitution, and to lay plans for a dance, which is tentatively scheduled for April Fool's Day.

The new constitution was finally adopted after much discussion on several important points. This was followed by the appointment of a social committee, headed by Bob Fex, to arrange for the Block Dance which Fex assures us will be a gala affair.

The meeting was highly successful because of the untiring efforts of Jerry Flamm, president, and is a further indication that the athletes are at last awakening, and are attempting to establish a monogram as a symbol of distinction and importance.

STROKE—STROKE—STROKE

TRACKMEN HOLD PRACTICE FOR MARCH 2 MEET

After the nineteen-day deluge of 1938 had seemingly stopped, sudden downpours again put the track at Kezar in a sloppy condition making practice last week possible for only the most rugged track team men with an aptitude for swimming.

As March 12, the date the college track team meets California Frosh and Modesto Junior College in a triangular meet, draws nearer, it becomes more and more evident that the spikemen must get into some sort of shape to be able to compete with these two strong outfits.

Such obvious hardships make it difficult to determine the potency of the Ram's squad. No one knows what power might lie in the now muscle-bound legs of track team aspirants. All the men on the squad are eagerly waiting for an opportunity to show their talent before the eyes of the coach, Russ Sweet.

At present the team is scheduled to practice at Kezar on Mondays and Saturdays in the early part of the afternoon. Shower and locker facilities will be available as soon as the basketball season closes.

Rifle Skate Marked By Slight Casualty

"One down and four to go" has been the motto of College Rifle and Pistol Club members following the "swell skating party" held last Thursday night, in which almost 70 members attended.

Marred by only one casualty, suffered when one member from the South "couldn't keep her feet," the party came to a lively termination at Dick's Hamburger Joint, at the beach, where the "table de'hote" consisted solely of hamburgers, red hots and hot chocolate to drink.

Next on that organization's social program is a combination weenie-bake and roller-skating party to be held on the peninsula. Following that will be two dances and an "end of finals" termination party in the last week of school.

Gaddy Whipping Crewmen Into Shape As Season Approaches

College crew opened its season of rowing competition yesterday when it participated in the annual Washington's Birthday Regatta held over the Aquatic Park course against boats from the University of San Francisco, San Mateo Junior College and the Wheel Club. Coach Jack Gaddy expressed dissatisfaction with the present condition of his charges and said that he felt the obstacle of few practice sessions because of the constant rain had prevented him from whipping the best boat into proper form for competition.

Although he is anxious to retain the trophy won by the Ram Navy last year, Gaddy said the race was really only a practice engagement for the important conference races next month.

Line-up Given

A tentative starting line-up for the race announced by Gaddy was as follows: Port, stroke, Bob Carotto; number 5, Don Mix; number 4, Dick Simpers; number 3, Malcomb Jacobs; number 2, Ken Pasquellette; and bow, Charles Rice. The starboard line-up: Art Nelson, stroke; number 5, Carl Brogger; number 4, Bill McDougal; number 3, Ed Cregi; number 2, Tom Jones; bow, Merv Weiner. Wilton Lutz is slated to perform the coxswain duties.

The major opposition in the Washington race will be afforded by the potent U.S.F. crew who have improved mightily since their entrance to rowing competition last spring. Bob Neal and Jack Reynolds, former locals, are holding down seats in the Don boat.

The new uniforms received their first airing in yesterday's race and proved to be natty creations with scarlet sweat shirts and rowing pants of the same color.

Meeting Slated

Gaddy further disclosed that the annual meeting of the California Intercollegiate Oarsmen's Association will be held within the next week or so at which time a complete schedule of conference races will be drawn up. Besides the local boat, those represented in the conference, include San Mateo Junior College, Oakland Engineering College, Marin Junior College, University of San Francisco, and San Francisco State College.

Editor's Note: If results of the race are available before press time, they will appear boxed on this page.

Cage Classic Pits Hottentots, Giants, Tomorrow Evening

Coming to grips at last, after a series of postponements, the Junior College Hottentots will collide tomorrow night at the gymnasium of Everett Junior High School with the Colored Giants, huge Oakland squad, which has run up a string of over fifty consecutive victories in encounters in the East Bay.

The Hottentots, despite the fact that they have been practicing steadily for the past month, will probably enter the game as underdogs, but with the experience they have gained in several practice tilts, to date, are conceded a fighting chance to stage an upset.

Art Nelson, Don Mix, Dick Simpers, Bob Carotto, and Merv Weiner will start the contest for the locals, while Carl Brogger, Jerry Flamm, and the Holmes boys are others who are almost certain to see action.

This clash has been anticipated for some time, and is expected that the student body will turn out en masse for the encounter.

The Giants form one of the most colorful fives in the West, having no player less than six feet, two inches tall, or weighing less than 200 pounds. This gives them a very substantial edge over the Hottentots, who must depend on sheer skill in order to win.

Another game has been added to the fast-growing schedule of the Hottentots. They have been challenged by a team representing the Executive Council, which will be led by Al Williams and Ray Valdez. The contest is slated to be played some time next week.

RAMS SPLIT SERIES WITH SANTA ROSA

Conlanmen Capture 1st Tilt, 40-35; Blow Up In Second To Lose, 41-34

After pounding out a snappy 40-35 victory in the first game of the series against the Santa Rosa basketball contingent, Coach Dutch Conlan's charges did the old fold-up act in the second engagement and dropped a thrilling 41-35 to the Acorn quintet.

This loss, the fourth in the conference play, virtually puts the Rams out of the running for the championship.

The initial encounter was held on last Wednesday night at the Kezar Pavilion and saw a smooth working local squad couple smooth passing and a fast break to gain complete mastery of the situation. Big Alex Opalinski, Ram center, proved very effective in the early minutes of the game and his pivot shots in the hole gave the Conlanmen an early lead.

ATTACK JERKY

The Rose City attack was sporadic and jerky but the wild shooting visitors finally began to pile up the digits by their prayer shots from way out. Tom Buzzini, diminutive forward, lead Coach Dick Blewitt's outfit with his reckless one hand shots from twenty feet out from the basket. Conlan inserted his reserves as the end of the first half approached, and despite one perfect bucket credited to Paul Le Baron, sub forward, the Acorns wittled away the Ram lead to 21-17 count as the stanza closed.

Close guarding tactics employed by the Blue and Red five proved very troublesome to the San Francisco lads and almost completely bottled up their scoring in the third period. Bill Boydonoff, giant Acorn center, was hitting the scoring column with monotonous regularity along about this time and finally, with but eight minutes left to play the point totals were knotted at 32-32.

CLOSE FINISH

Opalinski took a one-hand shot from the foul line to put the locals ahead and then, after breaking up the Santa Rosa offense, Ed Curcio, potent Ram guard, repeated the performance to give the Powell Streeters a 4-point margin. Tim Bunyan, bemuscled Acorn guard, gave the visitors a brief breathing spell by sinking a set-up shot to make the count 36-34.

With just a bare minute or so remaining, successive scores by Treacy Slattery and Willie Blackfield, Red forwards, put the affair on ice.

The second contest on Friday night saw a "hot" Rose City five sinking them from all angles while the locals couldn't buy a bucket. The Rams were playing smoothly and their defense was adequate but the Acorns just couldn't miss the bucket and they ran up a big lead early in the game.

Conlan attempted to stem the tide of scores by injecting substitutes into the game. Of all the new talent the best seemed to be the slender Louie Rouspil who displayed an amazing aptitude for getting the ball off the backboard, but in spite of his frantic efforts, the score at half time was 24-8.

BLACKFIELD "HOT"

Paced by a spectacular performance on the part of little Willie Blackfield, who swished through 14 points in the second half, the Rams fought their way back into the ball game in a thrilling second half. A Santa Rosa rally, in the closing two minutes, throttled the locals' hopes, however, and the Conlanites went down to their fourth conference defeat.

Rifle Team Forces Record With Score

Forcing their Southern Pacific rivals to break a league record in order to defeat them, the College Rifle and Pistol Club shot the highest score of their season in a match held at the Golden Gate gallery last Friday night.

Since it was the last match of the current season for both sides, steadiness and precision marked each individual shooting. Although other teams have not completed their seasons, it was thought by those "in the know" that the S.P. Team would be among the highest, if not the trophy winner.

S.F.J.C. Total	887	S.P. Total	926
Benton	185	Woodworth	188
Smith	178	Lampson	187
Gibson	178	Shaw	184
Dieser	175	Taylor	184
Hammer	171	Baldassari	183

Omicron Initiates Pledges Tonight

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Omicron Phi Pi, college honor society, last Wednesday, at Galileo High School, the petitions of four students were approved. Those accepted for membership are: Mike Klebanoff, Yeizo Shioto, Lena Way, and Doris Speroni.

These pledges, along with those approved the preceding Wednesday, will meet at Galileo, at 7:00 o'clock tonight, where they will be put through the ritual of the society's formal initiation.

"Following the ceremony, all members and novitiates will adjourn to the home of Dr. Michael Zarchin, faculty adviser, where a frivolous atmosphere will prevail," said Bill Switzer, membership and publicity chairman.

"The feature of the evening," asserted Switzer, "will be a banquet, followed by speeches, which show promise of leading to an enjoyable after-dinner discussion, and a good time should be had by all who attend."

At last Wednesday's executive committee meeting, a date was set for the first open forum discussion, which will be held February 9, at the home of Cecilia Elliot, secretary-treasurer. The topic for discussion will contain, according to Switzer, particular phases of present business recession, and economic aspects, including possible causes and remedies.

Those present at the meeting of the committee were: Charles Vaughn, president; Bill Simonds, vice-president; Cecilia Elliot, secretary-treasurer, and Switzer.

Gilkey Elected Leader of Pre-Meds

Jack Gilkey, student inventor, was elected president of the Pi Mu Gamma, Pre-medical Society, at their meeting on February 8. Other officers of the club are: Allen Williams, vice-president; Dorothy Crouch, secretary, and Harriet Marker, treasurer.

At the meeting held last Tuesday evening, Gilkey gave a talk and demonstration on his invention, the sphygmograph. "The sphygmograph is an instrument which can be used to detect various heart diseases by attaching it to the wrist. The artery at the wrist, in its expansion, increases the pressure on the instrument and the variations are recorded on a revolving drum," explained Gilkey. "My motive for building the sphygmograph was primarily for experimentation."

It was reported that a library and reading room for the use of club members has been planned. It is to contain reference and scientific books which would be difficult to obtain elsewhere.

According to Glenn Noble, faculty adviser, students in the field of biological science are permitted to join the society. An initiation for new members will be held at Galileo, Thursday, February 24, at 2:00 o'clock in Room 357.

Japanese Outline Extensive Program

Meeting at the home of its president, Bobby Uyeda, on Tuesday evening, February 15, the cabinet of the Japanese Students' Club formulated what it hopes will be one of the most active programs in the college this semester.

Promotion of all events on the program will be in the hands of the social committee, headed by Jimmy Gozawa and Lillian Moniwaki.

The program now plans: March 5, Weenie Roast; March 19, Faculty Tea; April 2, Dance; April 9, Participation in Intercollegiate Advance; April 13, Skating Party; April 27, Hike.

the famous Rhapsody in Blue or the Concerto for Piano and Orchestra. Gershwin, in his whole career, was never capable of handling a form larger than a song. And, truthfully enough, his songs are his finest and most distinct contribution to American music.

But, because they aren't the type used in the concert hall, and because the popular dance bands of today are not capable, alone, of keeping them alive, it is to be feared that George Gershwin's name will be forgotten in fifty years. As Alexander Woollcott once said to Gershwin, who was in the habit of playing his music for any and everybody all the time, "your music will live if you are still around to play it." But now Gershwin is dead.

. . . CLUBS . . .

Star Gazers Study, Eat At Same Time

Having coffee and doughnuts with their lessons, the Astronomical Society meets every Monday night at the Galileo Observatory. Besides having "java and sinkers," the members receive one unit of university credit for the time spent.

Officers of the club are: Elizabeth Rehbok, president; Sylvester McAtee, vice-president, and Patricia Robinson, treasurer. Pat also makes the coffee.

"So far," says Louis Berman, the club's genial adviser, "the weather has hindered my star-gazers. However, it doesn't prevent the Astronomical Society from extending an invitation to the entire student body to visit us."

They meet at 7:00 o'clock on the fifth floor of the Galileo High School Building.

Military Convene Friday, March 4

Next meeting of the Army and Navy Club will be held at the home of President Gordon Sollman, 1239 - 15th Avenue, on Friday, March 4. As this is to be a business meeting plans for the remainder of the present semester will be discussed.

At the recent installation held by the organization, each new member was presented with a watch fob, on which is inscribed the club slogan "Duty to Country." A figure of a goat's head symbolizes the navy, while a mule figurehead represents the army.

The background of the fob is made up of red, white, and blue colors, representing the colors of the United States, while the red and white also serve as the college colors. Three miniature stars on this background depict the three branches of service: (1 land, (2) air, (3) sea. Two small palm leaves complete the picture and represent the club's desire to maintain peace.

"Members of the organization wish to thank all those students who attended the recent assembly on National Defense who thereby made it into the fine success it deserved to be," said Sollman.

French Students Meet This PM

"Le circle francais" will hold its first regular meeting of the semester tonight at the home of Jeanne Leonard, 10 Parsons Street, near Fulton and Stanyan, at 8 o'clock sharp.

"We have been most fortunate," said petite Betty McAllister, club president, "in securing a speaker from the 'Alliance Francaise' who, I am sure, will be interesting."

Before the regular program, a short business meeting will be held to determine the future policies of the club. One faction wants the meeting to be strictly academic. The other faction, holding that enough academic work is received in class, wishes to make the group more social.

NYA Wage Increase Promise Explained

Students employed in the National Youth Administration must be sure to have their time slips in by March 18, 1938, announced Helene Turner, NYA director.

Following an article printed in The Guardsman about the possibility of extending working hours to 33 or 35 hours a month instead of the present 30, the NYA office was besieged with time slips containing from 33 to 35 hours, said Miss Turner. "The article," she went on to explain, "stated clearly that it is hoped that when our payroll is completely filled, and when we have taken care of all students who need it, that we will be able to increase the number of hours to 33 or 35 a month instead of the present 30 hours."

Pamphlet Collection In 518 Powell Libe

Library pamphlet collection is now available to students at 518 Powell Street. The collection includes sets of reproductions of artistic masterpieces, government pamphlets of interest to economic and political science students, and information regarding vocational training and opportunities in various fields.

Francis Colligan, instructor in charge, is now planning a government documents collection to be begun at an early date as a basis for a large collection of such material when the library gets more room in the new building.

Have You Any Old Clothes For Sale?

Have you a basement, attic, or storage room of any sort? If you possess a hiding place for discarded objects, and who doesn't, prepare to ransack it completely 'cause there is going to be a Rummage Sale. The event will be held under the auspices of the Women's Service Society to raise funds for the annual scholarship award.

The Finance Office will be the headquarters for the collection of articles. Marion Yager, president of the club, said: "We are striving to make this Rummage Sale the most successful the college has known. We will sincerely appreciate all and any contributions and are counting on the full support of all the students."

Among those articles which are considered rummage are: old or partly used furniture, dishes, clothes, stoves, magazines, bric-a-brac, that lampshade Cousin Mattie gave you two Christmases ago, tennis raquets, necklaces, clocks, and innumerable other articles.

A definite date for the sale has not been named but it will take place in middle Spring. Dorothy Canavan, W.A.A. president, Phyllis Learned, Marge Wright, W.S.S. treasurer, and Marion Yager are members of the arrangements committee.

Italians To Hold Confab Tomorrow

Tomorrow evening, at 7:45 o'clock in Room 212 at the Galileo High School, the Italian Club will meet to discuss the invitation to the Italian Convention in April; the coming basketball game with the Maraschi Club of the University of San Francisco; and a picnic to be held later in the semester.

Lydia Braccini, who has written several Italian poems, will recite a few of them for the group, and Paola Rossi will render an Italian Monologue.

Following the meeting, there will be a rehearsal of the play, "La Locandierco," to be dramatized this semester. After all details are finished, the Italian Club will be served refreshments by the Hotel and Restaurant Management of the College in the faculty cafeteria. All members are requested to attend and all students desiring to belong to the club are welcome.

Newmaneers Meet At Church Tonight

Postponed because of last Monday's dance, the Newman Club will hold their regular meeting tonight at 8:00 o'clock in the clubrooms at St. Mary's Cathedral, Van Ness Avenue and O'Farrell Streets.

"The turnout for the last meeting was very gratifying," said President Bob Fox, "but I feel sure that there are a great many more Catholic students in college who could and should join our Newman Club."

"The business of this semester will be discussed at tonight's meeting," went on Fox, "we also expect to have entertainment, refreshments, and dancing."

Faculty Program Slated Tomorrow

The Faculty Association will meet tomorrow from 3:45 to 6:00 o'clock in Room 256, at Galileo High School. After "Jause," the report of secretary and treasurer will be presented. At 4:50 an address entitled "What Manner of Child Shall This Be," will be given by Charles Adams.

"The Majority Opinion of the Curriculum Committee" will be discussed by Franklin C. Sewell, chairman.

A committee composed of Franklin C. Sewell, Archibald J. Cloud, Margaret Dougherty, Miriam Gatley, Bertha Mae Keller, J. Graham Sullivan, Alfred P. Agosti, F. Grant Marsh, J. Paul Mohr, Thomas A. Gabbert, Harold W. Leuenberger, Joseph E. Williams, and Edna Denhard, will present for discussion and vote the following recommendations:

1. We recognize three groups of student programs:
   a. Semi-professional and vocational.
   b. General College.
   c. University.
2. Our greatest problem is the general college group:
   a. We should provide a program of general education to hold those who will not transfer into semi-professional and university curricula.
   b. We should provide an opportunity for students to qualify for the semi-professional and vocational and university curricula.
   c. That a series of survey courses and a curricula be developed in each major university field for the benefit of those students in the junior college who cannot enter the State University because of deficiencies in their high school record.

Adjournment will take place at 6:00.

Students Urged To Join Choruses

Students are urged by Flossita Badger, Music Club sponsor, to join the men's chorus and women's chorus which meet on Tuesday and Thursday at twelve noon in room 303, and Wednesday and Friday at nine in the lecture hall, respectively.

"Statistics show," she said, "that a large number of entering students are interested in music, but somehow, probably through lack of knowledge of the music organizations, do not enroll in music courses or join the choruses. Little or no experience is required, as the numbers we do are fairly simple."

"Taking part in these groups," she continued, "offers practical experience in public appearances, such as the Music Festival at San Jose State College to be held right after spring vacation. All of the Junior Colleges in the northern part of California will be represented."

Gym Club Drinks Tea; Honors Prof

In order to better prepare Physical Education Majors for university work, the PE Club is planning a tea in honor of the head instructor of Physical Education at University of California.

This affair will be the sequel to one held last week in honor of Mrs. Stevenson, Physical Education director at San Francisco State College. The guests give information regarding requirements and teaching hints.

An outdoor party will be held later on in the term to which the San Francisco girls will invite majors from other Junior Colleges.

Galstaun Forming Camera Group

Candid camera fans may be interested to know that a camera club is being organized. Definite details have not been completed yet but anyone who wishes to join or get more information may see Richard Allman, John Booher, of the faculty, or Sam Galstoun.

The object of the club is to introduce to its members the whole art of picture taking. There will be exhibitions, contests and trips to photographic galleries.

HEA To View Opera At War Memorial

Household Economics Association members must make the final payment on tickets to the San Carlo Opera Company presentation, "Carmen," immediately. More than twenty women have decided to attend the opera, March 10. The final payment should be given to Hazel Baunton, HEA treasurer, or Dixie Lee McCormick, vice-president.

At its last meeting, the HEA formulated plans for a tea and a fashion show, to which the entire student body would be invited, to be held during April.

Lambda Chi, New Sorority Organized

At the Executive Council's meeting Friday afternoon, the petition for a charter, submitted by Dean Edwin C. Browne, will be considered for the Lambda Chi, new college sorority.

As the Lambda Chi sponsor, Miss Patricia Riccardi wished the girls good luck and success. "I will be very pleased to help in any possible way to make the organization a success," she said.

Including the officers and charter members, and possible outsiders, a large roller skating party is to be held at Pacific City, Saturday evening, March 12, at 8:00 o'clock.

"As this is our first real function, we are planning the party far ahead, so as to give us an opportunity to be certain of success," said Marie Hoeger, treasurer of the Lambda Chi. "After the roller skating, we are returning to Margaret Meader's home for dancing and refreshments. This should be a grand finale to the evening's fun," she concluded.

Having had an impromptu meeting at the Palace Hotel, the final details for purchasing pins were completed. Members will be wearing them possibly about the first week of March.

According to Margaret Meader, president of the Lambda Chi, members will not be admitted for a few months.

"In order to give us a chance to become firmly established," she declared, "the sorority will not consider pledges until April."

Auyong Announces Spring Dance Date

That the Chinese Club's "Spring Dance" will be held on March 5 at the Chinese Y.M.C.A., was announced by Andrew Auyong, president of the organization. Plans for the affair have been completed, and bids are ready for distribution. Members are urged to secure bids immediately.

"Members may see officers from whom they secured membership cards for bids," stated Auyong.

Last week the basketball team traveled to Oakland for a game with the Young Chinese Club of that city.

Phi Beta Rho Pledges Feted

Foresters To Be Organized Thurs.

Urging that all men who are interested in forestry attend a meeting for the purpose of forming a Forestry Club, Dick Dahl and Bert Berolero, forestry students, announced that this meeting will be held tomorrow evening, February 24, at 7:30 in the Little Theatre at Galileo.

is illogical? If you do, then—.

The members are really sincere and they can enjoy themselves but they didn't organize to enjoy themselves, they wanted to help those people who can't or won't take time to understand why they are getting gyped. What greater purpose could there be than to promote and maintain peace? Vive La Peace Society!

—An Interested Bystander.

Editor's Note: See editorial column for comment on this controversy.

To the Editor:

Colleges have failed in one of their main purposes, that of increasing the thirst young people have for more intellectual knowledge, by encouraging, accepting, and tolerating ignorance, and by admitting school is not the fashionable place to "go studious." The reason for this has been vague and intangible to most of us, but now your phrase, "Give them what they want," shows us the answer.

Mr. Editor, never take it upon yourself to say anything about what "they" want. A certain clique in every school may appear to exemplify the students in their entirety, but that clique is usually the minority.

Have you ever taken a poll of general school opinion, or must we judge the mental average of students (heaven forbid) by members of a "list" or by the actions of a few rowdies who have crept in?

It is easier to write trivial fluff that will not penetrate deeply, but will peacefully and "ho-hummingly" allow the mentally sluggish to doze off into their former mental stupor.

How about dividing the work of research and informative advice more evenly among the writers? One column cannot do it all. With all the talent on that staff (no sarcasm, either) the junior college should have a paper that they needn't use for keeping books from getting wet in the rain.

If some of us are judging the students incorrectly, and they really want "dirt" columns and limericks, how about writing to the "Ram's Horn" and support your "supporters?"

—Ethel Yellin.

Editor's Note: Miss Yellin, it must be remembered that the editor is as impartial as possible in any dispute. By "they," he meant any majority. If you can show that you speak for the majority, then he stands ready to do the necessary thing, and acquiesce. Your point is well taken, but your authority doubtful.

Dear Editor:

It is with pardonable pride that I attempt to change the tenor of the Ram's Horn. To wit, I have a sincere compliment to offer. Said compliment concerns the rally put on by the Army and Navy Club this A.M. I liked the rally and I liked it under most adverse conditions. For I am opposed to all military movements, etc., as such. So I went to the rally with the attitude of a scoffer. But I came out with—well, I'm getting ahead of the story.

Instead of an arm-waving psuedo patriotic fanatic, I found an intelligently delivered, impressive speech. On leaving, I almost became the victim of the band and started to deliver a supposedly humorous Fascistic salute, BUT I didn't. Out of the spirit of sincere tribute I refrained.

—Impressed.

Editor's Note: We still can't believe it! Not really a compliment!

Amstrup Announces Soph Formal Date; Place Unselected

With April 30 set as the date and an orchestra and ballroom still to be selected, plans are moving right along for the Sophomore Formal, according to Irv Amstrup, High Sophomore president.

"The committee has been pricing ballrooms, auditioning orchestras and looking at various types of bids," Amstrup said, "in an effort to secure the very best possible setting for our dance. We hope to make it a Soph Formal to top all previous Soph Formals and if things go the way we expect them to, this should be accomplished."

By Anne Rabinowitz

Pre-medical students sometimes overlook one of the most fascinating fields open to them, when entering the profession; that of a visiting nurse. Co-eds often feel the urge to become "girls in white," but express the unwillingness to stay put in one place over a long period of time.

Of the numerous people requiring medical care, a great percentage must receive treatment in the home, from the visiting nurses who supplement their training with a knowledge of public health. Each nurse makes an average of eight calls a day, often traveling on foot.

Giving advice is only one of the duties of the nurse, who must know where mothers may go for extra provisions or where domestic difficulties can be remedied.

Languages are helpful to the "traveling hospitals," for contacts are made with all types, classes, and nationalities.

Serenity, good health, patience, and an active interest in human beings, are necessary traits for the participant of this career. As all nurses must be equipped with those same requisites, this active field can be substituted for hospital work even after the pre-medical course.

* * *

Although it seems that more nurses are graduated into the profession than can be set to work, there is a crying demand for highly trained nurses, for a lack of educational requirements eliminates many applicants.

Choice of a training school or hospital is of utmost importance to the student for many places simply seek cheap employees. The quality of the teaching staff, facilities, prestige of hospital, placement opportunities, and eligibility of graduates in all states should be considered. There is an increasing demand for more education, training, and intelligence.

The private duty nurse averages seven months' work a year and earns an average of $1,311 a year. The public nurse usually starts at $1,450 a year and increases her salary steadily, the average being about $1,720.

Entrants into the profession who feel only the appeal of the money, would do well to seek another career, for a good nurse must desire wholeheartedly to work on intimate terms with human beings, take orders, be thorough, faithful, and possess the ability to accept responsibilities courageously.

One outstanding asset of the nursing profession to its members is that it is thoroughly organized into international, national, state, and district organizations as well as individual alumnae associations.

Throughout the country successful efforts are being made to standardize both training and wages, so that nurses will not receive ridiculously low or extremely high salaries, and the public need no longer groan at the costly expense and sometimes inadequacy of nursing efficiency.

support his government in any war it may undertake. However, since the rapid rise of Fascism, many peace groups have repudiated the pledge as being a hindrance in the struggle to combat armed conflict. They claim that the oath is fatalistic in that it does not propose to do anything until war comes instead of working to prevent war now.

Supporters of the idea argue that if people refuse to fight under any circumstances there will be no holocaust. Miriam Frazier will advocate the Oxford Pledge while Bill Switzer urges the College Peace Society to oppose it.

Hancock Enters College Shooters In State Matches

Two Men's Teams and One Women's Squad To Compete With California Marksmen This Week End At National Guard Armory

"Entrance of the College shooting brigade in the State Championship Matches of the San Francisco Rifle Association, this weekend, has been definitely planned according to the latest shooting strategy," said William "Wild Bill" Hancock, rifle and pistol coach of the college in an interview held early this week.

"I plan to enter two men's teams as well as one women's team in this annual shooting classic," reiterated Hancock. "A number of our best shooters, besides shooting with the main teams, will enter various individual firing fests. They will be pitted against the best shooters of the coast, if not the country. Nevertheless, I expect much of them," he explained.

Many Sharpshooters

Again to be held in the National Guard Armory gallery, these State Championship Matches will be shot on March 4, 5, and 6 and have already drawn a record-topping number of contestants. Virtually every shooting organization, whether it be military or merely sporting, in Central and Northern California and Nevada, has already given notice of intention to compete. Thus it is certain that there will be much stiff competition.

The local riflers have been practicing almost daily, including Saturdays, in their preparation. Not to be overlooked by the contestants are the many medals and trophies which are being donated by a local daily newspaper.

Win place and show medals will be given to all those ending up in the money as well as to each member on the counting teams. Trophies will also be given to winning groups. Last year, sections representing the college brought home veritable collections of medals of various metals.

Only Women

Notorious among these were the local women's team which, being the only like team entered, each member was awarded several medals representing the several matches which should have been fired. However, since feminine firing has become more popular since then, a number of excellent squads are already signed up for the embroglio.

The teams, shrewdly selected by Hancock, were chosen from the many College marksmen because of their sharpshooting abilities and have been entered in the coming fracas in such a way as to cinch a variety of the events. They are as follows:

May Change

"First and second teams will fire at 7:20 P.M., Friday while the women are scheduled for 9:00 A.M. Saturday. These teams have been selected solely for this meet," explained "Wild Bill", "and are not to be confused with the regular school first and second teams as well as the regular women's team. Also, the above listed personnel is liable to change at any time in the event of undue fluctuating scores in practice."

RATING CHARTS SEEN FOR ALL NYA EMPLOYEES

That NYA students will receive monthly ratings on their work, was announced by Helene Turner, administration head. This week, she said, there will be sent to all instructors who employ NYA help, an employment rating chart for each student now working. Each instructor will mark the student on a basis of reliability, attitude, initiative, industry, and capability. These ratings are formulated on excellent, good, fair, and poor.

The charts will be inserted into the permanent record, which is on file in the registrar's office, of each student who is on the NYA list, and it will be made part of his file for reference by instructors and future employers. The ratings will also be used as basis for further NYA assignments in selections to be made for next semester.

WAA Council Picks Representatives To Convention

At the first meeting of the complete council of the Women's Athletic Association, held last Tuesday afternoon, the two women who will represent the junior college athletic group at the annual AWS and WAA convention, to be held in Chico, were chosen. The two women selected are Dorothy Canavan, WAA president, who was regarded as the best qualified graduating woman student, and Mariam Frazier, badminton manager and active in all WAA activities.

Several council meetings were held previous to the last meeting, but as sport managers, who are regular council members, had not been elected the body was incomplete and little definite action was taken. A regular time was scheduled for the council to convene: 10 o'clock on Tuesday. The council meets weekly.

The group voted approval of the WAA gavel, which was recently engraved with the names of the organization's presidents. Names engraved on the gavel are: Arlene Freziers, Spring 1936; Ruth Johnson, Fall 1936; Ruth Johnson, Spring 1937; Gloria Swicegood, Fall 1937; and Dot Canavan, Spring 1938.

Peace Society Meet Will Discuss Value Of Oxford Promise

Next meeting of the College Peace Society will be held Wednesday, March 9, to discuss the Oxford Pledge at the home of Marion Turner, 2330 Larkin Street, accessible by cars E, 19, and Hyde cable.

The oath, which pledges the person taking it not to support his government in any war it may undertake, will be supported by Miriam Frazier. Bill Switzer will oppose the idea. Anyone interested, is invited to attend, Society President Ray Valdez emphasized. "For information on the Peace Society, students should see our faculty sponsors: Gertrude Bolton, William Goss, and John Ross, or myself."

Army-Navy Changes Time of Confab To Friday, March 11th

Postponed until Friday, March 11, the next meeting of the Army and Navy Club will be held on that date instead of the previously announced March 4. Because the latter date conflicts with the rifle meet, being given by the rifle team, members of the organization agreed to set ahead the day of their meeting one week. The next meeting of the club will therefore be held on Friday, March 11, at the home of President Gordon Sollman, 1239-15th Avenue.

Many former members of this organization, who have since graduated from this college, still maintain associations with the club. David Moonie, who is now attending the University of Chicago on a scholarship, won while a student at the college, keeps in touch with the club members as does Nicholas Sunzeff, who is at the present time attending the University of Wisconsin. Motoring down to the meetings from nearby universities are John Steward of Stanford and Eddie Sollman, Jim Fuller, Chris Harnett, Ahner Kepcrstin, Fred Wright, and Sid Farley of the University of California. In this way, the organization keeps in touch with its former members no matter how scattered or far off they may be.

Armament Question To Be Forum Topic

President Roosevelt's armament program will be the subject of the Forum Club's next discussion on Friday night, March 18, at the home of Carol Pickering, 2143 - 16th Avenue.

Bob MacArthur will present the arguments for the proposed $800,000,000 appropriation for warships. Opposing an increase in equipment for the navy will be Ray Valdez.

"I am sure the discussion will be an interesting one," Fred Vast, Forum chairman, said. "All students interested in this controversial topic are invited to attend."

Students desiring to write for "Forum", the organization's literary magazine, are reminded that the deadline for submission of manuscripts is March 25. Anyone wanting more information should see John Ward, editor of the publication.

Building Work Slowed During Recent Storms

Grading Operations End Seen Within Next Thirty Days

Grading operations on the Balboa Park site of the college were held up considerably by the heavy rains during the past month, but have been resumed with the return of good weather, and it is expected that they will be finished within 30 days. Immediately upon their completion, the pouring of concrete for the actual foundation will start.

The work of clearing and leveling the site is being performed by the Sibley Grading Company, which is making use of several tractors and a pneumatic drill in its operations. It was originally believed that this part of the job would be completed by the beginning of March, but inclement weather caused the suspension of operations and subsequent delay.

Despite this handicap, the job is only two or three weeks from completion, and arrangements are being made to negotiate with a contractor to do the construction work, as the contract awarded the Sibley Company is only for the preparation of the land.

Rocks Smashed

The site has been graded in to steps since, because of its elevation, it could not be made perfectly level. All of the numerous trees which decorated the landscape two months ago have disappeared, and the terrain is being laid out with mathematical precision. At present, pneumatic drills are being employed to shatter the large rocks which bar the progress of the tractors, and which must be broken down into fragments in order to leave a flat surface for the pouring of concrete when the foundations are laid.

As yet, the only part of the tract prepared is that on which will stand the first unit of the plant, the central building of a group which will provide accommodations for an estimated 2500 students when it is completed. It is intended to have the athletic field completed as soon as possible, probably before any of the accompanying buildings, so that it will be available for practice when junior college students first enter the plant. Occupation is slated for Spring, 1939, although all the units of the group of buildings will not be finished by that time. The main building will be in readiness, and it is considered large enough to house the entire student body while its companion structures are still in the process of construction.

Much Grading Done

Located at Ocean and San Jose Avenues, the site has been the scene of activity during the past few weeks, as there was a great deal to be done before it could be pronounced suitable for the erection of the various buildings for which plans have been drawn up. In the very near future, however, these will at last become realities. Only a few touches remain to be added to the ground before it will be in readiness for the work of the building contractors.

The task of laying the foundations and constructing the first unit will occupy all summer and fall, and will probably run into next winter, as the building is a massive one, although not particularly intricate in design. The other units of the group will be worked upon concurrently, so that they will be completed in close succession and be available for student use as early as possible.

WORK CONTINUES

ALL WOMEN INVITED TO AWS TEA NEXT TUESDAY AT CENTURY CLUB

All college women are invited to the second in a series of teas to be given by the Associated Women Students this semester, and which will be held Tuesday, March 8, at the Century Club, located at Sutter and Franklin Streets, from 3:30 to 5:30 o'clock. The tea is primarily intended to aid junior college women in choosing the vocation in which they will be most interested.

The AWS council hopes to accomplish this through presenting vocational speeches to be given by prominent San Francisco women. Three women have been invited to speak. Two, Ruth Mowr of the Bank of America, and Ethel Livingstone, outstanding woman lawyer in the city, have accepted the invitation, while the third, Helen Gilman, of the Modern Service Bureau, is not yet certain whether she will be able to attend the tea.

Randall Urges Attendance

"We urge as many women as possible to attend the tea," said Barbara Randall, AWS president. "We have procured two, and perhaps three, excellent speakers who have, through their own experience, a very clear and comprehensive view of the opportunities offered to women in their respective fields. Every woman who is enrolled as a member of the junior college becomes automatically entitled to admission to all AWS affairs; they are given, in fact, for their benefit. So the women of the college should take advantage of the offerings of the AWS and support the organization which they compose."

Hostesses for the tea will be Claire Duggan, Dixie Cormick, Phyllis Fullman, Betty Nelson, Anita Lauerman, Charlotte Zier, Margie Cusic, Oreallia Orsland, Norma Parent, Pat Wallis, Marion Corley, Dorothy Canavan, Virginia Kwiatt, Marion Kager, Margie Wright, Alice Thompson, Virginia Hurst, and Florence Murphy.

Faculty members who will attend the tea are: Alfred Agosti, Joseph Amori, Flossita Badger, John Booher, Louis Conlan, Alice Cooper, Anne Marie Delfs, Evans Ecke, Margaret Flourney, Thomas Gabbert, Miriam Gatley, Ruth Gavin, David Goldshur, George Green, Bertha Keller, Helen Kelly, Lloyd Luckmann, Dorothy Mercer, Ella Nowell, Patricia Ricciardi, Vera Spencer, Helene Turner, Verrel Weber, Jennet Henderson, and Yvonne Stoupe.

Administration Invited

Later in the semester, the AWS plans to give a tea honoring graduating women of the San Francisco High Schools and to which women representatives from all of the San Francisco High Schools will be invited, and a tea honoring graduating women of the junior college.

Alpha Gamma Sigma Meets This Friday In Little Theater

Next meeting of the local chapter of Alpha Gamma Sigma, statewide scholarship society, will be held this Friday in the Little Theatre at Galileo. Permanent officers will be elected, the constitution will be approved, and delegates will be appointed to the annual convention of the Society, which will be held on March 14.

A new institution at the college this semester, Alpha Gamma Sigma, is under the sponsorship here of instructor Alice Cooper and J. Paul Mohr, registrar. A "C" average is necessary for temporary membership, and 140 grade points in two years for permanent membership.

Don Mix, appointed temporary chairman at the initial meeting of the group, has collaborated with his assistants, Norma Lee Parent and Gerald Robert Flamm, in formulating a plan of action for the society in its formative stages, and will present a constitution for the approval of the members at the next meeting, which will be of considerable importance to all concerned, according to Mix.

"There are approximately 80 students in the college eligible for membership, and most of them turned out for the first meeting. If as many are present Friday, the meeting is virtually assured of success," stated Flamm during a recent interview.

Monster Skating Orgy Planned By Marksman's Club

En masse, the College Rifle and Pistol Club will go skating in a big way, this Saturday night, when they will take the entire 48 Avenue rink over from 11 o'clock until . . .

The idea, first conceived by Vice-President Bill Gibson, provides for the club to rent the rink for a flat sum, which allows the members to skate until the ice holds out. (Then maybe swimming?)

Refreshments will be provided by the club as well as transportation to and from the rink. Each member may bring one outside guest and the total expense will be 50 cents each.

Because of the good time had by the club members recently when they had a skating party, it was thought that it would be pretty good if, because of the multitudes at ordinary evening skating, the club had the whole rink to themselves after regular hours.

Machinery was put into motion with the results as given above. Money is payable to Don Smith, club treasurer at the Galileo rifle range any afternoon.

Classes Returning To Powell Monday

Next Monday, March 7, will find the college united again when all downtown morning classes will once again meet at the Powell Street Building. The Recreation Conference's classes, which have been held at the Extension Division for the past month, will terminate Friday.

Students will no longer have to walk to the Native Sons Building or to the Pacific Gas and Electric structure. All classes that were moved because of the visitors will resume their meetings in their former rooms.

New Constitution To Be Submitted To Students Soon

Present Code Deemed Inadequate; Planned Document Will Stress Conciseness, Clarity, Hope of Ex-Council

A new Associated Students Constitution will be presented to the college Executive Council and then to the Associated Students of the college within the next few weeks, according to a committee now at work on the structure of this constitution. In its rough, skeleton form, the new Constitution aims to improve over that now in existence by presenting in a clear, concise form, the methods by which the Associated Students of the San Francisco Junior College may better promote and control student activities delegated by the president of the college.

Articles tentatively approved by the Council and subject to change at a future meeting, when the entire constitution will be presented, include Article I, concerning the name and membership of the Association, Article II, which concerns the officers of the Association and their powers and duties, and section 1 of Article III, which has to do with the composition of the college Executive Council.

Officers

Officers of the Association, according to the present rough draft, will include a President, Vice-President and Secretary. The position of the Yell Leader is as yet uncertain but he will probably be made an officer of the Association without vote on the Executive Council.

Members of the Executive Council, under this new constitution, include the President and Secretary of the Associated Students, and representatives from the Associated Men Students, Associated Women Students, Women's Athletic Association, Men's Athletic Council, Social Committee, Rally Committee and Club Advisory Board.

No Legislative Power

The Club Advisory Board, which is to be as a unifying action among various clubs within [illegible] act entirely a[illegible] It will have no[illegible] tion and a representative from each [illegible] its own membership will serve on the Executive Council as an actual voting member.

All club problems will be brought before the Advisory Board and those dealing with dates of club activities and other routine matters will be taken care of at board meetings while those involving more weighty matters will be carried to the Executive Council by the Club Advisory Board Representative.

In telling the purpose of these two major changes in the extra-curricula set-up of the college, student officers pointed out that the main aim was to improve the present situation by eliminating all unnecessary machinery.

Ex-Council Rejects Sorority Appeal OK's Chessmen

Dispensing with the discussion of the proposed college constitution, because of a shortage of time, the college Executive Council returned to the regular order of business at a meeting held last Friday afternoon.

Following the reading of the minutes, routine committee reports were given and at the conclusion of these, Lorraine Haffmeyer, representing the High Sophomore class, told of the necessity for obtaining an additional fifty dollars for the Soph Formal. Miss Haffmyer was advised to bring this matter before Dean Browne, who would in turn advise the Council as to how this additional sum may be obtained.

The charter of the San Francisco Junior College Chess Club, presented by Ex-Council adviser Alden Smith, in the absence of Henry Ralston, faculty adviser, was approved by the Council and one for the Lambda Chi Sorority was temporarily rejected because of the failure of the group to meet the requirements, namely, sending the council a copy of its constitution and by-laws and a list of their present membership, together with one dollar to pay for the charter.

12 Hotel Students Secure Temporary Training Positions

Twelve students of the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division have been placed in temporary positions as part of their laboratory training which is made possible through a cooperative agreement with San Francisco Hotels and the Union. The students work from 8:00 to 12:00 P.M. Monday through Friday.

During this laboratory period the students will be given practical training in bake shops, kitchens, dining rooms, front office procedure, steward and accounting, food control, promotion and advertising, and credit work.

Ski Club Planning Snow Trip Mar. 13

Plans for the Ski Club's excursion into the snow country have finally materialized, and the trip will definitely be made on Sunday, March 13, provided that at least 25 are signed up for it by that date. Long Barn will be the destination of the travellers, who will spend the entire day reveling amidst the snow and ice of the Sierras.

Arrangements have been made to secure Rhodes busses for the journey. They will leave early Sunday morning and return the same night. The cost will be $2.50 per person.

"We expect to see a good turnout of winter sports enthusiasts for this trip," said Frediani, "as it will be the only opportunity for many of them to enjoy the snow at such a moderate cost. There will be plenty of activity to keep everyone occupied, as we have made plans for skiing, tobogganing, sliding about on ash can covers, and snowballing. Anyone interested in making reservations for the trip," he continued, "should contact me as soon as possible, so that we will know ahead of time if it will be necessary to procure more than one bus."

FINAL WARNING ON MED. EXAMS MADE BY OFFICE

Men students who have not as yet had their physical examinations, and those who have failed to keep appointments, will find their names in the following list. These appointments are final and must be kept, the office emphasized. Examinations will be held by Dr. Friedlander in Room 201.

NOW'S THE TIME

NEVER does youth hear the words of his elders in regard to study and application of time, that he doesn't sigh and wish that he be spared what to him is endless preaching.

It is not to be expected that anyone still in the impressionable age can assimilate and retain ALL the knowledge that is being thrust at him.

Further, it is illogical to assume that any young person who is trying to gain an education that will enable him to take his desired place in the world, acquire all the necessary learning without picking up other bits of knowledge that may or may not be of value.

What is important, is that young people be able to judge for themselves whether or not a fact is worth remembering.

Students of college age, accustomed to receiving advice of every conceivable sort, must be able to distinguish between the good and bad instructions which they are given, and after weighing both sides, form their own opinions.

Youth would do well to appreciate the fact that they are in the best years of their life, the years when accomplishment depends strictly on how far the individual wants to go. All too soon, comes the time for reminding oneself that "things could have been different, if I'd have thought about it then."

[...] PEACE

[...] college students [...] be concluded [...] mity. [...] erson who would [...] its alternative, [...] bout that which [...] ge. there exists [...] chance for every student to learn the best methods of gaining and retaining universal peace, through the Peace Society and Sociology 55.

It is probable, that in order to assure our nation of a continued period of peaceful life, the masses of the people must be educated to the perils and dangers of the possibilities of being drawn into an international conflict.

There is no better place to begin such education than in the nation's schools and colleges, for if the youth is made to understand the worth and desirability of peace, it is quite possible that he will pass his knowledge on to someone else.

There can be no danger of the nation going to war, if public opinion is thoroughly against such a move, and the best way to insure the popular demand for peace is to bring out all the arguments for peace and impress them on the citizenry.

If war can be stirred up and begun by floods of propaganda, then peace can also, and there is no better propaganda than that spread by talk among men.

American youth may be much too smart to throw away their young lives in another war to end war, but unless they are made to realize the actuality of the danger of such a thing becoming a reality, they may be forced in to it.

EX-COUNCIL AGAIN

Interesting would be the results of a poll taken to determine the number of students in San Francisco Junior College who know or understand exactly what their elected representatives are doing.

It is reasonable to suppose, from the reception of the student president's speech at the recent rally, that many students do not even care what the executive council does, as long as they are quiet about it.

At present the governing group is hard at work drafting a new constitution to replace the inadequate one in effect at present. It is to be desired by all means, that the general student body know and understand the motives for this move, and to understand the new document, for they will be called upon to vote their approval of the project in its finished form.

Let it be said once again. Executive Council meetings are open to all. Anyone is welcome. Meetings are held in Room 257, every Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Make it a point to attend and see what goes on.

IDEALISM

Many persons are apt to look with scorn at one who is accused of being an idealist. Those who are so blase and sophisticated that they conceive of no value in sentimental things like ideals will laugh with derision at the dreams of their fellows.

What they forget, is the fact that the greatest men in history, with few exceptions, were idealists, and they did great things because they had a dream which they forced into reality through their own efforts.

It is not as naive to be an idealist as it is to be a cynic, for it takes infinitely more courage to believe in a thing in the face of opposition, than to follow the mob and doubt.

Youth is idealistic; the ones who discard their ideals become lesser lights in the electric sign of life. The others shine out like suns.

RAM'S HORN

Fast proving to be the most popular feature in the newspaper of this college, the column of student contribution needs a definite set of rules to accomplish the greatest amount of good.

The editorial staff of The Guardsman, therefore, wishes to announce the following rules, with the admonition that no letter will be printed, that does not conform to them. THE ONLY EXCEPTIONS TO THESE RULES WILL BE MADE AT DISCRETION OF THE EDITOR.

One—Letters may be typed or written, but in no event are to exceed ONE HUNDRED WORDS.

Two—First letters received will usually be given preference.

Three—Letters must be turned in Thursday, to appear in the paper the following Wednesday.

Four—Identity of the writer must be made known to the editor in some manner; although his name need not appear in print.

Out Of The Fog

"Something's Wrong Somewhere"

(A comedy in one scene)

Characters

Ruhtracam, editor of a weekly newspaper and citizen of Egellocroinuj.

Mr. Turist, a visitor to Egellocroinuj.

Scene

Front of the capitol building in Tellewop, capital of Egellocroinuj. The street is crowded as the city life flows around the capitol building. It is noon and the sun is shining.

(Mr. Turist gazes at the front of the building a moment, and then as Ruhtracam comes down the steps, he hails him.)

Mr. Turist: Say, I'm a stranger here, and I'm interested in finding out a few things about this place. Could you give me a few moments of your time?

Ruhtracam: I don't see why not, everyone else around here takes my time. Just what would you like to know, Mr.— Mr.—?

Mr. Turist: Turist, Turist's the name. I'm quite a ways from home, and I don't know anyone here.

Ruhtracam: Well, Mr. Turist, I'm going to lunch now, would you like to come along, "dutch"? I can answer your questions at the same time.

Mr. Turist: Thanks. I just want to get a little material for a book I'm doing.

Ruhtracam: (starts down the hill) Okay, come along.

Mr. Turist: (waving his hand toward the capitol building) What sort of a government have you in there?

Ruhtracam: (eyes his companion curiously, stops and exclaims) Listen, nobody is supposed to know that. Why don't you ask me something easy?

Mr. Turist: Don't get mad, I just wondered what form of rule your people employed. Have you a king, dictator, or what?

Ruhtracam: (sighing) Oh, I thought for a minute you were one of those graft investigators. (Sits down on the curb and motions Mr. Turist to follow his example.) I supposed you would call it a curious form of democracy.

Mr. Turist: What's curious about democracy?

Ruhtracam: Huh?

Mr. Turist: Skip it. I mean, what's funny about your government?

Ruhtracam: Well, I suppose you would call it representative, but no one votes. It isn't considered fashionable anymore. Only about seventeen per cent of the people voted in the last election, and even they won't this time. You see, everyone here belongs to the same party and holds a party card, and yet you cannot vote without a card.

Mr. Turist: (gazing at a passing blonde) I don't get it, but go on. How are the candidates chosen?

Ruhtracam: (gazing at a passing red-head) The candidates, oh yeah, them. Well, they sorta choose themselves, nobody cares much anyway. You see, no one is really interested in the government anymore. We only have the elections because they are in the constitution. That reminds me, we're getting a new one. The tnediser yxerp said so the last time he spoke to the people, but nobody paid any attention to him. They like clowns; they're funnier and louder.

Mr. Turist: That's a h—— of a way for the people to act. Doesn't anybody take an interest in the affairs of state?

Ruhtracam: Oh, yes, a few, but they're considered radicals. You see, it's like I told you, it's just not fashionable even to know who the yxerp is.

Mr. Turist: (leering at the other) Ha, I'll bet you don't pay taxes, that's why no one cares.

Ruhtracam: Sure we pay taxes, but money's so plentiful around here that nobody wants to know where their dough goes. They don't even read a budget when we print one.

Mr. Turist: (muttering to himself) This guy's nuts. I never heard of such a thing. Everybody's in the same party . . . nobody votes . . . nobody knows this, or cares that, fooey!. (to the other) Say, bud, are you trying to kid me?

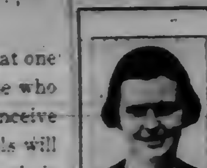
Mr. Turist: Never mind, (aside) now I'm positive.



Ruhtracam: (yawning) Well, I'd better be getting along now, I've got to go get my newspaper together, I'm editor of Eht Snamdraug, local weekly, and I gotta get it out so the people can forget to read it. So long!

Mr. Turist: (watching the other's retreating form) Lord, I wonder when the first train leaves this screwy joint?

Mental Mutterings

SPRING

When the windows of the florists
And the little corner carts
Are riotous with colors bright and gay,
And the hyacinths and daffodils
And daphne hit your hearts,
Don't you get the feeling Spring is on its way?

With the white and yellow china lillies
Bursting into bloom,
And tender purple violets as well,
Don't you get the feeling Winter time
Is soon to meet its doom
And Spring is really coming here to dwell?

We once read something about someone having two loaves of bread and selling one of them to buy hyacinths to feed his soul. Now that Spring is definitely here (to be horribly trite) and we see the Powell Street flower wagons filled to the brim with pots of this loveliest of blooms, we can easily understand why. Would that we had a loaf of bread to sell! The best we can do is sell four Munies and buy a bunch of violets but first we've got to figure out where we can get the four Munies! Life is like that, isn't it? Seriously speaking, there is really no other season when flowers are as lovely as they are in the Spring time, and although the top place in our heart still belongs to the Chrysanthemum, we couldn't resist a tribute in the form of adding one more Spring poem to an already overflowing market.

Perhaps it's a little out of our department but we'd like to nominate "Maw" Slattery, mother of the fast moving Treacy, for the title of the most fervent junior college basketball fan. "Maw" was present at all the games and her excited shouts of "Take it away from him!" and "Come on, S. F.!" helped considerably to add to the spirit of the other rooters. Yes, indeedy, if some of the rest of us could get as pepped up over a game as "Maw" did some of the scores might have been a little different.

It's quite a ways off yet, but as this is one of those "last issues before" it's not too soon to remind all women students that they are invited to attend a tea at the Century Club on Tuesday afternoon, March 8, from 3:30 to 5:30 o'clock. An interesting program of vocational speakers has been planned as well as some super-swell refreshments so be sure you get there! The real purpose behind these teas, you know, is to get the women students in the college acquainted with one another. Since teas are about the only affairs in the college that are exclusively for women students, it seems that all of us should show our interest in the AWS and its activities by attending whenever possible.

President Archibald Cloud was named to the committee for San Francisco Public School Week. This committee sponsored the recognition by parents of the progress of schools and education.

Willis Huson was chosen to head the A Capella Choir, and Annabelle Tyler, vice-president; Rosella Retallick, secretary, and Jane Ferguson, librarian, were also elected to lead the activities of the choir group.

Associated Women Students' officers, including Elaine Dominguez, president; Barbara Latz, vice-president; Norma Parent, secretary, and Pat Madden, treasurer, attended the Alta and Central California AWS Conference. The meeting was held at San Mateo Junior College and had as its major purpose a discussion of organization problems and their solutions, and an attempt to organize a Women's Athletic Association as a unit of the AWS.

A Federal Art Project exhibition was on display at John Howell's Bookstore, and all students were invited to attend the exhibit.

The Federal Government made it possible for the college to procure paintings from the exhibition which would form the nucleus of a permanent collection. The exhibit included a group of modern water colors, several oil paintings, etchings and lithograph, which were done by several local artists, including Paul Julias, George Post, and Don Kingman.

CABBAGES AND KINGS

By Dick Simpers

WITH the sun again beaming merrily, the population of the study hall has shown a marked decrease. The temptation to lie and bask in the beneficial rays has apparently been too much for some of the students, and we can't say that we blame them. Grinding away at some dull textbook looks like anything but a worthwhile occupation when the beaches are beckoning. (If it's raining on the day this comes out, just forget the whole thing.)

The proposal recently advanced to establish a "curfew" at ten o'clock each night, after which time everyone under the age of eighteen would have to be off the streets, is not a bad idea, but it seems to be hopelessly impracticable. In the first place, differentiation between those over eighteen and under it, is pretty difficult, in the second place, the law would be practically unenforceable, and in the third place, very few people would have any respect for it, which fact alone is enough to foredoom it to failure. No normal young person sixteen or seventeen years old wants to be told that he must be safely home in bed by ten each night, especially since it is usually about this age that one likes to consider oneself "grown-up." Such an ordinance would just arouse resentment and ridicule, and cause all concerned a lot of unnecessary bother.

It has just occurred to us that this is, beyond a doubt, the most eventful semester in the history of the Junior College. One social event follows another with hardly time enough between for a breathing spell, college politics are being shaken up and revised, athletics are attracting more attention than ever before, clubs are more active, and everything in general seems geared to a faster pace. Progress has been made in almost every college group, from the Executive Council to Fredian's Ski Club, and, all things taken into consideration, Spring, 1938, seems destined to go down in the annals as a memorable semester.

Those tantalizing odors, which drift out from the Thursday afternoon cooking class, fairly make one's mouth water. Whatever happened to the admirable custom of last semester of sending samples of the goodies concocted over to The Guardsman office? In our opinion, it was a tradition which should be carried on.

For a good guffaw, one might take a look at those badminton classes which meet in the late afternoon in the girls' gymnasium. Several members of the so-called stronger sex have enrolled for the course as Physical Education, and their frantic efforts to master the art of slamming the befeathered shuttlecock back and forth are enough to make even the Sphinx burst in laughter. The pained expression on the face of one of them when he gives the little missile a terrific clout and then sees it bob a couple of feet and fall to the floor is really worth seeing.

RAM'S HORN — COMPLIMENTS BEEFS COME IN THIS TIME

Editor's Note: The following letter was submitted to the Ram's Horn by Paul Pitman, assistant to President Cloud:

University of California
Extension Division
February 19, 1938.

Mr. Paul Pitman,
San Francisco Junior College,
San Francisco, California.

Dear Mr. Pitman:

I noticed in the February 16 issue of The Guardsman the editorial "To Avoid Congestion" while we are holding this special class for recreational workers. It is indicative of the fine spirit of cooperation on the part of your organization and your students.

With best wishes,
Sincerely,
(Signed) Boyd B. Rakestraw,
Assistant Director.

Dear Editor:

Although a petition signed by about eighty members of the student body has been presented to the president of the student body, addressed to the ex-council, the ex-council has not yet seen the petition. At a recent meeting of the various clubs in which a plan was presented, the petitioned view advocating greater proportionate representation for the clubs was not presented, or at best confused.

Recent action by the ex-council has favored the elimination of the representation of three cultural groups—drama, music, and forensics councils, which, under the present constitution, are represented. Group interest votes are thus concentrated in the A.W.S., W.A.A., A.M.S., and M.A.C., and in the social committee headed by the vice-president.

The club membership totals about 500, one-third the school registration. These represent spontaneous interests of the students. They meet regularly and carry on their activities progressively. Of the other above constituted groups, two duplicate functions of other groups. The A.W.S. puts on about three teas a semester. The A.M.S. sponsors the men's fights; thus they justify their existence and a vote on the council. They both carry on but these limited social activities. Social interests of the student body at large are represented by the social committee and will, under the new constitution, continue to do so.

The proposed plan advanced to the clubs favors creation of a bi-cameral system of legislature. Actually, however, the ex-council is delegating the new body no powers nor is it giving up any of its present duties. Then in what capacity is the club council to serve? Supposedly it would be an advisory board and a clearing house for the semester club calendar. But thirty clubs meeting regularly will naturally have conflicting dates. Worthwhile advice should be backed up by votes that command attention.

Such large combined interests as represented by the clubs are not given proportionate representation under a plan which allows athlete and social interests 2 votes and 3 votes respectively, while cultural groups are allowed but one vote in determination of student body policies and activities. Actually the cultural interest are represented by real live chartered organizations; the athletic and social interests are supposed interests which should compose a part of the student educational balance. We have no quarrel with that but we do feel that the combined clubs merit a representation larger than one; that perhaps 3 or 5 would be fairer. Certainly the clubs are receiving no bargain when they are bartered, under the new distribution, one vote, in return for their old allotment of three.

Ray Valdez

Dear Editor:

After six semesters of trolly travel ling, never before has there been so much unity in our expansive college. Because of the hard work of Stan Adams and his associates, the heretofore impossible has been done; namely, the promotion of school spirit.

We old-timers remember the day when the instructors were orienting themselves as well as the freshmen. We remember the day when athletic events were witnessed only by friends of the performers. We remember when rallies were attended by a scant 25 or 50 students who didn't have anything better to do.

Time and time again the excuse was, "we have no building," but Adams proved this was a fallacy by the 1500 students that turned out to the rally last Friday. Good entertainment, cleverly done, has made us feel that we are attending something more than just a school in spite of our geographical mess.

Although we have improved, we are still far from perfection. There is yet much to be done now and in the future. In the meantime, the college has grown out of infancy to adolescence. Here's to its coming adulthood.

—Old Timer.

Dear Editor:

The present curriculum of this college is, considering the circumstances, really something to marvel at. It is entirely adequate in almost every respect, but there is one glaring exception. I refer to the standard men's Physical Education classes. These classes, held at Galileo or at Funston, fail, in my opinion, to fulfill what is supposed to be their principal function.

To term these classes "physical education" at all is nothing more than a huge joke, if one interprets the term literally. Anyone who is so disposed can take gym for two years without deriving the slightest benefit from it, either physically or mentally. Of course, if one is athletically inclined, one can really get something out of such classes, but such persons usually enroll for a specific activity, such as track, crew, or tennis. On the other hand, there are a great many students who are too lazy, or too uninterested, to care anything about playing ball and who consider it a complete waste of time to go out and romp around in shorts twice a week, but are forced to do so by the rules of the college. It's a cinch that they're not going to participate whole-heartedly in these activities, and it would be a blessing if some sort of a substitute could be offered them which would do them some good instead of simply wasting a lot of their time every week.

—Joe Bush.

Presidential Notes

By Don Mix

HALF TIME

It is the customary procedure at half time to check the results of the campaign thus far, note the successes and failures, and mayhap to give a bit of a fight talk to spur on activities for the next two quarters.

The program announced at the beginning of the current semester aimed at carrying on an objective campaign on three separate fronts.

The initial issue proposed to delete all buffoonery from the activities of student officials—and much to our surprise we encountered complete cooperation along this line. Therefore we may state without reservation that the first objective has been accomplished. We HAVE acquired decorum.

Although much time and discussion have been utilized in the erection of the "perfect constitution" we must announce that, although much progress has been made, the momentous document is still in its formative stages.

Our own particular pet, the Club Affiliation, has been formally accepted under the title of Club Advisory Board, and will be incorporated in the new constitution. Heaven and Mr. Valdez permitting, the new group should be a worthwhile addition to the machinery of student government.

Dances under the very capable handling of Miss Norma Parent have been successes while Stan Adams has promoted some very interesting rallies—all of which gives us reason to believe the social program also has been at least adequate.

That, my friends, is what might be called the half time score.

PLUG

By way of promoting an interest in a worthy student activity and giving a plug for our old chum, High Soph Prexy Irv Amstrup, we make it known to one and all that the date for the Soph Formal has definitely been set for Saturday evening, April 30. The buildup for the affair has it that it will surpass all previous efforts and will be, to quote Amstrup, "Stupendously colossal."

AFTER DARK

By John Ward

San Francisco is host to one of the finest musical seasons of recent years, a season of exceptional variety and quality. But, unfortunately, San Francisco audiences have been their usual enigmatic selves and patronized the bad artists, ignoring the good. They have filled a house to overflowing for as mediocre an artist as Nelson Eddy or Artur Rubensten, and completely neglected such mastery as Gieseking and such singers as the Wagnerian group. Of course, it is obvious that Eddy has a million-dollar name and Rubenstein was billed for a "pop" symphony. But one usually looks to San Francisco audiences for better musical taste and good sense.

Immediately we can feel some of our readers rising in horrible indignation and calling us prejudiced cranks who never like anything. Let us add for their benefit, that it is not so much that we criticize for some superficial, stupid cause, but because we love fine art, not second best, and are not taken in (we hope!) by high-pressure salesmanship or a flash of personality and a dash of brilliant theatrics.

To our mind, both Nelson Eddy and Artur Rubenstein resorted to both. Mr. Eddy, with his white hair, his Hollywood fame, and his insipid voice, drew a record crowd of movie fans, giddy girls and a few impressed musicians. It was an unfortunate affair. Here was a rank musician and a feeble technician playing to the gallery for all he was worth and then being named the equal to Schnabel or Hofmann.

Now this would have been more palatable if Kreutzberg and Gieseking and Wagnerian Singers and the Saltzburg Opera Guild, and so forth, had not been completely neglected and abused, established masters and excellent new companies had not been forgotten by a town famous for its hospitality and taste. Nothing is more astonishing or revolting. It would seem that when the cinema goes music minded in a classic way, the concert public follows suit.

To be sure, the question arises, what's to be done about it? We can only answer, a quiet nothing. Public taste is not only fickle but childish. The public likes a good show. If the approach is bad, so what? The effect is nice. Even the continual cultural bombardment of the radio fails to elevate the general taste for music. The competition of Benny Goodman and the Jeanette MacDonald movie school is too much. The Met opera and the Philharmonic concerts are a bore to most school students.

The concert hall is occasionally filled by a great artist like Marion Anderson, the opera season has glamour, the ballet color, but a chamber orchestra or an Anga Enters—they have nothing but unadulterated, serious art to pre-

Of course the local aggregation didn't win any shiny trophy but they did play a colorful brand of basketball, the kind that kept you turning hand springs for the full forty minutes. Messrs. Slattery, Phelan, Opalinski, Curcio, Blackfield, Fischer, Blackfield and company can take their final curtain call feeling assured that they performed nobly. If they had lost every other game of the season that smashing victory over the supposedly unbeatable Modesto team would have secured them their niche in the college's hall of fame.

The proposed basketball tussle between the slipsloppy Hottentots and the Executive Council five will feature some fast teamwork between Ray (double dribble) Valdez and Al (Foul Shot) Williams . . . at least that's what we were told.

With the college championship boxing matches slated to be held within the next two weeks, Joe Amori is putting his embryo leather-pushers through some really torrid sessions. The lads have spent two months getting in condition and learning the fundamentals and now they are beginning to engage in some potent beak-busting sessions. Ray Greenwood, two-time title winner, and Mel Chicazola, golden gloves champ, are the two prize pupils and if, by some strange chance they should be pitted against each other in those Verdi Club matches, ye college boxing fans will witness an epic battle.

Add bright note: Herb Brotman, "the swimming team is still improving and should be in fine shape when the matches with California and Stanford roll around, in the next month or so."

All the broken-hearted baseball players, who were cut from the squad last week, have wiped the tears from their eyes, tucked their spikes neatly away in their closet—and turned out for crew or track practice. Coach Lee Eisan cut down the horsehide squad to a workable unit of fifteen or eighteen men, thereby tossing these orphans out in the cold where they fall prey to the wiles of trackster Sweet and boatman Gaddy.

Our nomination for the all-conference rooter: Mrs. Slattery, mother of the illustrious Treacy, who completely outrooted all and sundry with some very enthusiastic displays. Honorable mention goes to Mr. Tom O'Neil, assistant ruler of the Powell Street Hill, who is a very capable lung exerciser.

Ed (Winter Wonderland) Frediani, the Alpine Tex Rickert, is promoting a snow trip that he says should be slightly terrific. A complete education in all the snow time arts is promised to all who attend the one-day jaunt, according to Eddie Frediani.

The much-publicized Hottentot quintet made a rather inauspicious debut when they lost their first game to the Hot Shot A. C. by the score of 92-91 in an overtime game.

Lambie Meyers, former great of this sheet, bounced into the office the other day and gave us this startling documentary evidence to prove that the muchly-beaten Ram five rates tops nationally. Here it is:

No. 1—California freshmen defeated the Cal varsity in a full time scrimmage, making the frosh better than the varsity.

No. 2—Modesto Junior College beat the Cal frosh. That makes Modesto better than California.

No. 3—San Francisco Junior College knocked over Modesto. That makes S. F. J. C. superior to either Modesto or the Bears.

Up to this point we see that "Dutch" Conlan's men drubbed the team that beat the team that won over California.

No. 4—California defeated Stanford.

No. 5—Stanford won over the class of the eastern quintets and now look to be winners of the Pacific Coast Conference, if not National Champs.

On paper (you've just read the facts), San Francisco is superior to the Stanford varsity and should rightfully be hailed as the No. 1 team of the nation.

AMS FISTICUFFS FEATURES VETS; ALSO NEWCOMERS

Amori Plans Good Fights As Well As Free Smokes To Both Men and Women

Leather smacking on flesh will resound from the Verdi Club ring Tuesday, March 16, when Promoter Joe Amori stages his sixth annual Men's Club College boxing championships.

Planned by "Uncle" Joe, "the best ever," this semester's fisticuff festival will feature a number of able "vets" as well as some promising beginners.

Recruited from his boxing class, Amori's novices are considered by local experts as the "punchiest slinging fools" ever to grace the ring in a Men's Club fest.

Veterans Returning

Three champion veterans will return to defend their titles. Ray Greenwood, 160 pounds, will defend himself from another Greenwood, one Bill (no relative), who, sans experience, is considered a prospect among prospects.

Alan Williams, copper of the 149-pound medal last fall, will have to hurdle much elimination if he wants to repeat. His opponents will be John Dietrich, Gino DeVito, Terry Isaacson, and Robert Rays, all stalwarts of the nth degree.

Frank Holmes, swarthy tiger, of the 129-pound class, will have, among many flyweights to eliminate, two fast youths in the persons of Don DeShields and Frank Matsumoto. The latter is considered by Amori to be "fast as hell." That finishes the oldcomers with their opposition.

Rutherford Signs

Others who have already signed for action are Robert Rutherford of 169-pound class and Jim McGreavy, 139.

According to Amori, these will be College championship bouts and the signup sheet is open to all as well as the Galileo gym, which is open for practice sessions on the noon hour, Mondays and Wednesdays.

There will be eight fighting classes, namely: 119, 129, 139, 149, 159, 169, 179, and heavies.

The whole thing will be staged on the one night, from eliminations to finals, said Amori, and free smokes will be given men as well as women. There is plenty of spectator room, all students and their friends being invited.

Besides the regular boxing, there will be the same number of wrestling competitions with awards to be given in the same classes. Also, there will be exhibitions in both fighting and wrestling by outside experts.

Amori is also planning fistic encounters with various noted organization squads such as San Jose State, San Mateo J.C., Cal Frosh and the local Central YMCA.

Opalinski Named On All Star Squad As Curcio Gains Second Team

The Guardsman sport staff hereby makes its greatest blunder of the spring semester, the presentation of the 1938 all-conference team.

The all-star team was selected on a basis of one vote for each member of the staff and the following selections resulted:

ALL-CONFERENCE
Forwards:
SMITH (Marin) OPALINSKI (SF)
Center:
RICKERT (Modesto)
Guards:
ALLEN (Marin) LAMBERT (Modes.)

Bud Smith, the high scoring Marin forward, was a unanimous choice for the forward post, since he was the main offensive factor in the Kentfield quintet's march into second place in the conference race.

Ople Chosen

Although our own big Alex Opalinski was officially listed as a center, the college scribes felt that he could not be left off the first team and he thereby received a majority of the votes for the other forward post.

The championship Modesto squad had the league's outstanding pivot man in gigantic Jim Rickert, who was rated ahead of Dickinson of Sacramento and Boydonoff of Santa Rosa.

Good Guards

The toughest positions to pick were the guard spots. After much discussion it was finally opined that Marin's great all-round athlete, Johnnie Allen, and the dynamic Walt Goodnight of Modesto were the standouts. Pedersen of Santa Rosa, Ed Curcio of San Francisco and Newlove of San Mateo also received votes for this position.

After selecting the first squad the staff decided that a second string all-star aggregation should be picked and the balloting showed that the following men had been chosen for number two honors in their position:

SECOND TEAM
Forwards:
BUZZINI (SR) GOODNIGHT (Mod.)
Center:
DICKINSON (Sacramento)
Guards:
NEWLOVE (SM) CURCIO (SF)

There it is—pick it to pieces.

Oarsmen Perform Well In Practice; Prepare For Races

After holding an extra long crew practice last Friday, Coach Jack Gaddy said that he had never seen the oarsmen perform so well.

"We're really getting under way now," grinned Gaddy as he climbed out of the boat. "Cregi, Carotto, and Nelson are rowing in top form. Simpers, Pasqualetti and Rice need a little more practice, but I expect the whole boat to be in top shape for our race next week." Gaddy was referring to a practice race with one of the local high schools, to be held sometime next week.

The crew has attained the smoothness and form of last year's cup-winning aggregate, for the first time this semester, according to Gaddy.

During the next few weeks the California Intercollegiate Oarsmen's Association will meet to determine the dates of the conference races. The conference will last all through March and some races will be held in April, it was reported.

The reason for Friday's extra long practice, was because of the fact that Gaddy was teaching the boys a new type of stroke. This new stroke is shorter than the old movement and speedier, and will probably be used in sprints and short races, according to Gaddy.

Gaddy explained the loss of last Wednesday's practice race when the locals finished behind USF and San Mateo boats in a blanket finish by blaming it on to the poor starting stroke of the Ram Navy. The Red and White Oarsmen were a full length behind at the half-way mark of the sprint course but put on a terrific finish in the last four hundred yards to pull within a quarter of a boat deck of the winning cutter.

Prospects for the conference championship brightened considerably with the addition of several high school veterans from Galileo and Balboa. It is also expected that Tip Hamilton, star of last year, will return to the fold, according to Gaddy.

RED TEAM DEFEATS FALCONS, MEETS GAELS NEXT

San Francisco Junior College advanced the quarter final round of the Examiner's Pacific Association basketball tournament, by virtue of a decisive 36-28 win over the Watsonville Falcons in a game at Kezar Pavilion last Sunday night.

Last night the Conlanmen met the St. Mary's College varsity but the results were not available by press time.

Nervous Beginning

In the opening minutes of the game against the Watsonville club team, the locals appeared nervous and jittery, but after about eight minutes on the hardwood the Rams began to function smoothly. Buckets by Opalinski, Blackfield and Slattery finally shoved them out in front, and the half time score favored San Francisco by an 18-14 count.

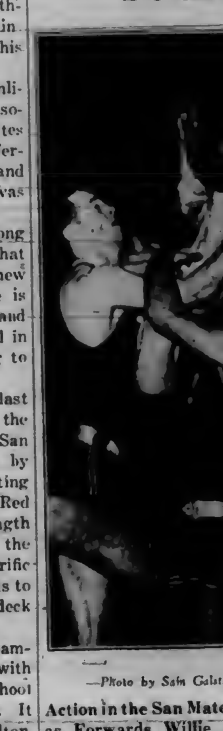
The second stanza of play saw Conlan's charges display a clearly superior brand of basketeering that left the country lads defense helpless. The big crowd of some 1500 rabid basketball fans didn't bother the Red and White team a mite in the final two quarters as they flashed a potent short passing attack that kept them constantly out in front.

Lots of Subs

Coach Conlan substituted frequently in the second half but the reserves proved as capable as the starters and continued to make the Falcons look futile.

The play of many of the reserves made Conlan uncertain as to the composition of his starting lineup for the all important contest with the St. Mary's Gaels.

However, the Dutchman intimated that the powerful combination of Willie Blackfield and Paul LeBaron will open at forwards, with the veterans Bill Phelan and Treacy Slattery in reserve. Alex Opalinski is a sure thing at center, while Ed Curcio, Henry James and Harold Fischer are all rated even at the guard spots.



Conlan also declared that he felt his team was ready for its best effort of the entire season when they tangle with the highly favored Moraga quintet.

Rams Divide With San Mateo To Finish In Third Place Tie

Winding up a mediocre season in mediocre fashion, Coach Louis "Dutch" Conlan's basketeers split a doubleheader with the cellar champs from San Mateo.

The locals allowed the peninsula Bulldogs to garner their second victory in conference play when they dropped a 51-49 decision in a high-scoring contest on Thursday night at Kezar pavillion.

Ringing down the curtain with an adequate, if not brilliant, performance, the Red Rams nipped the Bulldog by a 48-35 count in the conference finale held on Friday night.

Half-Tme Lead

In the first game of the series the San Franciscans had an edge over the visitors in the first half and left the hardwood at the rest period with a 28-27 lead. The second stanza saw wild offensive play and a complete absence of anything resembling defensive tactics.

The Mateans established a big lead in this ragged type of play but in the closing minutes the Powell Streeters drew within one bucket of tying the score, only to have reckless shooting spoil their chance for victory.

On Friday evening the Rams cleanly outplayed the weak Bulldog quintet all the way throughout the contest and despite the insertion of all the available substitutes into the game, the Conlan men dominated until the closing blast of the whistle.

Rams Tie

Splitting the series with San Mateo cagers put the Rams into a tie for the third place position with Santa Rosa. The potent Modesto squad went on to win the championship with 9 victories and 1 defeat in conference play. The only loss suffered by the champions, incidentally, was inflicted by the Rams.

Marin gained second place in the final standings with 6 wins and 4 losses while San Mateo nosed out Sacramento for the dubious distinction of last place honors by dropping 8 out of 10. Sacramento lost 7 out of 10.

The box score for the last conference game against San Mateo and the final conference standings are listed below:

RAMS VS. DONS IN TENNIS FRI.

Tennis matches with the University of San Francisco have been postponed until this coming Friday afternoon. The meeting was put over one week as the Dons had made an error in scheduling the matches for they have an out-of-town engagement on the same day.

The college tennis team will meet USF at the Palace of Fine Arts at 2:00 o'clock. There is no charge of admission for spectators, so here is an opportunity to see the several good tennis games. Coach Wilson has high hopes of downing the San Francisco Dons. Wagner, Lazare, Kun, Altfield, Ennes and Berns will form the college team. To date the members of the team rank in the above order named.

WOMEN'S SPORTS PARADE

By JEAN PAGE

Very impressive were this semester's initiation ceremonies and, as usual, the luncheon turned out to be a success. New members had their first taste of WAA hospitality and social activities. The program was efficiently conducted and the speeches were clear and illuminating to new members. Delving into the abysmal depths of Webster's New International Dictionary for an original phrase to describe the luncheon netted us the phrase, "It was nice."

Democracy rules and all WAA members are invited to give any and all suggestions for new WAA activities, to managers or to the women in the Galileo gmy office.

The new constitutional committee, composed of Margaret Wormell, Dorothy Canavan, Dorothy Sanderson, and Janet Falconer, has been busily engaged in doing whatever constitutional committees do do. We wouldn't know.

Sport managers have already started planning activities for Tourney Week, to be held from April 25 to April 29, this semester. The banquet, at which awards are presented, will be on April 28. If it is possible that there is still someone who has not been enlightened as to the omnipotence of Tourney Week in WAA life, let it be known that Tourney Week is the grand finale of all the semester's activities. In this one week finals are held in all sports.

The unknown knave slunk softly down the stairs. But, curses, the creak of a loose board gave him away. Those in the room turned quickly toward the door and breathlessly awaited the next stealthy move. It came! They heard the soft rustling of a key in the lock. Gaining courage by their number, as one woman they turned and screamed, "Hey! you can't lock that door. We're still inside."

Another click of the lock and, foiled again, the vile villain stole away, still muttering in his beard (if he still had a beard).

The physical education class in baseball once more had escaped being locked away in the damp, dark cellar which serves as a dressing room.

WAAmblings:

Badminton: The badminton courts are to be divided during the remainder of the semester. There will be three courts for those enrolled in WAA, two courts for anyone, and one court for faculty members.

Fencing: Six women are enrolled in fencing this semester and a round robin tournament is scheduled to begin this week.

Riding: Advanced students have already begun jumping.

Jayvees Trounce Presidio Y.M.C.A.

With comparable ease, the college Junior Varsity basketball team defeated the Presidio Y.M.C.A. The game was played at Kezar preliminary to the varsity game, last Thursday evening. The final score was 37 to 26.

After the first five minutes of the game, the Jayvees had a ten point lead and the "Y" never really threatened throughout the game. The closest the visitors ever came to tying the score was in the beginning of the second half when they closed up the gap to two points but the Jayvees quickly rallied and widened their margin that was never less than six points through out the remainder of the game.

Carlos Stewart, captain of the Jayvees, was high point man for the college team. He sank five field goals for ten points. Van Desande was next with six points. The high point man for the game was Thurn of the "Y" team. He garnered thirteen points.

This game was the eighth game the Jayvees have won out of thirteen games games so far this season. Joe Slavin, first string center, has been out of uniform in the last three games.

Hugh Ryan has filled his shoes but the loss of Slavin has weakened the team for without Slavin the team is lacking in height.

It is doubtful Slavin will play anymore this season as he has a bad bone bruise in the ball of his foot, and there remains only two more games after this one played Thursday.

TOSSERS DEFEAT IRISH, 6 TO 1, IN SEASON OPENER

Williams, Gardner, Pitch Winning Ball For Rams; Hjort Is Hitting Star

Coach Lee Eisan's hard-hitting Ram baseball team clouted their way to victory number one by taking Sacred Heart High School nine into camp by the overwhelming score of 6 to 1, Wednesday, February 23, at Funston Field.

Pitchers Good

Pitchers Bill Williams and Bob Gardner were outstanding for the Rams, holding the Irish to three scattered hits. Williams started the game and pitched airtight ball for five innings until relieved by Gardener who finished the game without mishap.

Paul Hjort, Junior College centerfielder, was the hitting star of the day connecting for a triple and a double, driving in three and scoring two of the Rams' six runs.

Fielding Good

The game was a cleanly played contest for so early in the season with the college team committing only one error, while the high school nine booted two chances. Kent Baird and "Arni" Banta were the bright spots for Eisan's team in the field, each coming up with several spectacular plays.

Bob Lapera and "Bud" Periovich were the stars for "Gerry" Coulee's Sacred Heart team. Lapera played great ball at shortstop for the Ellis Street school, while Periovich connected for two of the three hits allowed the "Irish," one of Periovich's hits being a long triple that drove in the only Sacred Heart run.

TRACKSTERS IN KEZAR PRACTICE

Men on the track team succeeded in getting a few light workouts last week at their training grounds, Kezar Stadium. Almost two weeks behind in its schedule, due to the rain, the team is "bearing down" and is putting in as much practice as possible. Muscle-bound legs are now receiving their due limbering under the watchful eyes of the coach, Russ Sweet.

As the team is behind in its training schedule, the men on the squad will be given only a relatively short time in which to practice before the trials are run off. Those who succeed in qualifying in the trials will probably win starting positions when the Rams meet California Frosh and Modesto Junior College in a triangular meet on March 12.

A wealth of talent of the California Frosh team makes it probable that this meet will be one of high interest. Mel Long, high jumper from Lowell, is one of the "prodigys" on the California Frosh squad and he has already reached six feet four inches in the P.A.A. meet. Also outstanding are Bob Musser, hurdler; Bernard Wolfe, discus thrower; and the relay team composed of Jim Todd, Wesley Craig, Hamilton Loew, and Warren Craig.

By Anne Rabinowitz

Though it is true that there are many opportunities for unskilled or partly skilled workers in the government, there is an increasing demand for highly trained specialists in the fields of sociology, engineering, finance, public health, and economics. Salaries are good and stability of work is assured.

Of all employers Uncle Sam probably offers the most pleasant conditions of work, for employees are given wide geographic opportunity, good hours, enviable vacations with pay, provision for sick leave, and chances at promotion.

The majority of jobs are secured by appointment following competitive examinations. There is no restriction of race or creed, and women are supposedly given an equal chance with men. Of course, there are certain branches for which women are not physically fitted.

The chief requisite for a civil service position is thorough training in the job sought. Information as to qualifications and opportunities for such positions and notices about pending examinations may be secured through city, state, or Washington.

Students planning to take a course in advertising should keep in mind the necessity for practical experience as well as academic training. Special training such as that of the type expert, proofreader, librarian, artist, and economist is valuable in advertising.

A brilliant writer may make little advancement in advertising, where a shrewd businessman may find immediate success. This field requires an endless number of talents, as chemical knowledge, psychological facts, careful calculations, and legal references are all used.

Many large firms, or people, make use of publicity agents whose job it is to secure free publicity, and the trained newspaper person is a logical applicant for this type of position.

Inexperience is a barrier in advertising work, but employment as clerk, apprentice, proofreader, assistant, or copy-writers will help qualify one for the ultimate position desired.

Salaries are not so large as rumor portrays, but the average is good. To achieve and maintain a high position, ...with emphasis ...omies, psy- ...t is invalu- ...woman in ...s business ...hich helps ...tting what

Dick Dahl Elected Forester's Leader

With election of officers as the main business of the meeting, members of the newly-organized Forestry Club gathered in the Little Theatre at Galileo last Thursday evening, according to Dick Dahl, newly-elected president.

Dahl said that George Green, geology instructor, had consented to act as faculty sponsor for the group and urged all students majoring in forestry to join the group and attend the next meeting, which will be held Friday, March 4, at 5:30, in Room 464 at Galileo.

Other officers of the club, according to Dahl, include Gerry Stewart, vice-president, John McGoey, treasurer, and John Bell, secretary.

sent and most people are not prone to this. Perhaps it is all the better when only serious musicians go to such concerts, but artists have to live. Rather than plea for serious thought—an impossibility in too many cases—let us ask for a more serious approach to art. One can live as long as one cares to with Verdi and Tschaikowsky, the poor vocalization of an Eddy, or the poor sound of a Rubenstein, but when one finds the beauty in a Gieseking then one has found art and not entertainment per se.

STUDENTS SERVE LUNCHEON TO NOTABLES

With the unruffled efficiency of seasoned veterans in the industry, students of the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division prepared and served a luncheon to one hundred notables of the hotel world, on Monday, February 21, 1938.

The notables were the members of the Northern California Hotel Association which held its spring meeting at the college. The entire luncheon was under the direction and supervision of a student staff. Members of the staff included: Carl Rutledge, Maitre d'Hotel; Louis Aber, Jr., chef; Naomi Giffin, garde manager; Neil Swanson, baker; Horn Gok, pastry cook; and Edmee Burgnes, cashier.

Those present at the luncheon were: President A. J. Cloud, J. C. Beswick, State Department of Education; J. Graham Sullivan, Coordinator, and the Educational Advisory Committee consisting of George D. Smith, Chairman of the Committee and Manager, Mark Hopkins and Fairmont Hotels; John F. Shea, Secretary, California Northern Hotel Association; Harvey M. Toy, President, San Francisco Hotel Association; George T. Thompson, President, California Northern Hotel Association; J. J. Well Known Hotel Men Visit College

This week the hotel division had as visitors Art Fisher, owner of California Fruit Juice Products, and Edgar Rosenberg, manager of the Empire and Chancellor Hotels. Bernice Kromwetter, secretary to George D. Smith, of the Mark Hopkins and Fairmont Hotels, was guest of honor at a luncheon Friday, February 25.

J. F. Christenson of the Wear-Ever Aluminum Company delivered a lecture to hotel students Thursday in Room 351 at Galileo High School. Christenson gave the history and the procedure of manufacturing aluminum articles and told the part they played in hotel and restaurant work.

The faculty of the Hotel Division and J. Paul Mohr, registrar, met Thursday, February 24, at 6:00 P.M. in the Galileo Cafeteria to discuss the curricula for 1938 and 1939, the problems of class instruction, administration and the placement of students.

Omicrons Discuss Business Control

Government regulation of business will be the topic of discussion at the next meeting of Omicron Phi Pi, on Wednesday, March 9, at the home of Cecilia Elliot, 1635 Gough Street, between Bush and Pine Streets.

At the honor society's initiation at Galileo last week, Lena Way, Mike Klebanoff, Doris Speroni, and Yeizo Shioto, were put through the formal ritual. John Selig, social studies instructor, was also inducted into the organization.

After the ceremony the group adjourned to the home of Dr. Michael Zarchin, faculty adviser, to discuss the pros and cons of capitalism and to partake of refreshments. Plans were made for a panel discussion in the Powell Street Lecture Hall to be held in the near future.

Fex Announces Ice Skate For Newmans

Primarily for the purpose of arranging a social calendar for this semester, the Newman Club met last Wednesday evening.

"Our first affair," Bob Fex, president of the group, said, "will be an ice skate at the San Francisco Ice Rink on Friday evening, March 11, later on in the semester we are planning a hike to Big Lagoon in Marin county, also on the program is a picnic to St. Mary's College in beautiful Moraga Valley."

Musicians Convene Thursday Night

Promising to reveal more information about Music Club activities after the next meeting, Wesley Pomroy, president of the group, announced a meeting for tomorrow night at 7:30, to be held at the home of Helen Nast, 4112 - 24th Street.

Two music classes took advantage, last week, of the opportunity to attend the lectures held by the Recreation Center Institute of the University of California. Musicians from San Francisco State College brought typical Elizabethian instruments to illustrate the lecture. Among the ancient relics were a spinet, clavichord, German lute, and several wind instruments called recorders.

The Madrigal Singers, also from San Francisco State, sang songs of the Elizabethian period.

Locals Bow To Maraschis, 36-33

Beginning the series of activities for this semester, the Italian Club met the Maraschi Club of the University of San Francisco in a thrilling basketball game, Thursday night, February 24, which ended with victory for the Maraschi Club, 36-33.

Bob Nicco and George Pera starred for the college, with Paul De Martini, Lawrence Boci, and Bill Solari rounding out the team.

All students interested in Italian culture are to attend the meetings.

Clubs Must Get OK For Galileo Meets

Extra-curricular activities of the College have grown so rapidly that George Finegan, Galileo Evening High School principal, is frantic!

Sounds strange? It's true! Student groups have been growing like mushrooms lately and in their efforts to find a place for their meetings and other activities they have turned to the Francisco institution as a convenient utility for their uses.

"So many activities are going on at the night school," Paul Pitman, assistant to President Cloud, said, "and now Mr. Finegan has been swamped by the College. He is in a quandry, so the first thing that we have to do is to organize the situation to the satisfaction of everybody."

"Hereafter all students contemplating the use of Galileo for a club gathering will please come to my office, Room 211, Galileo, and obtain an application blank for the use of the facilities of Galileo Evening High School."

Pi Mu Gamma To Discuss Initiation

Discussion for an initiation ceremony of new members will be one of the subjects at the next meeting of the Pi Mu Gamma "pre-med" society on March 2, 1938, 7:30 p.m. The meeting place has not been definitely decided upon. Meetings are held every other week at a member's home.

This pre-medical club is open to students interested in the pre-medical field. Usually an actual demonstration is performed at each meeting.

Pre-Med's House Will Open Soon

Pi Mu Gamma's club house at Union and Van Ness Avenue will reopen in the near future, according to Glenn Noble, faculty adviser.

For the first meeting in their old quarters, Harold Hoffman, a new member, has arranged for Dr. A. L. Brown to lecture. Dr. Brown is a local surgeon who has been successful in taking color photographs of the organs of the body in motion.

The Pi Mu Gamma is the college Pre-medical Society and is open to students in the field of medical science. Date of initiation will be posted on the bulletin board.

Galstaun Forms Camera Group

Announcing that plans for the formation of a camera club at the college were progressing rapidly, Sam Galstaun, staff photographer of The Guardsman, revealed that he was working to establish a definite meeting place for the embryonic organization.

"For the benefit of the students interested in joining the group," said Galstaun, "I might say, that until we have a place to meet, we can do nothing more than plan. However," he added, "Elwin Marg and myself feel certain that within a short time we shall be able to announce the time and place of the organizational meeting."

Galstaun suggested that students desiring to take part in the club, sign up on the sheet, which will be placed on the bulletin board at Powell Street, and also that signers note the time and place most convenient to them.

Hughes Stresses National Defense

"In the present troubled state of world affairs, national defense is not only advisable, it is of vital necessity to the United States. Any man, no matter how peaceably inclined, would feel justified in preparing to defend his home against an outlaw. Is not the United States in the same position as that man today?"

Thus stated James Hughes, sponsor of the Army-Navy Club in a "bull-session", which followed the National Defense Week rally of that organization recently.

Hughes, a Political Science and Public Speaking instructor of the College, has long been known as an advocate of preparedness to insure peace. He was one of the founders of the Army-Navy Club here and is a much sought-after speaker for various organizations, because of his pertinent knowledge of current world affairs.

Telephone Bridge For Phi Beta Rho

Saturday, March 5, the Phi Beta Rho, college women's sorority, will hold a telephone bridge party. In a telephone bridge game, members play at different homes and then telephone the scores to one another in determining who is victor. The bridge game will be played at the homes of Anita Lauerman, Virginia Hurst, Ruth Graham, Marion De Lanó, Fern Muheim and Barbara Mills.

Future plans of the Phi Beta Rho include a novelty dance in the near future and initiation of new members. This semester's officers are Betty Nelson, president; Ruth Hail, vice-president; Alice Thompson, secretary; and Anita Lauerman, treasurer.

Peace Society States Stand To "Clear Air" of Charges

In light of the recent controversy over the College Peace Society that raged in the "Ram's Horn" and feeling that there is still much misunderstanding, the Society's executive committee met last week and issued the following statement on its purposes: "We hope," the committee said, "that this makes our stand clear and that it will end all confusion. Anyone desiring more information, or in convincing themselves of our merits, is cordially invited to attend our next meeting." (Announcement of the meeting appears elsewhere in The Guardsman.)

"We were under the impression that the question of why a peace organization exists and what its purpose is, was clear in everyone's mind. However, it is evident that there are some people who are not only uninformed but also misinformed about the Peace Society. Among these persons there exist a few individuals who persist in their efforts to defame and villify us. Therefore, to 'clear the atmosphere' of misconceptions we reiterate our object and policy.

"We feel that war is the greatest danger facing us today (the world at large; students and youth in particular). It is a danger, which, because of its dreadful universality, is of vital concern to every one of us. An examination of the world situation makes evident to us how close at hand is a new world war and that preventative action must be taken by the people immediately. Because of everyone's familiarity with the horrors of war and their effects we need not enumerate them here. We say here, however, without fear of contradiction that any reasonable person will repudiate war.

"Quoted from our constitution, more than a few times, are these words: 'The object of this Society shall be the furtherance of peace and a study of the methods of maintaining and establishing peace and to carry on activity for peace.' For an immediate program to prevent the wars in Spain and China from spreading we endorse collective security whereby the nations of the world cooperate and take concrete steps to maintain peace. This is in accord with public sentiment throughout the world.

"We earnestly believe that if a person takes all these factors into consideration he will realize that there is a definite place, and an important one, in this college for such an organization; unless, of course, he has no interest or sees no value in peace.

"THAT IS OUR STAND!"

—San Francisco Junior College Peace Society.

Tomorrow Deadline For HEA Tickets

Announcing that the deadline for purchase of Opera tickets is tomorrow, Alice Thompson, prominent member of the Home Economics Association, stressed the fact that those who don't pay for their tickets must consider them cancelled.

The professional models will be hired for the next fashion show, was revealed by Cecil Thompson, president of the organization. The club has not yet decided from which store models will be chosen for the fashion show to be given in the near future, and to which all members of the student body will be invited.

Pie Keynotes French Meeting

French apple pie with whipped cream will be the keynote of the next meeting of "Le Circle Francais", the college French club, one week from tonight at 8:00 o'clock. This treat, which will be in addition to the regular program, will be at the home and through the courtesy of Helen Garbe, who lives at 1972 - 21st Avenue.

Michigan Asks About Army Group

Asking information on Army-Navy Club organization, a letter has just been received by the local group from militarily inclined students of the University of Michigan.

T. Gordon Sollman, president of the college organization, is preparing a form which will include the constitution, purpose, and the actual activities of his club. This he will send not only to Michigan but to other interested institutions throughout the country.

Interest in that University was probably aroused through one Nickolas Suntzeff, a former San Francisco student and Army-Navy member. Suntzeff has already achieved fame in University ROTC by his military proficiency.

LOCAL STUDENTS PICKED TO FILL SALARIED POSTS

Placement Policy Proves Worth of College's Hotel Division

Direct proof of the practical value of the college's Hotel and Restaurant Management Division was verified through a request for two students to fill salaried positions. One of the jobs, front office clerk at the Mark Hopkins Hotel, has been filled by Carl Rutledge. The other opening, assistant food controller to the Fairmont and Hopkins hotels, is yet to be filled.

The requests for students of the division tie in closely to a resolution passed by the educational advisory committee of the Northern California Hotel Association: "Resolved, that the educational committee further recommend to the Association," the statement reads, "that its members give earnest consideration to the temporary placement of students about to graduate for a period from 8:00 a.m. to noon daily, for laboratory training, without salary, before graduation, and to the immediate employment upon graduation of the graduates of the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division in the hotels."

The two events are an indication of the wide interest and attention the division and the college are drawing, and a recognition of the value of the division. "This resolution," J. Graham Sullivan, coordinator of the hotel division, said, "is an indication of the interest taken by the hotels in the hotel curricula. It proves the success of this unit which was first inaugurated two years ago."

Lawrence Wong, hotel student, was commended for the address he delivered before the Hotel Greeters Association on San Francisco's Chinatown. His speech was printed in the Western Hotel Report, The Greeter's Hotel and Review, and The Greeter's Guide.

On March 12, students of the hotel and restaurant division will prepare and serve luncheon at Marina Junior High School for the annual meeting of the California Association of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation. Verrel A. Weber, physical education instructor at the college, is president of the group, and Bertha Keller, also physical education instructor, is in charge of the affair.

John A. Newbauer, director of the San Francisco Boy's Club, is interested in having men students of the division act as manageers and chefs at the organization's summer camp.

Besides Newbauer, Chef Hermann Zoulauff of the Empire Hotel, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Troupe also visited the college last week. Troupe is secretary-treasurer of the San Francisco Hotel Greeters Association.

Local Women Take Honors In Rifle Meet

Hancock Wins Event As Cal Team Tops Men In Armory Match

After three days of competition against almost 500 of the best marksmen in California at the local National Guard Armory, the college shooting brigade retired last Sunday night with ears ringing and several medals distributed scantily among their twenty entrants in the annual State Championship matches.

William A. Hancock, Rifle and Pistol Club coach, with a 190 out of a possible 200, was awarded a gold medal for the highest four-position score made by a National Guardsman. Hancock is nationally renowned for his all-around trophies gained in the national matches at Camp Perry, Ohio, last summer.

Betty Hyde, hsooting with the third college team, won a medal for the highest woman team score. This third team was actually composed of former rifle club members known as the "ex-riflcers", but was entered in the college class by Hancock for lack of a more appropriate classification.

Women Place Second

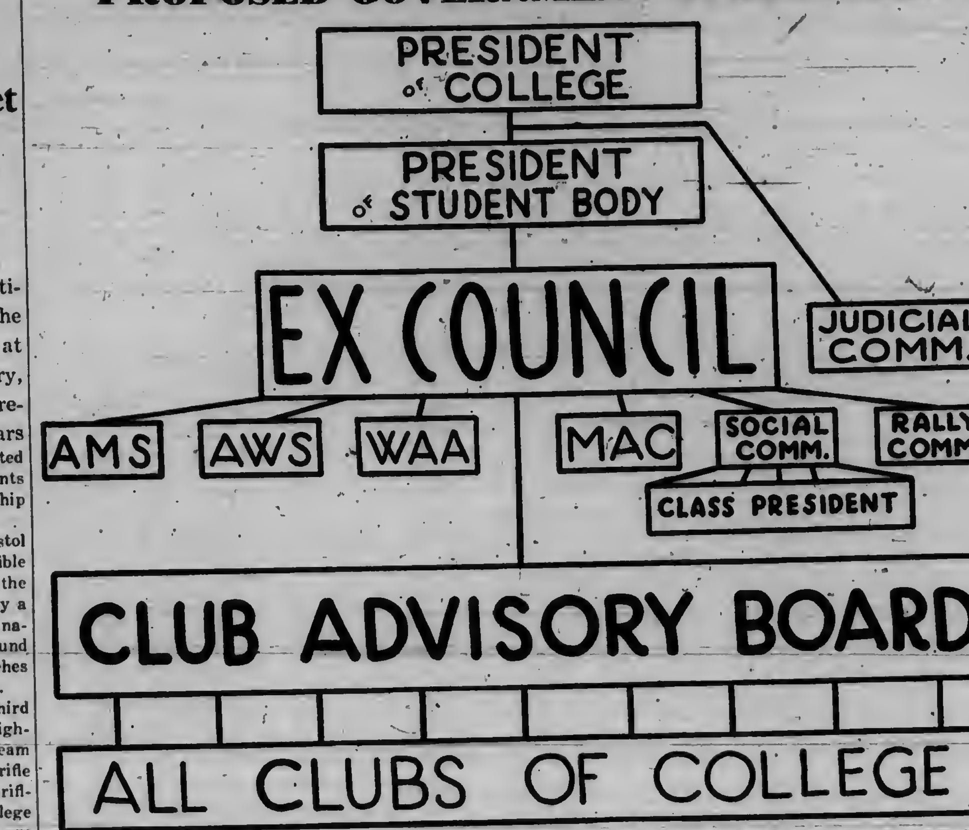
Most of the glory, however, goes to the local women's team which won second place in their class. Although there were only two teams in this, the college women shot quite a high score irregardless. They were topped only by the Richmond Elks Ladies Team.

The regular college first and second teams were nipped out of the running by several University of California teams which, judging by their scores, should have been entered in the class "A" or open match. California's score was 854 while the college sharpshooters garnered 848 points.

In the open class, the Olympic Club wont out over the Golden Gate, and also the Schuetzen Verein clubs. This is the first time in the history of local small-bore shooting that a Golden Gate team has failed to "cop" high honors.

Perhaps the greatest gains made by the local shooters were the shooting knowledge gained by personal contact with the champions who were present as well as the practice in active competition.

Hancock's Fame



An interesting episode occurred when Coach Hancock's shooting fame spread to a corner of the Armory to "The world's best rifle maker," George Titherington, who was present with his own gun, said to be the best .22 rifle in existence.

Titherington, with his usual enthusiasm over good shooting, practically forced Hancock to use his rifle and equipment in one of the difficult long distance matches.

The winning women's scores are as follows:

S. F. J. C.		Elks
Kwiatt	195	Obrien	200
Hanna	192	Bennell	197
Rogenes	192	Conover	195
Park	191	Obrien	193
Wedam	184	Balhan	191

PROPOSED GOVERNMENT STRUCTURE

The new student constitution, now under consideration, can be explained by the above diagram, which shows how the authority in student activities has its source in the president of the college, is delegated from him to the Associated Students President who, in turn, directs the functioning of the Executive Council. This governing board is made up of representatives from all major interests groups of the college.

Under the new constitution the machinery of student government will operate as follows: (a) Ratification of a club charter will first have to be approved by the Club Advisory Board, shall then proceed to the Executive Council where the recommendation of the lower group shall be considered, and finally the president of the Associated Students shall recommend that the president of the college award the club a charter; (b) A class dance shall originate with the class presidents who, working through the social committee, shall then proceed through the same channels, shall get their activity approved; (c) An organization represented on the Executive Council, such as the AMS, shall be required to work with the sanction of the Executive Council, Student President and ultimately, the college president; (d) An administrative assembly could originate either with the student president or the college president.

College Honor Society Elects Officers, Accepts Constitution

Acceptance of a constitution and election of permanent officers took place at last Friday's meeting of the local chapter of Alpha Gamma Sigma, the state-wide junior college honor society. Officers elected were Jerry Flamm, president; Phyllis Learned, vice-president; and Frank Scofield, secretary-treasurer. Flamm defeated Elizabeth Rehbock and Karnig Kenchelian for the presidential post, and consequently he will be the delegaate of the local chapter to the convention of the society, which will be held in Pasadena on March 19.

Constitution Accepted

The constitution was presented by Don Mix, who acted as temporary chairman. It was accepted by common consent after Mix and Alice Cooper, faculty sponsor of the group, had clarified a few points for the benefit of the members. A copy of the document, which consists of eight articles, was presented to each member for his consideration, and the chapater as a whole agreed upon its acceptance.

Many Eligible

Close to one hundred students in the college are eligible for membership in Alpha Sigma Gamma, requirements for membership being the possession of 30 grade points per semester and no grade lower than "C". Any student fulfilling these requirements is eligible for temporary membership, and may become a permanent member upon keeping up a grade point average of 2.3 throughout four semesters of work in junior college.

The object of the society, which is a new institution here this semester, is to promote and to recognize scholarship among the students. Anyone possessing the qualifications for membership and interested in joining should see President Flamm or Miss Cooper as soon as possible. There are no regular dues attendant upon membership.

New Book Catalog Now Offered At Powell Libe

New aid for students looking for a specific book is offered in the addition of a subject-catalog to the general catalog case in the lower lobby of the Extension Building. In this catalog, books are arranged not by authors or titles but by subjects, such as American History or English Literature.

In the front of each drawer the student will find directions for locating books on cards there filed according to the departments of instruction in the college. Thus a student may consult the pink direction card for political science and find that books dealing with matters of interest in that department will be under the following headings in the subject catalog: 310, statistics; 320, political science; 330, political economy; 340, law; 350 administration; 360, associations and institutions; 630, agriculture.

Students should also consult bulletin boards for lists of new books.

Students writing term papers may receive help in locating material in the junior college or public library through a leaflet which is distributed free of charge at the library office, 518 Powell Street, or the Reserved Book Room in the Extension Building.

The pamphlet entitled "S. O. S., How To Find Material On A Given Subject", is a publication of the American Library Association, and more than five hundred copies are available to student. Other hints for users of the library are contained in the leaflets, "So This Is The Catalog", which explains the use of the catalog, and "Time Savers", an explanation of the use of periodicals and periodical indexes. These also are free of charge.

"Students using these pamphlets will find the library more useful and more understandable," says Francis Colligan, instructor in charge. "We urge all students to obtain copies of these leaflets and so render easier their use of our library facilities."

NYA TIMESLIPS DUE MARCH 18

NYA time slips will be due Friday, March 18, Helene Turner, adviser of the college National Youth Administration, revealed. Students will be rated on the quality of their work, she said, which will indicate whether or not they are suited for the kind of work that they are doing. Following is a list of qualifications sent to instructors who have NYA students in their employ.

Reliability (punctuality, trustworthiness), resourcefulness (initiative, ness), attitude (cooperation, courtesy, adaptability), industry (diligence, energy), and capability (intelligence, skill). The grades will indicate degrees of excellent, good, fair, and poor. These charts will be inserted into the permanent record, which is on file in the registrar's office, of each student who is employed in the NYA. They will determine future assignments and will be used for reference by instructors and future employers.

WAA Baseball Team Seeks More Players

Issuing a plea for more women players, the WAA baseball team has announced that several playdays are to be scheduled for the spring semester. Practice is held on Saturday mornings from 11 to 12 o'clock on the playground opposite the Palace of Fine Arts.

New equipment has been purchased and all women who attend the class will be given an equal opportunity to participate in the playdays. San Mateo and State Teacher's College will be invited to a joint playday, which will feature both tennis and baseball games. Tennis is held at the Palace of Fine Arts from 9 to 11 o'clock and it is possible to take both tennis and baseball on Saturday mornings.

"More picturesque surroundings for an hour of pleasant exercise could not be found," eulogized Margaret Meader, baseball manager. "We are surrounded by the beauty of the blue waters of the mighty Pacific, that monument to progress, the Golden Gate Bridge, and the graceful pleasure crafts which dot yacht harbor. Upon concluding baseball practice we hold a picnic lunch. With such stars as Ruth Gustaffson, Jeanne Kelly, and Mary Skattebol out for practice it is a shame that more women have not shown enough interest to participate."

Baseball instructor, Bertha Keller, especially urges freshmen women who entered the college this semester to join the group.

WAA Plans Skating Party For March 17

Sponsored by the new WAA ice skating class, a skating party will be held on March 17, St. Patrick's Day, at 8 o'clock in the evening. The cost of 50 cents includes checking, skates and use of the rink, located at 48th Avenue.

Each member of the class, which is co-educational, may invite a guest. Special faculty guests who will be invited include Dean Edwin Browne, Joseph Williams, Laurine Bergin, Vera Spencer, Verrel Weber, Russel Sweet, and skating instructor, Bertha Keller.

"Be sure to attend and give the most recently organized sport at the college your support," urged Margaret Wormell, ice skating manager.

EX-COUNCIL APPROVES BULK OF CONSTITUTION

Article On Powers of Governing Body Still Under Consideration; New Document Abolishes Several Student Posts, Features Brevity

Meeting last week to vote on the acceptance of the new constitution of the Associated Students, the college Executive Council accepted the entire document, with the single exception of the article regarding the powers and duties of the Executive Council. This article will have to be modified and acted upon at the next meeting

In the new constitution, the offices of treasurer and yell leader have been abolished as Associated Students positions, although the latter will probably remain on the Council as representative of the Rally Committee. Also dropped from the Council under the new constitution are the representatives of the Forensics Council, the Music and Drama Council, and the Publications Council. A representative of the newly-organized Club Advisory Board will hereafter have a voice in the Council, however.

Only Five Articles

One of the outstanding features of the new constitution, as compared with the old document, is its brevity. Whereas, the old constitution contained eleven articles, the one now proposed is made up of only five, much of the material which was contained in the articles being incorporated into the by-laws.

Also missing from the Executive Council, under the new constitution, will be the class representatives, who will no longer be entitled to vote, but will act only as members of the Social Committee. Doing away with them as representatives is another step toward making the Council a less unwieldy body than it has proved itself in the past.

Presented to Students

Upon the ultimate completion of the new constitution, it is planned to present it to a student forum for consideration and criticism, and later to present it to a general assembly of all students in order to give theme an understanding of it and secure their approval. It is intended to arrange a general assembly in the lecture hall at the Extension Building as soon as the document is ready for presentation.

Drawn up with the intention of simplifying student government and making it function more efficiently, the new plan is considered by student heads to be much simpler and more effective than that which has been in use since the foundation of the college, and many sections of which have become obsolete or impractical with the passage of time. Containing as it does provisions to deal with practically any situation within the college, it is considered likely that it will prove satisfactory to the council upon its presentation.

STUDENT ART TO BE DISPLAYED IN APRIL

Drawings and paintings of different media will be shown in the Northern California Junior College art exhibit to be held at the De Young Museum during the month of April.

Among the pictures to be shown will be several done by the students of this college. Each college participating in the exhibit may submit twenty pictures. Etha Wulff of the museum staff will select and arrange the exhibit from the work submitted.

"No awards will be given," said Evans Ecke, college art instructor and secretary of the art group. "This is done especially to weld the different members of the association more closely together by eliminating the competitive spirit. It also must be realized that in a sense, all the junior colleges would not be competing on the same basis since those with the large art departments necessarily would have more good work to enter."

A special room has been reserved at the museum and it is estimated that about one hundred and fifty artists from the Northern California Junior Colleges will participate.

Informal Dance Will Close Social Season

In combination with the Associated Women Students' organization, the college Social Committee will hold its final dance for this semester on Friday evening, March 18, according to Norma Parent, vice-president of the Associated Students and Social Committee chairman.

"This dance will be an informal," Miss Parent said, "and will be held in the auditorium of the Veteran's Memorial Building. As it is to be given the night after St. Patrick's Day there will be an Irish theme with novel green suede bids and other Gaelic touches."

Miss Parent said that there had been so many favorable comments about the music supplied by Eddie Murphy at the last dance that it had been decided by the committee to use Murphy's orchestra again.

"Thee dance is to be given in honor of the Low Sophomore class," she continued, "and Barbara Randall, AWS president, and I, will be assisted in our preparations by Murial Mills, Betty Nelson, and Marie Louise McNutt, Low Sophomore officers."

Miss Parent said that further details would probably appear in a later issue of The Guardsman.

Radio Students Now Forming Own Society

It is believed that the fifteen students who are at present interested in the organization of a radio engineering club, will apply for a charter in the near future.

The club is to be of a purely social nature, and is open to students taking the radio course. Tentative title for the organization is "The Radio Engineering Club", Sherman said.

College Italian Club To Join In Bay Area Convention of Affiliated Groups

Joining a convention of all Italian Clubs in the Bay Area, the college group will meet in San Francisco, April 21, 22, and 23 under the auspices of the Maraschi Club of the University of San Francisco. All members interested in attending should see President Bill Solari, Dora A. Garibaldi, Ubaldo Maggetti, faculty sponsors of the group, or Phil Prigioni, within two weeks, so that reservation can be made.

Beginning Thursday evening, April 21, there will be registration of the delegates at the University of San Francisco at 5:30 p.m. After registration, delegates will gather in the Francesca Room for a buffet supper, after which Rev. Harold E. Ring, S.J., President of the University of San Francisco, Rev. James J. Lyons, S.J., Dean of the University of San Francisco, and Club Moderators, will give addresses to the group. Concluding the evening will be moving pictures, Italian travelogue and music by the Neapolitan Trio.

Mass Friday

Friday morning at 9 o'clock, the convention will gather for mass at St. Peter and Paul's Church, Filbert and Columbus Avenu, afterward touring North Beach, Telegraph Hill, Fisherman's Wharf, and other points of interest. They will then return for a session at the Pompeiian Hall in the Dante Building to hear addresses by Andrea Rainaldi, Italian Counsul, and Rev. Joseph Galli, S.C. Sports enthusiasts will be able to attend a tennis match at 2 o'clock at the Palace of Fine Arts. At 3:30 o'clock in the afternoon, the delegates will attend a session at the University of San Francisco where they will hear a talk entitled, "Pursuits Open to Italian-American Youth", by Reynald J. Bianchi, assistant city attorney of San Francisco.

To Hear Brother Leo

Under the auspices of the Italian Chamber of Commerce, the convention will dine at the Fairmont Hotel, later hearing Brother Leo. Also the Hon. Sylvester Andriano will address the group on "Our Heritage".

Concluding the convention, Saturday, April 23, there will be a talk by F. Gordon O'Neill, editor of "The Monitor". Mrs. Louis M. Piccirillo will lecture on "Italian Women and Advancement of Culture" at a tea given at the San Francisco College for Women on Lone Mountain.

NEW CONSTITUTION

SOON the Associated Students of this college will be asked to give their approval to the proposed new constitution. The members of the Executive Council feel that the present articles of self-government are out-moded and inadequately fitted to fulfill their needs.

It is necessary that all the students who have the least interest in the manner in which student government in this institution is conducted, give a serious ear to the proposition when it is put to them.

If the mistakes which were made when the present document was drawn up are to be avoided in this instance, and if the evils present in the constitution as it stands now are to be corrected in the most efficient manner possible, the general student body must have a comprehensible knowledge of the advantages or disadvantages of the move.

Anyone who has any legitimate objection to the proposed change should voice his sentiments, for the only way the student leaders can know whether or not their plan meets with the necessary approval will be by the reaction of the students themselves.

A thing as serious as a complete and sweeping revision of the entire constitution should and must merit the whole-hearted interest and attention of the Associated Students for the move will have a direct effect on all those persons who plan to continue at the college.

Ideas in student government change swiftly, and it is possible that the present constitution is not conducive to the most efficiently functioning form of self-rule, however, when basic changes are being made, they must be made slowly, to allow for a minimum of possible error—error which might or might not prove costly in the course of events.

The final word on this proposal must come from the students at large, and they must be prepared to decide intelligently on the matter. Prejudice must have no place in the decision; it must be a rational, honest opinion.

It is to be hoped that every student will give the matter his thorough and sincere consideration.

OF BOOKS AND MEN

When St. Thomas Aquinas was asked in what manner a man might best become learned, he answered, "By reading one book."

Many a man has acquired an education from books, but never from any one book alone, and it is not probable that any one book in the world could suffice to teach one all there is to know, nor is it likely that any well-rounded individual could amass all the possible culture of this world by reading any given list of books.

Possibly what the venerable Aquinas meant was that a man would do better to have read one good book than never to have read at all.

Certainly, it is to be accepted that the philosopher himself had tasted the contents of many volumes, and obviously gained something from each, else where would his store of knowledge have been derived?

Men possessing neither the time nor inclination to read all the best books that are and have been written, will find it very much to their advantage at least to sample the contents of the better works.

Students in college, often prone to consider their reading assignments so much tedious work, must realize that their higher education is simply the embellishing of written matter, by the interpretations of the lecturer, plus certain experimentary efforts on the part of the students.

VANITY OF VANITIES . . .

Vain to excess is the man who prides his own opinion over all others, and only looks to his friends for their confirmation of his views. Such a man adds little or nothing to society for he will persist in his ideas whether right or wrong, sometimes to his own detriment.

The people who enjoy life the most are those happy individuals who, while never hesitating to enter a discussion, yet refrain from trying to force anyone to accept their line of reasoning as gospel,

There would seem to be little room for dogma in the swift-moving civilization of today, yet there are whole nations laboring under the tyranny of one man who decides that he knows what is right for his fellows, and such a condition exists primarily because of the lack of education in these countries.

The people, particularly the youth of any country that urges and fosters universal education, should rejoice in their freedom from the danger of a dictatorship founded on a monstrous conceit. The swaggering, iron-fisted, uniformed dandies who beat down their fellows with a flow of bombast well know the dangers of allowing unbiased teaching within the borders of their respective territories.

Some of the more vain despots not only tell their subjects what to believe in worldly affairs, but even go so far as to attempt a control of the religious faith of the unfortunates under their domination.

There is probably no greater degree of vanity existent in the world of today than that displayed by the smugly-smiling fanatics who give vent to their lust for power, and force whole nations to an obedience to their will through a rule of fear.

SLOW BUT SURE

Like the proverbial tortoise, spirit is slowly but surely coming to San Francisco Junior College. As was pointed out in one of the letters to the Ram's Horn column last week, student interest in the affairs of the college seems to be definitely on the rise.

Especially gratifying to the people who have worked long and earnestly to promote student feeling is this recent trend. Such an intangible quality as "spirit" may often mark the difference between a good college and a mediocre one.

This semester has seen a marked increase in the attendance at the social affairs, an improved attendance at the rallies, and an all-around better response to all the various activities.

All of which can only mean that the students now at the college are the most alert and intelligent group of young people yet to enroll in the institution, and further, that they are in earnest about deriving as much benefit from their time as is possible in any institution of the kind.

Fine as any college or univeristy may be equipped to educate youth, the final proof of its worth depends on the quality of its graduates, at least that is probably the way the world will judge it.

The individual owes something to the college that affords him the education he seeks, and therefore, it is up to him to help make that college the best from every possible standpoint.

Amazing as has been the growth of San Francisco Junior College, the growth and prestige that is to come will be more amazing, if it continues at its present rate.

Out Of The Fog

The old fellow sighed and looked slowly about him at the great buildings and green lawns which spread on all sides. He fingered his flowing, white beard and murmured softly to himself, as a faraway look came into his eyes, "To think that I once went to this very college. My! what great changes the years have wrought in its appearance!" He turned to his companion, a small white dog, busily engaged in sniffing at a caterpillar, which was dragging itself across the graveled path. "Hector," called the old man, "what do you think of this fine college?" The dog raised his head at the sound of his name and, then, after a few parting sniffs at the caterpillar, trotted toward his master.

"You know, Hector, it wasn't like this in the old days," continued the old man, as he sat down on the bench which stood by the path, "No, sir; we didn't even have a regular campus, then. Why, the college was distributed among about five or six buildings, I don't remember exactly how many, but I know that some of us never saw all of the places that our fellows had to go for their classes."

Hector, nose to the grass, ran off, but the old man didn't notice. He rambled on. "It was fun in those days, though. I remember just like it was yesterday, the times we used to have with the cops who tried to rush us off the sidewalk, the way we had to go by street-car to some of our classes, because the building we had morning classes in was used for another school in the afternoon."

The old codger fell silent for a moment and drew aimless circles with his cane in the gravel at his feet. A crowd of students passed him, laughing and joking about something they were reading from a book. The patriarch looked up as they went by. "LOOK," he muttered to himself, "THEY don't even realize how lucky they are. They don't—" he paused and reflected a bit, "and yet," he went on, "I wonder if they aren't missing something; something they've got, but are really unaware of, something we had to fight for in those days?"

"Yes, they've got tradition, but did they have the fun, the despairing agony of fighting to keep that tradition alive under the most trying circumstances?" he growled under his breath, "no, they didn't. I can see now, that we were richer by far than these kids are. How we used to bowl for a campus, a place of our own, and all the time we had something they can never have, the thrill of beginning something, working and struggling to get it going, and then turning our places over to those who came behind us."

"He rose and whistled to Hector, who had been rubbing noses with a little black Scotty. "Come on, Hector," he replied, "we've got to go home now." Hector trotted back, submitted dutifully to the leash, and they started off down the path.

The old man took a last look back at the vine-covered buildings, as the sun, now sinking in the West, glowed redly on the outlines of the walls. "It sure is a beautiful place," he whispered, "but I can't get over the idea, that all the same, it was more fun in the old days even if we did call ourselves orphans, even if we did have to stand on the downtown streets between classes, even though we never could find room for anything, even if we did argue and fight among ourselves over how to start this or that, I still think we had more fun than they do now."

The little dog tugged at the leash, and the old man walked on, insisting to himself that, "it was more fun in those days."

We're not taking any sides in the controversy but somebody told somebody who in turn passed it on to us that this Boomer kid (Eugene's the name, we believe), is fast replacing the Korney Ken as Public Character Number One. It seems that the Boomer can out "wa-hoo" the Holmes boys and does so at every opportunity. Seeing as how we've become an unofficial "Keeper of the Kampus Kharacters," we just thought we'd let you know!

Having under (gone or went, we never did know), the by-now-so-tiresome process of having a "berfday" since last time this column appeared before your tired old eyes, we feel much older and wiser and up to handing out a little advice. There's only one catch. We haven't any advice to hand out! Isn't that a predicament and a half? Imagine having an opportunity to hand out advice and no advice to hand out! Of course there's no law against passing out the excellent bits of advice appearing in the current issues of our more wildly-read magazines. For example, we could tell you to avoid "Murder on Monday" by using "Foo-Goo", the non?scrub soap, or how to make "hearts beat faster" with "Foamy Froth" tooth paste, or we might even get real bold and advise you how to attain "A dazzling camera skin" with "Slick As A Whistle" face cream. Ah, but suppose the ladies of our audience should follow our advice and become honest-to-God bee-you-tees! Shucks, it wouldn't be much fun waltzing through life whistling the patter to "The One I Love Is Coming Along Some Day" while the babes who became beauties by following our advice walked off with all the beaux! So, maybe, we'd better call the whole thing off and let Dorothy Dix give advice.

If there are any (and there must be some) old-timers around who remember when we wrote a column called "We Women", they might recall a little stunt we tried once to see just what type of women the men in the college preferred and vice-versa. Several people have suggested that we try this again, passing out questionnaires to various men and women around the college and writing up the results. These people claim that there has been a shift of personnel since the last time this experiment was performed and seem to think that the results might be surprisingly different. If there are any of you who remember and think it might be a good idea, please find some way of letting us know and if there are enough requests we'll get to work typing up the questionnaires and have the results for you in a few weeks.

In a rough review (for comparative purposes) it seems that the men of the college in 1936 preferred the medium sized brunette, with loads of personality and a perfect figure, who had reached the happy medium between "beautiful but dumb" and "homely but intelligent". They confessed (for the most part) that the first thing they noticed when meeting a girl was her figure, although eight of them noticed the eyes first and five, the skin. The list of traits they disliked most included "talking too much", "baby talk", "overuse of the word 'cute'" and "cattiness".

The girls liked tall brunettes who were neither "homely but intelligent" or "brawny but brainless". Personality came first with the ladies, with character running a close second. They noticed the physique first and were most annoyed by "conceit", "lack of consideration", "talking too much", "affectation" and "roving eyes." All in all, the results were most enlightening and we're all for trying again if you'd like us too. Don't forget, either, write us a note and put it in The Guardsman box at Gal or at Powell or tell us in person!

The University of California's Freshman baseball team downed the Rams, 9 to 6, on the Berkeley diamond. Bob Fex and Bud McSweeny played effective ball for the home nine.

Heralded by weather suitable for the occasion, the theme for the household Arts Association's semi-annual picnic was "Spring Tonic". A treasure hunt and an egg roll contest were featured.

Raymond Rohr, buyer for the Emporium, addressed members of Omicron Phi Pi college economics group and its guests in the lecture hall. He discussed "Economic Policies in Business".

COLUMNIST'S LAMENT

Here we sit, on a lovely day,
Racking our brain in WJ
What'll we write about this week?
In vain for a topic we frantically seek.
The weather, politics, Murphy snoring?
No, all of them would be too boring.
Deadline nears, a page to go;
The presses wait, and we are slow,
Are we beaten? No, we'll show 'em!

Business in the apple market has suddenly soared skyhigh, according to "Pop", genial purveyor of delicacies out in front of Galileo. The reason? The arrival of Lent, and the resolve of many self-sacrificing students to forego candy for forty days. In lieu of nibbling their customary sweetmeats, the hungry loungers now gnaw greedily on rosy, red apples, accompanying the feast with loud smackings and gruntings, and gloating over the fees out of which they are cheating their doctors. Of course, there is the usual group composed of those who "give up" spinach and carrots, but they seem hardly worthy of mention.

Featured entertainment will be coasting down hill on ash can covers, and it is rumored that Eddie has gathered a choice collection of covers during nocturnal jaunts in side alleyways during the past week, thus assuring all sliders of a topping time, if not a ripping one. WOW!

The torrential rains and floods in Los Angeles and vicinity have given local editors and reporters an opportunity to let their imaginations run riot in describing the scenes of destruction and havoc in the southland, but the palm for exaggeration still goes to the London paper which phoned one of the local dailies on the occasion of a rather large conflagration in the industrial district and asked for confirmation of the statement that all San Francisco was a mass of flames. Rather credulous folk, the British, from all appearances.

RAM'S HORN

WARD SCORED, CLUBS' SET-UP GETSCRITICISM

Dear Editor:

A few of John Ward's statements in "After Dark", in March second's paper, have blasted my confidence in his journalistic endeavors.

Referring to Nelson Eddy and Artur Rubenstein as "mediocre" artists raised my blood pressure. And then, in addition, to say that Eddy has an "insipid voice" is insulting to the American public and its choice of popular favorites. Ward mentions favorably the mastery of Gieseking. How many students know who he is, or care?

While it is realized Eddy is not THE greatest singer of all time, he is liked by the majority.

Respectfully,
—"The Boogie Man"

Dear Editor:

The recently accomplished affiliation of the clubs within the college is undoubtedly one of the best things that has happened in a long time. It has brought to attention, however, the fact that there are so many "clubs" within the institution that they threaten to overbalance everything else. Under the present system it is possible for anyone who wants to be a "president" to round up a couple of friends and organize a club, just so long as he has a dollar to procure a charter. Of course, many of these groups are really worthwhile, and deserve to be helped along, but there are some which have only a very small active membership and which accomplish practically nothing. Such clubs serve only to complicate matters and make the club affiliations board a more unwieldly organization than it ought to be.

If students are really interested in a subject, no matter how obscure it may be, there is nothing to prevent them from enjoying it to the utmost without formally organizing a club. This organization stuff is getting to be a mania lately, and something really should be done to keep it from getting out of hand.

Dear Editor:

For the past year and a half, I have been slapped in the face every time I picked up The Guardsman by an array of funeral-looking black type on the front-page. Last week was the first issue I have seen which really looked like a bona fide newspaper. Whatever that type was that you used on the top heads, it was a big improvement over that which you have been in the habit of inflicting on your readers. Here's hoping you keep up the good work.

Dear Editor:

May I offer a bit of rebuttal to just one point set forth in "Joe Bush's" letter to last week's Ram's Horn, wherein he states that students are forced to take Physical Education "by the rules of this college".

Mr. Bush needs to be set straight on this point, for it is not the rules of this college which "force" him to "romp around in shorts twice a week", and very likely if it were left to the heads of the college, no one would be "forced" to do anything which Mr. Bush finds so objectionable.

As I understand it, it is the state law which "forces" junior college students to complete two units of physical education before they may be graduated.

While there is little doubt that what Mr. Bush says in regard to the value of our physical education classes, it is a reflection on the fair name of the college to state that it is responsible for the condition he so aptly describes.

Why don't you write to your congressman Mr. Fuddy-duddy, I mean Mr. Bush?

—Rose Bush.

Dear Editor:

Before I voice my criticism, I want it understood that I have nothing against the Rifle Club and consider it a worthy organization, which I realize provides a lot of pleasure for a lot of students. I do think, however, that it is receiving, via the columns of The Guardsman, an amount of publicity, week in and week out, disproportionate to its actual size. I could understand its being given a large play once in awhile, but you persist in smearing it all over the paper in practically every issue. There are perhaps a hundred or a hundred and twenty-five students, members of the club, who are interested enough in its doings to enjoy all this, but they represent only a small fraction of the student body. I think most of the students would be better satisfied if you would devote a little less space to the shooters and a little more to other college activities. Also, keep it off the sports page.

—Long-Sufferer.

Dear Editor:

We propose herein to answer a letter which appeared in the Ram's Horn last week, signed by Messrs. Ray Valdez and Charles Vaughn. Be it understood that we do not feel that these two individuals deserve the attention of an answer, but since their comment appeared in print we feel obliged to defend the activities that they publically condemned.

Point Number One—Valdez and Vaughn decried our policy of withholding a petition signed by 85 students.

If the two objectors were better informed in matters of student government they would realize that such a petition has no legal status and therefore does not necessitate presentation. The constitution specifically states (Article VIII, sec. 1) that a petition to be effective must be signed by 10 per cent of the students. We have never had any sympathy with those who attempt to play a game without knowing the fundamental rules.

Point Number Two—Our two confused crusaders bemoan the removal of the drama, music, and forensic council. Incidentally, they might be glad to know (but we doubt it) that there are only two "cultural" groups since drama and music are combined in one council. Another case of not knowing rules of the game.

We would like to inform our critical duet that neither of the two groups that have been removed were so acted upon as a part of a pernicous campaign to strip the college of culture. Their removal was strictly in accord with logical procedure, since neither the Drama or Debating organizations fulfill the two requirements that are stipulated for executive council representation, namely, 1: it must be a department which is allowed to spend associated student funds, 2: it must represent the interests of a major portion of the student body.

Point Number Three—The AWS and AMS next fall prey to the scathing attack of the two demon performers who, unfortunately, condemn the two organizations on the basis of an illogical premise—namely, that all they do is serve tea and promote fights. Such a statement not only displays narrowness and prejudice; it shows a complete ignorance of true conditions.

Anyone who sets himself up as an authority on student government, as did our two chronic critics, should realize that AMS and AWS leaders are elected to represent the entire male and female population in all social and cultural activities. The promotion of dances and teas, art exhibits, and boxing matches, are internal activities of

By Don Mix

The most vital issue of the moment certainly seems to be the new Associated Students Constitution, so please bear with us for a moment while we push it around a bit to see how it looks.

Most elementary is the question, "Why do we need a new constitution?" A quick look at the document now in effect will serve to answer this query.

Certainly, the best that can be said for it is that it was written hastily and as a result is tremendously involved and difficult to interpret. It listed qualifications for offices that didn't exist, painstakingly spent several hundred words, unnecessarily, explaining one council, and then outlined a completely new body in one brief sentence, set down iron-clad election rules that were impossible to follow, created unnecessary organizations, etc.

The new constitution, therefore, is an admitted need.

Formulation of the new document has proceeded slowly, with each separate section built to the specifications approved by a body of students best suited to pass judgment on matters of student government.

The Executive Council has spent one session a week discussing and ultimately approving each separate article. Although the students themselves have been the final authority on all matters, they have been guided and advised by faculty members who have a vast store of experience in such procedure.

The new document has been built with an eye first to absolute clarity, so that there will be no opportunity for confused interpretation in the years to come. Clarity, of course, necessitates conciseness, since one of the chief faults with many constitutions is that they are so wordy and involved that they are impossible to understand. Therefore, the new constitution will be about half the size of the present one.

AFTER DARK

By John Ward

It is usually claimed, from the aesthetic point of view, that there are two kinds of art, good and bad. There is another approach, however, and a local art critic (we use the term in a most liberal sense) has recently exhumed it with great noise. Perhaps he has done his excavating for no other purpose than for publicity, but it would seem not so in view of the consequences.

This second approach to artistic judgment, of which we speak, takes the moral issue and applies it to art. Thus, an immoral work is bad art and a moral work, good. The implications of such a theory are obvious at first sight. Equally obvious are the great weaknesses. When the purity league enters are the classics roll down, shelf on shelf, and we have another medieval spiritual bonfire. Who was it suggested clothes be painted on the Sistine Chapel nudes?

Art and ethics rarely mix congenially. But this local "authority", of whom we spoke, seems crassly determined to unite the two in one magnificent orgy making the world safe for mothers and children, at the same time treating local artists to a spiritual purge. This is certainly a garish figure of a typical American delving into a field he knows little about and can experience less.

And it seems a ripe opportunity for someone to suggest to this "authority" that artistic creation is not always undertaken by Christian souls who have one eye on the ten commandments and the other on some tried and true code of morals. It is time for some brave soul to show him that all art isn't pretty and that the immoral aspect is not always present in the work of art itself but sometimes in the observer. And, possibly, that conservatism in art is a saving grace but ignorance a fool's game which any fool may play at.

Of course, this misguided gentleman has had quite a bit of experience in the field of artistic judgment but that was some twenty odd years ago and age is famous for making fools as well as wise men fall behind the times. So, our foe not only has proven himself (in his public interviews and commentaries) a fool and an ignorant one, but time has passed him up. And since some bright soul has already given him a nick name we only wish to add a title—that of "the man with the hoe".

Great Cage Team

For four semesters we have been chronicling the doing of Ram athletic teams. We can recall many incidents that were packed with thrills and excitement such as George Clarke's kick-off return in the last minute of the championship grid game with Modesto in '36, the Duke Worsham-Bill Camp caveman boxing tussle, the Casaba victory over State in '37, the San Mateo football game last fall—yes, there were lots of big moments but the one that rates absolute tops on our list was the upset victory scored by our amazing cagers over the highly favored Gaels of Saint Mary's. None of the athletically great moments of the past two years could come close to that one for plain unadulterated excitement.

Not once during the entire game were either the bewildered Moragans or the spectacular Rams in a position to coast and the result was one of the most madcap, hysterical tussles that these age-dimmed eyes of ours have ever witnessed.

It is not known at this writing how the casabans fared in the advanced games of the PAA tournament but win or lose they rate plenty of geraniums for that one night when they were undeniably a GREAT basketball team.

Prize Pugs Picked

Elimination in the Men's Club College boxing championships will be held tonight at the Italian Athletic Club with some fast and furious action promised.

We have attended several of the final workouts of the beak busters and our prize picks for outstanding performances tonight include Bob Rutherford, clever middleweight, Frank Matsumoto, speed burning bantam, and Jiggs Greenwood, pudgy but potent light-heavy.

Our best longshot bet is little Gino DeVito, a welterweight who uses his right like a club. The lad is really a demon puncher. Watch him tonight, and if he is aggressive and can take it, you will see a real battler in action.

Golfing Planned

In view of the fact that the college boasts so many gents who profess to be ace golfers, the college links championships planned for late this month by Dutch Conlan should attract a goodly number of athletes. The top eight men in the 36-hole medal play will compose the college golfing squad and will compete against California, Stanford, San Mateo and several other Bay area institutions.

No other sport offered by the physical ed department, with the possible exception of tennis, offers the "carry over" value of golf. When your football and rowing days are over you can still tout your enlarged paunch out to the golf course for a spot of exercise.

AMAZING COLLEGE CAGERS LOSE IN SEMI-FINAL ROUND OF PAA

Rams Score Stunning Upset Win Over Moraga By 44-39 Victory and Then Drop Terrific 45-35 Tiff To Experienced YMI Veterans

By JACK SCHMALE

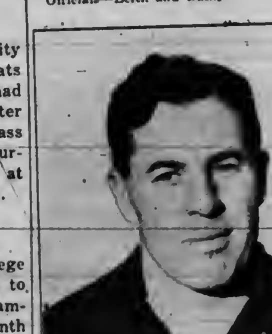
Hail the gallant Rams, shocking conquerors of St. Mary's, bold and valiant in defeat by the Y. M. I.

Thus ends, in anything but shame or disgrace, the story of a revolting band of determined college basketball aspirants and their loyal followers in a little episode which will be remembered in Pacific Athletic Association tournament cage history for many years to come.

The Rams bowed out of the "On to Denver" picture last Saturday night to the Y. M. I., 45 to 35, but did so with flying colors. This was evidenced by the very audible appearance of close to 100 rooters who serenaded their defeated warriors loudly and longly outside the team's dressing room immediately after the game.

Command Respect

Save for a few occasions in the first half, the lankier and more experienced Institute cagers controlled the situation throughout, and managed to maintain the lead by a varyingly small margin. Halftime score was 20 to 15.



It was the stunning upset over the Gaels, however, on Tuesday night in the quarter-finals which rocked the Rams to fame. The hysterically gratifying triumph by a count of 44 to 30 over Harlan Dykes' Moragans provided the season's lucrative payoff for the Conlan casabans.

After the advantage had changed hands at least ten times, Opalinski broke a 36 to 36 deadlock with a free throw, occasioned by a technical foul called on Julie Lyons, Gael guard, for hurling the ball at Referee Lloyd Keith. Blackfield, "Ople", and Bill Phelan thereafter contributed field goals in the ensuing four minutes to "ice" the outcome.

COACH CONLAN

CONLAN PLANS GOLF LAURELS

"College divot diggers are soon to come in the limelight of local sports," said Louis Conlan. He also announced that there is to be a tournament to be held sometime this month mostly for the purpose of organizing a college team.

"The tournament will probably be held towards the end of this month," said Conlan, "and will be a thirty-six hole medal match. The two finalists will receive medals," Conlan continued.

The eight top ranking golfers will form the college team to represent the school in meets with Stanford and California.

Stanford Golf Course will be used in May for the Junior College Championship tournaments. This will be the first year that San Francisco Junior College has been represented at this meet.

College students desiring to enter the forthcoming tournament are urged to sign up before Friday. Either see Conlan on Powell Street, Wednesday or Friday morning, or sign up at Galileo Gym. Friday is definitiely the deadline for entering the tournament.

Anyone with any golfing experience are urged to sign up and take part in this tournament. It is not necessary to be enrolled in any of the golf classes.

The site for the tournament has not been selected as yet. However, it is thought that Lincoln Golf course will be used.

BASEBALL LADS BEGIN BID FOR TITLE ON SAT.

Coach Lee Eisan's baseball team begins its championship bid when the squad plays host to "Hank" Applequist's Sacramento Panthers. The teams will play a doubleheader to open the Northern California Junior College Conference. The first contest starts at noon at Funston Field.

The Rams will be out to revenge the four straight defeats the Panthers handed them last year.

Stars Gone

Sacramento is faced with the loss of the mainstays of last year's nine. Al Lazzarone, ace pitcher, has transferred to Stanford, where he is first string chukker for the Indians. "Bud" De Gregorio, hard-hitting, and flashy fielding shortstop, has signed a contract with the St. Louis Cardinals of the National League. Both of these lads were selected on last year's all-conference team.

Applequist is not worried with the loss of these men as Henry Fields has returned to the capital city school. Fields is a former Lowell High pitcher and has a very fast ball. He sometimes has a hard time controlling his speed but when he does, he is unbeatable. Bill Keenan, another pitcher with a good curve ball, will probably be the starting moundsman in the second game.

Izzy Back

The Smith boys, "Izzy" and Bob, are back for the Panthers, both are good fielders and fair hitters. Another returning veteran is George Grimm, second sacker, from last year's nine.

Gene McNulty, who last year played first base for Modesto, has since transferred to Sacramento and will probably start at the initial sack for the valley school.

Curcio to Start

Coach Eisan will start his best flinger. "Big Ed" Curcio, the left handed speedball artist from Oakland, in the first tussle. And either Bill Williams or Bob Gardner in the second skirmish. Treacy Slattery, star basketballer, will be around to give relief duty if needed.

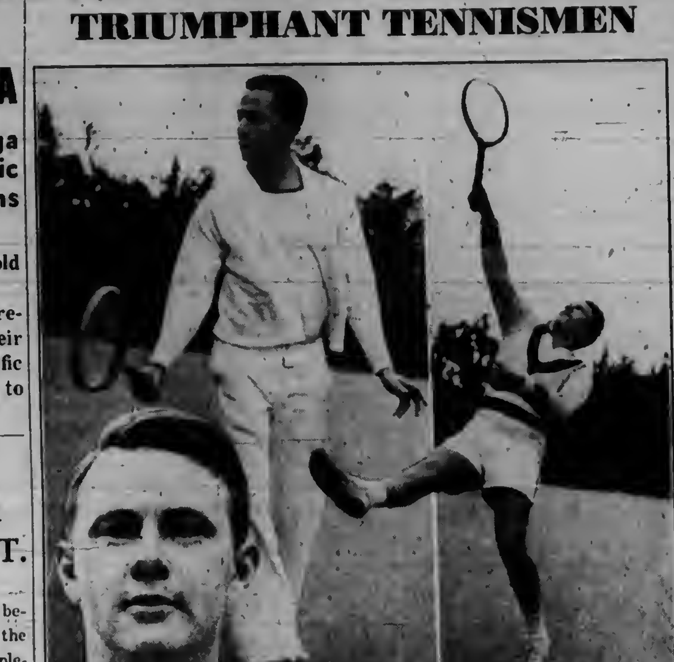
For his starting infield Eisan will start "Mickey" Berman at first, while a newcomer to the starting lineup, Jim Coen, will open up at the midway sack. The infield is rounded out with Kent Baird at the shortpatch and "Arni" Banta covering the torrid corner.

Dave Johnson will be behind the log in the initial encounter and Ray Egelhofer, a made over outfielder, will catch the second game.

Outfield Fast

Eisan has chosen his fastest outfield to face the hard-hitting Sacramentans. Frank Niland will start in left field, hard-hitting Paul Hjort will play center, and Fred Baker will cover the right field pastures. Weaver Galbraith will be used in the utility role.

The Ram baseballers made it two in a row by defeating Galileo High School, 3 to 2, last week at Funston Field.



Bill Williams was the starting hurler for the Junior College, being relieved by "Big Ed" Curcio who, in turn, was taken out in favor of Bob Gardner. All three boys pitched great ball, allowing only five scattered hits between them.

"Lefty" Tataro was the chucker for the Lions and held Coach Lee Eisan's boys in check while he was in the game.

Hitting stars of the day were Dave Johnson and Kent Baird, each connecting for two safeties. "Arni" Banta and "Mickey" Berman also looked good with the willow.

TRIUMPHANT TENNISMEN

Making its first start of the season in collegiate composition, Coach Tom Wilson's tennis last Friday smothered its first opponent, the University of San Francisco squad, by winning eight out of a possible ten matches for an easy victory.

Winners of the conference title last year, the Ram netmen really "poured it on" the unfortunate Dons, capturing six of the seven singles matches played and two of the three doubles. Harold Wagner, Chandler Ennes, and Bob Lazare performed exceptionally well, showing continuance of the form which has placed them near the top of the ladder.

Lazare trounced Lang of U.S.F., 6-4, 10-8; Wagner downed Cliclak, in a hard-fought match, 6-3, 8-10, 6-1; Ennes whipped Banchero, 6-1, 6-2; Kun beat Dapello, 6-4, 6-2, Altfield squeezed out a 6-4, 6-8, 6-1 victory over Herbert, and Berns turned back Turner, 6-2, 6-3. The only Ram player to lose a singles match was Christiansen, who bowed to Regan of the Hilltoppers, 7-9, 4-6. In the doubles, the team of Berns and Kun won, 6-4, 6-0, and Wagner and Lazare rang up a 9-7, 6-1 triumph. The other doubles team, composed of Ennes and Altfield, was leading when Ennes dropped his glasses and smashed them and, being almost blind for the rest of the match, lost, 2-6, 6-4, 4-6.

Several matches are scheduled to be played in the near future, prior to the opening of the season. The first will be against San Jose State next Saturday at San Jose, to be followed by clashes with Santa Clara on March 22, Berkeley Tennis Club on March 26, S. F. State on April 1, and Stockton on April 2. The regular conference opens on April 7, when the Wilsonmen collide with the Bulldogs of San Mateo at the Palace of Fine Arts. The remainder of the schedule reads as follows: April 9, Modesto; April 11, Los Angeles J.C.; April 12, U.C.L.A.; April 13, Pomona, April 14; California Poly, April 16; Salinas, April 30; San Mateo again, May 4; Modesto again, and Stanford, on May 6 and 7.

The conference has now been split into two divisions, with San Francisco, Modesto, and San Mateo in the "A" division and the rest of the Northern California junior colleges in the "B" division.

The team will tour southern California from April 11 to 16, barnstorming in Los Angeles and vicinity, to get itself in shape for the conference play the following week. Tom Wilson is most optimistic over the prospects of his squad, which contains several veterans, including Lazare, Ennes, and Kuhn, from last year's title-winning squad.

The San Francisco Golf Championship tournament spelled victory for one of the junior college coaches and defeat for another. In the second round of play Coach Russ Sweet took his opponent 7 to 6 at Sharp's Park, while Louis "Dutch" Conlan, dropped a 3 to 2 decision to his man. Two years ago Conlan burned up the course in a 76. Last year he took an 81 on a sloppy field.

TRACKMEN MEET MODESTO ON MARCH 26

Stiff competition will be in order when the college track team encounters the California Frosh and Modesto Junior College in a triangular meet Saturday, March 26, according to advance reports.

Meanwhile, the men on the team are practicing regularly at Kezar Stadium getting themselves in shape for the meet with these two outstanding squads.

Good Time

Hallstone, veteran from Modesto, has run the 100 in 9.8, and the 220 in 21.4, which is good enough to win most college meets.

The mile is taken care of by Foster, a record holder from Illinois. He has run the mile in 4.3 already this year.

Charles Oakes, the Buc's discus thrower, has sent the platter sailing 147 feet.

In the javelin throw there is Dick Peebles who has heaved the iron-tipped stick the distance of 175 feet.

Time and distances of the Ram's track team are not available as the trials have not been run as yet, but it is expected that the veterans and many new prospects of the squad will be in condition to take many places in the meet next Saturday at Berkeley.

Crew Works Out In Gym As Rain Rains

Last week's crew practice was keynoted by calesthenics and gym work, regular practice being halted on account of rain. The regular workouts will resume, however, as soon as the weather allows, according to Coach Jack Gaddy.

Rowing practice will become more and more strenuous as the, as yet undetermined, date of the first conference race approaches, Gaddy said. He also said that the results of the Washington's Birthday Regatta, in which the Ram oarsmen finished third, were caused largely by the fact that the crewmen lacked practice in starting.

AMORI'S SLUGGERS TO BATTLE IN ELIMINATIONS AT ITALIAN AC

Local Bravos To Mangle One Another Trying To Please the Crowd and Reach Finals In This Evening's Debacle; De Vito Reputed Toughie

Preliminaries and semi-finals for next week's Men's Club bouts have been set for tonight at the Italian Athletic Club. Because of the too-large number of entrants, Promoter Joe Amori's annual classic has been divided into two sections.

Thus college followers of the manly art of self-defense are insured of a double show for the first time in the two-and-a-half-year history of the local embroglio.

Tonight will be a slug-fest of no mean degree as all aspirants for the eight fancy gold medals take to the ring to eliminate for the honor of fighting in the finals next Wednesday.

Topping the whole squad off, in weight at least, is the gang of slugging giants, the heavies. These boys have been putting in overtime at the Galileo gym in preparation for the three-cornered battle. Heading the list by experience is Chicazola, Golden Glove great. Hamilton and Devine are the only opposition so far. However, none of these boys are green, as their practice has already shown.

Rutherford Good

Standout of the 169-pound class is Rutherford, reputed to be darn good. Being fast, Rutherford can stand up to any slugger when started by an opening. Opponents for him are a pair of Amori's novices, Powers and Grant, as well as Bill Greenwood who will take a try at his own weight.

Master of ceremonies, himself, Men's Club president, Al Williams, defends his title against a gang of 149-pounders in the person of DeVito, Detrich, and Re. Williams won the title last year on a close decision.

McGreavy, Thornton, Taylor and Sylvestri, all in the 130-pound class, will all battle it out with a number of unnamed novices in the same classification. All of them specialize in speed and are also skillful in the art of slug, say a number of keen observers of workouts in the Galileo gym.

Matsumoto vs. O'Connor

Frank Matsumoto, favorite in the 129-pound group, will pit his speed against O'Connor's right arm. Also, he has De Shields and Woods to get over before reaching the finals.

119 pounds, flyweight for this college, has only two entered, but a number are trying to make the weight requirements. Smith and Doyle are the lone contestants, so far.

Weigh-in, said Amori, will be in the Galileo gym, today at 4:30. There will also be a final doctor's examination. Each fighter is allowed one pound of slack either way.

All of the above-mentioned are but a few of the many contestants to fight tonight. The Italian Athletic Club is located on Stockton Street, between Union and Filbert. Both men and women students are invited and there is room for an unlimited number. First bout starts at 8 p.m. sharp.

Finals Next Week

The fights will be preliminaries and semi-finals only, the boys fighting it out for finalist honors. Finals will be one week from tonight at the Verdi Club. There will also be wrestling in the same number of classes for college championship medals. All finalists, next week, are also scheduled for a big feed after the fights, said Amori, whether they win or lose.

The medals, designed and made by a local jewelry firm, are different from any used in the past, and are worth fighting for, he also said.

WOMEN'S SPORTS PARADE

By JEAN PAGE

"Come out for WAA sports and see yourself in the movies." "One step from WAA to Hollywood." Vera Spencer, sponsor of the organization, plans to take motion pictures of all WAA sports during the semester. She will be assisted by a committee, of which Virginia Kwiatt is the chairman. After all the pictures have been taken, they will be shown to the junior college group and then sent to the various San Francisco high schools so the women at the schools may obtain a view of the many sports which the college offers. And who knows, a talent scout might be in the audience and discover that you and you and you were born to be an actress.

* * *

The constitution committee has finished the constitution proper, which is a record of some sort, and is now working on the by-laws.

* * *

WAA president, Dot Canavan, has submitted three questions for discussion at the annual AWS and WAA convention at Chico, April 1 and 2, which she and Miriam Frazier plan to attend. The questions submitted are:

1. In what way can the AWS and the WAA cooperate more fully?
2. How can college women acquaint high school girls with college athletics (not athletes)?
3. What is the best way to develop coeducational activities?

* * *

Our women's team defeated the Tennessee Junior College team in a postal match last week. Our women scored 970 points while the Tennessee team scored only 840 points. Virginia Kwiatt was high scorer, with 199 points, and Gail Hanna was next with 840 points.

WAAmblings:

Basketball: The basketball class has formed two teams. One team is composed of low Freshmen and the other of high Freshmen and Sophomores. Class work has concentrated on pivots and jumps.

Baseball: More players needed.

Badminton: This semester's stars include Dot Canavan, Jackie Kramer, Mildred Orendorff, and Miriam Frazier. Incidentally, several wives of members of the faculty have been taking advantage of the Friday afternoon badminton free-for-alls and coming out to practice.

Tennis: The doubles tournament has started with two teams, that of Lily Phillips and Evelyn Ballard, last semester's champs, and Jackie Kramer and Dot Canavan, being the most outstanding so far.

Riding: The advanced riding class has increased in size. Last Friday the class took its first ride in the glorious sunshine. Yes, it was really sunshining.

Rifle: The women's rifle team will shoot in the Examiner state-wide match this week-end.

BULLSEYE BOYS SCORE VICTORY

In an intersectional all-prone match, held last week, the local men's and women's rifle teams decisively defeated their University of Tennessee Junior College rivals.

"Much to my surprise, the Tennessee women's scores totaled higher than their men's," said William Hancock, San Francisco Junior College Rifle and Pistol coach. "Also, in this all-prone match, my teams could have beat Tennessee by a good margin, shooting all four positions. This could have been accomplished with any of our team's average scores for the season."

AFTER COLLEGE WHAT?

By Anne Rabinowitz

Few professions call for greater emotional stability than the recreation profession. All employees engaged in organizing and directing activities should be thoroughly grounded in the underlying philosophy of play and recreation.

Play leaders must possess devotion to the work and retain the spirit of play from childhood. As community recreation touches many fields of human activity, the worker must be cooperative.

The playground director and the community center director are to the playground and center what the principal is to the school. Though their duties are executive, they perform other activities for they have a small staff.

Students planning to become directors should attempt to develop skill in at least three groups of activity out of the following eight: athletics, dramatics, story-telling, nature study, folk dancing, music, camp craft, and handicraft. The minimum age for playground directors is 21 years; community center directors, 25 years. Experience of one year as an assistant director, play leader, leader, or social worker is desired in addition to the equivalent of two years of university work.

At most students are younger than the age minimums for directors, they seek positions as play leaders on the primary experience in general supervision of play. Play leaders are often students and part-time workers preparing for full-time responsibilities in recreation work.

No professional experience is required for play leaders, but experience in the activities of this type of work should be sought. High school graduates, at least 18 years of age, can command a salary of $85 to $150 a month for full time, and 50 cents to $1.00 per hour for part time.

Students planning to begin as play leaders in an effort to reach the ultimate goal of playground director or community center director should strive to be good mixers, sociable, workers, and good sports.

Knowledge of first aid is another requisite of recreation work, and adaptation for all other skills mentioned for highest positions are also great assets in the less responsible jobs.

The college is planning to offer training for play leaders, both men and women, if such course proves popular, in the announcement of the physical education department. Those interested should see Leland G. Brown, instructor in the department, for men, or Bertha Mae Keller of the women's physical education department.

An increase in women students interested in this type of education will mean a reopening of the courses offered in "Community Recreation," listed in the 1936-1937 catalogue. Such courses as Theory of Play, Officiating Technique, Rhythmic Fundamentals, Games of Low Organization, and possibly others will be given, Miss Keller reports.

these organizations and it is not because of them alone that AWS and AMS are included on the Executive Council. Such activities as the four listed above allow the two groups to satisfy the money allotment prerequisite for Executive Council representation.

Point Number Four—Continuing their valiant campaign, the Vaughn-Valdez combine lowered the boom on the Club Advisory Board, inferring that unless it is given specific legislative powers, it will be useless.

Two such astute critics should realize the impracticability of a governing machinery which has a duplication of powers such as would be created by giving the club group and the Ex Council equal authority. With the notable exception of Valdez and Vaughn, the active club leaders of the college agree that much could be accomplished by such an organization under Executive Council direction.

Point Number 5—This final objection is rather closely linked to point number two, since our two leaders conclude by inquiring why the cultural interests have not the same proportional representation as have the athletic and social interests.

The answer is simple. The Executive Council is primarily a Board of Directors of a business corporation. The Associated Students, created to handle the expenditure of student funds. By common consent the students have decided that a major portion of these funds shall be allotted to the social and athletic interests and therefore it is completely logical that these groups should have a major portion of the representation.

Gunners Plan Social Activity For April; Militarists Meet

Unanimous approval was given, in a meeting last Thursday, by the ensign Rifle and Pistol Club to Vice-President Bill Gibson's plans for a Spring Formal to be held April 22.

The organization also backed up plans for a combination roller-skate and weenie-roast to be held at Penitencia Beach, April 1. Charge for the dance will be an even one dollar per couple, while the weenie-roast toll will total 50 cents each, transportation included.

A popular dance orchestra, "not too swingy", has been auditioned by club officers and has been selected to play for the dance. Scheduled to take place in the California Club Gold Room, it has been ascertained that a maximum of comforts has been obtained.

The mode will be semi-formal, no corde or jeans being allowed. Students who do not belong to the club and who desire to attend the dance should contact club officers for bids. Club members may obtain bids from Don Smith, in the armory any afternoon but Wednesday, after 1:30 o'clock. Smith also has an unlimited number of weenie-roast reservations for Rifle and Pistol Club members who may bring one friend each.

Neither a failure nor a flop was that organization's "monster skating orgy", scheduled to take place a week ago Saturday. It was called off after rink officials passed the "ante". However, the social committee is already working on a "bigger" scheme.

Students are reminded that membership is still open to all interested men and women for very nominal fees. Shooting facilities with expert coaching is available for all members. Additional information can be obtained from any Rifle and Pistol Club member.

Block Men Prepare For April Dance

Musicians for the Block Society's dance, "Suppressed Desire", to be held in the Girls' Gym at Galileo High on the first night in April, will not be known until the Monday preceding the dance, announced Bob Fez, chairman of the Social Committee.

In an endeavor to sponsor a dance different from any yet held in the school, the "Suppressed Desire" group, ter to be one with a great amount of fun and frivolity, Fez said.

Students and a sponsor interested in contract bridge are invited by Jim Sprague to the Galileo cafeteria tomorrow, March 10, from 1:00 to 2:30 p.m., when he hopes to organize a college bridge club.

Chinese To Hold Hike, Weinie Roast

Encouraged by the advanced receipts from their Spring Dance, held last Saturday evening at the Chinese Y.W.C.A., the Chinese Club began immediate preparation for a weenie roast and hike to be held this month.

"We feel that the crowd of more than 200 persons for the dance is proof of our steady growth and is quite an encouragement to us in preparing our future program," said Andrew Auyong, president of the organization.

According to Auyong, plans for the "weenie roast" are in a formative stage at present, but complete information concerning the affair will be released shortly.

Delfs Talks About Germany To Verein

College German Society held an informal meeting at the home of Helen Nast, last Tuesday evening. During the meeting Ruth Gustafson was appointed as the new Secretary-Treasurer in place of Ronald Smith who resigned.

At the conclusion of the business meeting, Miss Annemarie Delfs, sponsor of the club, spoke about Germany. The next meeting of the club will probably be held March 22.

Tom Wilson's Cage Squad Ends Season

Finishing a highly successful season, the college Junior Varsity Basketball team won nine games while dropping five closely-contested contests. The Jayvees ran up 403 points to their opponents' 370 points.

Ray Berns was high point man for the season, scoring 78 points. Captain Stewart and Roy Sclar were closely on his heels with 70 and 69 points respectively.

Highlights of the season were in defeating the 16's of State A big among the vanquished were the Westside Athletic Club who were defeated earlier in the season by the Varsity by only five points.

Coach Wilson is looking forward to his next season already—All the members of the Jayvees will return for another season this fall as they were all freshmen, this semester. He will probably lose Slavin to the varsity along with Lawrence.

M. CLAY TALKS TO BUSINESS STUDENTS

Women students of the Business Department of the college were guests of the Associated Business Women's Club at their monthly meeting and dinner held at the Monte Carlo Restaurant, February 28. Margaret Flournoy, sponsor of the group, introduced Mabel Clay, new business department instructor, who told of her experiences in the business world and advancement from country schools to the junior college.

Each member told of her experiences in getting a job and what the duties of her present job were. The art of bluffing was pointed out many times as being really important. Donna McPherson, secretary of the club, related how she bluffed her way into her present job of writing advertising copy for one of the large concerns in the city. An associate advertiser is Mildred Ross who told her most "thrilling experience to date", that of taking dictation from Mantia over a short-wave set of a private radio in Berkeley.

Ethel Jones, who has the reputation of having gone through the shortest course in the least time in the history of the college, explained how she received an unexpected two dollars from her former employers who had won a claim against her present employers for injury at the Golden Gate Park playgrounds, the money being considered her share in aiding the case.

Planns were discussed to affiliate the club as a junior division of the Business and Professional Women's Club, a nation-wide organization, and to have speakers discuss both sides of the subject of unions.

Women students of the business departments are again invited to the club's next meeting, the definite date for which will be announced later.

Beta Phi Frat To Play Bridge Whist

Beta Phi, local chapter of the national junior college fraternity, is intending to hold a bridge-whist party in the near future, according to Dick Scott, Beta Phi historian.

A definite date has not yet been set but it is probable that the affair will be held within the next three weeks. Tickets will sell for 25 cents and refreshments are included in the price of the ticket.

New pledges of the Beta Phi are now undergoing their "Hell Week" and the informal initiation is set for the middle of this month. Following the initiation there will be a new pledge period.

The present pledges will be honored with a dance after completing their formal initiation which will be held shortly.

Peace Society Discusses Oath Tonight; Newmans Skate Friday

Discussion of the Oxford Pledge will feature tonight's meeting of the College Peace Society at 8 o'clock, at the home of Marion Turner, 2330 Larkin Street, near Union Street. The meeting place is accessible by cars E, 19, and Hyde cable.

Miriam Frazier will present the arguments favorable to the oath, which pledges the person taking it not to support his government in any war it may undertake. The pledge derived its name from England's Oxford University where it first originated and then spread to other parts of the world. Proponents of the idea claim that if a sufficient number of people take the oath that there will be no war.

Opposition to the proposal will be led by Bill Switzer. The peace movement is divided on the question, opponents point out that the pledge fatalistically waits until war arrives instead of working to prevent the war from starting. The rapid spread of Fascism also is a factor in many repudiations of the oath, people say that war is simultaneously spreading and that something must be done to halt the trend.

"All students interested in the topic to be discussed, and in our organization, are heartily welcome to attend," Ray Valdez, president of the group, said.

Musician's Group Organizes Trios

Trios, quartets, quintets, and other musical combinations are now being organized by the Music Club to take care of recent demands for entertaining at the Hostilia Badger, faculty advisor of the club, revealed. Outstanding among these groups is a quartet made up of Wesley Pomeroy, president of the Music Club, Arnold Chapin, Bob Scott, and Elliot De Witt. The quartet will sing in an entertainment to be given by the Daughters of the American Revolution at the War Memorial Building in March.

HEA Members To See Carmen Thurs.

Members of the Household Economics Association will attend Bizet's colorful opera, Carmen, tomorrow night at the War Memorial Building. The trip to the opera is as part of the club's plan to hold one social activity a month.

A discussion of the fashion show which the HEA plans to present sometime soon, will be the main business of the meeting to be held today, at 2:15 o'clock at Room 317, Galileo.

MEN'S CLUB TO SPONSOR RURAL REVEL APRIL 8

Featuring an evening of hayseed entertainment, the Men's Club will give a barn dance on April 8. It will be held either at Vallomar Park or Belmont, according to Al Williams, president of the organization.

Williams said that the "rural" theme would be followed in every detail, even down to the transportation, which will probably be a hay ride. If possible, trucks will be rented and filled with hay for the purpose of transporting students to and from the dance.

Students will be asked to wear old clothes to fit in with the general atmosphere of the dance. Moreover, good clothes would be out of place and might be damaged, Williams said.

Music will be supplied by Stan Weston, a former student at the college. Refreshments will be served in the form of punch, cookies and cake, and the entertainment will be announced later.

Last spring a similar dance was held by the Men's Club at Vallomar, and it was reported that the affair met with enthusiastic response.

Economists Gather At Eight O'clock

A meeting of the Omicron Phi Pi college honor society, will take place tonight at the home of Cecilia Elliot, 1635 Gough Street, to discuss "Government Regulation in Business."

"All members are invited, and are urged to bring a guest," said Cecilia Elliot, secretary-treasurer.

"Hereafter, discussions will be held every two weeks," asserts Charles Vaughn, president.

On March 23, the society will meet at the home of Bill Simonds, for another discussion.

WSS To Conduct Sale of Rummage

Sigmund Stern Grove, located at 19th Avenue and Sloat Boulevard, was the setting of the regular meeting of the Women's Service Society last Monday.

Of the Rummage Sale, Marian Yager, president of the society, said: "The Finance Office is the receiving headquarters for rummage, but up to this time we have not received any rummage. Every member in the society is striving to make this sale a success. However, we cannot hope for a successful sale if we do not receive the support of all the students. The purpose of the sale is to raise funds for the annual scholarship award and we feel sure that the student body will give its immediate support."

HOTEL DIVISION VIEWS TWO YEARS OF PROGRESS

Growth, Practical Value Stressed By Group In Observing Anniversary Friday, Expansion to Statewide, National Recognition Remarked

Friday, March 18, marks the second anniversary of the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division. Since its organization on March 18, 1936, the Division has grown from a faculty of two instructors and an enrollment of eight students to a faculty of twenty-five instructors and an enrollment of sixty-five. During the past two years it has expanded from the smallest department in the college to the point where it now attracts attention and interest throughout the state, and has received recognition in magazines with national circulation.

The development of the divison began in the fall semester of 1936 when the course was increased to 13 students and three instructors. During 1936 the department perpared and served the meals for the California Junior College Conference, the Occidental Alumni Association, the California Teacher's Association, Research Section, The Northern Junior College Conference, and other educational groups.

In August, 1937, the division expanded and took control of the Marina Junior High School Cafeteria with junior college students handling all departments, under the direction of the instructors. The group participated for the first time in a state-wide convention on October 23, 1937, at Del Monte, California, at the California Hotel Division convention.

Greeter's Convention

Several students, enrolled in Hotel and Restaurant Management courses attended and participated in the Hotel Greeter's State Convention in November of 1937. John P. Gifford, first management coordinator, explained the progress made by the junior college division at the convention. "First national recognition of the success of the department was given in February, 1937, when an article appeared in a nation-wide magazine, called Hotel Management, which traced the growth of the San Francisco Junior College Hotel and Restaurant Management Division and what it was accomplishing. On May 8 the division served the State Conference for Vocational Arts Education.

Student enrollment increased to its present number of 65 and the instructors to 25 in January, 1938. Trade extension course started this semester, which serve as an extension of junior college work.

Climax Comes

The climax of two years of accomplishment, which included serving and preparing luncheons, teas, and dinners, to educational conventions, high school, college, and faculty groups, came with the opportunity to serve the California Northern Hotel Association, February 14. Members of California hotels throughout the state were able for the first time to see the work of the San Francisco Junior College division. The results included write-ups in all important trade journals in the state and favorable comments from heads of many large hotels.

Another indication of the value of the division has been the appointment of many of its students to positions in hotels throughout the state. Trained students are always needed for this type of work.

TURNER NAMES NYA TIMESLIP DEADLINE FRI.

NYA time-slips for March are due Friday, the 18th, announced Helene Turner, head of the administration here.

The inspector of WPA district No. 7, of which the San Francisco Junior College National Youth Administration is a unit, made a visit to the college last week to inspect various work projects, and to rate them in regard to efficiency and capacity.

"I am very pleased," the inspector said, "with the projects we have in force here and with the way they have absorbed student labor."

He expressed himself as being particularly pleased with the hotel and restaurant division and the way it is utilizing NYA help. He also complimented the college on the fact that although the quota for student labor is 125 students, the college now employs 189 at an average of $11.50 apiece which, he said, "is a remarkable state of affairs."

Five Women Represent AWS, WAA In Chico State Meet

Five women have been chosen to represent the college at the combined Associated Women Students and Women's Athletic Association convention, to be held at Chico State College, on April 1 and 2. Annabelle Benson, Dorothy Canavan, Miriam Frazier, Jane Mitchell, and Barbara Randall are those selected.

All three AWS delegates, Annabelle Benson, Jane Mitchell, and Barbara Randall, are officers of that organization. They will be accompanied by Margaret Dougherty, women's adviser. These three were chosen at a council meeting held late last week. The two women, Dorothy Canavan and Miriam Frazier, who will represent the college athletic group, were selected at the first meeting of the complete council of the WAA, held previously in the semester. Vera Spencer, sponsor of the WAA, plans to accompany the group.

Chico State Host

Throughout the state, both junior and state colleges send delegates to this annual assemblage, at which officers discuss problems pertinent to college women's organizations. An invitation to attend the convention was sent to Christopher, AWS president at Chico State College, which is acting as host college for this year's meeting.

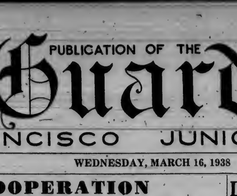
At the request of Miss Christopher, both Barbara Randall and Dorothy Canavan, presidents of their respective associations, submitted three questions each, which were interesting and vital to present women's groups in college. Miss Randall's questions dealt with whether the AWS should collaborate with the AMS in co-educational schools or remain a separate unit, what type of affairs the AWS should give during a semester, what the club can do in orienting new women students, and whether it should take an active part in advising women students, or should leave advising to college instructors.

Improvements Studied

Questions sent in by Dorothy Canavan were concerned with the way the two women's groups, the AWS and WAA, could cooperate more fully, how college women could acquaint high school girls with college athletics, and the best way to develop coeducational activities.

The form of transportation to Chico has not yet been decided, but both groups plan to take full advantage of the convention and remain for both days of the two-day session.

Art Exhibit Includes Ten Junior Colleges



Represented at the third annual art exhibit opening, tentatively the first of April at the De Young Museum, will be about ten Northern California Junior Colleges. Among the artists participating will be several from this school.

Featuring the exhibit will be a tour conducted by a competent guide. The tour will take place one day only, and it is probable that the art classes of the junior colleges participating will be excused from classes to attend, as they were last year. The date of the tour will be set in the near future, said Richard M. Allman, college art instructor.

Members of Evans Ecke's and Allman's art classes, who have achieved anything of value during the semester, will submit their work to the instructors, who will select the best at the end of this week. Later, the work selected will be sent to the museum, where Otis Wulff of the museum staff will arrange the exhibit from the work submitted.

Among the work submitted from this college will be paintings, figure sketches, landscapes, and works on form and design.

COOPERATION

Effectiveness of the current campaign to "clear the way," not only along Powell Street, but on the Extension Building, steps is proved in the above scene. Only one week ago the empty bannister would have been hidden by "five students to each step." The good-will of Dean Browne is herein happily matched by that of the students.

Social Commttee, AWS Group To Give St. Patrick Dance Friday

With a theme completely Irish, in tribute to St. Patrick's Day, the college Social Committee, in conjunction with the Associated Women Students, will hold its final dance of the semester on Friday evening, March 18, according to Norma Parent, Associated Students vice-president and social committee chairman.

"The dance," Miss Parent said, "will be held at the Veteran's War Memorial Building and will be informal. This means that women will wear street dresses or suits. We have planned an Irish theme with green suede bids and green paper hats for everyone who attends.

Low Sophs Honored

"We are honoring the Low Sophomores," she continued, "and co-chairman, AWS president Barbara Randall and I will be assisted by Muriel Mills, Betty Nelsen and Marie Louise McNatt, low sophomore officers, in addition to the regular members of the Social Committee.

Murphy's Music

"Music," she continued, "will be provided by Eddie Murphy and his orchestra who played for our semi-formal at the St. Francis. We received so much favorable comments on Murphy's music that we yielded to 'popular demand' and secured his services for this dance. Although nothing definite has been said, we believe that with a name like Murphy, Ed can hardly help entering the spirit of the occasion by playing a medley of Irish tunes for the more rugged jiggers."

Lots of Room

"The War Memorial Building is larger than either of the rooms used for our previous dances, so there should be space for everyone without the crowded conditions which prevailed before. We have had five hundred bids printed so that every couple should get one, and with everything delightly set there seems no reason why our last dance should not be the most successful of the season."

Pres. Cloud Returns From Eastern Parley

President Archibald J. Cloud returned from the East last Saturday night on the Overland Limited, after spending three weeks attending educational parleys in Atlantic City and Philadelphia.

Cloud addressed the American Association of Junior Colleges in Philadelphia on March 5 on "The Place of the Junior College in the Community." He also participated in the discussions of the National Education Association held in the New Jersey city at the end of February.

In addition to attending the two conventions, Cloud visited New York and became acquainted with plans for the educational exhibit to be given at that metropolis' fair in 1939.

Deadlines For College Tuition Exams Nearing

Many Scholarship Chances Open To Junior College Transfer Students

Deadline for applications for the numerous scholarships to California colleges and universities being offered to junior college transfers is nearing. Students interested in taking advantage of these opportunities should see Margaret Dougherty, women's adviser.

For free tuition to the University of Chicago and to that institution's business school, candidates should confer with Paul M. Pitman, assistant to President Cloud, as soon as possible. Both Mits Dougherty and Pitman can be found in Room 211 at the Galileo Guilding.

Fifty Available

More than fifty scholarships are available to institutions throughout the state, two of which are being offered exclusively to men students of the college by the University of San Francisco. At the other colleges, a large percentage of the scholarships are for women only.

Members of Alpha Gamma Sigma, junior college honor society, have four opportunities for free tuition: two at Occidental College in Los Angeles, two at Pomona College in Claremont, one at the University of Redlands, and one at Scripps College, also in Claremont.

Two Methods Open

The scholarships offered to students not necessarily members of Alpha Gamma Sigma will be awarded on two bases. The applicant must either take a competitive examination or be noted for his qualities of industry, initiative, achievement, leadership, and scholarship.

Institutions making the offers are: College of Pacific in Stockton, Mills College in Oakland, Whittier College in Whittier, and the University of Southern California in Los Angeles. Pomona, Scripps, Occidental, and the University of Redlands are also extending scholarships.

College Meets State In NLRB Debate Tilt

Maintenance of National Labor Relations Board will be the debated issue between the college and San Francisco State College forensic groups tonight, at 8 o'clock, at State College. The negative team is composed of Paul Fechner, Charles Vaughn and Joseph Meeko, who will attempt to bring glory to the college.

During the remainder of the semester the college debaters will encounter College of Pacific, San Francisco State College and the following junior colleges: Bakersfield, Sacramento, Santa Rosa, San Mateo, Coalinga and Menlo.

Activities thus far this semester have included a debate with University of San Francisco, a state convention at University of California Agricultural College, and a Forum at Modesto. All of these affairs added much to the prestige of not only the debating Rams, but also to the college as well.

Sometime during this month, debaters of the Forensic Society will be officially initiated as members of the National Debating Honor Society. Those eligible are Paul Fechtner, Frank Bosl, Joseph Q. Meeko, Charles Vaughn, Lorraine Johnsen, Morris Rabinowich, Ken Germann, James Armstrong, David Levy, Elizabeth Rehbock, John Healy, Thomas Tillberry, Bill Simonds, George Woodland and Searl B. Williams.

Plans for the initiation have not been formulated as yet, but will be decided upon in the near future, debaters said.

Medical Schedule Put Off One Week

"Although the medical examination list has been suspended for a week, those men students who have failed to keep their appointments can still come into Room 201 during the coming week for their examinations," announced Dr. R. D. Freidlander, examiner. Students who intend to graduate in May, 1938, must have their examination before they are released from the college.

Only nine days remain in which students may submit manuscripts to "Forum", the college's literary publication, John Ward, editor of the magazine, said. Friday, March 25, is the deadline.

Articles, short stories, poetry, dramas or other types of writing will be accepted by the editorial staff. Word limit is 1500 words. The subject matter, like the writing, may be of any type. The aim of the editors is to present a well-balanced book. Because of the diversity of the contents of the magazine, students are afforded a good opportunity to have their literary efforts published. Only qualification is that the contributions reach the standards of the publication.

Students who submitted poetry to "First the Blade" are urged to contribute their verse to Forum, which appears annually under the auspices of the Forum Club.

Editor Ward is being assisted by an editorial board consisting of Tom Tillberry, Jean Page, Ely Chertok, Marjorie Cusic, Henry Evans, Margarita Williams, Ray Valdez, and Fray Van Fleet. Faculty advisers of the project are Dorothy Mercer and William Goss. The business manager's duties are handled by John Healy.

When it appears at the end of April the magazine will include satire, humor, poetry, short stories, dramas, reviews, and serious articles devoted to social problems in its contents.

Astronomers Sponsor Lecture At PGE Aud.

"Astronomical-minded students of the college will have a chance to hear the internationally-known astronomer and member of the Astronomical Society of the Pacific, lecture on the Nebulae at the PGE Auditorium next Monday evening at 8:00 o'clock, under the sponsorship of the society," said Elizabeth Rehbock, president of the college Astronomy Club.

Dr. Louis Berman, faculty adviser of the Astronomy Club, which meets every Monday evening at the Galileo Observatory, is also a member of the society, added Miss Rehbock.

In reply to the queries of a reporter, Miss Rehbock said, "Because of Dr. Berman's experience in the best known observatories, his extensive graduate work in astronomical research, and his present connection with various astronomical societies, we feel fortunate in having him as the sponsor of our group."

"Anyone may attend this lecture next Monday night," she concluded, "and everyone is invited to attend any of the club meetings at Galileo each Monday evening. At present, we are discussing spectrum analysis of the elements in the stars."

RECOMMENDATION HALTS CONSTITUTION APPROVAL

Smith's Proposal For Faculty Representation On Executive Body Forces Continued Debate; Presentation To Student Body Delayed

Recommendation by faculty adviser Alden Smith that the new constitution be amended to provide a faculty member of the Executive Council with the privilege of voting postponed acceptance of the constitution at the meeting of that body last Friday afternoon. Smith's suggestion came just as acceptance of the proposed new constitution seemed imminent. His reason for suggesting the amendment was that such a plan is followed in colleges and universities throughout the nation, and serves to bring the faculty and students into an active organizational relationship, and thereby furthers the interests of the whole college.

Prior to Smith's recommendation, the Council had given its approval to the section of the constitution which had been in dispute, that article dealing with the powers and duties of the Executive Council. As it stands at present, this article defines the Council as "the Administrative and Legislative body of the Association and it shall be responsible for, and shall have authority in, the supervision of the affairs, policies, properties, and conduct of the Association."

No Publications

It was decided, after considerable dispute, that, under the existing set-up in the college, there is no justification for a representative on the Executive Council from the Publications, although such a representative might be justified upon the occupancy by the college of its new plant and the existence of an increased number of publications.

Up to this time, there has always been a member of the faculty at the meetings of the Executive Council. Under the plan proposed by Smith, he would be empowered to vote on all matters brought before the council. This proposal came as a complete surprise to the council itself, and, finding themselves unable to come to an agreement during the remainder of the meeting, the members adjourned the matter until their next gathering, when it will be taken under consideration.

Forum Postponed

The new constitution has been under consideration by the Council for the past several weeks, being prepared for adoption, and was on the point of being officially adopted when this new delay occasioned more discussion and possible modification. It has been presented to the Council in sections for approval, and has finally received it in every respect.

The necessity for further deliberation over the document forces postponement of the student forum for discussion of the constitution which had originally been set for this Thursday. If the present difficulties are ironed out at the next meeting, this forum will probably be held next week, to be followed by a general assembly at which the constitution will be presented to the student body in a whole.

College Peace Class Achieves National Prominence

In a bulletin issued by the Student Peace Service, a national organization, the college's new course on "Problems of Peace and War", secured through the efforts of the Peace Society, is mentioned.

The bulletin reports of peace activities in colleges and universities throughout the country. It quotes editorials from various college papers and quotes prominent individuals. It also reports on legislation affecting war and peace before Congress.

Reporting on new peace courses the bulletin, which is edited by Harold Chance, tells of the development of a course in "Peace Science and Tactics" at the University of Washington. Attendance is as high as 150 students a week.

Of San Francisco Junior College, Chance says: "In its first year of existence, the San Francisco Junior College Peace Society secured a two-unit course in the curriculum entitled 'Problems of Peace and War'. It will be given by about ten or more instructors from various departments, thus affording a wide and fair point of view, and it will be coordinated by a single instructor who will sit at every lecture and conduct the examinations."

Forums, Washington's and San Francisco's, were instituted by the demand of students who felt the necessity of having such material taught, thus extending education for peace.

As reported recently in The Guardsman and in the Student Peace Service bulletin, the courses have proved tremendously popular at both institutions and are considered very successful.

Pacific Players To Perform March 24th

College of Pacific players will present a performance for the college next Thursday, March 24, in the Varsity Street study hall at 9 o'clock in the morning.

As The Guardsman went to press full details had not been received from the Stockton institution as to the name of the drama or its cast.

The play will mark the first time a production will be presented at the college. Because of limited facilities, the drama department has not been able to develop with the rest of the college. One play was given last semester without any properties and a cast of four students. It was directed by Ruth Jensen, speech instructor, and was widely acclaimed.

Armament Program Engages Forum Club

To discuss President Roosevelt's armament program the college Forum will meet Friday night, March 18, at 7:45 o'clock, at the home of Carol Pickering, 2142 - 16th Avenue. Accessible by cars 1. and 17.

Presenting the arguments for the proposed $800,000,000 naval appropriation will be Bob MacArthur. Maintaining the United States has enough warships and that this country's defense is strong enough will be Ray Valdez.

"All indications are that the discussion will be quite lively," Fred Vast, Forum chairman, said, "all students interested in the controversial topic are invited to attend. The Forum is purely a discussion group and makes no decisions.

"'Forum', the organization's literary publication," he added, "will also be discussed and plans for its appearance in April will be made. Deadline for submission of manuscripts is Friday, March 25."

Sophs To 'Dance Among Blossoms' At Country Club

Definitely setting April 23 as the date of the High Sophomore "Dance Among The Blossoms", Irving Amstrup, high sophomore president, announced last week that the class had been fortunate enough to obtain the San Francisco Golf and Country Club for the affair.

"Unquestionably one of the most beautiful and exclusive country clubs in northern California," Amstrup said, "this place is situated in the center of an expanse of rolling green turf and overlooks the Pacific ocean.

"The committee," he continued, "in the hope of having something really different, is trying to secure a floor show which will probably be put on during the intermission. We have also planned to have very attractive bids, and these will probably be given to the fellows as well as to the girls."

Amstrup said that no orchestra had as yet been selected but there were several under consideration.

"We have quite a wide choice of orchestras, which will make it easier to select the best possible music," he declared. "At present we are considering Don Mulford and his California Band, Jimmy Howard of Russian River fame, Noel Thomas, Al Lamanet, who plays at most of the Y.M. dances, and Ed Murphy whose music has been so popular with students at the junior college."

WISDOM

Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting get understanding — Proverbs, iv. 7.

PURE knowledge gained without true understanding is as empty as vain words. What youth ever seeks and must have is a depth of understanding that will allow him to profit by the knowledge that he gains.

There would be considerable less of the petty jealousy that abounds in the world, if more people learned understanding along with all the factual knowledge that they glean from years of study. There would be less of the hate and strife that lead to ruin if men tempered their wisdom with understanding.

Perhaps the fact that understanding takes more concentration and study than mere learning of factual data might explain the large numbers of pedantic, stuffed-shirts that pose as learned philosophers and pursue their various dogmas in the face of irrefutable proofs to the contrary.

It is a simple matter to acquire a superficial smattering of many subjects and consequently appear to be well-versed in a number of different fields, but the difficult course is the course that leads to the true wisdom in the end. The understanding that comes of long association with a subject or field is the only knowledge that will stand either the test of time or the test of wisdom.

Wisdom is the desirable thing, but wisdom without understanding is naught but "book-learning," and while much may be learned from a book, it is the "books that must follow sciences and not sciences books," as Francis Bacon wrote in one of his tracts.

In college, the danger of filling one's head with endless numbers of facts without any true understanding of their worth or meaning is great, and students often find themselves with a seemingly great store of wisdom on a subject and yet actually have little or no real understanding of the matter.

Perhaps the only true wisdom is the wisdom of understanding, but certain it is that a man can be possessed of great knowledge and have little practical understanding. The understanding to cultivate is the understanding of cause.

SPRING AND STUDY

Soon the warm Spring days with their compelling laziness and hypnotic influence toward shirking study will be upon us, and the confines of the classroom will take on all the aspects of a prison cell.

The awakening of Nature will fill youths with the desire to swim instead of study, loaf instead of learn, "cut" instead of "cram," dream instead of drudge and do practically anything except pay attention to the words of the lecturers.

The familiar madness known as "spring fever" will grip students in classrooms everywhere, and the ease with which lessons may be neglected will be surprising.

If the lesson is worth learning, however, if the end justifies the means, in short, if the education is worth the effort, the wise student will put off his play until the semester ends and the time for play begins.

It will not be easy, but it will certainly feel swell to come up to the finals, "knowing what it's all about".

THE RIGHT SPIRIT

Heartening to observers is the response of the general student body to the plea expressed by members of the administration in the assembly held last week.

There is a real spirit of cooperation apparent in the attempt to comply with the wishes of the college heads in the matter of avoiding congestion in front of the Powell Street Building. Immediately after the assembly there was a noticeable improvement in this condition.

It takes so little effort to do the right thing, yet there are always those individuals who seem to delight in doing something which they have been asked to desist from doing.

Evidently there are few of these persons in San Francisco Junior College; a fact that proves even more conclusively that it is one of the finest institutions of its kind in the state.

GIVE THANKS

While Europe seethes and prepares feverishly for a war, while finances and governments in the other parts of the world assume a chaotic condition, while the conflict in the Far East shows little signs of coming to an early end, while elsewhere nations glare at their neighbors with hatred and suspicion, the United States continues to be the sole remaining spot on the globe where democracy is an apparent success.

With all the depressions and recessions, the American public is considerably better off than its brethren in other countries.

We still have freedom of speech and of the press. We still have universal education. We still have friendly nations on our borders. We still have greater wealth than any other nation in the world. What is most important, we still have a sense of humor.

Even through the darkest days of the last great war, the ability to laugh at its own troubles never deserted this country, and shows no signs of doing so now.

This quality, so puzzling to our European brothers, who take their wars and politics seriously, has had, perhaps, as much to do with the attainment of America's high place in the affairs of the world as any other single factor.

It is to be hoped, that in the trying times which persons competent to forecast the future insist are in store for the world, this healthy sense of humor will never give way to the stoical pessimism which characterizes some of the great nations of today.

Things can never be really hopeless as long as there is a willingness to laugh at misfortunes even while acknowledging the need for concerted action in emergencies.

A notable example of this American spirit is the cheerful manner in which the states worst hit by the floods along the Ohio River in 1936, made fun of their plight and went on digging themselves out of the mud and rebuilding their homes.

Americans should give thanks for their heritage, the spirit of the men who fought and died to build this nation, and all the time joked about their troubles. Thank God, we still have our sense of humor.

CONGRATULATIONS!

Deserving a bit of congratulations is the college basketball team for its fine showing in the recent Pacific Athletic Association tournament. Supported by a very small band of rooters from their own college, these determined fellows advanced to the semi-final round of play before bowing to an older, more experienced team.

It is quite probable that this latest achievement of an athletic team of San Francisco Junior College has done more to publicize the college than anything else in its short history.

If, as seems likely, it is more important that a team be a representative of the sportsmanship and ideals of an institution than that it win a championship every season, the success of this year's basketball squad is unquestionable, although it did not finish first in its conference.

Out Of The Fog

The Silliad

O Muses, sing of Student's awful ire,
That slew the lecturer with 'venging fire.
Relate, O spirit, how the hero's rage
Foredoomed the villain, scoundrel of his age.
Declare, thy muse, these deeds of brave Student,
The noble warrior, wisest of the prudent.
This lad had sworn the monster "Prof" to kill;
His "examination" guns he vowed to still,
And thinking thus the college youth to save,
Began the war to end the scurvy knave.
With burning pen, Student unleashed his might,
And stayed the trembling craven in his flight.
The paper battlefield with gore was strewn,
As Phoebus, startled, halted at his noon,
And gods and men alike drew shudd'ring nigh
To view the lurid fray from vantage high.
Contemptuous "Prof" then laid the heroe low,
With "quizzes" shot like arrows from his bow,
And reeling from the slash of "blue book" sword,
The heroe tottered, pale and bored.
At length, when hope seemed gone, brave Student rose
And smote the villain "Prof" between the nose.
The battle of the Bluebooks raged all 'round,
And when the war was done, the watchers found,
That Student's pencil lance had "cracked" the fray;
He'd slain the mighty "Prof"; he had his "A".
The followers of "Prof" slunk from the field,
Their wounded pride could never now be healed,
For as collegiate hosts proclaimed the "A",
They couldn't find an "F" to save the day.

Thoughts of a columnist . . . wondering why the first day of spring has to come on March 21st every year . . . why couldn't we have a "bargain" year sometime, with just a long spring and summer and two Xmases . . . why someone doesn't nvent a self-writing column, or go a step farther and eliminate them all together . . . why they don't institute a three-unit class for persons suffering from spring fever and make cutting compulsory . . . waiting in anticipation for the next goofy dance step to sweep the country . . . deciding that it isn't possible to pass a mid-term without a bit of studying . . . wish vacation would come . . . realizing with a shock that the semester is more than half over . . . worrying over what to buy with the first million we make . . . hating the thought of the thousands of years we'd have to work to make a million . . . musing on plans for founding a Shangri-La, where everybody would be five and six termers . . . thinking maybe there's something in this "giving-yourself-up" idea . . . hoping and honoring that all the alarmists in the world are nuts . . . fuming and fuming at the futility of it all . . . and so it goes.

Mental Mutterings

By Fem

Top o' the mornin', lads and lasses,
Tripping off to your early classes,
Keep smiling and singing, be happy and gay,
'Cause aint it for bein' St. Patrick's Day?

Premature, perhaps, but tomorrow will "for after bein' St. Patrick's Day" and never let it be said that we, with the stamp of County Cork on our battered old heart and a family tree runnin' over with Murphys, Kellys and Hanrnhans (to say nothing of a Pat or two), could let it slip by without suitable tribute! And for them as don't like it, well, "the back o' me hand to ya!"

A great big basket of lovely Spring blossoms to AWS president Barbara Randall, her fellow officers, and Miss Margaret Dougherty, their charming faculty adviser, for one of the nicest AWS teas in the history of the college. We've been dishing out tea at these affairs ever since we first entered the institution, and we feel that we can say, without fear of contradiction, that the one held last week at the Century Club was really tops. Besides a very lovely setting, seads of luscious food, and a bevy of hustling hostesses, this gathering featured very interesting talks by a lady banker, a feminine attorney and a female fashion expert, all looking like something out of Vogue. Needless to say, all the AWS members present enjoyed themselves tremendously to say nothing of the many faculty members, special guests and the Messrs. Mix, Nelson, Simpers and Williams who were also in attendance.

We're very happy about the response to our suggestion of once more conducting a poll to find out what men like about women and vice-versa as soon as we can tear ourselves away from the stack of books that must be read, papers that must be written and reports that must be made, we'll type up a few questionnaires and start finding out facts. It doesn't take long once we get started so we should have some sort of results before the final edition of the paper which, if you study the calendar carefully, isn't far off.

Just to straighten out the character situation, we've been told that we were misinformed about Mister Boomer replacing the Pesky Pasky and that it's two other fellows or rather one other fellow whose name we didn't quite catch. Oh, well, it's all sorta silly anyway so maybe it would be better to donate the entire heap of Kampus Kharacters to some expert puzzle-worker-outer and let him shuffle the bunch carefully, take the top card, cut them three times toward him and pick someone to reign as King of the Kharacter Klub. We quit!

CABBAGES AND KINGS

By Dick Simpers

LLOYD'S of London, famed English betting commissioners, are reported to be offering odds of 20 to 1 that the San Francisco World's Fair of 1939 (Golden Gate International Exposition to you) will not be a financial success. From what observations we have made to date, Lloyd's does not appear to be in much danger of going into the red on the deal, as the fair is not being conducted solely for profit, but rather to benefit the city as a whole by attracting trade, and it is therefore not unlikely that the enterprise itself will wind up on the wrong side of the ledger.

We would like to snap up, however, some of those 8 to 1 odds supposedly being quoted that the Fair will not open on schedule. If Lloyd's starts getting too liberal on this proposition, they stand to take an awful lacing next February, as all indications point to the Exposition's being in readiness on the date set.

Of course, we're not in a position to speak with a great deal of authority, but it seems to us that whoever is responsible for slating both the New York and the San Francisco fairs for the same year pulled an awful "bloomer". It is inevitable that each will detract from the success of the other. It's too late now to do anything about it, and it's no use crying over spilt milk, but it's too bad someone didn't employ a little foresight and common sense before making such an arrangement.

It is by this time common knowledge that one of our better-known college dignitaries is a rabid addict of toy airplane flying, sending his huge, homemade aeronautical creations zooming through the heavens and seriously threatening the safety of the Hawaiian Clipper ships in ths region. Given a piece of stiff paper, this chap, whom we shall refer to here only as the "Phantom Pilot", is in his glory. With a few deft twists of his nimble fingers he creates from a shred of parchment a craft which will soar to unbelievable heights, cutting all sorts of aerial capers before returning to the pavement. Keep an eye on the sky some afternoon, and it is likely that you will be able to spot evidence of Junior Birdman Number One at his work, busily putting the Wright boys to shame.

Yes, that's the cause of those dreamy, far-away expressions seen on so many masculine mugs recently. With the approach of balmy weather comes again that uplifted feeling, that resolve to turn over a new leaf which is the result of a conviction that the "only one" has finally come along. Speaking in behalf of our smitten chums, we implore you to pardon the glassy stares.

At the risk of being branded by some of the more scatter-brained gentry of the college as a slimy old conservative, we hereby take the opportunity to proffer several large daffodils to the good people of Seattle, in recognition of the extraordinary good sense they displayed in their election of city officials last week. The citizens of the Puget Sound city administered the boot in no uncertain fashion to all of the more radical candidates for municipal office, choosing to adopt a safe and sane policy rather than a revolutionary one, a choice on which they are to be heartily commended.

RAM'S HORN

FAULT FOUND WITH STAND OF MILITARY CLUB

Dear Editor:

In the last issue of The Guardsmnn there appeared a statement by the Army and Navy Club secretary to the effect that the club was pledging itself to work for the establishment of Military Courses in the schools of our nation. It defended this policy by saying something about military training being an important part of the educational system.

I don't think thnt such a statement should be allowed to pass unchallenged. Therefore this letter.

In the first place, military training has no cultural or academic value whatsoever. Individuals attend schools and colleges for the purpose of acquiring knowledge and learning how to think constructively. Why should the student waste his time in the study of military science, or, to put it differently, why should he learn the scientific metohds of killing his fellow man? What could be more hideously destructive to society than the barbaric bloodshed and mass slaughter known in polite terms as war? I frankly don't know. The militarist advocates preparedness against possible aggression. Well, it seems to me that the United States will be quite able to defend itself with what military experts exist outside of its schools.

In the second place, the establishment of military classes in our institutions of learning would have a definitely demoralizing effect on the nation as a whole. The average school or college student is undergoing a state of physical and mental change known as adolescence. At this period of life the individual is very easily influenced by his environment. Naturally, if exposed to a militaristic influence, the chances are that he will become military-minded. How can the United States ever hope to keep out of war if its schools are to constantly turn out military-minded youths?

—Robert Porter.

Dear Editor:

I would like to use your columns as a medium through which to express approval of the recent edict against card playing in the study hall. I have no objections to nnyone playing cards, but I do feel that the study hall is hardly the place for indulging in such games. It is pretty difficult for a student who is trying to concentrate on his lessons to learn anything when the air is filled with the raucous cries of the players asking for three cards or roaring "Pay-twenty-one" at the top of their lungs. If it is impossible to eliminate those who long for an occasional flutter, the best thing to do would be to provide them with a place where they can indulge in their pastime without disturbing the students who wish to make use of the study hall for the purpose for which it is intended.

—Satisfied.

Dear Editor:

It seems to me that something should be done to make next Friday's dance a strictly college affair. I mean, why is it that we can't keep the crowds of strangers out of our dances?

Anyone from the college would have had a difficult time at the last "rassling" matches trying to decide whether half the crowd or only a quarter was from our college. While I understand that it is impossible to charge admission to an affair given by the Associated Students, I'm sure that if we had charged ten cents a head, we would probably have kept out two-thirds of the strangers.

There is no doubt but what the semi-formal at the St. Francis was a decided success, except for one thing—you couldn't dance!

—Moaner.

Dear Editor:

In answer to the reply to our letter, which appeared in the Ram's Horn last week, we feel it our duty to clear up certain issues which have been misrepresented.

The only reason advanced for the failure to consider the petition in question was its non-legality. Real excuse for refusing to consider the petition might have been that the points advanced were of little importance; that more pressing matters demanded attention. But the only reason given was that under no circumstances would the president consider the petition unless it was taken directly over his head to a general student assembly, thus forcing the ex-council to abide by the decision of the students. No petition is legal unless it meets the requirements necessary to call a referendum. The 10 per cent of student body signatures was only necessary to call a student body assembly. The right to petition is open at all times.

The letter gives the point that only concerned interests, those spending funds, should have power. According to such a view only public utilities, munitions, wealth should compose our national legislature. Is that democratic? Actually, however, the forensics class, and drama and music interests, and the rifle club will have no representation but from indications will continue to get funds. Is this consistent with what the letter says?

—Charles Vaughn, Ray Valdez.

Dear Editor:

As a student of long standing in this junior college, I have been fortunate to attend many of the social affairs from time to time. From semester to semester there has been a marked improvement in these activities, namely the dances. Like other members of the Associated Student body I wish to congratulate the student body officers for such fine efforts. Also much of the credit must go to Dean Browne.

BUT I would like to make a suggestion . . . How about holding student body dances for students of the college and not John Q. Public? So far this semester there have been two hotel dances and on each occasion students with only the greatest difficulty have been able to dance.

MORE ON THE CONSTITUTION

We are now in the final stages of our campaign of development of the new student constitution. Action at last Monday's Executive Council meeting gave the final sanction of that body to the proposed document.

Before one becomes too violent in protesting any of the proposals contained in the constitution or by-laws they should be familiar with the philosophy that is behind our proposal.

It is a simple philosophy of government, one that is easily understood by citizens of a democratic nation. Our theory is called the representative form of government and necessitates that all major interest groups be voting participants in the main administrative and legislative body of the organization. Such a form aims at combining the best possible democratic representation with a workable executive unit.

We have attempted to select an intelligent, fairly proportioned group of representatives from the social, athletic and cultural interests, feeling that such a group is best fitted to be the legislative and administrative organ of the student body.

All these elements have been included in the new constitution to the best of the ability of all those who have contributed to the document.

AFTER DARK

By John Ward

We imagine that Walt Disney does not have to be told that "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" is a pretty bad piece of work. He has been too consistently excellent, too seemingly patient and honest to accept second best as anything but second best. And that is exactly what "Snow White" is—a poor job, both artistically and technically.

The best parts of the whole show are the idealized wild animals and the fascinating Dopey; the worst are far too numerous for a Disney opus. To begin with, it is too full of other people's ideas. His Snow White and at least six of the seven dwarfs could have been (and have been) done by an enormous lot of other artists. They are like all cliches, too much used and too familiar. Surely the man who made "The Three Little Pigs" could have given us something less hackneyed.

Then, there is a rank musical score, unusual for even a Silly Symphony. It is poorly orchestrated and terrifically uninspired. Equally rank is the script rhymed like a grammar school reading text. Perhaps we are wrong in supposing the picture is meant for adults at all, but no one mentioned such a curious fact in the publicity blurbs.

Of course, where Disney is concerned there are bound to be such fine scenes as the flight through the surrealistic forest and such astonishing realizations as the two silent buzzards. But aside from such scenes as these, and the scattered moments with Dopey and the wild animals, the picture is far, far below the Disney average. Even the editing seems abrupt at times. As we remember, somewhere past the middle the whole thing began to get a bit tedious and dull.

All of which is a lot to say about one picture—perhaps it seems too much. But we have always taken such keen interest in the Silly Symphonies and the rest of Disney's output that we cannot sit silent when he produces so miserable a work. Let it be remembered that he controls one of the cinema's most important contributions to contemporary art and if he were to give in, as the rest of Hollywood has, to the lure of money and popular consumption, America, and perhaps the world, would lose a great artist and a tremendous contribution.

But, if Mr. Disney is impatient with his "Snow White", and we have heard rumors to that effect, there is little to trouble over. We only hope that when he undertakes another full length film, if he does, he will give his genius more freedom and depend less on other people's ideas and the easiest solution to the problem. Certainly the audience will be with him both in spirit and delight even as they have been—surrealism and all.

With another dance scheduled for the coming eighteenth of March it is probable that these conditions will prevail again unless something is done about it. At the last dance you were considered fortunate if you could dance a few yards in five minutes, if you were real lucky you left the floor after the dance with a minimum of one or two casualties.

These conditions arise out of the fact that members of the student body are careless in lending their student body cards to outsiders. I suggest that steps

If Mel Chicazola, the Golden Gloves king, can arrange to participate in tonight's Men's Club battles, all and sundry will be assured of a classic scrap for the heavyweight crown. The yell leading prizefighter will be pitted against the huge and capable "Tip" Hamilton in an epic battle for the college boxing crown.

Both men are dynamite punchers but the Golden Glover's long record of ring wars gives him a decided edge in the experience department.

In the light heavyweight class we like the veteran, Ray Greenwood, to score an easy win over Ed "Playboy" McGovern. Ray seems to pack far too much class and punching power for the game Irish lad.

We can't see anyone beating Terry Isaacson in the welter class. He cold cocked our prize pick, Gino DeVito, in no uncertain fashion last week and in doing so looked like the class of his division.

Speed will be pitted against power when the fast moving Frank Matsumoto and the walloping "Bevo" O'Connor tangle for the bantam honors.

Ski Excursion Will Be Semester's Final Trip

Last excursion of the semester will be the trip next Sunday to Long Barn, which will present a final opportunity to students to enjoy winter sports at their finest in the High Sierras. Those desiring to secure reservations may do so at the bank counter at Galileo or by contacting Ed Frediani, the trip's organizer, the price being $2.50, which covers transportation to and from the scene of action in Rhodes busses.

All of the familiar snow sports, such as skiing, tobogganing, coasting; and snow-balling, will be offered the excursionists, who will leave early Sunday morning from Van Ness Avenue and Market Street and return late Sunday evening. The travellers will also have an opportunity to watch several of the college's more proficient skiiers in action. Bob Stager, Dick Wright, and Lou DeLara will exhibit their prowess, as well as other members of the Ski Club, which organization is lending its backing to the expedition.

Coach Russ Sweet is in hopes of discovering some new talent on the trip for the ski team, which he plans to organize, if he can secure a sufficiently large turn-out. Sweet plans meets with various other schools and colleges maintaining similar groups.

"We expect a large turnout for the trip," stated Frediani, "as this will be the last chance for students to indulge in winter sports before the end of the season. With the trip available at such a moderate cost, there is nothing to prevent devotees of snow activities from indulging in one last fling before the snow melts. I should advise, however," he continued, "that anyone desirous of making the trip should reserve his place as soon as possble, as Friday is the last day on which reservations can be accepted."

CREWCONFERENCE OPENS TOMORROW AT YACHT HARBOR

Ram Navy Meets U. S. F. Boat Over 2000 Meter Course in Initial Race

Tomorrow afternoon at 3:30, the local paddlers will meet a strong University of San Francisco crew in the first conference tilt of the season.

The oarsmen will row two races a week during the next four weeks—one of the toughest schedules ever to be faced by the college crew, according to Coach Jack Gaddy.

The races will take place every Thursday and Sunday, he said.

Last spring the junior college aggregate figured in a three-way tie for first place in the conference, finishing prow to prow with U.S.F. and San Mateo. It is expected that these two boats will again loom as formidable rivals to the Gaddy navy, since San Mateo took first place, and U.S.F. took second, in the recent Washington's Birthday Regatta.

Sunday the locals will meet the Oakland Polytechnic crew. Last year the engineers took last place in the conference and are not expected to give the Rams much trouble.

Hamilton Returns

The return of Sims Hamilton has considerably strengthened the crew, and Milton Latz, former Galileo coxswain, contributed his talents to the greater glory of the strokesmen shortly before the Washington's Birthday Regatta. Some of the other salts in tomorrow's line-up are Bob Carotto, Don Mix, Dick Simpers, Bud Rice, Carl Brogger, Lefty Cregi, Merv Weiner, and Ken Pasqualetti.

Coach Gaddy considers the prospects of a winning season to be very bright. "If the boys row in the conference the way they have been rowing in practice, we should come out on top," he said.

The weather allowed the oarsmen to resume their regular workouts last week, and in order to make up for lost time, these periods were used to practice starting and rowing on the course which will be used in the conference.

Oars Purchased

The new oars, which were recently bought by the school, will be used in the race tomorrow as well as in all other conference races, while the old ones will be used in practice, and non-conference meets, it was said.

Brand new red and white uniforms will adorn the backs of the stalwarts for the first time this season, and the embellishment is expected to give the boat a classy appearance.

Amori's Bowlers Resume Pin Alley Activities

Resumption of activities in Instructor Joe Amori's bowling class came last week with settlement of the strike of the alley's pin-boys, and the Ram keglers are again hard at work trying to knock over the pins, fighting for positions on the team which will represent the college at tournaments in Fresno and San Jose in May.

Amori is averaging the scores of his proteges, and plans to select the most capable bowlers to compete on the squad to be entered in these tournaments. Outstanding so far have been Allen Williams, Dick Simpers, Howard Cloud, Hugh Waite, and Dominic Manfredi, all of whom have turned in better-than-average scores. According to Amori, however, there are several newcomers to the game who are making rapid strides and will have to be reckoned with before long.

Scores fell considerably after the long lay-off necessitated by the strike, but are again turning upward, and Amori is optimistic regarding the development of his charges within the next month or so, and expects to have a powerful squad ready to enter in the tournaments.

BASEBALL, TRACK START
Conference Seasons Under Way

Tossers Engage Placer Next Saturday

Coach Lee Eisnn's Rambling Rams baseball team really start to ramble when they travel to Placer, Saturday, to play the Placer Junior College "Mountaineers". The two teams will engnge in a double-header at the Junior College diamond, the first game will start at noon.

This is the first year Placer has entered the baseball conference. Their nine is coached by Wyman Olson who, in his college days at Washington State, was quite an all-around athlete.

Olson is building his team around six boys who have quite a bit of high school experience. Shirley Brattin, who hails from Grass Valley and is said to be a first class pitcher. Olson's catcher is Bill Reid who formerly caught for Dunsmuir Union High School. Howie Brown, Harry Evangelisti and Homer Takahashi, who played together at Auburn High, will be the backbone of Olson's infield. Walter Motz, a hard-hitting outfielder, is the other boy who will bear notice.

Eisan wll probably start "Big Ed" Curcio in the first tussle and Bob Gardner in the second encounter. These two pitchers should win both games and give the team a good start in the conference race. Bill Williams and Treacy Slattery, other pitchers, will be held in reserve in case the going gets tough for either Curcio or Gardner. Johnson and Egelhofer will be on the receiving end of Curcio and Gardner's tosses.

Outfielders Paul Hjort, Frank Niland and Weaver Galbraith will see action in the outer gardens.

Hottentots' Epic Clash With Giants Disputed

Looked forward to by college sports enthusiasts, the memorable classic between the Hottentots and the Colored Giants, huge colored five from Oakland, ended inconclusively last Tuesday night when a dispute arose at the end of the game over the score. The official score-book gave the edge to the Hottentots, 23 to 22, but the keeper of the score-board had the Giants on top, 22 to 19. Unable to settle the dispute, the two teams have agreed to play a return game next week at the

Rams Win Easily From Local Prepsters

Three in a row!

That is the way Coach Lee Eisan's baseballers made it when they defeated George Washington High School nine, 7 to 2, last Thursday at Father Crowley Field.

The Rams played the best ball they have done all year when humbled the Eagles of George Washington. Bob Gardner, the starting hurler for the Junior College, pitched three innings of no-hit, no-run ball until relieved by Bill Williams. Williams pitched for two innings and was touched for the two runs that the high school team garnered. Treacy Slattery then took over and held the Eagles in check for the remainder of the game.

Frank Nilan and Weaver Galbraith were the leading hitters for the Rams, each connecting for two safeties. "Mickey" Berman walloped a long triple over the right fielder's head to bat in three runs.

Lennie McConnell, Washington catcher, stole the show for his team when he connected for three hits in four trips to the plate.

In the absence of Coach Lee Eisan in the latter part of the game, Manager Bob Fex took over the directing duties and aside from a pair of ill-timed hit and run plays, he handled the squad in fine fashion.

Gold Tourney Sign-ups Continued Until Friday

Disappointed in the sign-up for the golf tournament, to be held at the end of this month, Dutch Conlan has extended the time limit for signing up until this Friday. This will enable those who were not aware of the opportunity of competing in the 36-hole medal tournament to sign up.

There is much opportunity for divot diggers to qualify for the college golf team in competing in this tournament as the eight leading golfers will represent the college in future meets with other schools and colleges. The two finalists will be awarded medals.

The tournament will probably be held Friday, March 25, at Ingleside. The entrance fee will be only 50 cents, which will cover the greens fee. Those desiring to enter the tournament should either contact Conlan on Powell Street this mornng or Friday morning. If they are unable to see Conlan they may sign up at any time at the Galileo Gym in the afternoon before Friday afternoon.

Suits Given Out To Aspiring Trackmen

Distribution of sweat suits to members of the track team was in charge of Coach Russ Sweet at a special meeting of the squad held early last week at the Galileo Gym.

Among the men who turned out and received suits were:

Boitano—10 seconds 100 yard runner who placed in the conference meet last year and has also signed up in the weights.

Flamm—Quarter miler.

Emery—Pole vaulter and broad jumper and all-around man from Balboa High.

Squire—Sprinter and entrant in the broad jump from Vallejo.

Wallis—Pole vaulter from Oakland.

Stearn—Lightweight record holder in the sprints, also from Poly High.

Important pointers on form and practice were stressed by Sweet at the meeting. He explained that men entering in the short sprints should train for longer distances, 100 yard men should train for the 220, and so on up the scale. The reason being thnt the men would not tire as easily at the finish and would be able to go almost the full distance at the same rate of speed.

The tentative schedule of meets that was made up has been changed, and the Rams are to meet San Mateo, March 19.

By combining the new talent and the veterans from last semester, it is believed that the track team will have a fairly successful season, and win a goodly number of points in the various meets.

Spring Grid Practice Slated for Next Week

Spring football practice will begin on next Monday afternoon, according to Russ Sweet, head grid coach. The sessons will last for a brief period every day and will continue for several weeks.

All prospective gridders are asked to report at the Galileo Gym on tomorrow or Friday afternoons to receive their suits. The drills will be held on the Army parade grounds on Van Ness and Bay streets, Sweet said.

COLLEGE BOXING TITLE TILTS OFFERED TONIGHT PROMISE FAST MATCHES

Ram ringworms will be treated to a thrilling evening of competition in the squared circle this evening at the Italian Athletic Club, when sixteen pugilistic aspirants vie for college boxing titles in seven weight classes. The program, sponsored by the Men's Club, will get under way at 8 o'clock.

Mel Chicazola, Golden Gloves light heavyweight champion, who also assists with the yell-leading chores in his spare time, will be seen in his collegiate debut this evening, meeting "Tip" Hamilton in the featured heavyweight battle. "Chick" will be handicapped by a weight disadvantage of 15 pounds.

Thriller Promised

Enthusiasm is centered on the collision for the crown in the welterweight division, with Henry Isaacson and Don Taylor slated to belt away in what should prove a thriller. Isaacson will enter a slight favorite on his defensive ability and strong punching, but will have to be very cautious of his opponent's straight right hand.

Winners of the 129 and 169 pound scraps will be forced to engage in two tussles, as three contenders will be on hand in each of those divisions this evening. One fighter in each class will draw a bye, thence meeting the winner.

Joe Amori, Men's Club adviser, announces that Will Connolly, popular San Francisco Chronicle sports writer, and George Malley, boxing and football coach at U.S.F., will act as judges.

Ray Greenwood, entered in both 169 and 179 classes, may be forced to engage in three battles tonight. He meets Chester Yother in the light heavy class, and will draw for a bye in the middleweight division with "Playboy" McGovern and Bob Rutherford.

In addition, Dale Lane, intercollegiate 139 pound champ of California Aggies and Doug Grant, 169 pound Stanford champion, will appear in exhibition bouts, while six wrestling matches will also feature the program.

"Fifi" Balestracci will debut as a grunt and groan artist, defending his honor, after being challenged by the "Masked Marvel", his opponent, this evening.

The program:

139—Jim McGreevy vs. Lionel Cade.

149—Henry Isaacson vs. Don Taylor.

159—Frank Wiecher vs. Jim McNeil.

179—Ray Greenwood vs. Chester Yother.

Heavyweight—Mel Chicazola vs. "Tip" Hamilton.

WOMEN'S SPORTS PARADE

Tourney Week dates have been changed to from Friday, April 22, to Thursday, April 28. The date was changed so the sports of ice skating, riding, tennis, baseball and badminton, which are held on Friday and Saturday, could add their bit to the list of Tourney Week activities.

Message to managers:

There is a calendar in the WAA file on which the date of special activities are listed and if managers have not listed the activities of their sport, they should do so immediately.

And while on the subject of dates, below is a list of dates which have been approved by the council so far:

March 17—Ice Skating Party.
March 26—Horseback ride to Jack London's ranch.
April 18—Moonlight horseback ride.
April 19—Ice Skating Carnival.

Frances Kauffmnn, a journalistic compatriot, suffered at least a severe shock the other day when she lost her strrup while riding the roughest horse at the stable, one steed with the guileless name of Danny Boy, and fell on her head on the hard, hard pavement. She will be a journalist now.

The WAA council finally has a room of its own in which to hold council meetings, rather than holding them on stairways, street corners, sidewalks, etc., as it has been forced to do recently. Council meetings are held once a week on Tuesday mornings at 10 o'clock.

March 26 has been set as the definite date for the horseback ride to Jack London's ranch in the Valley of the Moon. The programs planned will consist of an afternoon ride and dinner. Only 16 students may go, so the decision must be made immediately. Riding Manager Mardis Mullin should know by Friday the names of those who plan to make the trip. The riders are going in groups of eight, with a guide.

The WAA has requested that those enrolled in the organization consider the question of both smoking and participating in athletics, and report their conclusion to WAA managers who are conducting a survey on the subject.

WAAmblings:

Baseball: It is of vital importance that everyone enrolled be present next Saturday morning, March 19. Everyone must be there.

Fencing: Six women are working toward possible exhibitions during Tourney Week.

New Talent Uncovered In Boxing Eliminations

Several new "white hopes" were uncovered last Wednesday evening, as six contenders for the college boxing titles were eliminated in as many hectic sessions of give-and-take in the preliminary round of the event, sponsored by the Men's Club at the Italian Athletic Club.

Most outstanding among the discoveries is a newcomer named Don Taylor, 149 pounder, who figured in an upset decision victory over Jack Tobiason in the program's hair-raiser. Using a smashing right hand, Taylor overcome Tobiason's experience advantage and won on a strong finish.

The Greenwood vs. Greenwood middleweight affair had the crowd in a frenzy. Veteran Ray Greenwood was the unquestionable victor, but newcomer Gene "Jiggs" Greenwood uncorked a powerhouse right hand just often enough to keep Ray in a state of constant worriment. Experience won the fight.

Heavyweight "Tip" Hamilton won by technical in the second in his exhibition bout over Chester Yother, 179 pounds. When Toni Devine, slated to meet Hamilton in the semi-finals, failed to put in an appearance, Yother volunteered his services as a substitute, but was no match for his heavier opponent.

The results:

129 Pound Class

"Tiger" Matsu decisioned Barhey Horne.

Frank O'Connor decisioned Bill Boyan (etxra round).

149 Pound Class

Henry Isaacson defeated Gino DeVito, TKO second round.

Don Taylor decisioned Jack Tobiason.

159 Pound Class

Frank Wiecher decisioned Walt Gee (extra round).

CAP AND GOWN MEASUREMENTS SET FOR TUES.

Applicants for graduation in May, 1938, will be measured for their caps and gowns March 22 and 23 at Powell Street from 10:00 to 1:30 o'clock in the morning, and at Galileo High School from 2:30 to 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon. The price for rental of the cap and gown is $1.50 per student.

"Will the women please wear shoes with heels the same height as they intend to wear graduation night," Irving Amstrup, president of the high sophomore class, announced.

As yet there has been no room definitely set aside for the measuring, so students are asked by the registrar's office to watch the bulletin board or inquire at the office.

The two days designated are positively the only ones for measuring gowns, and if students fail to appear they will have to find time to be measured at the costume company. Following is a tentative list of about 200 students in the graduating class. A final list will not be published, however, until after final examinations.

JAPANESE CLUB

Because conflicting dates made it impossible to secure proper facilities, the Japanese Club's faculty tea, which had been planned for March 19, has been indefinitely postponed.

Arrangements are now being made by the cabinet to have the semi-annual Raffle-dance early in April. Details of this affair will be announced at an early date.

HOTTENTOTS

Oaklanders' home courts.

Fighting tooth and nail through four fast periods, both teams provided the crowd with a thrilling spectacle. The Giants specialized in trick shots and fancy maneuvers, while the locals relied on straight knock-down-and-drag-out tactics. Starting for the Hottentots were Bob Carotto and Dick Simpers at forwards, Art Nelson and Merv Weiner at guards, and Don Mix at center. Carl Brogger and the Holmes boys also saw action as substitutes during the contest. Bob Grant, Rastus Schultz and Joe Robinson were outstanding for the Giants, who arrived with a large rooting section comprised of their wives and children.

Bob Fex Tells of "Suppressed Desire" Jig; Pacifists Convene

Inaugurating a social program, which it is hoped will meet with the approval of the entire student body, Social Committee Chairman, Bob Fex, has released details of the gala "Supressed Desire" dance to be given on April Fool's Day by the Block Letter Society.

"The affair, which we hope to make one of the term's finest, will be held in the evening in the girl's gymnasium of the Galileo High School. It will be a Friday night and we are expecting a capacity crowd," said Fex. "The festivities are scheduled to get underway at 9 p.m.

"Informality will be the keynote. The theme of the affair is for the students to wear something that they have always had's secret ambition to wear to a dance, but have never had sufficient courage actually to do. 'Beau Brummels' will positively not be admitted. Real swing music by the school orchestra will be featured and admission is by student body card. Something unique in novelty bids will be given out. Don't forget the date: Friday evening, April 1, at 9 p.m."

Congressional measures affecting war and peace will be considered at the next meeting of the Peace Society, on Friday night, March 25, at the home of Dorothy Pilgrim, 349 Lyon Street.

At last week's meeting, after discussing the Oxford Pledge, the group decided not to take any stand on the question. Some of the students declared they would be willing to take the pledge not to support the government in any war it may undertake while others were opposed to the pledge. Because of the difference of opinion, no position was adopted.

Fred Vast will make a research on bills pending before the United States Congress that deal with war-time conditions or affect the peace of America. He will report on his findings at the next meeting of the Society. The group will then discuss the legislation and probably take a stand on the various measures.

"March 25 marks the end of the second mid-term period," said Ray Valdez, president of the organization, "and should be a convenient time for students to attend. The topic should be one of interest to everyone. All students desirous of attending and interested in the Peace Society are cordially invited."

Economists Discuss Government Control Of Large Industries

Holding one of its most interesting and successful meetings of the semester, the Omicron Phi Pi, college Economics honor society, met last Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Cecil Elliott. A lively discussion on the issue of government regulation of industry was the business of the evening.

Because of the conflict within the mid-term period, the next meeting will be held on March 30 instead of March 23, as previously stated. It will take place at the home of Bill Simonds, 101 Darien Way, and the discussion, which will center around the question of the A. F. of L. vs. the C. I. O., will be led by Doris Speroni and Mike Klebenoff.

Plans were made at the meeting for the annual banquet, the gala social affair enjoyed by the Society each year. The date has definitely been set as Saturday, April 2; the place will be decided upon this week. As this is rather short notice it is imperative for all those who wish to attend to get their reservations within the next two weeks from either Dr. Zarchin, Mrs. Elliott, Charles Vaughn or one of the members of the committee—Doris Speroni, Bill Simonds and Mike Klebenoff.

"We urge all members of the society to attend and to bring guests and we assure them that they will spend a thoroughly enjoyable evening."

Music Enthusiasts To Hear Program

Entertainment in the form of a musical program will be offered to music club members tomorrow night at 7:30 in the home of Irene Vargiun, 1292 Page Street, near Lyon, which may be reached by the 6, 17, and 20 cars.

Recent actvities of the club include songs by a quartet, composed of Wesley Pomeroy, president of the club, Arnold Scott, Elliott DeWitt, and Bob Scott, of which "Shortnin Bread" was one, and an aria from the opera, Hanzel and Gretel, sung by Marjorie Cusic and Dorothy Doyle, all of which was given at an entertainment held by the Daughters of the American Revolution, March 14.

Circle Francais Hears Travel Talk

Featured at the meeting of the Circle Francais last Wednesday night, was a talk of Julium Wolfsohn who spoke on his travels in the French-speaking countries in Switzerland. His talk was given in French.

The next meeting will be held at Wolfsohn's home on March 30, and he hopes to have as guest speaker a man from a French newspaper.

be taken to forestall outsiders from using these cards, such as making doubtful owners of student body cards identify themselves at the door. Rightful owners of cards should not object for it is only for their own protection. The dances are held primarily for the students and that should be held in mind when attending.

Block Men To Aid Campaign Against Crowded Sidewalks

Declaring themselves firmly behind Dean Edwin C. Browne's program to clean up the numerous petty misdemeanors around the "campus" that are casting reflections of an unfavorable nature upon the college, the Block Letter Society, unanimously voted to put a restrained policy of active enforcement into effect immediately. This proposal was heartily endorsed by sponsor Russ Sweet.

"All block men," said Jerry Flamm, president, "are asked to aid in keeping the entrance and a path on the sidewalk clear by the Powell Street Extension Building. By asking offenders to cooperate, the members should receive a full response from all the conscientious students. Those who show a lax sense of responsibility can possibly be made a little more cooperative by use of gentle persuasion."

Plans for the dance of April 1 were discussed and further arrangements were suggested and noted.

The outcome of the awards dispute was revealed, whereby soccer and crew are to be maintained as minor sports, and the Athletic Council to have the power to elevate any minor sport to a major status as soon as the competition is equal to that of the now-major sports group.

Beta Phi Whist Tickets on Sale

Tickets are now on sale for the annual Beta Phi whist party and social. This event will be the beginning of a series of affairs to be held this spring by the fraternity. It will be followed shortly by the club's annual spring dance, that promises to be the best yet held. The date has not as yet been announced.

Pledges are undergoing their initiation requirements this "Week of Hell". The pledges will take the oath about the middle of this month.

German Students Attend Theatre

"Der Deutsche Verein," will hold its next meeting March 29, instead of March 22, club leaders announced. The place of meeting will be announced later.

Plans for a dinner and theatre party have been completed and the event will take place next week. The club will have dinner at a German restaurant and will afterward attend the showing of a German film at the Clay Theatre.

Newman Clubbers Skate, Breakfast

The next meeting of the Newman Club will be held Monday evening, March 21, at eight o'clock in the club rooms at St. Mary's Cathedral.

The club went ice skating last Friday, and more than 50 Newmaneers enjoyed themselves, and on last Sunday 75 members went to the club's quarter-annual communion and breakfast.

AFTER COLLEGE WHAT?

By Anne Rabinowitz

For students who will qualify themselves technically, there is a career of usefulness and interest in the electrical industry. There is no chance for dullness and monotony to creep into this field of work, as new devices, gadgets and improved methods are brought daily to the public attention.

Electrical work is not closed to women, for in order to introduce any new labor-saving electrical device, there must be women demonstrators to teach its operation to housewives or maids. Women are also wanted as lecturers on domestic subjects in relation to electricity; in publicity work; and in the work connected with illumination and artistic sides of electricity.

Adaptable workers who can keep themselves up-to-date will have the best chances. Electric supply authorities and manufacturers of electrical apparatus employ many well-trained students to fill good posts.

* * *

Another live field that is becoming more important is that of research work. Scholars engaged in this profession often find that their pursuit of knowledge may be profitable financially as well as intellectually.

Many industries are stumped in the progress of some new and vital step by a lack of facts, either mechanical, scientific, or economic. Men with patience and imagination are needed to investigate many of these missing links. Research may involve the experimental design of new machinery, historical facts for a new moving picture, or scientific information concerning some new product.

Of course, it is often necessary to specialize in one type of research, but the man who becomes efficient in his own special field is precious to his firm.

Often a secretary or lesser employee, who displays an unusual memory for facts, and is always up-to-date on latest inventions or economic changes, will be promoted to a position of research.

Such jobs are not always classified flatly as "research", as some businesses require such services only part-time, and the employee is busy at other tasks, when not needed in this line.

Many men and women have compiled intensive reports on a particular subject which interested them, just as a hobby, with no intention of professionally using them. Such reports have been known to become valueless to a corporation which needed that type of information, but did not have access to numerous little-known facts. Probably a large number of professional research workers have started as amateur "information-gatherers."

Italian Meet Limited To Men; Psych 50 Helps Slow Readers

Bill Solari, Italian Club president, said that the convention for all Italian groups in the Bay Area, to be held April 21, 22, 23, is for men only.

Concluding the three-day convention, there will be a dance at the Fairmont Hotel, Saturday night, April 23. It is undecided as to whether the dance will be semi-formal or formal. There will be a one dollar fee to pay for the bid. Reservations should be made with Solari, president, Dora A. Garibaldi, Ubaldo Maggetti, faculty sponsors, or Phil Prigioni, club officers said.

Scheduled for the latter part of March, or the first part of April, is a basketball game with the St. Mary's Italian Club. The game will be played at St. Mary's with the men of the Italian Club representing the college.

All members are requested to attend the next meeting so definite plans can be made for reservations to the convention, Solari said.

Because reading is fundamental in almost every college course, according to Patricia Ricciardi, English instructor, the college has found it necessary to open a special course to aid students in improving their comprehension and speed in reading. This subject is catalogued as Psychology 50, and of the fifty students enrolled, Miss Ricciardi has three classes and Harold Leuenberger, psychology instructor, has one class.

Every student who enrolls in the course is given the Iowa silent reading test. This test has been given to thousands of college freshmen and scores have been arranged in such a way that it is possible to place any individual student at a given level in reading skill.

"There are many methods used in this course," said Miss Ricciardi. "The most interesting," she added, "is the machine, called the metronoscope, method. The device, run very much like a player piano, displays the material before the class and can control the number of words visible at a particular time and regulate the speed of reading."

For about a year a remedial reading program has been conducted and the results, which have been tabulated, show a considerable increase in reading comprehension, speed and vocabulary in the case of almost every student.

Several junior colleges have similar courses. Those that do not are showing interest in the work, and many plan to install a similar course in their curriculum. Columbia University is studying the problem of reading at the junior college level, and the results of that work probably will have a great effect on future handling of the course.

HEA Holds Special Confab, Plans For April 9 Excursion

Today, at 2:15 o'clock, in Room 215 at Galileo, the Home Economics Association will hold a special meeting to discuss arrangements for the spring excursion to be held on Saturday, April 9. Members of the club will hear the report of the excursion committee, composed of Helen Hickey, Dixie McCormac, Phyliss Fullsm, and Jeanne Collins, which has been appointed to make the necessary arrangements.

The fashion show, which the club had planned to give before Easter, has been postponed because of the inability to acquire the services of the desired speaker until later. It has not yet been decided what store will present the fashion show nor whether store models or members of the club will do the modeling.

Cecil Thompson, president of the organization, expressed her enjoyment of the San Carlo Opera, which the HEA attended last Thursday evening, by saying, "Our trip to the opera was a big success because of the tireless efforts of the arrangement committee, composed of Virginia Kwiatt, Hazel Baunton, and Barbara Allin."

Pre-Meds Learn Electro-Therapy

Because the lecture by Dr. Alice B. Potter, college women's physician, was postponed, Lloyd Logan, pre-medical student, spoke on Recent Developments in Electro-therapy, Tuesday evening, March 15, before the Pi Mu Gamma fraternity.

The meeting was held at the home of Miss Ackard at 235 Cervantes.

Candid Fans Gather At 2:30 Tuesday

First meeting of the newly-organized college Camera Club will be held next Tuesday afternoon in Room 153 at Galileo at 2:30, according to Sam Galstaun, its organizer. There are 24 students signed up so far for the organization, indicating a large amount of interest among the students in the subject of photography.

"We sincerely hope," said Galstaun, "that all interested students will show up for our initial meeting, so that we can get plans underway as soon as possible for the activities of the semester."

Definite plans for Phi Beta Rho's "Bad Taste Party" are being completed and the date will be announced in the near future, Margie Cusic, historian of the sorority, said.

This party is being planned to entertain the new pledges who are: Arline Vincent, Marion Falkner, Hazel Boutin, Jean Collins, Mary Louise McNutt, Jean Kelly, Eve Patton, Jerry Fisher, Leda Davis and Barbara Curreyer.

In conjunction with some college rally, to be held later in the semester, the Phi Beta Rho women will give a fashion show.

WAA ICE SKATE COMMENCES AT 8 P.M. THURSDAY

Godmothered this time by the Women's Athletic Association, another ice skating party will be held at 8 o'clock tomorrow night, at the San Francisco Ice Rink on 48th Avenue.

The cost of 50 cents includes checking, skates, and use of the rink. Members of the recently organized WAA ice skating class are in charge of the party and each member may invite a guest. In keeping with St. Patrick's Day, students attending are requested to wear green. Refreshments will be served following the skating.

"We have decided to give St. Patrick's Day a special significance this year and celebrate to a larger extent than just 'the wearing of the green'," explained Margaret Wormell, ice skating manager. "Ice skating has suddenly become one of the favorite sports of the college, as the recent skating parties have shown, and we are certain that students will have an unusually good time at this one."

Special faculty guests who are invited include Dean Edwin C. Browne, Joseph Williams, Laurine Bergin, Vera Spencer, Verell Weber, Russel Sweet, and skating instructor, Bertha Keller. Committee members who have completed final arrangements for the party are LeRoy Mow, chairman, Virginia Kwiatt, and Robert Scheuck, all members of the ice skating class, which is one of the few coeducational sports offered at the college.

The San Francisco Ice Skating Rink may be reached by cars 7 and N. All those who plan to attend are requested to watch the Powell Street bulletin board for additional information.

Pre-Legal Society To Meet March 22

The college prelegal society will hold an important meeting March 22, on Powell Street in Room 202 at twelve o'clock, according to Howard Cloud, president of the society.

All members of the society and interested students are invited to attend the meeting. Lloyd Luckmann, faculty adviser of the society, said that at future meetings there are to be guest speakers who are to be chosen from prominent members of the local bar association.

With spring in the air and the snow beginning to thaw, the Alaskan mushers begin to go into action. The champ musher of the college, Irvy Amstrup, was considerably more rugged than his northern brethren because he never let the weather interfere with his work.

LUNCHEON MARKS HOTEL DIVISION ANNIVERSARY TOMORROW

Marina Cafeteria Staff Serves Meal Honoring President Cloud

Commemorating its second year of existence, the college Hotel and Restaurant Management Division will prepare and serve the luncheon to be given by the Faculty Association to honor President A. J. Cloud, tomorrow at 1:00 o'clock at Marina Junior High School. Classes scheduled for that hour will not meet. Hotel students will serve the regular menu to the Marina classes from 11:30 to 12:30, and then will clear the cafeteria and prepare for 100 faculty members from the college.

The very evident practical value of the college's hotel and restaurant management division has been clearly demonstrated in the highly efficient manner in which it has handled the administration and managing of the cafeterias at Galileo and at the junior high school in the Marina. Instructors and students in the division have been celebrating the second anniversary and close of two highly successful years.

Sullivan To Speak

Among activities held in connection with the anniversary observance, are two speeches to be given by J. Graham Sullivan, co-ordinator between the division and the college. Sullivan will speak before the Camp commission of the San Francisco Boy's Club, and the Camp Director's Association of California, which is holding its annual convention in this city. He will discuss camp organization, management and food preparation.

The advanced class in pastry making has been experimenting in the baking of elaborate cakes, and their efforts have been highly successful. With all the finesse of experienced chefs, they have produced a lovely wedding cake, a picture of which may be found elsewhere on this page. Chef Strandberg, speaking of this achievement, said, "The cake is a result of the students' own individual efforts. At first the roses on the cake resembled so many cabbages, but they soon fixed that."

New Catalog

Slated for publication the week of April 10 is the third catalog of the division. This pamphlet will contain a complete list and an explanation of the various courses offered. It has been compiled by J. Graham Sullivan and will include all the new courses that are to be given next semester. Some of the new courses are: Hotel Administration under the direction of J. G. Sullivan, and Hotel Credit and Taxation. Walter G. Swanson of the San Francisco Convention Tourist Bureau instituted a ten-week series of lectures on Public Relations and City Promotion, beginning Wednesday, March 16. At present the enrollment numbers twenty-five students.

Position At Stanford

An added indication of the real worth of the training received by the students in the division is the recent appointment of Naomi Giffin, a member of the senior class, which is the pioneer class of the division, to a position at Stanford University.

Miss Giffin will act as assistant to Mrs. Dorothy Bell, superintendent of

Friday Last Day For Art Exhibit Entries

March 25 has been set as the final date for the submission of art work to the De Young Museum by the Northern California Junior Colleges participating in the art exhibit beginning April 1 at the museum, Richard M. Allman, college art instructor, announced.

"Although last year at the exhibit, Miss Claudia Davis, curator of the San Francisco of Art, where the exhibit was held, gave a fascinating talk and showed several color prints," Allman said, "it is doubtful if there will be a lecture this year. However, if it can possibly be arranged I would like to have Joseph Sinel, industrial designer, speak. Mr. Sinel, by the way, started the first studio of industrial art in New York.

"A tour, similar to the one held last year, will probably be held the first day of the exhibit. An 'Art Day' will be held at the museum sometime during the exhibit, and it is probable that the art classes will be excused to attend."

WORK OF ART

College of Pacific Players To Present Scenes From Life of Lincoln Tomorrow Morning

Scenes From the Life of Abraham Lincoln will be presented tomorrow morning in the Powell Street study hall at 9:00 o'clock by the College of Pacific. Instructors who wish to take their classes to the performance should make arrangements with Thomas O'Neill in the Powell office. Since the study hall will not be free until 10:00 o'clock students who wish to study before that hour will have to do so elsewhere, the college administration advised.

In addition to the Pacific players two students, Richard Nichols and Walter Wachter, from the college, will participate in the drama. The performance will mark the first dramatic production to be presented here this year, and will also be one of the few times in the history of the college that a play has been offered the entire student body. It is under the direction of Evelyn Barnett, senior student at the College of Pacific, who has had four years of dramatic experience.

Troupe On Tour

The troupe is on the Stockton institution's annual deputation tour, and will be on the road for a week, visiting six Northern California Junior Colleges. It is a student project with everything from directing to properties being handled by students of the dramatic art fields. This will mark the second week that the group has gone on the road. Earlier in the month the actors toured the South San Joaquin Valley, and were greeted enthusiastically by the junior colleges of the area.

The plot of Scenes From the Life of Abraham Lincoln is said to be of unusual interpretation. The play is also distinctive because of the exceptionally realistic make-up and the Civil War period costumes.

Members of the cast are: George Crabbe as Abraham Lincoln; Jean Wastrum as Mary Todd Lincoln; Marion Akers and Howard Thurston as Generals Lee and Grant, respectively. Eugene Minson portrays the part of a soldier and Al Miller acts as Mr. Cussney. Musical effects, lighting, and announcing will be managed by Art Farey. Accompanying the group will be Robert Burns, field secretary of the College of Pacific.

Limited Facilities

Because of limited facilities, the drama department of San Francisco Junior College has not been able to develop as has the rest of the institution. Ruth Jensen, speech instructor, believes that when the long awaited campus is occupied, dramatics will have an opportunity to grow with the rest of the college, and become an integral part of student activities as has been the case at other colleges.

Miss Jensen directed a one-act play last year. Though the production had no properties or costumes it was so successful that it was given several times to organizations and schools in San Francisco.

PARKER'S WORK PUBLISHED BY SCRIBNER'S

Scribner's Dictionary of American History has accepted three articles on California events by Dr. Robert J. Parker, instructor at the college, he revealed this week.

Appearing in this month's issue of the Historical Society of Southern California Quarterly is an article by Parker on "Secret Affairs of the Mexican War: Larkin's California Mission."

His articles that will appear in Scribner's Dictionary, a cooperative work of historians, deal with the "Argonauts of California", "Panoche Grande Claim", and "Larkin's Part in the Conquest of California". The book is edited by Dr. James Truslow Adams, noted historian. One of the associate editors is Dr. Herbert E. Bolton, chairman of the University of California history department.

Studies by Parker have appeared recently in the North Carolina Historical Review, and in the California Historical Society Quarterly. Both articles deal with Thomas O. Larkin, only United States Consul to serve in California prior to the U. S. conquest in which he was an active figure. He was one of the builders of American California.

Last chance to submit manuscripts to Forum, the college literary publication, will be next Monday, March 28, Editor John Ward announced.

Length is limited to 1500 words. Poetry, short stories, dramas, articles, reviews, critiques, humor, satire and other types of writing will be accepted. Students are free to write on any subject they wish.

Contributions should be given to Ward or faculty advisers Dorothy Mercer and William Goss. John Healy is business manager of the project, which is being sponsored by the Forum Club.

Representatives To Chico Meet Choose Topics For Address

Women representatives to the Associated Women's Students and Women's Athletic Association annual convention at Chico, April 1 and 2, have received a schedule of the two-day proceedings, and have decided upon the subjects in which they are to lead the discussions. Those attending the convention from the junior college will be Barbara Randall, AWS president; Jane Mitchell, AWS secretary; Annabelle Benson, vice-president; Dorothy Canavan, WAA president; and Mirism Frazier, badminton manager.

Margaret Dougherty, women's adviser, and Vera Spencer, sponsor of the WAA, will be the faculty representatives.

Jane Mitchell will discuss budgets, while Miriam Frazier and Dorothy Canavan will tell of the recent contributions to a coeducational program which have been made here. A humorous subject, "Panning", will be the topic of Barbara Randall's address.

The two-day program consists of registration, a tea, dinner, an opera and a reception following the opera on Friday, and a general session, discussion group, luncheon meeting, tract meeting, ride through Bidwell Park, formal banquet, and a convention ball on Saturday.

March 24, Barbara Randall and Norma Parent, Student Body vice-president, will attend an AWS conference at the University of California. There will be discussions, sports, and a buffet supper.

The next AWS home activity will be a tea on May 3 at the Century Club in honor of junior college graduating women students and high school representatives.

Five Instructors To Name '39 Fair Zone

Five instructors have been chosen by President Archibald J. Cloud to help choose a name from 454,000 suggestions for the amusement zone at the 1939 Fair. The names were submitted in a contest designed to obtain a suitable title for the fun zone of the Golden Gate International Exposition.

Margaret Dougherty, Helene Turner, Paul Pitman, Louis Berman, and Glenn Noble will serve with 45 other prominent citizens of San Francisco on the committee of judges whose task it is to pick a winner of the huge contest.

"If you see any of us walking around with puzzled expressions on our faces," Pitman exclaimed, "you will know wading through almost half a million entry blanks tells on a person after a while."

Anyone who wishes to discuss the new basic law or anyone that wants hazy points clarified should attend the Student Forum being held tomorrow at 10:00 o'clock in the Powell Street Lecture Hall.

Mix To Preside At Meeting of College In Powell Lecture Hall; Vote March 31st

Having received the final approval of the Executive Council at the meeting of that body last Friday, the new constitution of the Associated Students of San Francisco Junior College will be presented tomorrow in an open forum for the approval or criticism of the general student body. The forum will be held in the lecture hall at 10:00 tomorrow morning, and is open to all interested students. Student Body President Donald Mix will preside as chairman.

A week from tomorrow, the document will be presented in its entirety to the student body at a general assembly, to be held in the auditorium at Galileo at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon.

Student Leader

Don Mix

Mix urges that all students who have suggestions on the formation of the constitution attend the forum tomorrow and present their views, rather than wait until the assembly, as it is intended to present the document to the student body as a whole at the latter gathering.

Smith Runs Riot

Meeting three times last week, in order to clear up the matter of the constitution, the Executive Council finally disposed of all difficulties at Friday's meeting, although Deming Smith, former student, caused an upheaval of major proportions at this session by demanding that the Alumni Association be accorded a vote on the Council. This request was ruled down, but it was voted that the Alumni Association shall hereafter be eligible to receive student body funds.

No Faculty Vote

The recommendation made the previous week that the council have a representative from the faculty with the privilege of voting was not considered practical, so no change was made to allow for such a representative.

CONSTITUTIONS OCCUPY TIME OF COUNCIL

With presentation, discussion and approval of three constitutions as the main business of the day, the college Executive Council held its regular meeting last Friday afternoon.

The Constitution of the Associated Students was accepted after a few minor changes had been made and this constitution, as it now stands, will be discussed further at a student forum to be held on Thursday, March 24, at 10 a.m. in the Powell Street lecture hall and then presented at a general ratification assembly on March 31.

Appointing a committee consisting of Margaret Wormell, Stan Adams and Al Williams to investigate the validity of the Women's Athletic Association constitution, the council, upon receipt of that committee's decision, approved the document as it stood.

Third in the trio of approved constitutions was that of the Men's Athletic Council which defined major sports as Basketball, Baseball, Football, Tennis and Track and which set standards and methods for the making of athletic awards.

Pres. Cloud Tells Of Eastern Travels

President Archibald Cloud will be guest of honor tomorrow at a luncheon at Marina Junior High School, where he will speak to the college faculty and a number of eminent local educators about his experiences during his recent trip to the East and at the Junior College Conference in Philadelphia.

In addition to relating his experiences at this gathering, President Cloud will also tell of the Superintendent's Convention, which he attended in Atlantic City, and will present some of the more interesting sidelights of his journey, such as his trips to Yorktown and Williamsburg and through the reconstructed cities of Virginia.

Among the educators present will be Joseph P. Nourse, Superintendent of Schools; Richard E. Doyle, President of the Board of Education; Robert R. Chase, Principal of Balboa; Ernest J. Cummings, Principal of George Washington; Leroy H. Stephens, Principal of Lowell, and Albert S. Samuels.

Tickets for members of the faculty are available with Thomas O'Neill in the office at Powell Street, and at the bank at Galileo. The price is 40 cents, and the luncheon will be held at exactly 1 o'clock.

WAA Drafts Changed Document of Rules

After a month of intensive work, the Women's Athletic Association's constitution committee submitted the new constitution to the college executive council for approval, last Friday. The committee was composed of Margaret Wormell, chairman; Dorothy Canavan, WAA president; Dorothy Sanderson, secretary; and Janet Falconer.

Several vital changes were made in the new constitution by the committee. The new document is both clearer and more complete than was the old one. A provision is made for Block Awards, which were omitted entirely in the old constitution. Qualification for membership was altered.

Important additions were the clause that, "If there is an insufficient number enrolled in a sport to warrant practice, individuals may take the activity in a physical education class for WAA credit alone and may be eligible for team awards," and the clause that "When interest in any club has lapsed the WAA council shall declare that club to be technically inactive and it shall not be represented on the council."

Grads Warned To Get Caps, Gowns Measured Today.

High Sophomores who have not been measured for their cap and gowns for the May commencement proceedings will have their last opportunity to do so today.

The staff room of the Powell Street Building will be open from 10 to 2 o'clock in the morning for measuring.

Room 261 at Galileo High School has been set aside for the graduates from 2:30 to 4:00 o'clock in the afternoon.

PEACE MEETINGS

UNIVERSITY of California students last week voted on the question of whether they would have a student-controlled peace meeting with student speakers, or a University-controlled peace meeting with outside speakers. The majority of voters expressed their preference for an Administration-controlled peace meeting, which would allow the general student body to hear men speak with "responsibility and authority on the question of peace", instead of being forced to listen to student debaters "expound theories of economics and international relations."

The choice is a wise one. There are a great number of students who are sincerely interested in hearing someone thoroughly qualified to speak on the most important topic in the troubled world of today, who are left cold and unaffected by the haranguings of their fellow students.

It's Different Here

Here at San Francisco Junior College the situation is somewhat different, and it isn't a question of whether or not the meetings shall be Administration-controlled, but whether they might not be more effective if the student body were given a chance to hear some outside speakers.

It has been pointed out in these editorial columns, time and again, that if peace is to be desired and retained, it must be cultivated and inculcated into the minds of all the students, that they may pass their knowledge of the subject along to someone else.

If the persons who are the most interested in peace would try to bring the subject before everyone, much more good might be accomplished. At present there is a fine series of lectures on this issue being given here at the college in the form of a course entitled Sociology 55, but this alone is insufficient. It is utterly impossible for a great many students who have an honest desire to hear lectures of this sort to enroll in the class, or even to attend an occasional lecture.

Last Meeting Was Good

The recent assembly held to discuss the proposed Ludlow Referendum was a step in the right direction, but nothing came of it. There must be more of this sort of meeting.

There undoubtedly are many fine speakers whose services might be readily acquired. It would take very little effort to stage a series of lectures similar to the present previously mentioned class, that could be given in the auditorium at Galileo at a time when there were no other classes.

It seems particularly appropriate, at a time when the war clouds hover over most of the civilized world, that the nations, professing to be the only ones still clinging to democratic ideals, do all they can to foster and preserve those ideals.

It would seem only natural that the "liberals" who shout the loudest for peace do the most to keep the desire for peace ever in front of the public's eyes.

The youth of today fights the wars of tomorrow; fights them and pays for them, and they are the ones who should be most concerned with preserverance of the peace that can be kept only by a united, concerted front against war.

Youth Ignorant of Facts

Still, there are many young people among the college and high school youths of our nation who have given little or no thought to the question of war or peace. These young people must be shown the desirability of peace, the sheer, blinding, stupidity of wars of aggression, or any war other than in defense of homeland from actual invasion.

We have a great many members of our fine faculty who are qualified to speak with authority on this subject, and they are ready and willing to give what information they have to the students.

We have a great many students who are interested but lack any definite knowledge. The immediate threat of war may not arise for many years, but if the events of the world follow the current trend, the danger is always present, and it behooves the youth of the nation as the citizens of tomorrow to know how to deal with the danger when it arrives, as many authorities believe it inevitably will.

Let's have more and bigger peace meetings!

STUDENT APPROVAL

The new constitution, which has been drawn up and accepted this semester for the Associated Students of San Francisco Junior College, is something that should be of vital concern to every member of that organization. It is in accordance with this document that all student activities are conducted, and all student government carried on. The constitution has a direct effect on the life of every student in the institution, and is deserving of the strictest attention from every member of the student body.

Tomorrow a student forum will be held, to enable all students interested in the formation of the constitution to hear it read and to offer any suggestions they may have as to how it may be improved. This forum is open to anyone who feels that he knows of any way to render the present system of student government more efficient or better able to perform its functions. The floor will be open to everyone, and any student who entertains the slightest doubt as to the new constitution and its effects should make it his duty to familiarize himself with it at this gathering.

At an assembly in the near future, the new constitution will be presented for the approval of the Associated Students as a whole. It is clearly the duty of everyone to take this opportunity to become acquainted with the system under which the affairs of the college are being administered. The students themselves have the final word in the matter; it is up to them to familiarize themselves with the document so important to their welfare and to exercise the power which is theirs.

SPRING TIME

Now is the Spring of the year when the face of Nature is gay and bright (or should be, according to Ye Poet, and will be when the gentle rains cease); when the pulse quickens and the blood runneth strong; and "folke" longen to "goon on pilgrimages" to Canterbury and waypoints.

Now, too, is the Springtime of life for all San Francisco Junior College students. These days, later, will be regarded as a period "when all things pleased, for life itself was new, and the heart promised what the fancy drew".

One suggestion I would offer. It is found in a quotation from Emerson's essay on "Friendship", which reads: "It is fit for serene days, and graceful gifts, and country rambles, but also for rough roads, and hard fare, shipwreck, poverty, and persecution."

Yes—Friendship is priceless whether in calm or in storm, in sickness or in health, in youth or in age.

And the Springtime of life is a good season in which to form friendships that endure.

Out Of The Fog

By Mac

Victor, the perennial freshman, strode into the office and banged on the desk with such force that we were awakened by the racket. Turning to gaze sleepily at this rash intruder who dared to interrupt the sanctity of our slumbers, we saw a wild-eyed zealot who evidently had something important to say, for the conflict which raged within him was at once apparent.

Stammering and spluttering under the emotional strain of his rage, he finally managed to shout, "What kind of a newspaper is this, anyhow?", and emphasizing his roars with heavy blows of his fist against our desk top, he continued, "This is a fine slate of affairs." His voice fairly rose to a scream, as he went up on tip-toes to deliver the last two words.

We felt trapped. Hurriedly we looked for a possible means of escape, for the intruder's actions convinced us that we were dealing with a madman. It was no use. His cunning mind had divined our purpose and he moved to cut off our only line of retreat. We decided to try to placate him, and adopting our most soothing tone of voice, we said, "Now there, old man, take it easy. Calm down, and let's talk this thing over quietly."

If we had hoped our words would have a quieting effect on the fellow, we were doomed to disappointment. Immediately we saw that we had used the wrong tack, for now, he grew almost purple.

"Hah," he shrieked, "trying to crawl out the first thing. Well, let me tell you, I think this is an outrage. It's monstrous! You people who put out this paper are inhuman beasts who shouldn't even be allowed to associate with the nice young people in this college. You are trying to undermine our ideals, tear down our institution, why, why—" he stopped, momentarily at loss for words, and commenced pacing the floor, waving his arms about and calling down all sorts of maledictions on our editorial head.

By now, we had climbed up on the desk so as to get a better view of the proceedings, and just as he burst into a fresh tirade, the managing editor walked in.

That worthy, seeing us atop the desk, with the rampaging Victor holding us at bay, concluded that the situation called for force, and owing first loyalty to our editorial person, he picked up a chair and prepared to send the raving one's soul to join his ancestors.

We motioned frantically for our savior to refrain from his homicidal intentions, as Victor howled, "It's bad enough having to read some of the rotten editorials in this newspaper without being forced to watch somebody try to shatter the students' faith in the things they love. Oh, you beasts! You should all be tarred and feathered! You oughta be—." His last sentence ended in a gasp, as the managing editor executed a perfect flying tackle that stretched Victor on the floor. We hurriedly leaped to the aid of our champion and, between the two of us we managed to subdue the maniacal struggles of the madman.

"Now," we panted, as Victor, the fight all gone out of him, lay weeping on the floor with the two of us astride him, "now, what's this all about, my friend," we asked. Sobbing, Victor wailed, "Whadya gotta let that guy Ward tear down 'Snow White' for?"

We stared at the managing editor. He stared at us. We threw Victor out.

Mental Mutterings

Seeing Things

Those of you who were unlucky enough to miss a certain street car going out to Gal on St. Patrick's Day, missed, along with that street car, one of the funniest sights we've seen in a long time. He was old, bleary-eyed, and very much "in his cups". Stuck rakishly in the button hole of his tattered tweed overcoat was a battered rose and a crumpled paper napkin of a sick-ish green hue. Clutched tightly in one hand was a faded calla lilly and a seedy looking hydrangia blossom. Loudly, and with a thick Scotch accent, he proclaimed to all who would listen that he was a Scotchman and proud of it and what did everybody think it was, Fourth of July? He kept the crowd entertained with old Scotch ballads about "when the snow is snowin' and it's milky overhead" and refused to sit down for fear the conductor would charge him an extra nickle. Yes, sir, it takes all kinds!

* * *

Crew-lity, Ah Crew-lity!

That same afternoon, having heard that football and basketball are greatly over-rated, we took a high out to yacht harbor to see the crew race. Net results: 1 blister on the right heel, 2 very muddy white shoes (we would take a short cut) and 1 most unattractive windblown hair-do. To add insult to injury, we got there just in time to hear that the race had been postponed and that we would have to wait at least an hour if we wanted to see Jack Gaddy's oar-ators in action. Seeing the boys in repose was treat enough, however, for they were all done up in their new red "long-shorts" with the little padded seats. Honestly, they looked so darn cute! We hate to overdo this thing but we must admit that Pasky looked perhaps the most fetching of all the lads but then, maybe, we're just prejudiced.

* * *

Noblesse Oblige

One thing always seems to lead to another and while on the subject of crew we're reminded of Bob Carratto, husky Ram row-er who has turned himself into a press agent for some reason known only to himself. With tears in his eyes, and a pleading expression on that usually smiling face of his, he asked us to put somebody's name in our column. As much as we'd like to disregard his request, we have a tender spot on the left side of our tough old heart and rather than cause Bob a moment's unhappiness, here it is, in nice big letters, SCOTT WILMOTH. Happy, Bob?

With last Friday's affair every bit as successful as our two previous dances, the Social Committee is certainly entitled to sit back and register satisfaction. Congratulations of the highest sort go to Chairman Norma Parent whose motto—"Never do anything unless you can do it right," played such a large part in the successful social season and to the ever-ready-in-a-pinch Dean Browne whose ability to iron out wrinkles saved many a day. To those of you who noted with dismay that Friday's was the last Social Committee dance for the semester, please don't cry! There's still the AMS Barn Dance, the Block SF's Suppressed Desire Dance, and the super-special Soph Formal to look forward to. And with such a swell array of stuff, there's not much indication of a dull future for you college rug-cutters.

CABBAGES AND KINGS

By Dick Simpers

CAP and gown graduations are undoubtedly very impressive looking, but some members of the sophomore class have had reason to wish, during the past couple of days, that some other garment had been chosen as the official commencement garb. One bulky fellow, in particular, was heard to mutter dire imprecations as the measurer's tape encircled his ample tummy and tangled itself between his legs, causing him to fall heavily to the floor and delay the parade of students waiting patiently to have their measurements taken. No consolation lies in the thought that the garments, upon arrival, are almost invariably either too long or too short or too big or too small and the caps either fall over the ears or perch high atop the head. However, one can but hope for the best, and undergo the ordeal with as much patience as possible.

Contrary to one of our long-cherished beliefs, it is evident that the Age of Chivalry is not dead. Evidence to support this statement came last week on one of the rainy mornings to which we have grown so accustomed lately. A beauteous damsel poised uncertainly on the curb at Sutter Street, horrified by the prospect of a huge puddle barring the way to the other side of the street. Quick to sense the situation, the alert, red-faced officer on duty sprang to her side. Ah, here was aid; no doubt the noble fellow would remove his coat and spread it across the puddle, a la Sir Walter Raleigh, or perhaps he would sweep her into his arms and bear her safely across the thoroughfare. He spoke:

"Why'ncha go around the other way, lady, there ain't no puddles over there."

Yes, Chivalry still lives—somewhere.

A new business, that of giving professional advice to investors on the worth of their securities and stocks, has taken a firm foothold in the modern world, according to indications. The other day we received a request for a list of our investments, with a long sheet of paper attached on which to record them, a list so long that Hearst himself would probably have been unable to fill half of it. Pondering the matter, we wonder whether there isn't some subtle psychology to the request. One is pretty sure to feel flattered by the idea that anyone thinks he is worth as much as he would have to be in order to fill the list, and flattery is the basis of salesmanship. Much to our regret, we were unable to supply the worthy firm with any business, our investments at present consisting of half a book of car tickets, which we consider fairly safe.

In view of recent developments, a major war appears to be inevitable. We are not going on record as either pacifist or militarist, but we hope to heaven that this country will have enough common sense to stay out of it. Along with the great majority of our contemporaries, we have no desire to be dragged off to some sloppy European battlefield in another "war to end wars". Most Americans of today are willing to fight but hope they won't have to, and they won't if they will show enough intelligence to steer clear of foreign entanglements.

RAM'S HORN

"AFTER DARK" ROASTED BY IRATE CRITICS

Dear Editor:

Congratulations to John Ward! His criticism of "Snow White" places him in a class superior to Winchell and Pegler, who praised the artistry of Walt Disney. Ward, single handedly has placed this institution's paper, as one of the very scarce publications who dare go against public opinion and criticize the "seven pygmies".

However, Ward seems to overlook the fact that Hollywood spent $1,500,000 on the production. Five hundred sixty-nine persons were employed for its manufacture, which took three and one-half-years. Disney spent $70,000 on a new camera to give the scenes depth. It is also interesting to note, that twenty-five songs were written three years ago for "Snow White", few of which were used today.

Mister Ward admits keen interest in the childish Silly Symphonies, but it's obvious that he's ashamed to admit his liking of fairy tales. The football team will not laugh and make fun of you. They enjoyed the "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs".

—DONALD DUCK

Dear Editor:

It seems too bad that the "Guardsman" has to, through his "After Dark" resort to such rash, unfounded criticism as appeared last week criticizing "Snow White", and criticizing Rubenstein and Nelson Eddy previously. It seems impossible that a person could so consistently be contrary to popular opinion. Surely such journalism must be to arouse life in the dreary Guardsman readers, to fill the "Ram's Horn", and to see who, if anybody, read "After Dark".

Let's have more news, instead of critical essays, and criticism of such things as "Snow White".

—MINNIE MOUSE

Eds Note: It must be remembered, that all signed columns in any newspaper are understood to represent ONLY the opinion of the writer. If Mr. Ward wants to criticize "Snow White", that's his privilege, BUT it doesn't reflect on The Guardsman in any way. After all, Minnie, what kind of a world would we have if there were no criticism of anything. Then you couldn't criticize the critic!

To Mr. Robert Portor
via the Ram's Horn.

Dear Bob:

I understand and appreciate your stand against war, and to that end I offer my whole-hearted support; however, I think that you fail to understand the feelings of the students who desire military training in our schools. Believe me, Bob, when I say that, no one knows and hates war more than those conscientious students who have studied it. Paradoxically, we who fear war feel that because of this very reason our schools should offer military training to those who desire it.

In the face of wars today, I cannot bring myself to believe that there will be no more wars. Since there is possibility of war then, and since the selective service draft makes no exceptions for "conscientious objectors", I believe, and there are millions of young men with the same opinion, that it is my right to know how to protect myself on the battlefield. How can I learn to take advantage of natural cover; to defend myself from rifle, machine gun, and artillery fire; to protect myself and my comrades in battle unless the schools are willing to teach me? The men who were "over there" will tell you, Bob, that eight out of every ten men killed, were killed because they didn't know how to protect themselves—they were untrained. A few years of training would have saved 80 per cent of the American soldiers killed in the great war. Think of that, Bob, 80 per cent.

Would you, if you had the power, take away the opportunity, the right of over a million American boys every year to avail themselves of this insurance against death? Would you send the pick of American manhood onto the battlefield ignorant, as our fathers were, of how to load their rifles, how to put on their gas masks, and even of how to wear their uniforms? This is what military training in schools teaches, Bob. It teaches boys how to protect themselves, how to live in the middle of death. Would you take away such precious knowledge?

—Don Smith.

Dear Editor:

I am an ardent follower of sports and always read the sports page thoroughly. For the past few weeks several items have appeared concerning a group calling itself the "Hottentots". What this so-called basketball team has done to merit all the publicity it is receiving I have never been able to figure out.

It is merely a bunch of clowns that have gotten together to fool around. I am inclined to doubt whether they have ever played a game but by the stories, one would think they are the stars of the college! What I am trying to get at is that they are in a project which neither concerns nor interests anyone but themselves.

Why do publicity blurbs about a certain crowd have to take the place of important athletic news? I am of the opinion that something more important, and of wider interest, should be printed. The first few stories about the activities of the "Hottentots" I enjoyed but since then they have become tiresome and repetitious.

One of the lads told us that he could ghost write this column without any trouble—merely by using the word "constitution" twice and the word "document" once in each sentence. Therefore, vox populi, vox dei, if our three readers are weary of perusing lengthy pieces on constitutional structure, we must desist.

However, one last word, please. We are holding a Forum, tomorrow, Thursday, for all students who are interested in the specific contents and reasoning contained in the brief document. We have a special favor to ask the entire Association. If you have any reasonable objections, please bring them to this meeting. Don't wait to disrupt the general Assembly if you want a detailed explanation on any particular point.

AFTER DARK

By John Ward

Notes of Interest:—

Tonight, at 8:30 in the Veteran's Auditorium, the San Francisco Chapter of Por Musica will present a concert in memory of Claude Debussy. This great French modernist was killed during one of the German bombardments of Paris just twenty years ago, 1918. The program is to consist of his string quartet, the three sonatas with which he ended his musical career, the songs for chorus and a few of the piano works. The festival is under the auspices of Pierre Monteux, famous for his conducting of Debussy's orchestral works.

We hope that this season will not end without a like tribute to the other great French composer, Maurice Ravel, who quit this world late last year.

Next Monday evening, March 28, Ernest Bloch's "Sabbath Service" will be given at Temple Emanu-El. This will be the first local performance of a work conceived and written in San Francisco during Bloch's residence here not so long ago. The Federal chorus and symphony orchestra, Giulio Silva conducting, will be the musical means.

Perhaps there have been obstacles in the way, but it seems to us that San Francisco could have recognized Bloch's service before this. Contemporary music has always had a difficult time in America, yet one is loathe to rank S. F. as just another conservative town west of New York. But when a man as great as Bloch creates in a city supposedly over-run with music lovers and has to go elsewhere for a hearing—

Now that Herr Hitler has taken Austria under wing one of the world's great art centers, Saltzberg, has become just another European town with an opera house. Max Reinhardt, who has produced "Faust" and "Everyman" for the summer festival and was to do so again this year, Bruno Walter, one of their star symphony conductors, and, especially, Artur Toscanini — all three have sent in their resignations according to the latest reports. Thus, the Saltzberg festival is not only threatened with the loss of its publicized quality but also with the loss of its tourist attraction. All of which makes it seem more unfortunate than ever that the tides of battle must necessarily become the tides of art, that the perverted policies of a Hitler must turn away the great and give place to pigmy growths.

Dutch Conlan's golf tourney gets under way this week at the Ingleside links with the performers playing through 36-hole medal matches for the college championship. The college golf team, slated to meet many local squads, will be selected from among the tourney leaders, according to the Dutchman.

Some of the more grandstandish of our college athletes accuse the divoteers of having rather lilyish tendencies. These daring heroes have the idea that unless one risks life and limb in a sport they are classed as sissies. Golf may not be the height of thrilling competition but it is real game whose mastery necessitates genuine athletic ability.

A few of the local characters had gathered in a shake shop after an evening of mild activities, and becoming a mite giddy, indulged in the customary procedure of giving a few junior college yells.

"Hurrah for the Rams," bellowed the blithe Powell Street spirits.

"Hurrah for hell," muttered a creature wearing a State college block, who was sitting in the corner munching a Chocolate Crunchie with gobs and gobs of whipped cream.

"Well, every man for his own college," answered one of the brighter wits of the local contingent.

BASEBALL TEAM MEETS MODESTO IN DOUBLEHEADER AT FUNSTON

Valley Team Rated Powerful Conference Threat In Local Horsehide League; "Big Ed" Curcio Slated To Hurl Opening Contest For Locals

Baseball really gets under way for the San Francisco Junior College Rams when they entertain the Modesto "Pirates" this weekend in a double-header at Funston Field. The first game begins at noon. Modesto is coming to town the decided favorite, having won seven straight practice games. "We seem to have a stronger outfit this year than last, and I am especially glad to see the spirit the boys have. They all want to really play ball," commented Coach Jack Gardner of the "Pirates".

Great Infield

Modesto will field one of the classiest infields in the conference in the persons of Roderick McCloud at first; Melvin Beam, second base; Duane Devnurs, third base; and Jack Ramey will open the game at shortstop.

In the outfield for the valley school will be a hard-hitting trio of fast fly-chasers; Ken Boscacci will cover the left field territory, Ray Nordel in center, and Elvin Brush will be in the right field pastures.

Samuelson Back

The battery for Modesto will be Ward "Sammy" Samuelson, last year's ace, will be on the mound in the first game, and Keith "Pretty Boy" Lambert, star forward from the championship basketball team will start the second encounter. Bill Roberts will be behind the bat in both contests.

Ram horsehiders will go into the fray slight underdogs but with a great chance to upset the dope.

Hard Hitters Start

Coach Eisan of the Rams will field his hard-hitting aggregation of "Mickey" Berman at the initial sack. Berman has been playing great ball so far this year and should give the Modesto pitchers plenty of trouble. Jim Coen will open at second base, with fancy fielding Kent Baird at short, and hard-hitting "Arni" Banta will cover the torrid corner. In the outfield will be those old reliables, Frank Nilan, Paul Hjort and Weaver Galbraith.

On the mound for the Rams will be "Big Ed" Curcio in the first game, and either Bob Gardner or Bill Williams in the nightcap. Treacy Slattery will be used in the role of relief hurler. Dave Johnson and Ray Egelhofer will be on the receiving end of the pitching staff's tosses.

Hidden under a blanket of blushing modesty, there exists at college a noted authority on one of the latest developments of the modern world: the Big Apple. Virginia Kwiatt is this shy genius and the other day she came out of hiding long enough to teach the dance with all its intricacies, to the fundamental rhythms class which is composed largely of women who are Physical Education majors. Each member of the class has her turn in teaching the rest a dance. After learning a series of folk dances, the class is now working on tap dancing. The Big Apple was just thrown in extra.

Three genuine rays of sunshine to the constitution committee for doing such excellent work in such a short time. The committee, which completely revised the old WAA constitution, was composed of Margaret Wormell, chairman, Dorothy Canavan, Dorothy Sanderson, and Janet Falconer.

All tennis players who intend to participate in either the men's singles, men's doubles, women's singles, women's doubles, or mixed doubles are requested to sign up with Bertha Keller, instructor, or Jean Lonkey, WAA tennis manager, immediately.

Anthropophogy was practiced by a certain member of the life-saving class last week. Miriam Frazier was the unfortunate victim. (Oh, no, gentle reader, we're not going to tell you what anthropophogy is. You'll have to look it up if you're that interested, which your probably aren't.)

WAAmblings:

Tennis: The women's singles tournament has started. There have already been some good matches. In the battle of Dot Canavan and Jackie Kramer versus Jeanne Kelly and Sue Muther, point match was reached five times before the Canavan Kramer team finally won out. The players get good pointers from watching Helen Wills play, as she often does, on Saturday mornings.

Rifle: Our women's rifle team won over Carnegie Tech by a default, last week.

Swimming: The life-saving class has begun learning and putting into practice, the methods used in artificial respiration.

Riding: The advanced class has been specializing on jumping because the rain has forced them to ride indoors. The beginners have been perfecting the trot and canter while there has been drills and perfection work for the intermediates.

Basketball: The two teams have been playing two-courts basketball in recent games.

From April 11 to 16, Easter week, the Wilsonmen will tour through Southern California, meeting Los Angeles J. C., U. C. L. A., Pomona, and California Poly in succession. Upon their return they will meet Salinas on April 16, San Jose on April 23, San Mateo on April 30, and Modesto on May 4. Climax to the season will be the individual championships, to be played at Stanford on April 6 and 7, when all the outstanding players of the conference will compete.

SAN MATEO SWAMPS SWEETMEN 94-27 IN FIRST TRACK MEET

In its first competition of the season, the college track team was defeated 94 to 27 by the San Mateo Junior College in a dual track meet held last Saturday afternoon, March 19, at Burlingame.

Held in occasional light rain, the meet was decisively won by the strong squad of the Bulldogs. Lack of practice was an important factor in the local team's defeat.

In view of the fact that this was the Ram's first encounter of the semester while the Bulldogs already had eight meets, the team did fairly well.

Many new prospects were discovered by Coach Sweet at the meet. Carolan looked good in taking third in the 880 and fourth in the mile.

Stearn, a new sprinter from Poly, showed up well in the dashes, taking second in the 220 and third in the 100.

Several weeks of hard practice will put these men in shape and they will be hard to beat.

Boitano Good

Walt Boitano was in his usual good form despite lack of practice and scored high point honors for the Rams with 9 points, winning the shot put, second in the 100, and third in the discus. Boitano, after a bad start in the 100, really gained ground at the finish and was right on the heels of the San Mateo speedster, Fitzpatrick.

Mitchell, after placing third in the mile and in spite of a severe blister on his toe, returned to the track and won his lap in the relay.

The relay team composed of Mitchell, Tobiason, Christie, and Regan ran a good race against a stronger quartet. The Bulldogs were victorious in the time of 3:39.1.

Bill Fitzpatrick starred for San Mateo by winning the 100, 220, and the broad jump. His 15 points was high point man for the meet.

Girard, Scrables, Collier, and Dod were also outstanding for the Bulldogs.

Muddy Track

A slightly muddy track, coupled with occasional rain kept the times and distances of the different events from nearing record marks. The complete result of the meet is as follows:

100—Fitzpatrick SM, Boitano SF, Stearn SF. Time 10.3.

Low Hurdles—Dod SM, Collier, SM, Rensnick SF. Time 25.7.

Broad Jump—Fitzpatrick SM, Collier SM, Scrables SM. Distance 22' 11".

High Jump—Three way tie between Collier, Adams, and Wilbur all of San Mateo. Height 5' 8".

Discus—Gojoivich SM, Arms SM, Boitano SF. Distance 124' 10".

Greenwood Winner Of Two Titles In Men's Club Bouts

Ray Greenwood, clever 169-pound Ram ring veteran, annexed both the light heavyweight and 179 titles in the dual feature of the semi-annual Men's Club fistic program last Wednesday night at the Italian Athletic Club.

Encouraged by the yowls of an overflow crowd of 750, Greenwood put away Bob Rutherford via the technical kayo route in the first round to gain the school's 169-pound division title, before gaining an easy decision over blond Carl Yothers for the other medal.

Frank O'Connor, cool and steady 129-pounder, captured his title the hard way. O'Connor opened the program with a fairly close nod over "Tiger" Matsumoto in a slow contest earning the right to clinch with Don DeShields in the finals. "Bevo" thence proceeded to decision DeShields without difficulty.

"Chic" Defaults

Other winners in the show jointly promoted by Joe "Palazola" Amori and Al "Jacobs" Williams included Terry Isaacson, 149 pounds, decision over Don Taylor in an extra round tilt, and Frank Wiechers (155), decisioned Bob McNeil.

Gene "Jiggs" Greenwood, 169, former Coast light heavyweight amateur champion, tossed Jim Armstrong in the wrestling feature, employing a body press that took five minutes to execute. Wrestler Jerry Hallindan squeezed and grabbed at boxer Tommy Caldwell enough to gain a victory in a special "catch-as-catch-can" struggle.

Grapplers, Too

The brethren Verducci, Frankie and Johnnie, entered the ring to stage a wrestling match, but suddenly ganged up on Referee Amori, and soon it proved a madhouse battle, with "Fifi" Balestracci thrown in for good measure. Overexertion on the part of the principals ended the riotous struggle.

The results:

SEMI-FINALS

129 Pounds—Frank O'Connor decisioned F. Matsumoto.

169 Pounds—Bob Rutherford tko second round over "Playboy" McGovern.

FINALS

129 Pounds—Frank O'Connor decisioned Don DeShields.

155 Pounds—Frank Wiechers decisioned Bob McNeil.

179 Pounds—Ray Greenwood decisioned Carl Yothers.

WRESTLING

169 Pounds—Gene Greenwood threw Jim Armstrong in five minutes with a body press.

149 Pounds—Bill Boyan pinned Bob Towle in one minute with an arm lock.

SPECIAL EVENT

RAM TOSSERS IN 8-2 WIN OVER ST. MARY'S

Chalking up victory number four the Ram baseballers defeated the St. Mary's College Frosh nine, last Tuesday, at the Moraga diamond by the overwhelming score of 8 to 2.

The Rams went off to a fast start, scoring five runs on three hits in the first inning, outstanding in this scoring spurt was a long triple to right field by Weaver Galbraith, Junior College outfielder.

At the time of Galbraith's hit, the bases were filled and all three runs scored. The Rams again scored by pushing across three runs in the fourth inning on walks issued to Baird and Banta and hits by Johnson and Hjort.

At this stage of the game the Gael Frosh's ace chukker, Earl Johnson, entered the fray and set the Junior College boys on their head by sending ten of the eleven men to face him back by the strike-out route.

'Tetchedness' To Keynote Gigantic Block SF Dance

"Are you tetched in the haid?"

If you are, you have a chance to win the "tetched in the haid" contest, which will feature the Block SF Society "Suppressed Desire" dance, on the night of April 1 at the Galileo women's gymnasium.

Details of the novel competition have been announced by Bob Fex, chairman of the Social Committee.

"The contest," stated Fex, "will be quite in keeping with the theme of the dance, which is for all to wear a daffy combination of clothes, which they have always secretly desired to wear to a social affair. The couple who, in the opinion of the judges, have attained the greatest heights of folly, will be awarded the prize, one befitting the occasion, now secretly guarded by the members of the Block Society."

"In all fairness, some of the most logical choices for the award have been eliminated by the ruling that no members of the Block Society will be eligible," continued Fex.

The affair is scheduled to get under way at 9 p.m. and admission is by student body card.

INGLESIDE SCENE OF CHAMPIONSHIP TILT

According to an announcement received from Coach Louis Conlan, the first golf championship of this college will be held at the Ingleside Golf Course on Friday and Saturday, March 25 and 26. Tee-off time will be at two o'clock in the afternoon on Friday and at eight o'clock in the morning on Saturday. Although many entrants have already signed for the event, Coach Conlan is leaving the tournament list open for entrants until 1:45 on Friday afternoon when late-comers will report to him. Each participant will be required to pay a green fee of 50 cents each day.

The championship will be decided by a 36-hole medal match with the two finalists receiving a medal for their efforts. Those players who place among the first eight will form the varsity golf squad.

Not only will the team compete in the Junior College championship tournament, at the Stanford golf course in May, but it will also meet the freshman squads from Califorina, Stanford and the University of San Francisco. This will be the first year that the Rams have sent divot diggers to the championship.

Netmen Prepare For Conference Season Opening

With the opening of the conference season only two weeks off, Coach Tom Wilson's tennis team has been drilling hard in an effort to get into shape, meeting a number of local schools in practice matches. The defending champions in the conference, the Rams are pointing toward another title, and Wilson believes that they must be conceded more than a good chance to cop the laurels for the second year in succession.

Traveling to Santa Clara yesterday afternoon, the netmen engaged the Broncos in a practice tilt, their third of the season, University of San Francisco and San Jose State having been their previous opponents. Next match will be with San Francisco State on April 1, and on the following day the squad will journey to Stockton to meet the Bulldogs of Fresno State. The first conference tilt will be with San Mateo, on April 7, and will be played on the Rams' home courts at the Palace of Fine Arts. Modesto, next of the conference opponents, will be played April 9 at Modesto.

CARNEGIE TECH LATEST VICTIM OF LOCAL GUN GIRLS; DEFAULT

Another intersectional victory was chalked up by the college Women's Rifle Team last week when they decisively defeated the Carnegie Institute of Technology squad in a postal match.

In conducting a postal match, each team shoots up their targets on a designated week and sends their score to the opponent. The local gunners, with Range Officer Bill Hancock coaching, each shot their targets and then waited anxiously for Carnegie's letter.

The letter arrived. But, instead of having individual or group scores, it carried news that the match had been defaulted because of uncontrollable circumstances.

Said Hancock: "Whether it was defaulted or not, I think that our women shooters probably would have won the match with their high team score of 977. Scores such as this are usually made by teams in the upper bracket of feminine shooters."

This same women's team recently became victors over the Tennessee Junior College division of the University of Tennessee by an amazingly high score.

They were also medalists in the three day state championship match held recently at the National Guard Armory under the sponsorship of the San Francisco Rifle Association.

Alex Opalinski, sensational Ram center, was named on an "all Northern California" Collegiate basketball quintet recently, by Jack Rosenbaum in the San Francisco News.

Ople's mates on the mythical five were (of course) Angelo "Hank" Lulsetti of Stanford, "Toddy" Giannini of Santa Clara, Ed Nelson of Santa Clara and Kenny Meitz, St. Mary's.

CREWMEN MEET SAN MATEO IN CRUCIAL

The first crucial of the conference crew season will come off tomorrow at 3 p.m. when the fast improving Ram navy meets the favored San Mateo Junior College over the 2000 meter Yatch Harbor course, according to "Admiral Jack" Gaddy, College rowing mentor.

Gaddy's Red boatman finished the first round of conference competition with one win and one loss. On last Thursday the Powell Street cutter, after having established a slight lead at the half way mark, faltered in the stretch drive and allowed a sprinting University of San Francisco crew to beat them. The Ram sweep swingers scored their initial conference victory on last Sunday when they overpowered the Oakland Polytechnic crew to win in a walk by a 7 boat length margin.

Headman Gaddy has shifted his combination considerably and evolved the following tentative lineup for the San Mateo race. On the port side, Bob Carotto, stroke, Dick Simpers, Don Mix, Ken Pasquellete, Sims Hamilton, and Charles Rice will handle the sweeps while the starboard reads Art Nelson, stroke, Ed Craig, Carl Brogger, Bill Dougal, Merv Weiner and Tom Davis. There is a possibility that Gaddy might insert the fast improving Malcomb Jacobs in the port lineup. Wilt Latz, capable coxswain, will handle the tiller.

Rifle Team Members To Hold Award Rally Soon

Scheduled for the purpose of making awards to Rifle and Pistol team medalists, a rally will take place Tuesday, April 5, at 10 a.m. in the Powell Street lecture hall.

Colonel David P. Hardy, captain of the 250th Coast Artillery championship rifle team, and Louis Landevill, officer of the San Francisco Rifle Association, as well as College President A. J. Cloud will award gold, silver, and bronze medals to the local champions.

These medals were earned by members competing in regular league matches and also the three-day state championship meet conducted recently by the San Francisco Rifle Association at the National Guard Armory.

Students Forsake Rifles For Skates; Army-Navy Visits Field

"Wooden floors, on which to skate and sandy shores where we will bake" will be the marching song of the College Rifle and Pistol Club when that group embarks upon its combination weenie-bake and skating-party to Peninsula Beach, Friday night, April 1.

An annual affair of the rifle and pistol group, this year's installment of that affair will be marked by several innovations, according to Vice-President Bill Gibson, who is in complete management.

Everyone Welcome

"In the first place," he said, "we have opened the rules, this year, so that every member is allowed to bring as many friends as he chooses. In this way, the entire college will be able to attend an affair of its most active organization.

"Also, the price; namely, 55 cents, is unusually small when one considers the benefits derived. Each participant will get transportation to and from Peninsula Beach as well as skating and weenie-baking material and facilities when he gets there.

"At present," he continued, "we are negotiating for additional phases for our big party. However, we are not at liberty to publicise them until arrangements are complete. At any rate, I can assure attending students an absolutely singular party.

Good Sign-up

A rapidly growing sign-up list was shown by Treasurer Don Smith proving the popularity of the function. This popularity has been achieved both from past like parties of the club as well as the few advance reports which have been already released regarding the oncoming event, Smith said.

"As far as we have planned," Smith also pointed out, "transportation facilities run in line with the sign-up list. However, it would be well to line up a number of extra cars in the event that if the number of particpants exceeds the transportation supply, we will be able to go right ahead. The club pays for all expenses of each volunteered car."

Gibson is also planning his Rifle and Pistol Club "Spring Semi-Formal," with which he hopes to set a college precedent. At present he has engaged the orchestra of Robert and Carl. This band is noted for its "not too swingy" qualities. The dance will take place in the "Silver Room" of the California Club, April 21.

Observance of Army Day, April 3, will be marked by the members of the Army and Navy Club at Hamilton Field in Marin County. The organization has been invited to attend by Hamilton Field officials.

Members will watch the army demonstrations and may even take part in them. They will be addressed by high military notables and shall watch the air corps in its maneuvers.

Immediately after the demonstration, the members of the organization will leave for a picnic somewhere in Marin County. Exact locale of the picnic is not yet known.

Members will also participate in the Army Day parade to be held on Market Street, Saturday, April 2. They will march in the divisions to which the respective members belong. The Naval Reserve, Marine Corps Reserve, and National Guard divisions will contain some of the club members.

At the recent meeting, held by the organization, several new members were formally installed. At this meeting were present a good number of graduated members as well as a good turnout of college representatives. Faculty sponsor, James Hughes and Business Instructor Carl Stough were also present.

Lake Merrit Scene Of Hotel Confab

Friday, March 18, witnessed the social meeting of the Hotel and Restaurant Society at Lake Merritt Hotel in Oakland. This society is composed of 25 members of the hotel division. Officers of the club include Collin Oveland, president; Clark Chittick, vice-president; Barbara Mangun, secretary-treasurer. Men members of the club were guests of Charter Four of the Hotel Greeters' Association last week.

Deutscher Verein To See Cal Play

"Der Zerbrochene Krug," a comedy by the well-known German author Kleist, is the next German production which the German Society plans to attend. The production is to be held at the University of California on Apr. 2.

Any student who desires to attend the play should see Annemarie Delfs, club sponsor, or any officer of the German Club.

President Walter Thompson has announced that because mid-terms are held during the week of March 22, the next meeting will be held March 29, instead of March 22.

Beta Phi To Have Eventful Spring

Plans for a lively spring program were discussed in the last meeting of Beta Phi.

"We have one of the oldest fraternities in the school and have always had a reputation for being an active organization. We will uphold this distinction by having two events this year," promised Ed Canepa, president of the Beta Phi.

Although nothing was definitely settled, plans for a spring semi-formal dance followed later by a hay-ride in the winding roads of "Marvelous" Marin County were discussed.

Franklin Swell, club adviser, is heartily in favor of both events.

WSS Still Making Plans For Sale

Holding its regular meeting at the home of Beth Woodman, 59 Marne Drive, the Women's Service Society discussed plans for its Rummage Sale.

The Rummage Sale, which will be held in late Spring, is to raise money for the annual scholarship award given to a deserving student by the society.

NEWMAN CLUB

Newman Club's next social event will be a hike to Big Lagoon, which is to take place on the first Sunday of April.

All those desirous of going on the hike should see President Bob Fex, who is in charge of the affair.

HOTEL LUNCH

Encina Commons, freshmen dining hall at Stanford. She will aid Mrs. Bell in preparing menus for the Special Diets table. Stanford is one of the few universities in the country that cater to the variety of necessary diets of its students. The position will begin when Miss Giffin graduates from the Hotel Division in May of this year.

The farsighted judgment of John P. Gifford, now Assistant Supervisor of Trade and Industrial Teacher's Training for the University of California at Los Angeles, who succeeded in convincing the administration of the worth of his plans for the present hotel division has been proved many times over in the past two years.

RADIO ENGINEERS ORGANIZE GROUP ELECT OFFICERS

Holding their first meeting last Thursday, the newly formed Radio Engineers Club elected officers and made plans for the organization's future.

Vincent Sherman was elected president, Bill Williams, vice-president, and Max Holberg, secretary, while Lowell Hollingsworth, instructor of radio engineering, was selected as faculty adviser. "A constitution is being drawn up, and as soon as it is finished the club will apply for a charter," Sherman said.

"The club consists of members of the radio engineering class and is not open to students outside the class," he added. He also stated that the club was purely social and would not be used to "talk shop".

The group is planning a "bean feed" in the near future.

Tri-Epsilon Okehs Fundamental Law

Tri-Epsilon, newly organized college fraternity, held its second meeting of the semester last week, officially adopting a constitution and electing its officers for the semester, according to club officers.

Winner of the election for president was Dick Holmes, while Bill Simonds was chosen vice-president and Larry Cameron, secretary. These officers are at present making plans for the activities of the semester, which will get under way in the near future. It is also intended to select a few pledges before the end of this semester, although actual rushing probably will not start until next fall.

Lambda Chis Get New Emblems

Following the granting of their charter at the last Ex-Council meeting, the members of the Lambda Chi Sorority were presented with their pins.

"A surprise tea is being arranged for the rushees sometime during April," announced Edithe Hickey, new sorority president. "This is certain to be an outstanding event of the Lambda Chi's calendar."

Because of the unfortunate weather conditions, the riding party has been indefinitely postponed.

Only 10 Italians Sign For Parley

Reports from the last meeting of the Italian Club, March 18, revealed that only ten members have signed up with the committee for the Italian Club's Convention, to be held at the University of San Francisco, April 21, 22, 23.

"There are only two weeks left to sign up, and I hope that all members of the club and those interested in this convention will sign up with Dora A. Garibaldi, Ubaldo Maggetti, faculty sponsors, Bill Solari, or Phil Prigioni, before it is too late," said President Bill Solari.

Bob Nicco, manager of the basketball team, said that the game with the St. Mary's Italian Club is to be played Thursday night, March 24, at 8 p.m., at the St. Mary's College.

"We are also trying to schedule a game with the Santa Clara Italian Club," Manager Nicco said.

All charter members are requested to be present at the next meeting, as the constitution will be discussed and prepared to submit to the executive council for approval.

Peace Society And Economics Honor Society Convene Friday

Meeting to discuss congressional measures affecting war and peace the college Peace Society will convene next Friday night, March 25, at 8 o'clock, at the home of Dorothy Pilgrim, 349 Lyon Street, near Hayes, accessible by car 21.

"Mid-terms are over," President Ray Valdez said, "so students should find the time convenient to attend the meeting. The topic is a pertinent one and should afford an interesting discussion. All students desirous of attending are welcome."

Fred Vast will report on bills pending before the United States Congress that affect the peace of America. He will also discuss measures that would govern the country under war-time conditions. After Vast outlines the prospective acts and presents information on them, the floor will be open for discussion by the students present.

After talking over the legislation the group will probably take a stand on the various measures; either endorsing or opposing the propositions. The group has already condemned Representative Vinson's billion-dollar war appropriation before congress as "unnecessary". The organization has also gone on record favoring international cooperation as a method of settling disputes, rather than by armed conflict.

Omicron Phi Pi, college economics honor society, will initiate new members Friday evening, March 25, at 7:30 o'clock at Galileo High School.

All those who have completed, or are taking at least six units of economics and who have a B plus average are eligible for membership in the society. A list of those who have fulfilled the requirements is being prepared at present and those chosen will be notified by mail. Anyone who is eligible and who wishes to join the society should contact Dr. Michael Zarchin, faculty sponsor of the organization or one of the members at once.

Plans are going forward to make the annual dinner one of the most gala affairs in the history of the organization. The date for the dinner is Saturday evening, April 2, but as yet a place for dinner dancing has not been chosen.

The next regular meeting of the society will be held at the residence of Bill Simonds, 101 Darien Way.

Foresters Adopt New Constitution

With election of officers, the adopting of a new constitution, and plans for a full semester's program, as the business of their last few meetings, the college Forestry Club is fast becoming completely organized, according to George L. Greene, faculty sponsor of the organization.

Greene said that Richard Dahl had been elected president of the group with John Bell as secretary-treasurer. He also said that the group held their meetings on Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock at Galileo High School but mentioned a possibility of a change in meeting time to make it more convenient for members to attend.

Phi Beta Rho In Search For Hall

With obstacles of one sort or another confronting Phi Beta Rho women, who are trying to get a hall in which to have the "Bad Taste" party for the new pledges, Margie Cusic, historian of the sorority, said that the date for the party will be announced as soon as possible.

Relay—San Mateo. Time 3:39.1.

An extra heat of the 100 yard dash was held with only members of the Ram's team competing. Winner was Durggin, Rathke second, and Loberg third. The time was 10.6.

A second 220 heat was also held. It was won by Rathke, second Miller, third Stock. Time 25.4.

Coach Sweet, remarking about the result of the meet, stated, "the team was definitely out of practice. Now that the rain should just about clear up, we are going to "bear down" in training. We practice on Monday and Saturday mornings at Kezar Stadium and any new men with talent are asked to come out."

Japanese Group To Visit Stanford

Plans are under way by the members of the Japanese Club to attend an Advance to be held at Stanford Univeristy on April 9.

Held annually, an Advance affords students the opportunity to discuss topics of interest to student welfare as well as current topics of world affairs.

An announcement from Tally Yusa, registrar for the group, disclosed that more than twenty members of the club have registered for the trip.

Gilkey Initiated Into New Office

That Jack Gilkey was initiated as president of the Pi Mu Gamma at the initiation of new members on Tuesday evening, March 15, was announced last week by club members:

At the meeting on Tuesday evening, March 29, Dr. A. Brown, who shows moving pictures of the organs of the body in color, will lecture and exhibit pictures on chest surgery for the benefit of the pre-medical students of the fraternity.

SKETCH CLUB

Lacking attendance of members, the last meeting of the Sketch Club was postponed by Marjorie Ilg, president. Weather conditions made the postponement necessary.

A trip had been scheduled to the Oakland faterfront where many colorful scenes are to be found.

Anyone interested in landscape painting is cordially invited to join the club.

AFTER COLLEGE WHAT?

By Anne Rabinowitz

Trained librarians are a necessity in bringing about the real benefits of any collection of books for public use. The general public library offers the largest field, as every city of any importance has its tax-supported institution, with branch libraries.

Demand for trained workers does not stop in the public libraries, however, for high schools, technical schools, and universities require reference workers to assist students in their selections. There are, also, state libraries, historical libraries, and medical, law, or other types of specialized libraries which employ specialized workers.

Wide opportunity is presented in the field of the technical libraries, established in connection with commercial houses and manufacturing plants for the benefit of employees, who must have the latest and best book tools with which to keep abreast with improvements.

The nature of this work demands an open mind, for it combines educational activities with social service. Educational requirements are rather strict; especially in history, literature, and languages.

Besides training, the person who is to make a success in this field must have certain qualifications, such as a sense of order and an accurate mind. Details should not be irksome, for the work is filled with minute items of lesser importance. The librarian must be even-tempered, and capable of endless patience with all kinds of people—children, working-men, old people, or anyone who seeks the acquaintance of books.

Many people are earning satisfactory incomes from plying the crafts of jewelry, pottery, weaving and lace-making as specialized industries. These crafts are not mere fads, but are substantial and necessary factors in the present-day demand for better things—things that combine design, craftsmanship and individuality. One woman sold in one year twelve hundred dollars' worth of hand-made jewelry which she had designed, in addition to her regular duties.

In this type of work there is an opportunity for expression of original, individual talent. As a vocation or sideline, the crafts are comprised of interesting creative work.

In the commercialized fields of manufacturing, advertising, and other industries, highly trained craftsmen are needed to assume responsibility for art as related to the manufactured product.

The Smart Grad Will Hurry To Get His Cap & Gown

VOTE ON CONSTITUTION TOMORROW

Editorial . . . .

TOMORROW the Associated Students of this college will be asked to voice either their approval or disapproval of the new constitution, which will be presented at a special assembly in the Auditorium at Galileo. It is imperative that a representative group be on hand to receive the proposed document.

The Executive Council has worked long and hard over the new articles, and the task has been one of necessity and not of choice. It is only fitting that the persons for whom the job has been done should attend this meeting and register their honest vote on the proposition.

Every effort has been made to explain the many reasons for this change in the fundamental laws of student self-government, and those students who take any interest in the welfare and advancement of the process of function of that self-government should by now be in a position to vote intelligently either for or against the new constitution.

The meeting has been slated for two-thirty o'clock tomorrow afternoon, and all classes previously scheduled for that hour have been suspended. There should be few logical reasons for any student's absence from this important meeting.

It isn't enough that a student merely come to all his classes each day, study hard, and get his grades. To get the full degree of benefit for his time spent in this or any other institution of like character, he must enter wholeheartedly into the affairs of the institution. He must take a sincere pride in the achievements of the college as a whole, and not be content merely to gain what he can from his associations without any thought of returning anything into the institution which is bettering him.

Any college is in constant need of intelligent students who wish to see the college grow with the students and the students with the college. In the end, the individual benefits from any energy he expends in an effort to improve the whole.

The constitution is important. It is important to the student body as a whole and merits the attention of each of the seventeen hundred and more individuals who comprise the whole of the student body.

Many years from now, when the people who are now the young students at this college have grown far away from the memories of their college days, there will be many who may have to come to the realization that after all, maybe they would have been smarter if they HAD attended the constitution meetings; if they HAD taken more interest in students' affairs, not "loafed" out front chatting about this dance or that athletic contest.

It is a mark of intelligence to be able to turn from frivolous to serious things, when the need for serious thought arises.

Forensic Squad To Meet College Of Pacific Debaters

Armstrong, Healy, Tillberry Will Outline Perils Of Fascist Movement

Traveling to Stockton tomorrow to oppose the idea that democracy will disintegrate into facesim, the college forensic society, represented by a team composed of James Armstrong, Tom Tilberry and John Healy, will vie with College of Pacific debaters, according to Elizabeth Rehbock, Phi Rho Pi Secretary.

"The display of competent forensic ability of the Ram varsity debator has established a prestige which is now recognized all over the state," Miss Rehbock said. "Challenges from other colleges to debate San Francisco Junior College are coming in thick and fast.

"Coalinga Junior College," she continued, "has just offered to send up two teams to meet the Rams on the merits of the National Labor Relations Board. This debate will take place on Friday, April 1, at the Extension Building at 7:30 p.m. In this debate the Rams will be represented by Morris Rabinowitz, George Woodland, Charles Vaughn and Joe Meeko."

Miss Rehbock pointed out that Lloyd Luckmann, faculty sponsor of Phi Rho Pi, set an excellent example for his students by participating in debates himself.

"Last Thursday," she said, "Mr. Luckmann debated against Professor Calvin Hoover, head of the economics department at Mills College before the Business and Professional Women's Club of the East Bay. The discussion was on the Ralstone Bill, a measure of government reform which abolishes the California sales tax."

Miss Rehbock urged that all students interested in debating watch the bulletin board for news of college debates and attend whenever possible.

Bledsoe To Discuss Crime Prevention At Assembly April 8th

Under the direction of Harold Leuenberger, psychology instructor, an assembly will be held Friday, April 8, at noon, in the Powell Street Lecture Hall.

Anthony Bledose, Berkeley police officer, will speak on scientific methods of crime prevention. In his talk Bledose will discuss the use and value of the much-disputed lie detector.

"The assembly should be of special interest," Leuenberger said, "to psychology, chemistry, physiology, pre-medical, pre-legal, and sociology students. Everyone interested is invited to attend."

Helen Reveal Elected First Honorary Member Of Army-Navy Group; Service Cited

Lieutenant of the United States Army Nurse Corps, Helen Reveal, of the college business department, received the "greatest honor ever enjoyed in a lifetime" of experience last Wednesday, when she was notified by President Gordon Sollman of the Army and Navy Club that she had been elected to become the first honorary member of the organization. Miss Reveal, instructor of accountancy and secretarial studies at the college, was unanimously elected by the members of the club in recognition of the duty that she rendered to her country during the World War.

At Letterman

Stationed at Letterman Hospital in the San Francisco Presidio, Miss Reveal served as a Reconstruction Aide, by instructing disabled soldiers in a field of diversified subjects. Later becoming Director of Education in the 9th Corps Area, Miss Reveal supervised commercial education in the army posts of the area.

While employed at this work, Miss Reveal was required to learn to drive automobiles, tractors, and ambulances; she was taught how to ride calvalry horses, to apply first aid, and to be prepared at all times should she be called for overseas service.

Although not actually called for overseas service, many of Miss Reveal's co-workers went to France for active duty. One of her pupils was decorated with the highest award of the French Government by General Foch, at the time he visited the San Francisco Presidio.

Greatest Honor

Immediately after the war, Miss Reveal left the service. Upon presenting her credentials to the state department of education she was certificated to become a high school instructor.

"This is the greatest honor I've enjoyed in my whole lifetime of experiences," said Miss Reveal when notified of the honor accorded her. "I have always regarded the Army and Navy Club as the finest organization in the school. It serves a worthy purpose, both for the boys at school and the community at large."

Sollman Presents

Presenting the honorary pin to Miss Reveal, President Gordon Sollman replied, "It is indeed an honor to present this pin to Miss Reveal in recognition of the duty rendered to her country. The members of the Army and Navy Club were unanimous in selecting her as the first honorary member."

Not having any more connection with the army, Miss Reveal was in the original group of faculty members appointed to the college, and has been here since its opening. Active in state commercial legislation, she worked to get majors in accounting and secretarial studies. Besides this experience, Miss Reveal has served as a court reporter and business accountant.

Astronomy Students Hear Lecture By Noted Scholar

Dr. Louis Berman, faculty adviser for the Society, said, of the lecture, "Dr. Hubbell spoke about our nearest neighbor in space outside of our own solar system. It is the nebula nearest us—700,000 light years away".

Dr. Hubbell was awarded the Katherine Bruce medal for distingulshed work in Astronomy. He was awarded the medal by the Astronomical Society of the Pacific of which Dr. Berman is a member.

INSTRUCTOR HONORED

TETCHED IN HAID CONTEST THEME OF BLOCK SF DANCE FRI.

Fex Assures All Of Gala Evening At 'Suppressed Desire' Costume Jig

With mystery entertainers, prizes, "tetched in the haid" contests, and numerous other fun-provoking festivities on tap at present, the Block SF Society "Suppressed Desire" dance "gives promise of being the outstanding social event of the semester". That, in short, was the enthusiastic declaration of Social Committee Chairman Bob Fex, who today is making final preparations for the Shindig which gets under way at 9 p.m. Friday evening in the Galileo High School Women's Gymnasium, and lasts until sometime around midnight.

"Everybody is coming," bubbled the ever-enthusiastic Fex, "even the April Fools. All are bound to, and can't possibly miss having the time of their lives, as we are making informality the keynote of the affair. The wearing of daffy getups will do away with any stiffness or nervous formality that otherwise might creep in and cramp the fun," continued Fex.

Along with the prize for the "tetched in the haid" contest, are planned a number of novelty dances, such as the "Big Apple", the "Paul Jones" and possibly some others. There will also be a number of prizes for the most unique costumes, Fex said.

"Block Society members will not be allowed to compete for the prize of the 'most tetched'," added the effervescent Fex. "This is so that someone outside of our organization will be given an opportunity of going home with the prize. Otherwise, we have a few members who I think, if they so desired, could merely act natural and trot off with the coveted award."

Music for the occasion, Fex explained, will be supplied by the Junior College Swingsters, who have recently augmented their group with a charming new vocal duet and some classy new musicians.

"Stags will not be admitted," emphatically declared Fex, his blood starting to boil at the mere thought of "stags" at the Block Dance. "Since the dance is being given by the so-called 'Muscle Men' I guess we can muster enough husky doormen to keep out all 'stags' who might seek admission. Everything is being done for the enjoyment of those attending, and furthermore the only thing to get in without a Student Body Card and a girl, will be with the wind and we'll try to keep that out," finally concluded the colorful Fex.

USF To Serve Luncheon After Examinations

Scholarship Contestants Take Tests Saturday Morning 9 to 12

Luncheon will be tendered to the students of the college who take the University of San Francisco scholarship examination Saturday morning, April 2, 1938, John Selig, chairman of the scholarship committee, announced Friday.

The examination will take place from 9 to 12 o'clock, after which the students will be the guests at luncheon of Rev. Harold Ring, S.J., President of the University of San Francisco, while C. Harold Caulfield, former President of the Board of Education, will preside. Caulfield received an honorary LL.D. degree from the university in 1931 and was an instructor at the University Law School from 1925 to 1937.

Regular men students who are completing their third or fourth semester at college, and who have maintained a "B" average or better in their university grade studies are eligible to take the examination. No discrimination shall be made because of race or religious belief.

The examination will cover English Composition and Literature, Current Events, American Government, Hygiene, Sociology, Public Speaking, Philosophy and Economics.

The person receiving the highest grade in the examination will be awarded a two-year scholarship for free tuition in the School of Liberal Arts. Second highest grade receives a one-year scholarship.

John Selig, Mary Jane Learnard, Francis Colligan, Lloyd Luckman and John Gaddy, of the college faculty, will judge the examinations.

Awards To Be Given At Rifle Club Rally

Gold, silver, and bronze medals, as well as rifle team blocks, will be awarded to medalists of the college Rifle and Pistol Club at a rally to be held next Tuesday morning, at 10 o'clock, in the Powell Street lecture hall.

Regular classes held on that hour will be excused so that all students can all be given a chance to attend.

Awards will be given by President A. J. Cloud, Hon. Louis Landreville, and Coach Bill Hancock of the local "Rifle Varsitles". Special guests will be Colonel David P. Hardy of the local 250th Coast Artillery championship rifle and pistol squad, and a number of unnamed sharpshooting luminaries.

Medals will go to those who came out "tops" in the local league matches into which the college was entered.

DOCUMENT GOES BEFORE STUDENT BODY AT 2:30

Mix To Preside At Meeting; General Discussion Will Precede Vote; New Clauses Added After Last Thursday's Forum; Attendance Urged

At an official meeting of the Associated Students tomorrow afternoon in the auditorium at Galileo, the new constitution, drawn up and accepted last week by the Executive Council, will be presented for the approval of the student body as a whole. All 2:30 classes will be excused so that students may attend the assembly and give their official stamp of approval to the document before it goes into force as the fundamental law by which the college will be governed. Donald Mix, Student Body President and one of the moving spirits in the formation of the new constitution, will preside at the meeting as chairman, and will first call for discussion of the new document by interested students. After all discussion has been completed and any objections taken care of, the constitution will be read over to the assembly and the students will be asked to give it their approval. Providing it receives this, the constitution will then have been officially adopted.

Forum Discussion

Last Thursday's forum for discussion of the new set of laws resulted in the clarification of several points for doubtful students, and in the adoption of a suggestion that there shall be a clause in the by-laws providing that the candidates for yell-leader shall be on the ballot at elections of the Associated Students. Tomorrow's meeting is primarily to acquaint students more thoroughly with the constitution as it now stands, and to secure the approval of the student body as a whole, which is necessary before the document can be officially accepted. Final approval of the Executive Council was given to it last Friday. Although all objections were supposed to have been disposed of at the forum, anyone with any reasonable cause to doubt the efficacy of the document is at liberty to come forward at the assembly with his troubles.

Start at 2:30

For the benefit of anyone interested in the system under which affairs of the college will be administered hereafter, the entire constitution was printed in last week's Guardsman, just as it will be adopted.

Tomorrow's assembly will start at 2:30 o'clock and will continue until all business pertaining to the matter at hand is completed and the document has received the final approval of the student body.

GRADUATES! WARNING!

All High Sophomores who have not yet been measured for their caps and gowns are urged by the Registrar's office to report to Room 261 at Galileo, immediately following the constitution rally on Thursday afternoon, March 31. This will positively be the last opportunity to obtain these measurements, the office announced, and students are asked to report for measurement whether or not they have their $1.50.

Soph Formal Bids On Sale Monday; Novel Idea Promised

With Monday, April 4, set as the day for bids to go on sale, plans for the Sophomore Formal are moving forward rapidly, according to Irv Amstrup, High Sophomore President.

"We have definitely decided upon our bids and they are very attractive and very unusual. We are not disclosing the nature of these bids as we want to keep it for a surprise.

"We have not yet chosen an orchestra, but our final choice lies between Don Mulford of the University of California, Noel Thomas, of the Fairmont Hotel and Jack Martin of Boyes Springs. A final choice will be made sometime during the week."

As previously announced, the Soph Formal will be held on April 29 in the blossom-bedecked ball room of the San Francisco Golf and Country Club. Bids are $1.25 and may be secured at the college bank, Room 261 at Galileo.

Amstrup said that arrangements had been made by the committee to secure tuxedos at the special rate of $2.50. These suits will be altered to fit the individual student, so those interested should contact The Fashion Clothing Company, 2304 Mission Street, as soon as possible. This store is open evenings and anyone wishing further information should see Amstrup immediately.

Artists Show Work At DeYoung Museum

Opening Friday, April 1, at the De Young Museum will be the art exhibit held by the Northern California Junior Colleges.

Pieces of work done by the students of the college during the semester will be included in the exhibit. Oils and water colors showing Golden Gate Park, Chinatown and Fisherman's Wharf will be shown.

There will be a separate room for posters and another for paintings. Several photographs from San Mateo Junior College will be shown also, said Richard M. Allman, art instructor.

"The exhibit is meant to be both cooperative and educational as prizes are not awarded," continued Allman. "Each year the exhibits assume more importance. Chances are it will expand into an exhibit of commercial art, metal work, crafts and photographs, as well as the paintings. Only three years ago the Exhibit lasted one day while the Exhibit this year will last a month."

Forum Chooses Art Morals For Debate

With morals in art the subject of discussion the College Forum will meet Friday night, April 8, at the Residence Club, 940 Powell Street.

Paula Rossi and John Healy will present the pros and cons of the controversial topic. Following their speeches the group present will participate in a general discussion of the question. The issue gained prominence recently when Harris Connick, 1939 Fair Director, objected to nude statues submitted for an exposition art exhibit.

Investigating the possibilities of holding a banquet at the end of the semester is a committee composed of Doris Speroni, Ethel Yellin and Healy, chosen at the last meeting of the organization. "Anyone who has any information that might help us," said Healy, chairman of the committee, "will kindly let us know. Forum Club members, who would like to help us, are welcome to consult with the committee."

Executive Council Irons Out Details Of Promised Laws

With two recommendations from the student forum held late last week as the major point of discussion, the college Executive Council held its regular meeting last Friday afternoon.

These recommendations include the addition of a part C to Section 7 of the By-laws which will read "The Yell Leader shall be elected at the same time as the Associated Student Officers" and a number 10 to Section 1 of Article III, of the constitution, which calls for the addition of one non-voting member of the Alumni Association on the council.

The recommendations approved, the group turned to new business and it was suggested that some method be devised by which holders of the non-transferable Associated Student cards may be identified. A committee consisting of Allen Williams, Stan Adams, Norma Parent, Florence Murphy and Alden Smith of the faculty was appointed to investigate the situation and report at a later meeting.

A charter was granted to the college Forestry Club, and the list of those eligible for Rifle Team awards was read and approved.

OF OPPORTUNITY

Art is long, life short: judgment difficult, opportunity transient.—GOETHE.

OPPORTUNITY is a thing that can be made to exist when apparently there is little indication of its presence. Perhaps Goethe was correct when he called it transient, but maybe he might have struck nearer the truth if he had said that opportunity is transient to him who hesitates.

It is certain that some persons can find opportunity where others fail to think of seeking. More than likely, the persons who decry the lack of opportunity the loudest are the ones who wait for it instead of searching for it.

Opportunity, especially in the swiftly-moving, complex world of today, is not something that "comes to him who waits", although waiting may seem the easiest and most logical course.

Many a man has spent years bewailing the lack of opportunity, sighing over the unkind Fate that shunts opportunity past his clutching fingers, and then suddenly awakens to the realization that he has had numerous opportunities that he didn't even recognize because they didn't happen to be under his nose.

The thoughtful, ambitious man who eventually succeeds in this world is the man who waits not, but, deciding upon his goal, sets off on an immediate quest for opportunity. Eventually, too, he finds it.

WORLDLINESS

The world is too much with us.—WORDSWORTH

With the annual miracle of Spring and its resultant awakening of Nature now breaking forth into full bloom, the inevitable urge to "get next to nature" and the time-honored trend of "a young man's fancy" have come once more.

Man, being a rather sentimental beast at heart, never fails to be emotionally affected by the change in seasons, and the caprices of the weather have long been a definite factor in the movements and actions of the earth's peoples.

Yet, regardless of the momentary flurry over the influx of Spring, it is possible that the poet was right when he complained of "too much muchness" in the world.

The probabilities of men forgetting the simple and lovely things of Nature, while concentrating every faculty on a ceaseless effort to extract more money from the works of man with the resultant orgy of spending, are distinctly real.

It has been said that we live in a "world gone mad" with the lust of power and wealth. Competent critics point out that never before in the history of the world has there been such emphasis on progress and achievement in a mechanical way. It is also possible that this emphasis on material gain leaves little room in the minds of men for any growth of the intellectual appreciation of wonders of the world we live in.

Perhaps the nations of the world would not be engaged in the greatest armament building program in the recollection of man, if their peoples would spend more time and devote more energy to an attempt to know and understand the works of the force that created them and the universe in which they dwell.

Perhaps there would be less of the mass hysteria that leads whole nations to worship and defy their war-crazy dictators, if they attuned themselves more acutely to the lesser forms of life that beautify the world about them.

Perhaps, too, there would be less of the pessimism toward the inevitability of another chaotic ruin of world-wide bloodshed and suffering, if humanity would pause in its headlong flight toward nowhere in particular and turn its senses toward the spiritual tranquility that may be found in a sincere and loving appreciation of Nature. Perhaps there is too much worldliness.

In any event, there is immense personal satisfaction and a sharp relief to the frayed edge of every-day nerves, that may be gained by the individual in a quiet perusal of Nature and its myriad wonders, that will add materially to the fount of character.

EDUCATION TODAY

More and more the world is stressing education. Not the mere inculcation of material gleaned in the course of the school days of youth, nor yet the pure, disembodied facts gained from poring over endless books and manuscripts during the hours spent in college, nor even the attainment of the multifarious degrees. This is no longer the sole end of education.

Education is more and more being considered a life-long process. It is becoming less and less an emphasis on the intellect alone. It has been observed that, "Few men think; all men FEEL". It is now thought that an emphasis on the purely intellectual training will result in an intellectual hierarchy, but will never afford a genuine democracy.

The ultimate goal for education, and one toward which it is now working, is not the truth of Thought, but the truth of Action; a truth to be gained only by training the fundamental emotions of mankind.

The drift of late years has been away from tradition, tradition that emphasized thought with little regard for the individual's feelings. Modern education seeks to coordinate and direct action through a stimulation of the fundamental feelings.

JUDICIAL COMMITTEE

Every organization, to be successful and to progress, must have a minimum amount of law. There must be somebody that will enforce the law sensibly and with moderation. This has been found to be true and successful, if not abused, in society.

The Associated Students organization of San Francisco Junior College is an important and large group. As is the case everywhere, there are always a few people who for various reasons do things that are decidedly unfair and harmful to the rest of society. In short, there is a necessity for some students to be disciplined when their activities are on the minus side of the ledger.

As the college grows, the need for a Judicial Committee, composed of students and administered by students, becomes ever more apparent. The function of this committee would be to discipline students and to counsel students to adjust themselves to the college. In the past, this duty has been handled deftly by the administration.

As soon as the new Associated Students' constitution is adopted and the new system of government goes into effect, the Judicial Committee should be organized. Careful deliberation of who is to compose the committee should be made so that a well-balanced group will be formed. Only after a careful selection and organization should the body begin to function.

Out Of The Fog

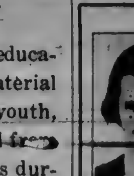
—By Mac—

We sat hunched over our typewriter, cursing softly at the rain which drizzled from leaden skies. As we turned to stare dully out the window, we heard someone pounding at the door of the office. Rising wearily, we walked over and threw open the door. There stood Victor, eyeing us with a most wistful expression.

"I'm sorry about that scene I caused in here last week," said he penitently, "and I have changed my mind. I think the paper's okay, and I want to be one of the reporters."

"Oh," we retorted, "oh, so you've had a change of heart, huh? Well, I don't know whether there's an opening right now or not."

"Please," pleaded the repentant one earnestly, "please, just let me write any old thing."



"Can you write?" we asked. "Here," we added, "come on in and let us see what you can do. H-m, I got it! Let's see how you handle an interview."

Victor followed us into the office and grabbed a pencil and paper, then struck by a sudden thought, he inquired, "Who shall I interview?"

"Why not us?", we answered, "come on, you can start right now."

"Okay," chirped the eager frosh, "here goes."

Q: Where were you born, Mac?
A: Valhalla.
Q: Yeah? I heard of that place once. Where is it?
A: Utopia.
Q: Oh! Oh, sure, I remember now. When?
A: When what?
Q: When was I born?
A: I don't know. I'm not the interviewer.
Q: Shucks, it's easy. You just take a number, add three—say, I'm supposed to ask the questions. When were you born?
A: December 10, 1915, BC.
Q: Whadyou mean BC?
A: I'm not sure. Some say, "Born Clever", some say, "Born Crazy".
Q: Oh! Well, it doesn't make much difference. What did YOU think of "Snow White", Mac?
A: I thought it was a seven-dwarf picture, topping "Topper", and laying 'em in the aisles from Tipperary to Timbuctoo.
Q: I'll say so. But the way I heard it, Mac, one feller says to the other feller, he says, "Zowie, I'll say that Walt Disney has got something there," and the other feller says, "That so?", and the first feller says, "Yes sirree, and he ain't even paying them actors any salary either." (Apologies to Fibber McGee.)
A: Well, get on with the interview, and quit sitting there grinning about "Snow White." You might as well finish this thing.
Q: Okay, Foggy. When did you start writing a column?
A: I don't know, did I?
Q: Listen, you're getting me all mixed up. What's come over you? All of a sudden?
A: No. Here comes the mangling, I mean managing, editor, you better beat it.
He did.

Mental Mutterings

By Fem

Fitting in with the season of the year that is now at hand (no, George, we're not going to mention Spring again), a small bird has built a nest under the eaves outside of Room 401 at the Extension Building, and is preparing for a visit from another, much larger, bird. (Not setting ourselves up as the Winchell of the bird colony; just thought you might like to know!) We're fervently hoping that Mrs. Bird gets all finished with her family, and sends them out to buck Powell Street traffic, before Easter. If she does we can appropriate the nest, trim it with a bunch of flowers, two long pieces of ribbon and a mess of veiling and have the smartest Easter hat this side of the Paris openings. We could do even better by convincing Mama Bird that she and her family should stay right where they are and parade along the bully-vard with a nest full of live birds atop our tresses. Wouldn't Schiaparelli be furious!

WE WONDER: If anyone else noticed the striking resemblance between the gal on last week's Saturday Evening Post cover and Muriel Mills, Low Sophomore President? It may have been something in the milk shake we were drinking but we nearly fell off our seat in a near-at-hand drug store when we glanced over our right shoulder and saw Muriel peeking out at us from between a couple of True Confessions. Yes, and maybe it was the milk shake that made us think the gal on the cover looked like Muriel or Muriel looked like the gal on the cover or maybe we'd better stop drinking milk shakes!

Rumor has it that campus characters, in all senses of the word, will come into their own on the evening of April First when the Block Society will give them a chance to show their true colors at a "Tetched-in-the-haid" Suppressed Desire dance. This affair should bring out some very remarkable facts about some equally remarkable people, if all who attend are honest and really reveal their secret longings. Unconfirmed rumor has it that John Ward is going as Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs, Norma Parent as a Stanford co-ed, lots a people as football players and Donald Mix and Richard Simpers, stellar English students, and models of respectability, will probably obey their suppressed desires to the utmost and go as a pair of rakes (and we don't mean garden tools!) If we could dig up a date we might even go ourselves—as a columnist!

In keeping with our interest in people you see about the city: (i.e. last week's story about the Scotchman on the F car). We were eating hamburgers out the beach last Sunday evening and watching the world go by. Suddenly upon the horizon there came a little man, looking quite a bit like movie comedian Louis Alberni, singing at the top of his voice. Surprisingly enough, the top of his voice was really tops and for a good half hour he entertained spectators with opera, the classics and good old-fashioned swing. Suddenly he spotted the lovely blonde who works in one of the tamale parlors and commenced to cast his singing in her direction. When she tried to be nonchalant and gently ignored him he responded by singing, and most fittingly, that catchy little ditty that goes, "There's a song in the air, but the fair Seniorita doesn't seem to care for the song in the air". He was finally dragged away by some long-suffering friends who had patiently waited in a nearby car after many fruitless attempts at making the troubadour desist. Maybe he'd like to come to the Suppressed Desire dance as Nino Martini.

CABBAGES AND KINGS

By Dick Simpers

SAN FRANCISCO Junior College, it has occurred to us, probably boasts more members of the genius commonly referred to as "characters" than any institution its size in the world. This fact has become apparent after watching the goings-on in front of both the Extension Building and Galileo during the leisure moments in academic life, when certain students disport themselves in a fashion which would convey to the casual passer-by the impression that he was in the vicinity of a five-ring circus, rather than an institution of higher learning. Large, hairy specimens dash about, shouting loudly and pummeling one another with reckless abandon, much to the amusement of numerous spectators, who stand by and egg them on to even wilder antics. However, everything appears to be in a spirit of good, clean fun, and as such may be condoned even by the more staid members of the student body. Despite their somewhat frightening appearance, the cut-ups are harmless, and a bit of foolishness is certainly not going to do anyone any harm, although, for that matter, it will probably not do a great deal of good.

This Friday's "Suppressed Desire" dance, sponsored by the Block SF Society, promises to be a truly memorable affair. If advance notices are correct, some of the slightly slap-happy notables of the college will be in attendance clad (more or less) in garments calculated positively to stupefy the beholder. It is rumored that Al Williams will reveal a "suppressed desire" guaranteed to strain the imagination of even the most fanciful, while Johnny Verducci announces his intention to limit his raiment to one square foot of material. If the affair turns out to be as sensational as was the "poor taste" dance of four semesters ago, which old-timers will remember, it should really be worth attending. At the last such affair, if memory serves correctly, one presumptuous chap even went so far as to check his trousers before entering.

The performance given last week by the visiting thespian group from the College of the Pacific, was greatly enjoyed by all the spectators, but the hit scene might have been a little more effective if a certain local higher-up had managed to keep his anatomy from protruding from behind the curtain at the crucial moment. Lurking behind the scenes to "assist" the actors, this fellow, rather bulky ordinarily, overlapped onto the stage while the smash lines were being delivered by the star. Despite this slight incongruity, however, the performance was acclaimed a definite success.

Notwithstanding the fact that persons of college age are supposed to have passed beyond the "dime novel" stage, we came upon a copy of a publication called "Astounding Stories" last week in, of all places, The Guardsman office, a sanctum supposedly devoted to the higher forms of literary art. Filled with tales of interplanetary travels, jaunts into the 5000th Century, and similar probable happenings, the much-thumbed copy bore evidence of industrious reading by some adventurous soul, who doubtless neglected his studies of the English poets in order to peruse it. (It sure was interesting, too.)

RAM'S HORN

ARTIST URGES STUDENTS TO ATTEND SHOW

Dear Editor:

In the Broadway vernacular: "What a Show!" For the person who gives nary a feeble hoot about "esthetics, great art", and similar figments of the imagination, it's a real evening's entertainment. The subject of this verbal championing is the 58th Annual Show of the S. F. Artists' Association, now pleasing the public eye at the San Francisco Museum of Art.

This writer found real enjoyment in such striking realisms as the tempera studies of Del Pino and Phyllis de Lappe. Our own Otis Oldfield stays right on the ground, invents no epileptic escape mechanisms, and offers two fine portraits; one of a sleeper in a pleasantly partial state of nudity, the other a pipe toting bug-eyed individual who is at first irritating and then affords a hearty laugh.

If you like a thing, and you think it's art, well—then it's art. Tennis players will go for the portrait of "Jane" by McCormick. Wrestlers will like the "Arabesque" by Fletcher Martin. Also by Fletcher Martin is a piece called "The Girl He Left Behind", which is an excellent blow for peace and a caustic crack at militarism.

The pigtailed little negro girl painted by William Black has color galore—and if you don't like it—well, I'm sure you will! Another sepia skinned queen is the object of another artist in this exhibit. Spencer Macky's "Negroid Beauty" has a warm red mouth, and for a twentieth century made (here I acknowledge stealing a word from Mr. John Ward), it's marvelous. She's a 100 per cent beautiful woman.

For those of you who like the rustic, Gene Kloss' "Winter Canyon" hits the spot. It has depth, color, and covers a scene, skiters visualize but seldom get to.

For a personality transferred to the canvas so deftly that you might commit the faux pas of trying to shake hands with it, I recommend the "Self-Portrait" of Kosa. When looking at this picture the frame vanishes, and you are sure Mr. Kosa is going to pull his fingers out of his vest pocket, perhaps to give his chin a scratch!

For an exact picture of what you wouldn't mind looking like at the age of fifty the "Portrait of an Artist" by Cabot Daniels fills the bill no matter how ardent a day dreamer you may be.

There is no admission charge at the San Francisco Museum of Art. The writer has listed here what he thought were some of the more entertaining specimens. And it is the opinion of this writer that if art (dramatic, musical, or plastic) does not have a definite entertainment value, it is travelling incognito. I'd enjoy being called names if I knew that I had caused some of the student body to go to this exhibit.

—Henry H. Evans.

Dear Editor:

In the many disputes which are constantly arising between various college groups I feel my position should be defined. For I am the average junior college student. In a few years I will be the average American citizen. So, after all, I think my position is an important one.

First, a brief description of myself: I wear sport clothes and low-heeled shoes. Despite many reports to the contrary I am not attending college merely for the social activities. In the back of my mind, I have a vague idea that upon completion of college I will be superior to the majority and it will mean success and money. That is what I want. I think they are the necessary attributes of happiness. I say that I will go on to the University. Maybe I will, too. I get average grades, finding Philosophy and Mathematics the hardest subjects. You have to concentrate on them so much.

I am strongly against war but would rather not think about it because there doesn't seem to be anything I could do. As to the Peace Society I don't attend because someone said it was a bunch of radicals and I pride myself on being sensible, conservative. I don't go to the Forum Club, either, because they are a bunch of self-styled intellectuals and I'm just an ordinary person. However, I think both organizations have been criticized too much by certain military factions. I take a middle stand. I haven't shown much interest in the new student body constitution because I really don't care about it, so long as I am not directly affected. Why should I?

Although I am often disgusted with The Guardsman for being so dull and often call it a "lousy sheet", I break my neck to get a copy on Wednesdays. I don't know why. I like sports and dances better than school assemblies; I don't pretend to be brilliant. I'm average.

—Junior Collegian.

Rifle Club members attended a monstrous feast at the Veneto Restaurant, where they were entertained by musicians, singers, and fakirs doing conjuring tricks.

Presidential Notes

By Don Mix

Dear Don:

For the past few weeks the student newspaper, The Guardsman, has been filled with a lot of bunk concerning student government, theories of management, and constitutional philosophy. All of this trivia reads rather well, but we average students can't get stirred up into a lather over such matters. I am rather an old-timer around here, and if my memory serves me rightly, the Executive Council makes a habit of throwing a new constitution at us on an average of about once a year. Let's see, we've had three constitutions in the last six semesters.

Is this long-winded piece that you're going to read to us at the assembly tomorrow merely a rehash of these time-honored constitutional fumbles or is it an accumulative work resulting from intelligent deliberation by experienced faculty and interested students, as you claim?

You say that this constitution is superior to those that have been offered in the past. Why?

You claim that the slow process of deliberation that was utilized in drafting this present document, the attempts that were made to correct the mistakes of previous constitutions and the general policy of obtaining student approval on each article makes for a workable fundamental set of laws. Well, we hope you're right. Another semester of constitutional revision would be an awful bore. At the recent forum you blandly announced that this was a constitution to end constitutions. Well, it's about time. We are sick and tired of hearing political songs and dances whose main theme is "I'll write a new constitution".

Yours for bigger and better constitutions.

Joe Jaysee.

AFTER DARK

By John Ward

There have been many futile arguments fought in the name of music. Perhaps most futile of all has been the fight between the classicists and those who would swing the classics. This argument is as old as music itself and neither side has reported a victory save when some genius has entered the combat.

Today the genius has yet to appear and the battle is still a merry one. Undoubtedly the bitterest issue is Tommy Dorsey's swinging of "Loch Lomond", via the radio, one N.B.C. station cutting the program off its lanes. Also in line for the firing is a current swing version of an aria from von Flotow's opera "Martha". We can at least vouch for the last as being an amusing burlesque done with a great deal of humor.

However, it seems to us that the exponents of commercial music are letting themselves in for two unworthy criticisms. We do not take the hard classicist's view, though, claiming plagarism and crying "off with their heads". Neither plea would avail anything. Besides, the first claim is untrue. The two criticisms to be found are less one-brained and blunt.

First, jazz is perhaps showing signs of sterility. Rehashing familiar tunes—could that be the sign of weakening creative power? Have the jazz merchants, in their continually enormous output, lost a goodly portion of their melodic inventiveness? We wonder. How else would you explain this sudden cult of "Swing the Classics"? Is it a fad?

If it is just another fad there is a stronger criticism to be found. For, in art, there is nothing more base than the act of cheapening that which has been seriously accepted by the world at large. Certainly the man who painted the moustache, handsome as it was, on the "Mona Lisa", gained no one's adulation. And the man who jazzed our national anthem was jailed for his trouble. This is another issue, however, yet interesting as an example of how carefully the government guards unsingable theme song from vulgarization.

If dance orchestras want to dash up the classics in popular dress, no one is going to stop them. (How would one go about it?) But they should remember that when they undertake adding salt and peper to Schubert and von Flotow they are only gaining themselves the applause of a few and the disgust of many. It is to be doubted if Mr. Dorsey's "Loch Lomond" received as much praise as it received eventual condemnation.

At least let them use plain common sense if they continue. Should they take merely to changing the tempo of serious music, giving it the right dance lilt, leaving the original harmonic texture the same, then they would be guilty of only cheapness but vulgarity. Paul Whiteman tried it with the "Song of India," and Rudy Vallee tried it with Schubert's "Serenade". Both were unfortunate examples. The current version of "Martha" is preferable in any case merely because it is entertaining, where the others were just annoying. And, after all is said,

Athletic Award System Finally Put Into Shape

Sweet Announces Methods By Which College Men Merit Monograms

With the aged awards dispute finally being settled, Coach Russ Sweet of the Athletic Council has announced the conditions that will permanently prevail beginning next semester.

"Awards, including sweaters for winners of a second block award in the same sport, will be made this term under the conditions of the previous system. This means that crew along with baseball, basketball, track, and tennis, will be entitled to receive a sweater award this semester.

"However, with the inauguration of the new awards constitution next term, which was recently ratified by the Executive Council, only football, baseball, basketball, track, and tennis are to be considered as major sports. All other sports are to be included in the category of minor sports until such time as they attain sufficient strength, interest, and importance as those of the major group, when they may be raised to the major status by proper action of the Athletic Council.

"The only awards to be given in the future by school purchase are white block sweaters for members of a championship major sport team on recommendation of the team coach. The red award sweaters purchased by the individual, now in existence, are to be maintained. Any additional block awards earned entitles the wearer to add the proper number of stripes on the left sleeve of the red sweater."

COLLEGE WOMEN ATTEND CONFAB AT CHICO STATE

Early next Friday morning, the five women who have been chosen to represent the college at the combined Associated Women Students and Women's Athletic Association convention, will leave for Chico State College to attend the two-day meeting. All three AWS delegates, Annabelle Benson, Jane Mitchell and Barbara Randall, are officers of that organization. They will be accompanied by Margaret Dougherty, woman's adviser. The two women who will represent the athletic group are Dorothy Canavan, WAA President, and Miriam Frazier, badminton manager. WAA sponsor, Vera Spencer, completes the delegation.

Throughout the state, both junior and state colleges send delegates to this annual assemblage, at which officers discuss problems pertinent to college women's organizations. An invitation to attend the convention was sent to Margaret Dougherty by Idell Christopher, AWS President at Chico State College, which is acting as host college for this year's gathering.

At the request of Miss Christopher both Barbara Randall and Dorothy Canavan, presidents of their respective associations, submitted three questions each, which were interesting and vital to present women's groups in college. Three of the women, Jane Mitchell, Dorothy Canavan, and Barbara Randall will lead the discussions. Jane Mitchell will explain budgets while Dorothy Canavan will tell of the recent contributions to a coeducational program which have been made here. Barbara Randall will act as toastmistress and give a humorous address, "Panning."

The two-day program consists of registration, a tea, dinner, an opera and a reception following the opera on Friday, and a general session, discussion group, luncheon meeting, track meet, ride through Bidwell Park, formal banquet, and a convention ball on Saturday.

Representatives have not yet decided whether they will drive to the convention or go by train.

Hottentots Contnue Epic Hoop Activity

Those hellcats of the courts, the Hottentots, continue their season of strenuous basketball activity by holding two games during the coming week. The first game was played last Street journeyed across the bay to night when the blithe spirits of Powell meet their traditional rivals, the Colored Giants. Friday night the Hottsies play the Twenty Jesters Club.

The swimming team has apparently drowned.

If the baseball team catches any more bad weather the lengthy schedule arranged by these lads will have them playing the season's finale along about the fourth of July.

Those wise bravos "in the know" who let the words of wisdom fall out of the side of their mouths tell us that this year's Ram nine is by fall the most potent aggregation that Coach Lee Eisan has ever assembled. A wealth of material for practically every spot makes the Eisanites look like possible championship material.

• • •

Led by the chubby but capable Harold Wagner, the Red tennis team also seems to be in line for championship rating. The racquet battlers copped the conference cup on the last time around and seem very likely to repeat. Athletically speaking, this is liable to be a very bright spring.

Remember when Jack Telesmanic used to saunter up and down Powell Street in his "real" coonskin coat . . . when Deming Smith and Bob Neal were the first string guards on the Flying Lamb grid troupe . . . when Merv Weiner was shy and bashful . . . when Irv Amstrup was a "white hope" . . . when Fifi Balestracci intercepted a pass in the State Jayvee game . . . when the football team wanted to turn in their suits after the Sacramento debacle . . . the time the football team's bus broke down en route to Santa Rosa just fifteen minutes before the starting time . . . Johnnie Fitzgerald, the loquacious backstop, and his unusual haberdashery . . .

The Height of Optimism . . . the young hopefuls, utterly devoid of football experience, who spent seven dollars for new football shoes for spring practice.

• • •

Current rumors have it that a practice game or scrimmage is being planned for the end of the spring practice period in which the new varsity for next year will meet the graduating (they hope) members of the 1937 squad.

The old-timers could provide a tough forward wall with "Duke" Worsham, Andy Oddstad, Randy Osborne, Merv Weiner, Jerry Flamm, Will Dolman, Joe Guedet and El Pearce, but the graduating backs are not too numerous. "Bubbles" Egelhofer is the only graduating back who seems eligible for service.

However, the novice squad should gain lots of valuable experience from these tried vets of the grid wars.

FORM A LA FLAMM

Perfect form in discus throwing is demonstrated by Jerry Flamm, the college's ace performer in the hurling art, who is expected to be a point winner against State.

COLLEGE TRACK TEAM READY FOR STATE

A few days of sunshine made it possible for members of the college track team to get in some practice last week.

For the first time this semester the squad had a chance to limber up its muscles and get into condition for the meets. Need of practice was shown by the result of the track meet March 19 with San Mateo Junior College.

Russ In Doubt

San Mateo's decisive victory failed to show Russ Sweet, coach of the local team, just what kind of a track team he has this season. The men were definitely out of practice and were no competition for the strong team of the Bulldog's.

Although out of practice, many men prooved themselves to bee outstanding in different events. Boitano, a veteran from last year, looked good in winning the shot and placing second in the 100. He excels in a rare combination of events, the weights and the sprints. Stearn, formerly a lightweight sprinter from Poly, was placed third in the quarter mile and Bitgood won a place in the hurdles. Mitchell, in the distances, also was near his top form of last season. Bedrosian, shot putter, placed second with a throw just slightly less than the winner.

Meet With State

Coming in the near future is the Ram's track meet with San Francisco State, the traditional rival of the college. The Gater's present a strong team this season and they will be hard to beat. Theofield, in the sprints and the broad jump, has some outstanding marks this season. He has done 22½ feet in the broad jump. "Iron Man" Hopkins won both hurdles events against the Gater's meet with Modesto. Arvo Kannisto won the 880 in the good time of 2:03.1.

In comparing the local team with the Gater's team, State seems to have the upper hand, but a few weeks of hard training will put the Ram's track team equal to its opponent.

The Sweetmen rate an even break in the weight events with the potent Jerry Flamm hurling the discus and Duke Worsham, a point winner in last year's conference meet, taking care of the javelin throw.

England, in the 18th century, had a clever but open system of political corruption. Those who wished to buy government positions advertised in the same newspapers with the officeholders who had them for sale.

Crew Scores Upset Victory; Meets Poly, Dons For Title

Scoring a sensational upset win over a highly favored San Mateo Junior College boat, the Ram crewmen shoved themselves back into the thick of the conference fight and will battle Oakland Poly tomorrow, and the University of San Francisco Sunday in the deciding league races.

Despised shortenders, after losing two out of three races in the first half of the conference competition, the Gaddy men scored the most amazing win of the season thus far, when they nosed out the title bound Bulldog boat by a scant six feet after a thrilling bow to bow battle down the 2000 meter waterway. Time for the race, 7:05, was the fastest made over the Marina course this year.

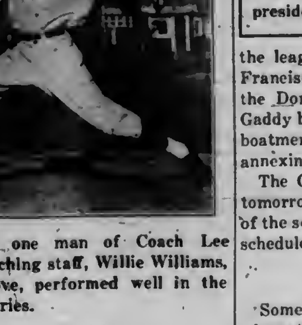
Perfectly handled by the dynamic coxswain, Willie Latz, the Powell Streeters matched the long powerful strokes of the pennsula navy all the way down the course, and then responded to the call for a sprint which shoved them in front in the last hundred yards.

Title Hopes

In order to finish in the championship bracket, the local must score two victories in their races this week.

Tomorrow the Red sweepswingers met the weak Oakland Poly crew, and, barring unfortunate accidents, should score a victory, according to Mentor Jack Gaddy.

The real crucial of the season will be staged on Sunday, when the Rams meet the league leading University of San Francisco crew. In their last meeting the Dons scored a close victory, but Gaddy believes that his fast improving boatmen are capable of winning and annexing the championship cup.



The Oakland Poly race will be held tomorrow at 4:30, while the final race of the season against the Hilltoppers is scheduled for Sunday at 11:30.

Talent, Glamour Promised By "SF" Society's "Mr. X"

"Mr. X, as sensational and brilliant an entertainer as ever set foot upon the stage of the San Francisco Junior College, will positively and without fail make his debut at the Block Society 'Suppressed Desire' dance Friday night," said Jerry Flamm in a private interview last night.

According to Flamm, Block SF Society Prexy and discoverer of this outstanding, up-and-coming Broadway star, the Block dance is merely the first step toward a world of success and glamour for so talented a person as is the mysterious Mr. X. Flamm urges everyone who can do so to be in attendance at the "Suppressed Desire" dance Friday night in order to give his discovery a welcome which, without doubt, he is entitled to.

TWIRLER

Benjamin Franklin, the great American diplomat, inventor, philosopher, and originator of the post office system, attended school for the two years between the ages of eight and ten.

BLOCK S. F. MEETING

All members of the Block Society are urged to attend the next meeting of the organization which will be held on next Tuesday, April 5, in the Galileo Little Theater at 7:45 p.m., according to Jerry Flamm, president of the group.

Some flowers do not have the same odor at all hours, Collier's magazine discloses. The variation in their scent is exemplified by the orchid, which may smell of heliotrope in the morning, carnation during the day, and lilac at night.

WOMEN'S SPORT PARADE

By JEAN PAGE

"Foiled again," moaned many an ambitious WAAer at college when, after making extensive plans for a gala playday, which was to include women from eight colleges, a letter was received from Marin inviting our group to a playday on April 23, the date selected for the playday here. Committee chairmen of the playday that might have been were: Ellen Cumming, general chairman; Margaret Wormell, luncheon chairman; Gail Hanna, decoration chairman; and rearrangement chairman, Dorothy Pilgrim.

Sacramento Junior College and San Mateo have also been invited to the day's proceedings at Marin. Sports, in which there will be team games, are tennis, badminton, volleyball, and baseball. Two golfers, two archers, and two horsewomen will be invited from each school. The college was requested to send a basketball team to play in an exhibition game following the luncheon. Cost of the meal is 25 cents. A sign-up sheet will be placed in the Galileo gym and all who plan to attend should sign soon.

• • •

Last Saturday, sixteen of the more proficient bronco busters of the college drove down to Jack London's ranch where they went out in groups of eight on an hour and a half horseback ride. After riding, they reverted to a milder form of exercise, ping pong, and remained for dinner at 6 o'clock. Besides students, Carl Vandenburg, Academy riding instructor, and Miss Patricia Ricciardi, college instructor, were among the party.

• • •

And while on the subject of riding, a word of praise is due riding manager, Mardis Mullin, who has her news ready and waiting for Gail Hanna when she comes around to gather it up.

And, incidentally, Mardis has promoted several successful riding ventures this semester. Mullin, take a bow.

• • •

Your newsreel photographer, Virginia Kwiatt, began the parade of motion pictures of women's sports at the college, last Saturday when she took pictures of both baseball and tennis.

• • •

This could be entitled, "Where is my wandering WAA council tonight", for no sooner was the council firmly entrenched in a room of its own in which to hold Tuesday 10 o'clock meetings, than came an official edict which said, to-wit, "Scram". How about an advertisement in The Guardsman?

Wanted: One room for one group of women to hold one meeting once a week to discuss one subject: athletics.

We think it's one swell idea.

• • •

WAAmblings:

Tennis: A chart of the singles tournament has been posted at the Palace of Fine Arts and at Galileo. Those playing in the tournament should be sure to consult the chart and find out who and when they play their match. Unfortunately, in the drawing, four of the leading players were picked to play against one another at the start of the tournament. Sue Muther will play Annette Schunick and Jackje Kramer will play Tillie Huddleson.

Rifle: Next week, Gail Hanna and Virginia Kwiatt will participate in a women's intercollegiate championship match.

Some very fetching pictures of WAA activity should be printed on the sport page in the near future, according to Messrs. Dick Simpers and Elwin Marg, who spent an enjoyable afternoon snapping the lasses at play.

EISAN'S RAMS TREK TO MEET SANTA ROSA "BEARCUB" NINE

Rose City Nine Reputed To Have Best Squad In History; Treacy Slattery Chosen To Pitch Second Contest For College Baseball Team

San Francisco Junior College Rams baseball team travel to Santa Rosa this Saturday to cross bats with the "Bear Cub" nine. The games will be played at the Junior College diamond with the first contest getting under way at twelve-thirty. In tangling with the "Cubs" the Powell Street boys will be facing the toughest opposition they have encountered all season. Santa Rosa has a host of excellent material this year, being coached by "Cookie" Sypher.

Chief amongst Sypher's hopefuls are the Buzzini brothers, George and "Tony". George will be remembered as that sharpshooting forward of the "Bear Cub" basketball team and his brother "Tony" is reputed to be the hardest hitter on the Santa Rosa nine.

Pitchers Strong

Coach Sypher is blessed with a strong pitching staff this year, having Alan Furber who held a hard-hitting Stanford Frosh team to one run and one hit. Don Fredson is a right hander with plenty of possibilities. Other possible starters are "Red" Baumeister and George Bogdonoff.

Behind the bat for the Santa Rosan's will be Jack Randall, a good catcher with a powerful throwing arm.

Last year's all-conference first baseman, Lyn Graham, will be covering the initial sack for the "Bear Cubs". "Bud" Laughlin and Joe Dosal are other outstanding players on the Santa Rosa team.

Slattery, Possible Starter

Coach Lee Eisan of the Rams will start his regular team with the possible exception that Treacy Slattery will be used to hurl the second game of the doubleheader.

The starting Ram infield will consist of "Mickey" Berman at first base, Jim Coen at the Keystone sack, Arnold Banta will cover the torrid corner. Kent Baird will open the game at shortstop.

Curcio To Hurl

Behind the log for the locals will be either Dave Johnson or Ray Egelhofer. Johnson will probably get the call in the first game with Egelhofer catching the nightcap. Frank Nilan, Paul Hjort, and Weaver Galbraith will play the outfield for the San Francisco squad.

Pitching in the first game will be "Big-Ed" Curcio who has shown great form and should give the Santa Rosa team plenty of trouble. Slattery will probably hurl the second contest with Bob Gardner and Bill Williams held in reserve.

BASEBALL TEAM DROPS TWINBILL TO BUCCANEERS

Hopes for a baseball championship took a turn for the worse when the Ram baseballers met a hard-hitting Modesto outfit and came out on the short end of the score in both games of the scheduled doubleheader, last Saturday at Funston Feld. The score in the first game was 14 to 2, and 9 to 2 in the second contest.

Modesto came to town with a team of sluggers who in the initial encounter hit San Francisco pitchers, Curcio and William, for fourteen runs and nineteen hits, while pitcher Samulson of the "Pirates" held Ram batters to one measly hit and two runs. Right fielder Boseccaci of Modesto had a great day at bat, getting five hits in six times at bat, one of his hits being a long home-run. Catcher Bill Roberts also connected for a home run.

In the second encounter the Powell Street boys put up a better fight but pitcher Hal Lee was also stingy with basehits, allowing only four hits during the entire game. Bob Gardner, Ram hurler, pitched great ball for the home towners for five innings, but in the last two frames the "Pirates" got to him for six hits and six runs.

Frank Nilan, left fielder for San Francisco, batted out two of his teams four hits. Ray Egelhofer caught a good game for the Rams besides getting a hard hit single to hat in the two San Francisco runs.

Dave Johnson, first string catcher for the Rams, came out of the first encounter with a busted finger and will probably be out of the lineup for close to three weeks.

AFTER COLLEGE WHAT?

By Anne Rabinowitz

Dentists, like doctors, are engaged in the job of making and keeping people well. However, the dentist's problem is more definite, so his tasks are easier than the doctor's.

Besides mental ability, the dentist must be skillful with his hands, and be physically strong enough to endure exacting indoor work.

A dentist, successful in general practice, says that the sense of feeling and delicacy of touch necessary is inherent and cannot be acquired. The dentist is usually a practical psychologist, analyzing his patients and the best way to handle each.

Knowledge of biology, chemistry, anatomy, and bacteriology are important inclusions in the dentist's education, in addition to a study of the teeth.

The student considering dentistry ought not overlook the necessity of buying equipment for his office, which costs two or three thousand dollars. It is often possible to get a great deal second-hand ,which is as serviceable as if it were new.

It is more difficult for women to become established in dentistry because the general public is still skeptical of women dentists, and it takes a long time to build up a paying practice. One woman dentist suggests that unless a girl has a relative or friend, who is willing to admit her into his office, she should seriously think twice before considering dentistry.

As a secretary-nurse for a dentist, a girl may find an interesting, fair-paying profession. She assists in the office, making appointments, sending out bills, and attending to general routine. In addition, the nurse sterilizes instruments ,assists with fillings, and acts as general office helper. Office work of another type might not appeal to a secretary as might this combined position.

Each year new methods are adopted to insure the care of school childrens' and workers' teeth. Schools, industrial plants, and large corporations maintain dental clinics. Each of these offers positions to the dental surgeon and the trained dental assistant.

Besides the dentist, with whom we come in contact, there is the man known as the mechanical dentist. He is the skilled mechanic who makes, in his laboratory, the artificial materials needed by the dental practitioner.

The dental radiographer is also an important aid to the dentist.

Great strides have been made during the past few decades since the X-ray has supplanted supposition with fact. Because of his new knowledge, the dentist is very gradually erasing the handicap of the public's fear complex, which originated when dentistry was crude.

Also winners of various events in the recent three-day State Championship matches held at the National Guard Armory will receive awards.

Those who are to receive medals for league competition are: Don Smith, George Deiser, and John Julius. Honorable mention: John Benton, Bill Gibson, L. G. Hammer, Kermit Wright, Duane Peterson, Al Gerber, Gail Hanna, Henry Cavagnola, Virginia Kwiatt.

Those who placed in the State Championship match are: Bill Hancock, Don Smith, George Dieser, John Benton, Virginia Kwiatt, Betty Hyde, and Duane Peterson.

WARD MEDITATES AFTER DARK

wouldn't it be better to have just jazz?

Still going strong, seven times a week, is Sherman Clay's Magic Hour of Recorded Music (KJBS: 10-11:30): With no serious competition, it gives opera on Wednesdays, popular works on Saturdays, and anything for the rest of the week. Without a doubt it is the most inconsistently excellent of all recorded programs on the air. Whoever selects the music must go down on record for his astonishing taste. One night there will be Ethelbert Nevin and Igor Stravinsky; the next, Johann Strauss and J. S. Bach.

However, no other radio program offers you a Beethoven Op. 130 quartet a week and something modern every other night or so. And the hour is perfect for concentrated listening, the announcer is often amusing, the program is not always the best; still every evening there is at least one worth-while work.

Also, we have been amazed to find an enormous lot of people addicted to listening as faithfully as we listen—a sign, more or less, that not every college student would rather tune in a dance band than something that carries thought content and lasting value.

PEACE ASSEMBLY PLANNED FOR APRIL 27

Plans for the annual April Rally, local counterpart of the nation-wide peace strike, were made last week at the meeting of the College Peace Society.

Two adult speakers and four student orators are scheduled to speak at the two-hour assembly in the Powell Street lecture hall, April 27. They will discuss collective security, the world situation, legislation affecting war and peace, women and peace, and the peace movement.

After listening to a summary of pertinent bills before Congress last Friday, the group decided to endorse the Nye-Kvale Bill for optional ROTC rather than compulsory military training and to condemn the Industrial Mobilization Plan providing for a military dictatorship in time of war.

Robert Porter was chosen to become the new corresponding secretary when Fred Vast resigned. Letters have already been sent to the California Congressional delegation and to the Department of State calling for a foreign policy of cooperation with peace-loving nations to curb aggression. A letter was also sent to Senators McAdoo and Johnson urging defeat of the Vinson Bill, before the Senate, appropriating a billion dollars for the navy. Replies have been received from Representative Havenner and the Department of State.

Next meeting of the group will be held Friday night, April 22, at the home of Doris Speroni, 441 Fair Oaks Street. Military training will be debated by Porter and Jean Page.

Alpha Gamma Sigma To Form Committee At Friday Meeting

Next meeting of the local chapter of Alpha Gamma Sigma, state-wide scholarship society, will be held next Friday at 2:00 o'clock in the Little Theatre at Galileo. Scheduled for discussion is the formation of a scholarship committee to aid students with any difficulties they may have. The proposed committee would be composed of members of the society and would attempt to assist students in various courses.

Another feature of the meeting will be a report by Jerry Flamm, president of the chapter, on his recent trip to Pasadena, where he acted as a delegate to the convention of the organization.

It is planned, according to Flamm, to hold a general assembly for the student body after the Easter vacation, in order to acquaint the students with the aims and purposes of Alpha Gamma Sigma and the qualifications for membership. There are at present 62 members of the group, but there are still some who are eligible for membership who have not joined.

AMS Schedules Barn Dance For April 8 In Peninsula Area

Setting April 8 as the date for the Men's Club barn dance, A.M.S. President, Al Williams, said that the affair would definitely be held at the Belmont Country Club.

The club will be especially decorated for the occasion with cornstalks, straw, and hay, lending a barnyard atmosphere to the evening. A hay slide will be installed at the entrance, and, according to Williams, "none may pass without going down the slide, so they had better wear clothes that can take it."

Besides having spacious balconies for dancing, the club is reported to have one of the largest dance floors on the peninsula.

Last spring a similar affair was given by the Men's Club at Vallomar, to which students were transported in trucks. Because of the expense entailed in such an elaborate arrangement, students will have to furnish their own transportation to and from the dance, Williams said.

There is a barbecue pit at the club and it is expected that hot dogs and cider (soft) will be furnished as refreshments. Music will be supplied by Paul Low and his orchestra.

Cameramen Study Film Developing

John E. Booher, chemistry teacher of the Junior College, is the sponsor of this new college activity. Mr. Booher gave some illustrations of the amount of light that should pass through the lens, and certain figures used in focusing the camera properly. Sam Galstaun, organizer of this club, stated that election of officers would not be held due to the small attendance at the first meeting. The general purposes of the Camera Club are: to further the member's knowledge of cameras, to learn how to develop and to print pictures, and to have fun with a camera.

In order to illustrate to the members the process in developing films, a film will be developed in the dark room at the next meeting in room 153 at Galileo on Tuesday, March 29. The meeting hour is 2:30 p.m. This meeting schedule is not definite, so all who are interested in or are members of the Camera Club, attend the next meeting to help decide upon an agreeable time to meet and to elect officers.

Musicians Plan Evening Concert

Tentative plans for an invitation concert to be given in the evening of April 21 in the little theatre at Galileo High School are still in the making, said Flossita Badger, Music Club sponsor. The A Cappella Choir, male quartet, and other groups, will feature in the concert besides solo numbers.

Miss Badger took part in the annual Bach concert given by the Berkeley Violin Club recently. She sang two arias from the Bach cantatas. Other numbers on the program included a piano and a flute soloist, who, besides Miss Badger, a soprano, were accompanied by an orchestra.

The men and women's choruses have been organized into Glee clubs. New members are encouraged to join.

Business Women To Hear Reporter

Reservations are now being made for the Associated Business Women's monthly dinner-meeting to be held at the Terrace Tea Room, 334 Sutter Street, Monday, April 4, at 6 o'clock. George A. Kauffman, local writer and reporter connected with the publicity department of Berkeley public playgrounds, will discuss the question of unions for office workers.

Margaret Flournoy, sponsor of the group, expressed the desire that women business students come in order to get unbiased information concerning the issues involved in joining a union. They should make reservations with her at Girls' High School or Galileo High School in due time to make all necessary arrangements.

Skating Sign-up Ends Tomorrow

Sign-up deadline for the Rifle and Pistol Club annual combination skating party and weenie bake is tomorrow evening, according to officers of that organization.

However, those intending to go need pay only 25 cents apiece, the other 30 cents being payable upon arrival at Peninsula Beach, scene of this year's extravaganza.

The money paid here provides for transportation while the rest goes for skating privileges at the rink. The beach, where the fire will be built, and the roasting take place, is located nearby the skating rink, said Bill Gibson, club Vice-President, in full charge.

"It is imperative that all who intend going pay up immediately so that we can arrange transportation without any last-minute hitches," he said. Gibson is also making arrangements for the Rifle and Pistol Club annual dance to be held April 21.

One need not be a member of the club to attend any of these functions. Information may be had by calling at the Galileo rifle range in the basement any afternoon except Wednesday.

Newmaneers Hike To Big Lagoon

Final arrangements were made at the last meeting of the Newman Club for their hike to Big Lagoon. The hike will take place Sunday, April 3, and club members and their friends will meet at quarter to nine at the Ferry Building on that date.

They will take the 9 a.m. boat to Sausalito and then the train to Mill Valley and from there hike to Big Lagoon. A full day of activity is planned by the committee handling the affair.

The committee in charge of the affair consists of Robert Burroughs, chairman, and Treacy Slattery, Dave Johnson, and Bill Williams are his assistants.

Gilkey, Uselak To Be Honored

Honor awards will be given this term to Bernard Uselak and Jack Gilkey by the Pi Mu Gamma pre-medical society.

The award, an Honor Key, is presented each term to members of the society whose scholarship deserve it.

This college has the first and only Pi Mu Gamma chapter in the United States. It was founded three years ago (according to its president).

Japanese Announce Benefit Raffle

Continuing its very active program for the semester, the Japanese Students' Club announces its semi-annual benefit raffle which will be held on April 30, at the Japanese Y.M.C.A.

With two radios as main prizes, the raffle promises to be a huge success. Tickets are now on sale and may be purchased from any member of the club.

Registration for the Advance, which will be held at Stanford University on April 9, has been completed and it is believed that the club will be well represented.

Bridge Club Pleads For More Members

More students are wanted to join the Contract Bridge Club under the leadership of Jim Sprague. The club meets every day at Galileo from 1 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. in Library on the third floor.

Over twenty students are now members of the club, which is sponsored by Alden Smith, public speaking instructor in the college. Fee for admission to join is 10 cents per student. More instructors in the college are needed for sponsors. Those interested, are asked to see Jim Sprague.

Chinese Conduct Numerous Events

By an announcement from Andrew Auyoung, president of the Chinese Cub, it was disclosed that the club has several tentative activities planned for the near future. Among these plans are: a house party, to be held on the evening of April 1; a hayride, scheduled for April 10; and a skating party scheduled for April 13.

"These activities are all tentatively planned, and definite word will be given later concerning all of them," stated Auyong.

Omicron Phi Pi To Dine In Oakland

Resolving to make its annual dinner an event to be well remembered by all who attend, the college Economics Honor Society has chosen Hotel Lake Merrit as the scene for the gala event Saturday, April 2. This dinner dance is the only social event given by the society and offers an opportunity for all the members.

"We want every member to attend and bring a guest. We also invite all prospective members of the society to come out and get acquainted," Dr. Michael Zarchin, faculty adviser of the organization stated.

The committee in charge of arrangements for the party is under the direction of Mike Klenhonoff, assisted by Cecilia Elliot and Doris Speroni.

The last meeting before the Spring vacation will be held tonight at the home of Bill Simonds, 101 Darien Way (car K or 12 at Balboa Terrace st.), to discuss the pros and cons of the present labor split.

HEA Meets Today At Galileo

Regular meeting of the Home Economics Association will be held today at 2:15 o'clock in room 317 at Galileo. Plans for the coming fashion show and all-day excursion will be discussed.

The club will also visit Sloane's department store today and hear a lecture on interior decorating by Edwin Hunt, instructor at the California Extension. Many of the members intend to attend a similar lecture by Ralph Power at Breuner's department store, 12 o'clock next Friday. Anyone interested may hear the lecture.

Soon after Easter, the HEA plans to invite Ruth Mowart, who was a guest speaker at the last Associated Women Student's tea, to speak at the Powell Street lecture hall to both the club members and all Home Economic classes.

Army-Navy Starts Magazine Drive

In an effort to bring relaxation and happiness to disabled service men in the Letterman and other service hospitals, Gordon Soilman, President of the Army and Navy Club, announced that the organization will start a magazine drive to collect magazines for presentation to the men in nearby service hospitals.

"A box to deposit magazines in will be put in the hall of the Powell Street Building," said Sollman. "All magazines of any type deposited in the box will be greatly appreciated. Bring your discarded magazines, deposit them in the box set aside for them, and we in turn will turn them over to the hospitals."

As previously announced, the members of the club will journey to Hamilton Field this Sunday to view the air maneuvers in connection with Army Day and will depart immediately after the ceremony for a picnic in Marin County.

Members of the organization are requested to give their money for the excursion to George Dieser.

Moeller Sells Tickets To Drama

Students desirous of seeing "Der Zerbrochene Krug", a German comedy, will be able to obtain their tickets from Eric Moeller, sponsor of the club. Price of admission will be twenty-five cents. Tickets should be obtained before Tuesday, March 29.

Students Cooperate With Hotel Men In Survey of Citizens

Cooperating with Chapter Four of the Hotel Greeter's Association the Division will give its aid in conducting a survey among the residents of the city. The purpose of the survey is to determine what the average citizen thinks of hotels and hotel service. The results of the house to house canvass will be used by the American Hotel Advisory Council in furthering the interest of hotel business.

Clark Chittick, hotel student, was the principal speaker at the monthly meeting of the Hotel Greeters held at the Empire Hotel. Chittick's subject dealt with points of interest in the vicinity of San Diego. He has had the opportunity to make first hand observations because his father owns and operates La Jolla Manor at San Diego. The elder Chittick flew north to hear his son's address and while in the city was the guest of the hotel division.

The first issue of "California Industrial Education News Notes", of which John P. Gifford, former coordinator of the hotel division, is editor-in-chief, contained two articles pertaining to the division. Don Perham, English instructor, is also on the staff of the magazine published by the Bureau of Trade and Industrial Education.

Arthur C. Kallet, associated with Dean-Witter Company, started a ten-week course in statistics last week. Kallet often charts the financial graphs appearing in one of the leading dailies.

Guests of the hotel group this week were: Marjorie Glass, editor of the Beverage Industry News, and Hugo Callenberg.

French Students To Gather Tonight At 8

Tonight Le Circle Francais, the college French Club, will meet at the home of Julian Wolfsohn, 1800 Gough Street, at 8 o'clock.

Wolfsohn has not revealed his program, but he did intimate that it would be "une bonne affaire".

Plans for the club's French dinner will be formulated so that the students may soon get their first taste of typical French dishes such as pate de foie gras (goose liver) and truffes (mushrooms).

Chittick Addresses Greeters' Society

Members of the Hotel and Restaurant Management Society went en masse to the monthly meeting of the Hotel Greeter's Association held at The Empire Hotel last week. The reason for the exodus was the fact that Clark Chittick, Vice-President of the club, delivered an address before the association. Chittick had as his subject, points of interest in the vicinity of San Diego. The society plans to hold a meeting in the near future.

FACULTY GROUP IN EXAMINATION OF CURRICULUM

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Faculty Association, held Tuesday, March 22, completion of the newly-organized committee for the study of the curriculum of the college was announced. The curriculum committee will consist of Margaret Dougherty, Edward E. Sandys, Bertha Mae Keller, Alfred P. Agosti, J. Graham Sullivan, Grant F. Marsh, J. Paul Mohr, Thomas A. Gabbert, Harold W. Leuenberger, Henry J. Ralston, and Franklin C. Sewell, chairman.

The purpose of this organization, according to Joseph E. Williams, Faculty Association President, is, "to study the curricula of other junior colleges and universities with a view toward bringing college education nearer to the aims and desires of the student body. The general plan of development will be to carry out the three-fold recommendations which have already been approved by the association."

These recommendations are to provide students with an opportunity to program courses in the following three fields:

1. General college.
2. Semi-professional and vocational.
3. University.

A first group, which will study the curricula of Biological Science, Physical Education and Health majors, will be headed by Kenneth L. Hobbs. Assisting Hobbs will be Glenn A. Noble, Verrel A. Weber, and Leland G. Eisan.

Research in the Physical Sciences will be done by a committee consisting of Thomas J. Bass, Louis Berman, Glen D. Camp, George L. Green, William K. Mayo and Milton J. Polissar, chairman.

Another group will consist of Margaret Flourney, chairman, J. Graham Sullivan, Ward M. Nichols, Lowell M. Hollingsworth, John R. Herman, and Claire Cuneo.

Completing the study will be a fourth committee which will center its interests with the curriculum of students majoring in social sciences, and arts. Miriam Gatley will serve as chairman.

CINCH NOTICES MAILED SOON

Cinch notices will be mailed from the Registrar's office at the end of this week, warned Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar. Sophomores and high Freshmen with deficient grades of D or F will receive warnings addressed in their own name. Entering students, however, will receive notice of their deficiency through their parents, to whom the warnings will be addressed.

AMS SLATES BARN DANCE FOR FRIDAY AT BELMONT

Country Club Boasts Large Floor, Good Orchestra; Students Must Furnish Own Transportation For Jig

Fortunate will be those patrons of last week's Block SF "Supressed Desire" dance who donned barnyard costumes. They will be saved the trouble of re-costuming for the Men's Club Barn Dance to be held at the Belmont Country Club this Friday night.

The club will be especially decorated for the occasion with haystacks, cornstalks and straw, lending a barnyard atmosphere to the evening. Also, there is being installed a slide "guaranteed not to splinter" down which all must go in order to get to the dance floor. "This dance floor is reputed to be the largest and best on the peninsula," said Al Williams, Men's Club President. "It was obtained in order that there be room for all who have been attending college dances. Admission is free, admittance being given all students with their friends and a student body card.

"However," he added, "all must furnish their own transportation because we are unable to obtain straw-filled trucks as we did last year. The club is but 45 minutes' drive from the city."

Experience Influences

Williams was referring to the similar affair given by the Men's Club at Vallemar last year. A fleet of trucks were rented, filled with straw and loaded with students. The expenses entailed in such a procedure detracted from the benefits at the dance itself resulting in this year's policy.

Williams also disclosed that there will be a barbecue pit on the grounds where students will be enabled to have a weenie-bake with "soft" apple cider to drink. Besides these mentioned items, the affair will be furnished with numerous other phases which lend to the rural atmosphere and barefoot boy days.

Dancers will swing to the "melodious strains" of Paul Low's Hollywood orchestra. Music starts promptly at nine o'clock and will stop on or about midnight.

La Pastoral

In an effort to further capture a rural spirit, a number of groups are making plans to rent haywagons, buckboards, saddle horses and trucks in which to arrive at the dance "a la pastoral".

"We have made extensive plans for this extravaganza in an effort to produce the finest dance of the long string of Men's Club social successes. We have hay and horses, corncobs and cuties, rural rhythm and rambunctious rowdies, all the elements that go to make up a truly colossal barn dance," Williams said.

Williams and the other Men's Club officers, Jack Reynolds, Bruce Bolton and Mervyn Weiner, worked as an arrangement and decoration committee for the affair, and were directed by the AMS adviser, Joe Amori.

"Belmont Country Club is an ideal place for this type of affair," Amori stated, "since it has all the rural color and surroundings, and none of the unusual inconveniences that we encountered in our initial effort at producing a barn dance."

Anthony Bledsoe To Speak At Psych. Assembly Fri.

Anthony Bledsoe, Berkeley police officer, will be the featured speaker at an assembly next Friday, April 8, at noon, in the Powell Street Lecture Hall, according to Harold Leuenberger, psychology instructor.

The assembly is being sponsored by the psychology department and is open to all students. Instructors wishing to take their classes to the meeting should notify Paul Pitman, assistant to President Cloud.

Bledsoe will discuss the scientific methods of crime prevention. He is expected to devote a section of his talk to the use and value of the lie detector. Ever since the lie detector began to be used in criminal cases a dispute has raged as to its efficiency and its trustworthiness. Many arguments have been advanced defending and attacking the reliability of the instrument. Officer Bledsoe will present the facts, thus giving students a fair insight into the controversy and an impartial basis from which to form an opinion. He will undoubtedly relate experiences of authorities in their use of the machine.

"Besides the psychology department," Leuenberger said, "sociology, science, and pre-legal students should be especially interested in the assembly. Other students not enrolled in the aforementioned courses are also invited to attend."

Friday's program will be the first assembly to be presented by a department this year. Previous meetings have been sponsored by organizations.

Men's Chorus Plans Organization; Will Apply For Charter

Plans for a constitution, and organization of future activities, are being drawn up by the members of the Men's Chorus of the college, and will be presented in the near future, according to Paul Fechtner, chairman of the group. The chorus is composed of 33 members, and is under the direction of Charles H. McKiernan, of the music department.

In a recent election the following students were elected as a Board of Control: Paul Fechtner, chairman, John Conlon, Jack Lloyd, Don Clark and Bill Puris.

"In April, the male quartet, selected from this group, will take part in the Spring Music Festival, in San Jose," said Fechtner, "and this will be the first time in two years that the college has been represented at this affair. This festival is an annual affair that alternates between College of Pacific, in Stockton, and San Jose State College, in San Jose; and is one in which many junior colleges from Northern and Central California participate.

"The Male Chorus hopes to become a definite part of the San Francisco Junior College music division," added the chairman.

According to Fechtner, the quartet is making plans to offer selections at businessmen's luncheons, college rallies and dances.

E. Rehbock Tells of Busy Debate Series Till Semester's End

With challenges coming in from other colleges, who wish to debate San Francisco Junior College, the forensic society will have a busy schedule for the remainder of the semester, according to Elizabeth Rehbock, Phi Rho Pi Secretary.

"Under the guiding hand of Lloyd Luckmann, faculty sponsor of the forensic society, the debaters have met with unusual success," said Miss Rehbock.

"The Ram debaters met College of Pacific last Wednesday, and Coalinga Junior College last Friday, and everything went well," she said.

On Friday, April 22, Lorraine Johnson and Ken Germann will travel to Sacramento to encounter the Sacramento Junior College debaters, on the proposed constitutional amendment for a referendum on war.

"These two debaters have established an enviable record thus far, by defeating the State of California High School champions," asserts Miss Rehbock.

"A tentative date for the last week in April has been set for an engagement with Salinas Junior College, with Charles Vaughn and Joe Meeko representing the Rams," added the secretary.

"Plans are also being drawn up," she continued, "for a joint radio program with San Mateo Junior College, to be sent out over short wave probably around May 1. The college will be represented by Charles Vaughn and Elizabeth Rehbock. Further details for the radio program will be announced in the near future."

Miss Rehbock urged that all students interested in debating should watch the bulletin board for news of college debates and attend whenever possible, for the college debating team is rapidly gaining recognition throughout the state.

Honor Society Plans General Meet April 28

Purpose of Assembly To Acquaint Students With Group

At last Friday's meeting of the local chapter of Alpha Gamma Sigma, state-wide scholarship society, members listened to reports by Jerry Flamm, chapter president, and Albert Graves on the convention of the society which they attended recently in Pasadena. Plans were made for a general assembly of the student body on April 28, and for other activities of this semester.

The assembly, which will be for the purpose of acquainting the student body as a whole with the aims and purposes of the Alpha Gamma Sigma, will be held April 28 at 11 a.m. in the Lecture Hall at the Extension Building. It is planned to have all classes excused so that students may attend. Robert Sibley, Secretary of the California Alumni Association, has been invited to speak, and Mrs. Walker of Santa Rosa Junior College will present the local chapter with its charter. There will be a number of delegates from the Santa Rosa chapter at the assembly.

Name Changed

Originally designated as the Mu chapter of the society, the group has changed its name officially to Omega, which, the officers believe, is more significant.

Phyllis Learned, vice-president, and Frank Scofield, secretary-treasurer of the group, were appointed as co-chairmen of a social committee to plan a program of educational and social events for next semester. Activities suggested included establishment of a vocational day and holding of a junior college congress for discussion of current events.

Plans are also under way for formation of a scholarship committee to aid students who may find difficulties with their studies. Members of the committee will be chosen on recommendation of instructors in various courses.

Scholarships Offered

Many scholarships are being offered by California schools and colleges through Alpha Gamma Sigma, each chapter in good standing being entitled to submit one candidate for each scholarship. Only students qualified for permanent membership are eligible.

Among the institutions offering such opportunities are University of San Francisco, University of Southern California, College of the Pacific, Mills College, LaVerne, Pomona, Whittier, Redlands and Occidental colleges. Interested members should see Alice Cooper, faculty sponsor, as soon as possible, as all applications must be in the mail by April 10.

Time Slip Deadline Set For April 18th

April 18, which is the Monday after Easter vacation, is the date when next NYA time slips are due, stressed Helene Turner, College NYA director. Slips will not be taken in after that date.

Annual Graduation Exercises To Be Held May 20th

Opera House Will Be Scene of Sophs' Grand Finale

As the date of Commencement, May 20, draws near, preparations are going forward to make the grand finale of this year's Sophomore class a momentous occasion. This year's Commencement at the War Memorial Opera House, will be the third in the history of the college. Ceremonies at graduation are the most impressive of any conducted by the junior college.

This semester, for the first time, the graduating class will have an opportunity to vote its preference among the ten students who will be selected as candidates for the valedictorian and salutatorian posts. The two speakers will be chosen from the ten students of both the December and May graduating classes, who have the highest scholastic standings.

Judicial Committee To Choose

The final decision will rest with a judicial committee composed of President Archibald J. Cloud, J. Paul Mohr, registrar; Arthur McCarty and Bertha Keller, class advisers; and two instructors, not yet chosen, from the college speech department. The preference of the Sophomore class will be taken into consideration by the judicial committee when it makes the final selection on the basis of scholarship and oratorical ability on April 21.

The traditional caps and gowns will be worn this year, as in the past. Measurements have already been taken. Those students who failed to have their measurements taken at the stated time must make special arrangements.

Music Planned

The A Capella choir will again contribute to the evening's program with several appropriate selections and it is hoped to have some member of the graduating class render a vocal number. The administrative offices of the college have not divulged the names of the guest speakers but it is known that there will be at least two.

In proportion to the ever-increasing enrollment at the college, this year's graduating class far exceeds that of any previous year. Two hundred students will receive their Associates of Arts diplomas at the graduation exercises in May. Fifty of the students are graduates of the December class and one hundred and fifty are graduates of the May class.

Amstrup Appreciative

"Although it would be better to have an auditorium of our own, as we will soon have, under the present circumstances the War Memorial Opera House will be a fitting place to hold our graduating exercises", declared Irving Amstrup, High Sophomore President. "I would also like to thank all Sophomores for cooperating in being measured for caps and gowns at the specified times. It saved much difficulty. I would also like to thank the class sponsors, Miss Keller and Mr. McCarty for

STUDENT BODY VOTES APPROVAL OF CONSTITUTION; CLUB BOARD CONVENES TOMORROW MORNING

Accept New Document; Section of By-Laws Laid On Table

Final approval of the new constitution of the Associated Students came last Thursday when the student body as a whole met in general assembly and gave its sanction to the document. The constitution was read in full by Student Body President Donald Mix, and no objections were raised, although a few points were clarified for the benefit of those in doubt.

Having received the official stamp of the students' approval, the new constitution, having previously met with the approval of the Executive Council, passed immediately into effect as the fundamental law of the college. Composed of only five articles, it is much briefer than was the old document, as much of the matter formerly contained in articles has been relegated to the by-laws.

Section Disputed

The entire By-laws, except for one small section, were passed and like the constitution became effective immediately. Sub-section C, of section 6, of article 3 of the By-laws was laid on the table, pending further clarification and discussion.

Exact wording of the disputed section reads: "c. There shall be no petition from the action of the Club Advisory Board on a proposed organization charter."

Dr. Milton Polissar, chemistry instructor, objected to the section, saying that he didn't think that the Board should have the final power in granting a charter. He claimed that if the body didn't like a certain organization it could refuse a charter even though the new group wouldn't be hurting anyone but merely be interested in a certain activity. Polissar also maintained that there was a danger of a majority suppressing a minority. He was supported by many students.

Alternatives Named

Edwin C. Browne, dean of men, presented alternatives to giving the Board charter powers. They were: Either to give the Associated Students' Executive Council the power or to have the administration make decisions on charter petitions.

Tomorrow's organization meeting of the Club Advisory Board will afford an opportunity for further discussion on its powers, particularly charter granting. Students will vote on the question at the nomination assembly for aspiring student politicians later in the semester.

Each Chartered Group To Send One Delegate To Meeting Set For Ten O'clock In Powell Street Lecture Hall

Organization of the Club Advisory Board, provided for in the new Associated Students constitution, will be effected tomorrow morning at ten o'clock in the Powell Street Lecture Hall. Each chartered club of the college has been asked to send one representative to the meeting by Don Mix, student body President. Mix intimated that besides the actual formation of the Board a discussion on that body's power to grant charters will probably take place. At last week's constitution ratification assembly a clause dealing with charter granting powers evoked lengthy debate and final action on the question was delayed pending further clarification of the problem.

"It is logical," Mix explained, "that this dispute should be aired at tomorrow's confab. The whole question revolves around the powers and duties of the Club Advisory Board. Non-delegates are invited to attend the session and express their views but they will not be eligible to vote."

Elect Officers

Business before the meeting tomorrow will be election of officers: a President, Vice-President, and Secretary. Besides being leader of the Board and presiding over its meetings the President will be the group's representative on the Associated Students' Executive Council. Plans for the remainder of the semester will also be made.

"Although there will not be much time for any considerable activity," Mix said, "at least we will have a solid foundation on which to build when the 1938 fall term begins. The final decision of the Board's charter powers will be made at the nomination rally (for new student body officers) tentatively set for Monday, April 25."

Five-Point Plan

The Club Advisory Board is being organized to:

1. Serve as an authoritative catalogue for group activities of the various college organizations.

2. Act as a clearing house to develop cooperation among the clubs and to eliminate any friction that may arise.

3. It will be a group of which its main functions shall be to erect and judge standards by which clubs, societies, fraternities and sororities may be granted charters.

4. It would make recommendations on all legislation pertaining to club affairs that would come up before the Executive Council.

5. The Board would also aid groups that have organizational problems or new clubs that need assistance.

Joel Lee Wins Prize For Short Story From Forum

Joel Lee, college author, has been selected by the editorial staff of "Forum", the college's literary publication, to receive the prize offered by that magazine for the best piece of work submitted for the 1938 edition, John Ward, its editor, announced.

Lee will receive a book of his own choice, awarded for his short story entitled "Lonesome Road". Ward indicated that all material has been chosen and the magazine will soon be ready for publication. It is scheduled to make its 1938 appearance at the beginning of May. Besides short stories, the book will also have drama, poetry, and essays.

Tickets for "Forum" are scheduled to go on sale April 19, immediately after Easter vacation. All students wishing to purchase a copy of this year's publication will have to buy their ticket in advance. Price of the magazine is only 15 cents, a limited edition of 400 copies will be issued. Ducats will be sold by staff members only. Anyone contemplating obtaining a 1938 Forum is advised by Business Manager John Healy to get their tickets early as there will probably be a sellout as was the case last year.

A Cappella Choir To Perform For Public Schools Celebration

Directed by Flossita Badger, Music Instructor, the college A Capella Choir will participate in a program at the War Memorial Opera House on Monday evening, April 25.

The program is part of the annual Public Schools Week activity. Also on the program will be an all-city symphonic public school band which will play several pieces. The group has been organized by Dr. Charles J. Lamp and is something novel and a rare achievement.

Another part of the program includes a radio show of "Let Freedom Ring", presented by the Drama students of George Washington High School. The address of the evening will be delivered by Dr. Loren Chandler, Stanford University medical school dean. He will speak on Democracy and the Public Schools. James Leo Halley will preside at the meeting.

Amori, Leuenberger Attend Conference

Present at the seventeenth annual conference of the Northern Section of the California Educational Research Association, which was held at the University of California, Friday and Saturday, April 1 and 2, were Harold Leuenberger and Joseph Amori, instructors at the college.

Leuenberger, instructor in Psychology, addressed the group on the subject of Evaluation Of A Remedial Reading Program, while Amori who lectuers in Health and Hygiene, spoke on the Evaluation Of Hygiene Instruction in Junior Colleges.

Both men gave their discussions Friday afternoon, April 1, during the third section of the meeting.

Rifle, Pistol Club To Hold Dance On Friday, April 22nd

"Silver Room" of the California Club will be the scene of the first annual Rifle and Pistol Club Spring Semi-Formal to be held Friday night, April 22.

Bids are scheduled to go on sale this week featuring a shooting theme, as will the decorations and refreshments of the dance itself. Bill Gibson, vice-president of the marksman organization, is now making plans for a "bulls-eye tag dance", a "22-caliber sandwich" and a bowl of "gun-sling punch".

"Although bids will be limited, all members of the college student body and their friends are invited to attend," said Gibson. "The price is one dollar per couple, which toll we consider as entirely reasonable considering the benefits which will be derived. Even now we are planning quite a few surprises to greet our guests at the affair."

One of the chief purposes for this year's extravaganza is to celebrate the many honors won by shooters of the local marksman teams in the current season. Always active in social activities, club officers conceived the idea of "one big affair" to be held annually by the largest active organization of the college. A good response from the student body in general decided the issue so that machinery was immediately put into motion for the affair to be held this month.

The California Club is located at Clay Street and Van Ness Avenue and is accessible by the Polk, Van Ness cars as well as the California and Sacramento "dinkies" from the ferry.

INSIDE FACULTY POLITICAL RACE

That elections, from small clubs to Associated Students, present themselves regularly to students of the college, is a known fact. Sometimes accepted apathetically, the current semester has aroused noteworthy interest through the stirrings of a new Constitution. Late in April, the college faculty joins the ever-lingering parade of elections by naming officers of the Faculty Association.

Those in the know suggest that qualifications of a Faculty Association leader center in his ability to end a meeting well before the dinner hour, to plan sociable entertainment and to further the necessary business to which the Association is directed.

Jittery

Present leader, Joseph Williams who, although pressed, does not choose to run (definitely), admits that the faculty is as jittery as a grammar school group about to enter a new building, or, maybe even a junior college group.

"Different schools of thought," he says, "are represented among the intellectual giants of the instructional force. Evidence is shown by the deep furrows on the brow of Dr. Robert Parker who is a possible candidate for President of the Faculty Association on the 'Western Americas' ticket. This new ticket is the outcome of extensive research into the life of early political leaders which has undoubtedly given much impetus to the cause of this new ticket apparently headed by Dr. Parker."

Competition

As opposed to the "Western" idea of political manipulation, the "Continental" party under the supposed leadership of Dr. Franklin Cuenta Sewell is rapidly developing from the small child of August, 1935, to the position of a real contender for public support, according to Sewell's press agent. Furthermore, claims said press agent, "Because of the broad political background of Dr. Sewell's various trips to Europe and especially to the Cave of the Winds at Geneva he will undoubtedly head a slate, perhaps even a blackboard, to carry the faculty for the broader ideals of Continental Europe as opposed to the rougher western civilization as championed by Dr. Parker."

> FLASH! LATE BULLETIN!
> Leading politicians worked behind scenes preparing their slates for the approaching Faculty Association elections. In the race are said to be: Graham Sullivan for President; John Ross is the choice for Vice-President; Mildred Williams for Secretary; and Evans Ecke is the favorite for the Treasurer's post. Running for members-at-large are Robert Parker, Laurine Bergin, and Joseph Williams.

Always conscious of the possibility of a late entrant dark horse, the Faculty Association members have scented rumors that a write-in candidate might appear as a new labor party. This new party will have two main objectives. "Three days a week and double the Pay," slogan of the labor group, amply describes these objectives. Support for such a group as this would no doubt be plentiful. However, a split within the party is almost inevitable, since more radical members will attempt to carry through with a slogan, "Two days per week and more Salary." The possibility of the perpetuation of this ideal of more leisure time is quite obvious.

Hill vs. West Side

Since anything is likely to happen, there is a remote possibility that the faculty members from Mount Powell will be defeated decisively by a landslide vote supporting an unnamed candidate from the West Side (Galileo) whose chief interests are Zoological in nature. However, the name of Henry J. Ralston has not been definitely cast into the ring.

KNOWLEDGE AND ACTION

TOO often comes the cry from college students, "What good is all this knowledge ever going to do me?" Students who ask themselves this question are overlooking the fact that along with the knowledge they are gaining comes a much more practical knowledge, namely, the knowledge of how to use knowledge.

Many persons labor under the supposition that knowledge for its own sake is sufficient. If any definite point is to be found in a pursuit of knowledge, that point must lie in the successful application of the knowledge in a logical course of action.

What is important for students to know is the fact that while the instructor may be able to impart any amount of pure knowledge to them, ultimately, the acquiring of the ability to use that knowledge to their best advantage lies largely in their own hands.

Anyone can be shown how to do a thing, but after that it is up to him whether or not he does it. Young people, particularly those who seek a point to everything, will do well to realize the fact.

Knowledge without action is as ineffectual as one shoe. It must go hand in hand with the desire for action. Either without the other is useless.

UNIVERSAL EDUCATION

Comes the announcement from the East of a group of colleges who are participating in a series of radio broadcasts of lectures dealing with art, music, science and literature. The radio station was founded in 1934 and is aided by funds from the Rockefeller Foundation.

Such a project arouses little wonder in the progressive world of today, but the significance of such a step forward is not lost on the persons who realize the future value to the world of universal education.

At such time in the ensuing decades, when by the efforts of the far-sighted individuals who have the best interests of mankind at heart, all the ignorance and dogma that begets dictatorships and wars has been forever and eternally wiped out, then will the race of man be able to swing into the Golden years.

The strides made by education in the last quarter of a century are as nothing to the progress that is to come in this, one of the most important fields of human endeavor.

When the last vestige of illiteracy and ignorance has been banished from the face of the earth, then and only then can man begin to come into the full possession of the wonderful civilization that is potentially his.

Universal education may not be an accomplished fact for centuries, but it is encouraging to note that there are persons and interests who are actively at work on the problem now.

At least there are at present more opportunities for the education of more people than ever before in the history of the world, and the democracies are the nations that are doing the most toward aiding the growth of universal education.

DOING THINGS

The Executive Council may well take pride in the fine job it has done on the drafting, submission and passage of the new constitution. If it is true, as someone once said, that, "the reward of a thing well done is to have done it," then the Council is well rewarded for its efforts.

The members of the group spent many hours in the preparation and revision of the new document. They have overcome many obstacles in the accomplishment of their objective. It is only fitting that they be extended the thanks of the entire student body.

However, credit should be given them, not only for the actual doing, but for the recognition of the need and the subsequent desire to act thereon.

It is generally found that the people who do things are the people who seek the need for things to be done.

FORGET THE BOOKS

Next week students gain a welcome respite from the tedious confines of the classroom at a time when the monotony of the long spring grind is beginning to tell a bit.

The week's vacation can be put to very good use by all. It is imperative that students relax from the strain of midterms, assignments, and the many and varied obligations which go to make up the college life.

In order to gain the greatest benefit from the vacation, it is necessary to utterly forget books and papers for the entire week. Get out into the hills and fields and enjoy the Spring weather. Go out to the beach and soak up the sunshine. Exercise sluggish muscles in the warm air, but most important of all, REST!

Out Of The Fog

By Mac

"After Freshman What?"

Ten smiling freshmen thought jaysee was fine;
Along came a midterm and then there were nine.
Nine little innocents got to class late;
One tried cuttin' and then there were eight.
Eight little students when the quiz was given;
One hadn't studied and so there were seven.
Seven cunning freshies tried cheatin' tricks;
Doc Sewell caught one and then there were six.
Six happy tyros tried to look alive;
One saw a blonde and then there were five.
Five foolish frosh thought the class a bore;
One fell asleep and that left four.
Four fuming freshmen taking History;
One got a "cinch" and then there were three.
Three little "first-years" didn't know what to do;
Another read The Guardsman and then there were two.
Only two freshmen, that's no fun;
Half went home and then there was one.
One poor freshman was one too many;
He got lost and then there wasn't any.
(Moral: "A fine thing!")

Thoughts of a columnist . . . now that Spring has definitely sprung, so what? . . . funny how some people can fool everybody all the time . . . no names, of course . . . why they call it "vacation" and then assign term papers in every class . . . wondering why every semester goes faster . . . wishing Victor could write this column some time . . . realizing that isn't so darn long until finals . . . also realizing we'd better be studying so the sheep that's gonna be our diploma will not be disappointed . . . wondering whom we'll will the column to when we leave . . . deciding there's no one we dislike that much.

SNOOPY

Answering the call of Spring, "Snoopy", wandering mascot-at-large of the college, dropped into the office to inquire the whereabouts of his friend, Hector. Snoopy is shown turning an icy stare on the effervescent freshman, Victor, who is evidently annoying him.

BLAME IT ON EASTER

Easter time is the time for eggs,
The time for eggs is Easter time,
And Easter eggs, like Easter bonnets,
Call for lyrics, odes and sonnets.

We can't write lyrics, odes or sonnets,
Even inspired by Easter bonnets,
And so your pardon we 'umbly beg
For laying this—a poetic egg!

We had all the intentions in the world of presenting, this week, the results of our poll regarding what type of women appeal to the men in the college. However, despite hours (??) spent pounding out a questionnaire on our "getting-weaker-and-weaker" typewriter, we feel that the few answers we have received so far are not a fair representation of the men of the college. Our intention is to get a complete cross-section—politicians, athletes, "brains", characters, average students, the esthetically minded, and even a few faculty members. Anyhow, it all comes out in the next edition—posi-tival!

Although not setting Mental Mutterings up as a radio column, we highly recommend to all lovers of chill-producing horror tales a program called, fittingly enough, "Light's Out" which may be heard over station KPO on Wednesday evenings at 10:30. Starring that super-spook, Boris Karloff, late of the flickers, "Light's Out", presents a half hour of spine shivers guaranteed to scare you silly, if you are the type that scares silly. If you aren't, and you don't get a big bang out of boogey-men, don't bother to tune it; you'll only be bored to bits. Otherwise—Wow!

Hear tell that those lucky ladies who were fortunate enough to attend the AWS-WAA conference at Chico had themselves one swell time. Not only were there some very interesting meetings and discussions, and a lot of fine food-fests, but the girls were treated to an opera, a track meet, a ride around the famed Bidwell park, and a formal banquet and convention ball. Looks like there will be some mighty fine AWS and WAA doings next semester if the girls put into practice some of the excellent ideas they picked up at the convention. And won't it be something when we have our own buildings and can play hostess to all the other junior colleges at a similar conference?

Now that the jig-minded junior collegians have the Block SF "Suppressed Desire" dance tucked under their belts, they are looking forward to the next terpsichorean event on the college calendar, namely, the Men's Club Barn Dance which will be held at the Belmont Country Club next Friday Night. This ultra-ultra setting, usually the scene of the more formal type of clam-bake, will be turned into a rowdy-dowdy cow hollow with cornstalks, straw, and a super-gigantic hay-slide which will, no doubt, be the most popular feature of the evening. Men's Club prexy, Al Williams, promises everyone a good time, to say nothing of some honest-to-Pete "barnyard atmosphere". (No cracks!)

CABBAGES AND KINGS

By Dick Simpers

JUST when anything reaches that point where it seems intolerable for another day, something invariably comes along to break the monotony. In the present case, It's Easter vacation, which comes as a God-send to weary students who have spent three long months grinding monotonously at books and sitting through lecture after lecture. The prospect of a full week with nothing to do but lie in the sun and kill time is enough to bring joy to the heart of even the gloomiest students, despite professorial admonitions that "this is the time to catch up on your work". We could hazard a pretty good guess right now at the amount of studying that will be accomplished during vacation, but perhaps we'd better not.

• • •

For sheer bull-slinging ability, it is doubtful whether any group in the college can approach the Block SF Society. This organization numbers among its members some of the most notorious Münchausens of the city, and when they start pitching it back and forth, there are no lengths to which they will not go in order to surpass one another in relation of incredible and astounding tales. With Weichers, Fex, and Slattery shoveling, meetings of this group eclipse any other entertainment in town, provided, of course, that the listener has a good imagination.

We cannot help getting rather a boot out of the reports the local periodicals carry of military progress from the fronts in China and Spain. On looking at a newspaper, one finds on one side of the page a story from Chinese headquarters giving details of the destruction of thousands of Japanese troops, while in the opposite column will be a release from Tokio telling of the heavy casualties suffered by the Chinese in their latest engagement. Similarly, stories coming out of Loyalist Spain relate the repulse of the rebels at every turn, while almost daily, bulletins appear from insurgent headquarters announcing huge gains in territory. All in all, it's rather confusing.

Those somewhat bedraggled and footsore specimens who limped up Powell Street Monday morning were, in case you didn't know, members of the Newman Club who had spent the previous day trudging over the hills of Marin County on their annual hike. Setting out blithely early Sunday morning, these enthusiastic pedestrians scrambled up cliffs and rolled down banks all day, while a few even went so far as to tumble into various brooks and streams along the way, and all accumulated a thick coating of dust and grime, traces of which are still apparent on several. Stone bruises, skinned knees, torn clothes, and sunburnt noses notwithstanding, however, all were enthusiastic in their recital of the adventures which befell them on the trek.

RAM'S HORN

MEMBER OF FORUM CLUB STRIKES BACK

Dear Junior Collegian Who Wears Sport Clothes and Low-heeled Shoes:

In your letter to the Ram's Horn last week, you wrote that you are just an average college student. You also implied that you wish to maintain your attitude of being right in the middle, not too cold, and never too hot.

My dear young lady, did it ever occur to you that this middle path attitude has its faults? Did the thought ever permeate that bubbling brain of yours that man wouldn't have progressed beyond the tree stage in his development if it hadn't been for the fact that someone wanted to achieve, not the customary, but something better? Think what would have happened if Pasteur, Washington, or Mrs. Dionne had assumed your attitude.

May I rebuke you, too, for your attitude to the various clubs in the college? You don't wish to join the Peace Society because "someone said" they were a bunch of radicals. Did you ever go to a meeting and find out for yourself about these so-called "radicals?" Too, you call the Forum Club a bunch of "self-styled intellectuals". This ires me, because I happen to be a member of this group and I'll be damned if I think I'm intellectual.

This, dear Junior Collegian, sums up my grievances against you. I think the same adjective applies to your "average attitude" as you applied to The Guardsman.

—Jerry Heilhron.

Dear Editor:

One of the most vicious pieces of legislation ever introduced into Congress has been reported out of the House Military Affairs Committee. Known as the Industrial Mobilization and War Profits Bill it would establish a military dictatorship in time of war. This act, introduced by Representative May, "Democrat" of Kentucky, has no place in a country that prides itself on its democratic traditions.

According to its sub-title the measure purports "To prevent profiteering in time of war and to equalize the burdens of war and thus provide for the national defense and to promote peace." However, the May bill does none of these things. It does not take the profits out of war nor does it equalize the burdens of war or promote peace. Instead it establishes a Fascist dictatorship over every section of life of the nation. The plan, in effect, muzzles radio and press; labor and agriculture are controlled. Every male between the ages of 21 and 31 is conscripted under the act's provisions. If enacted the law would fine violators of the "Orders, rules, or regulations made by the President" $100,000 or a year's imprisonment, or both.

As the minority report of the House Military Affairs Committee says, it is "the stuff of which Hitlers are made and the liberties of a free people are lost." A group of prominent citizens, representing educational, religious, labor and business interests, in a letter to President Roosevelt and Congress have labeled the Industrial Mobilization Plan "a blueprint of dictatorship".

The threat of this un-American measure must be met squarely by the populace. It has aroused the nation, but there are still many people who are unaware of its existence or dangers. The College Peace Society is to be commended for its stand against the plan. It is the duty of the rest of the student body to follow that organization's lead. Letters should be sent to your congressman today. Your friends should be informed of the May hill. Much has been said of the threat of Fascism, here is an opportunity to stop its advance.

—Fred Vast.

Twenty-one years ago today, the United States of America entered into a world-wide activity, which proved to be more expensive than the American public of 1917 realized. Although the World War had begun in July, 1914, the United States did not enter until April 6, 1917, and was in the war only for 1 year, 7 months, and 5 days.

Presidential Notes

Please pardon us for bubbling but we want to sincerely thank the entire student association for the splendid spirit of cooperation and interest displayed at last week's constitutional assembly. It is a healthy sign of student growth when collegians demonstrate an interest in matters of their own government, and it makes all the time and effort expended truly worthwhile. Briefly, then, thanks.

The entire Executive Council had a moulding hand in the erection of the new set of guiding principles but a few of that group, notably Al Williams, Florence Murphy and Stan Adams, deserve a special sort of commendation for their untiring labors on behalf of the constitution. We are also especially grateful to Alden Smith, Dean Browne and Lloyd Luckmann of the faculty for the guidance they gave in all matters of the technique and philosophy of constitution building.

It was natural to expect a diversified opinion on some elements contained in the By-laws and the discussion that ended with the Assembly voting to table the final consideration of the charter granting power of the Club Advisory Board was not, as some imagined, "a monkey wrench in the machinery."

However, this indefinite point will not halt our progress in club organization. The election of the officers of the Board will be held on next Thursday at Powell Street. (The time and place will be indicated in a news story on page one of this issue.)

The board will function as planned for the remaining month of the semester. Approval of all group charters will be withheld until the students decide whether or not the board will have final and absolute authority over the function of granting charters.

• • •

"Dishonesty not tolerated by the students of this college." This phrase, a fine statement of the doctrine of student honesty, has been sorely neglected in the management of college activities.

An attempt to rectify the dishonesty wave will be made by the student judicial committee, which will be organized following the period of Spring vacation, and will be effective during the period of finals.

• • •

We have just received administrative approval of the plan to cooperate the Club Advisory Board Election meeting with a Forum on the question of charter granting power. All students AND FACULTY who want to air their views on this controversial point are urged to attend.

AFTER DARK

By John Ward

One of the few and rare treats that the radio has offered recently was a short program of ancient liturgical music, presented on Columbia some time last week. Such an unusual treat called to mind several odd facts about recent musical history, facts that become more and more evident as the recording companies release quantities of so-called "forgotten" music. For, it would appear, the current repertory of symphony orchestras and singers, and instrumentalists has become too hackneyed, too familiar, and they have found relief in the works that have long laid buried in museums and libraries, dusty and silent.

This is reminiscent of other times in music history when such "time-travelling" occurred. Most astonishing was the Mendelssohn production of J. S. Bach's "St. Mathew Passion" in the year 1829. This was the first performance of the work after Bach's death in 1750. And the popularity and, indeed, the present cililization's knowledge of Bach dates from 1829. A strange accident for one of music's greatest figures? Hardly more strange than the fate of all pre-Haydn composers. They have waited in silence until only the 20th century.

Take the example of the Lisztian pianist of the 19th and early 20th century, sensational idol of American audiences. His average program included music written between the years 1791 and 1891—Mozart, Beethoven, Schuman, Chopin, Liszt, Brahms. Rarely did an earlier composer appear on the program. Nothing of Rameau, Scarlatti, Purcell. They were names in the history book.

Suddenly, at the end of the 19th century, certain composers turned to pre-Bach composers for inspiration, for styles and forms. Debussy was one of the instigators of the movement. The fugue became again an artistic medium, and the harpsichord regained a bit of its place in the instrumental world. There followed a sudden interest in early church music. Artists and choirs and orchestras came into being with the sole purpose of playing this old music authenticately. And today we are beholding this minor renaissance, this inventory into pre-19th century music.

The recording companies now lead the way by issuing countless records of Palestrina choral works, madrigals, Monteverde, Boyce, etc. The most recent flowering has been Victor's magnificent set, "The St. Mathew Passion" of Bach. As a matter of fact, it is difficult to find any month when these companies are not releasing some old work as a "find".

Certainly it is time for this "discovery". Music is the most unfortunate of the arts when it comes to extended hearings. Unlike painting or books, which are in good tangible forms, music must be heard, and it must be well performed. And when the artists of the concert hall leave this great music of the past unperformed the musical world loses out altogether.

It is now time for small chamber-music groups to produce the early operas of Peri and Caccini and Monteverde, the madrigal operas of the 16th century polyphonists. And there are the early ballad operas of England and the lovely works of Purcell. Here is limitless treasure-house for amateurs. Also, there are many, many lovely songs from the Elizabethean songsmiths which would color a recital by Thomas or Tibbett.

Such a festival as the annual Bach week in Carmel should not be an isolated example of its kind. Every city could follow suit without expense or great trouble. Why don't those who complain of dull summers, when the concert halls are closed, begin such small organizations in San Francisco or any city where there are a dozen sincere musicians? It would be difficult to find a more rewarding type of work, if work it could be called. And, after all, those early masters of Italy and England wrote their songs and madrigals for entertainment at family dinners and clubs, for bad church choirs and for public entertainments.

TRACK MEN SCORE SURPRISING WIN OVER MARINERS

First Triumps of Cinder Season Marked Up By Rams In 63-59 Victory

Under a cloudy sky and running on a poor track, the college track team defeated the favored Marin Junior College squad, 63 to 59, in a dual track meet held at Kentfield last Saturday morning.

Entering its second meet of the season as a group, the Rams were victorious over the highly-favored Mariners. The contest was close throughout and the relay was the deciding factor of the meet. Never further than ten points apart, on the scoreboard, the Rams and the Mariners staged a fighting battle for the honor of winning the meet. The college mile relay team, composed of Carolan, Sam, Regan, and Mitchell, ran a fine race and never once lost the lead. Carolan, running the first lap, gained four yards. Sam, taking the baton from Carolan, gained three further yards. Regan, running the third lap, kept this lead. He passed the stick to Mitchell, running the anchor lap, and "Mitch" really opened up and finished in the time of 3:40.1.

Mitchell Stars

Mitchell was high point man for the local team, collecting 10 points. He won the mile, the 880, and his lap in the relay.

Duke Worsham, competing in his first meet of the season, won the javelin throw easily with a heave of 148 ft. 3 in.

Jerry Flamm, also competing in his first meet this year, gathered 8 points for the team by winning the discus with a throw of 118 ft. 3 in., and placing second in the javelin.

Walt Boitano garnered 8 points by winning the 100-yard dash and taking second in the shot put.

Six Firsts

The Rams swept the javelin and discus and won six first places. The local team's weakness was in the hurdles and the 220-yard dash. The distance runs were well taken care of by Mitchell, Carolan, Christie and Regan.

Coach Russ Sweet expressed pleasure at the result of the meet and commended the men on their fine performances.

Salinas Next

Next on the tentative list of the Rams' opponents is the Salinas Junior College. If this meet is scheduled it will be held next Saturday. Salinas is not noted for its ability in track and the college should be victorious if the meet is held.

The complete result of the meet is as follows:

Mile—Mitchell SF, Carolan SF, Iverson M; time 5:00.1.
100—Boitano SF, McFarland M, Nutting M; time 10.2.
440—Wirta M, Regan SF, Christie SF; time 54.1.
High Hurdles—Vincent M, Butler M, Bitgood SF; time 16.6.
220—McFarland M, Remy M, Nutting M; time 32.6.
880—Mitchell SF, Carolan SF, Smith M; time 2:11.2.
Low Hurdles—Vincent M, Radke M, Bitgood SF; time 26.5.
Shot Put—Korchet SF, Boitano SF, Radke M; distance 38 ft. 7 in.
High Jump—Remy M, Butler M, tied for first, Nagel third; height 5 ft. 6 in.

PLAY BALL!

Diamond Squad Divides Twin Tilts with Santa Rosa Team

Ram baseballers had a busy time last week playing two practice games along with the regular conference games. On Tuesday the Rams traveled to Santa Clara to tangle with the Bronco Frosh team and were victorious to the tune of 9 to 6. Thursday found the boys engaging the University of San Francisco Varsity and were humbled to the tune of 8 to 5, the game was played at Funston Field.

Outstanding in the tussle with Santa Clara was the pitching of Ed "El Goofo" Curcio, who hurled five-hit ball for the Lee Eisan-coached team. All of the runs scored off Curcio were unearned due to the loose fielding of the Rams. Kent Baird, Frank Nilan, and "Mickey" Berman did the hitting for the Powell Street lads, each of these boys connected for two safeties.

Loss of the U.S.F. game was credited to a ninth-inning homerun by Captain Joe Gerardin of the Hilltoppers. Gerardin's hit came after two were out and two men on base, the blow was one of the longest ever hit in Funston Field.

Galbraith, Nilan, and Berman did the hitting for the Junior College, while Banta and Baird played great ball in the field for the Rams.

MIXing 'Em Up . . . By Don Mix

Whatta league! Last week we picked the baseball team to win and the crew to take a pasting. Our picks had a slight odor in both cases so this week your colyumhissed just won't bother. We'd even be afraid to pick "Paddy The Squeal" Berman to lick his chin foilage.

• • •

Collaborating with the coaches of the four crews in the local conference we picked what we believe is a distinct novelty in all-star teams—an all-conference crew.

An all-conference coxswain was not chosen but this scribe feels like staking his prognostication record (whatta laugh) on the fact that all the rowing mentors would exchange any other coxswain and perhaps a blistered bowman for our own Willie Latz.

• • •

Overheard in the dressing room—"We'll go over to Tobinski's house for supper tonight and then we'll go somewhere and eat." . . . "I wonder if Weicher's water-on-the-knee freezes these cold mornings?" . . . "Gee, she was ahag, you must know her, Bud." . . . "Oh, sure I'll give you a ride to the Formal but I don't want to bother you by driving up and honking—you just take my car and I'll bum." . . . "Fellows, we are not on the way up, we are up." . . . "I couldn't even love a Packard with a face like that." . . . "And then Merv says to the waitress, he says; 'Put a lot of syrup in because I'm a pretty sweet lad'." . . . "Why against St. Mary's me and Opal scored twenty-five points between us." . . . "Don't hit Flamm's nose when it's cold or it might break."

• • •

A recent news item in the San Mateo paper lashed the college severely for continuing what they called "that out-of-date bugaboo of spring football practice". They further accused us, "the baby of the conference", of putting too much emphasis on the grid sport.

Mayhap we're in error but it seems to us that after that wind-swept day last November, when a courageous Ram team outlasted a favored Bulldog machine, it is only natural that the Peninsulans would like to pretend that the most important game really isn't so important.

Eisanites Meet Salinas Squad Next Saturday

Crucial Series Slated For Ram-Panther Baseball Scrap At Funston

By ERNIE MIGUEL

Crucial Series! That is what it is for the Ram baseball team when Saturday they engage the Salinas Junior College "Panthers" in a double header at Funston Field, festivities will begin at twelve-thirty.

Brother Battery

Salinas, although playing its first year in the Northern California Junior College Conference, is quite strong in the diamond sport. The "Panthers" have a unique battery in the Coover brothers. Another luminary of the hurling crop is "Smoky Joe" Garcia who, besides playing the outfield in the first game, comes back in the second contest to assume the pitching chores.

Harold Silliman is another member of the Salinas pitching staff. Bill Stricklen is the reserve catcher and will probably see action in the second game.

Infielders are in abundance at the Valley school, Jay Stuart will open the series at first base, Burton Strokes is the second sacker, Lou Matiasevich is the boy who will cover the short patch, Bill Amaya will see action at third base.

In the outfield for the lettuce growers will be Everett Olsen in centerfield, Bob Head, a hard hitter, in the right field pasture and Bob Merrrill, a brilliant fielder, is taking care of the left field spot.

Rams Switched

There will probably be quite a shake-up in the ranks of the Rams. Dave Johnson, first string backstop, is still out of the lineup with a busted finger, and this means that Ray Egelhofer will open up behind the log in the first game and probably Jack DuFosse, a newcomer to the squad, will be the receiver in the second contest.

Coach Eisan has switched Frank Nilan to the second base spot and Jim Coen has been moved to Nilan's spot in the outfield. Outside of these changes the team will remain intact with Berman at first base, Baird and Banta at shortstop and third base, respectively. Hjort and Galbraith will round out the outfield.

Gardner, Curcio Hurl

On the mound for the Rams will be those old reliables, Ed Curcio in the first game and Bob Gardner in the nightcap. Bill Williams will be kept on the sidelines to be used in case either Curcio or Gardner get in trouble.

Netmen Win Two, Open Conference Season Tomorrow

Victories over two opposing squads on two successive days last week wound up the practice schedule of Coach Tom Wilson's tennis team, which meets its first conference opponent, San Mateo, in the season's opener tomorrow at the Palace of Fine Arts courts.

On Friday the Wilsonmen succeeded in scoring an easy win over their rivals from State, winning every match played, six singles and three doubles. Winners in the singles were Harold Wagner, Bob Lazare, Bob Kuhn, Alvin Altfield, Chandler Ennes, and Ray Berns, while Wagner and Lazare, Ennes and Altfield, and Berns and Kuhn teamed up to take three doubles matches.

Saturday the Rams traveled to Stockton, where they registered a convincing triumph over the netmen from the College of Pacific. Only San Francisco player to meet with defeat was Berns. Since Wagner was unable to make the trip, his place was filled by Tom Wilson himself, who amazed one and all with a thrilling exhibition of flawless tennis, featuring smashing serves and numerous "aces" which completely bewildered his opponent, last man on the Tiger squad.

Defending champions in the conference, the Red netsters meet two league opponents this week, San Mateo tomorrow and Modesto Saturday. Next week the squad will barnstorm through Southern California, playing U.C.L.A., Pomona, Los Angeles J. S., and other teams from Los Angeles and vicinity.

Golf is a very old game. Its earliest records are found in pictures of the sport as played in Holland, but its introduction to Scotland more than five hundred years ago proved so popular that golf is generally understood to be of Scotch origin.

OAR-ATORS

RAM BASEBALLERS WIN AND LOSE TO LOCAL COLLEGE HORSEHIDERS

Battling all the way, Ram baseballers split a doubleheader with the Santa Rosa "Bearcubs" last Saturday at the Santa Rosa Junior College diamond. The Rams won the first game 10 to 4 and dropped the second encounter 7 to 1.

"Big Ed" Curico hurled the first game and was the bright light of the contest, having things well under control during the entire fray. Curico set down thirteen "Bearcubs" via the strike out route.

"Mickey" Berman and Kent Baird did the hitting for the San Franciscans, while Frank Nilan turned in the fielding gem of the game for the Bay city team.

In the second encounter the pitching of Joe Dosal was too much for the Powell St. boys. Dosel held the Rams to two hits, one a single by Ed Curcio, and the other a home run by Paul Hjort, to account for the only Ram run of the game.

The Buzzini brothers played outstanding ball for the hometowners in both contests. Each made several sensational plays in the field. Brother Tony connected for a home run in the first game, while George blasted out two hits in the nightcap.

ACTIVE BOWLERS ENGAGE IN MANY KEGLING FEASTS

Imagine Joe Amori's novice Ram bowlers shooting against the local Calvert Distillers five, current occupant of fourth place in the big American Bowling Congress world's championship in Chicago!

Indirectly, that's a match slated during May, when the Amori representation of two five-men teams participate in the annual Mid-State tourney in Fresno. Since the Raisin City affair is run strictly on a handicap basis and the amazing Calvert quintet will compete, the Junior Collegian bowlers will be shooting against the top-notchers.

"Strike Tenpinitis," which sounds as good as any other technical term in the field of medicine, has spread from the ranks of the men students of the college to the faculty!

It's a pretty serious disease, this stuff, and once you show symptoms of it, it's got you for keeps. It's highly contagious, and the only effective inoculation seems to be a vacation on a desert island, and even then some patients have been known to shoot spares with coconuts, using bananas as a substitute for maple pins.

They're planning a tournament! They won't say when, but they're planning a tournament! No kidding!

Paul Pitman, assistant to President Cloud, was one of the first to sign his name on the enlisting sheet on Dean Browne's desk. So seeing Mr. Pitman's initiative, "Doc" Sewell, faculty's most jovial member, John Horowitz, who dishes out psychology, and athletic instructors Russ Sweet, Lee Eisan and Jack Gaddy immediately enrolled for the competition which will ultimately determine the school's "bowlingest instructor".

The place will be Golden Gate Recreation, the time, some Saturday morning in the near future, and the admission price, none. Come down and root for your favorite tutor. In fact you can be a tutor-rooter if you want. At any rate, don't miss the big show!

Phil Gordon Victor In College Tourney

Two golf finalists of the college tournament held last week awarded medals. The scene of action was the Ingleside Golf Course here in the city. There were ten entrants.

Phil Gordon shot a 70 and 74 for first place and Bill Jellick followed with a 87 and 82. The Romey twins were third and fourth.

Although the tournament was played during the first sunny weather in weeks the contestants were hampered

OARSMEN BEATEN BY U.S.F.; TITLE HOPES SMASHED

Rams Win Over Oakland Poly, But Lose Crucial To Inspired Don Crew

After shoving themselves into a position to contend for the conference championship the Ram crew dropped the final race of the season to a potent University of San Francisco boat by three lengths over the 2000 meter Yacht Harbor waterway last Sunday.

The locals were hardly a match for the much improved Dons who proved that they were capable of superlative rowing "when the chips were down," as Bill Lenhart, coach of the victors, announced.

This loss, the third of the season, put the Gaddymen in third place in the California Collegiate Oarsmen's Association ratings. The battling Hilltoppers annexed first place league honors while the San Mateo Bulldogs were listed second in the standings.

Never Headed

The Don race was never in doubt at any time after the start, when the Lenhart Lads pulled out in front in the first twenty strokes and were never headed thereafter. At the half-way mark the Powell Streeters made a gallant bid for the lead and pulled within half a length of the Green Galley, but their bid fell short when Coxwain Murphy, of the University boat, called for a series of "big tens" that opened water between the two crews.

A desperate sprint in the last quarter mile closed the wide gap slightly, but the smooth Don boat slid across the line in 7:53, about three lengths ahead of the Rams.

Coach Gaddy had no excuse to make for his crew's loss, although before the race he announced that he felt they were due for a winning effort. Gaddy said that although his charges rowed a good race, the inspired Green and Gold boatmen were in their best form of the season, and deserved the victory.

This was the last competition for a number of College sophomores who have performed for the Red navy during the past two seasons. The two strokers, Bob Carotto and Carl Brogger, saw their last bit of action as did Art Nelson, Merv Weiner, Dick Simpers, Don Mix, Tip Hamilton and Bud Rice.

Shaking hands with the right hand started in the days when everyone carried a knife or a sword. In those ancient times it was customary to indicate a friendly feeling, to hold out the right hand, showing that there was no sword or knife therein for attack.

WOMEN'S SPORTS PARADE

By JEAN PAGE

Shafts of sunlight filter through the dirty windows of the room. Outside, is heard the crisp "Hike" of the ROTC at work. The deep bass voice of Carl Stough, business instructor, mingles in the afternoon languor, with the shrill soprano of his assistant in a duet of car tickets, bankbooks and letters. The drowzy chattering of typewriters smites the ears. It is spring. But the Women's Sports Parade must go on. Unfortunately.

• • •

The WAA basketball team have been invited to participate in an exhibition game at Marin. Our team plans to challenge another women's team first, for practice. Women faculty instructors are being considered as the group to be challenged. We can think of a mythical team that would be a honey, but discretion is the better part of valor.

• • •

Last Friday, members of the ice skating club lent their faces to the parade of motion pictures taken by Virginia Kwiatt of all the WAA sports. Pictures of baseball, and tennis classes have also been taken.

• • •

The mixed doubles tennis tournament is under way. The first drawing revealed that sometime between April 2 and April 10, Jeanne Kelly and Harold Lazarre will play Carl Christiansen and Helen Bartels, Steve Johnsen and Sue Muther will play Bob Kuhn and Virginia Hein, and Betty Chrysler and Al Altfield will play Nathan Less and Ann Bertolucci. Harold Mitchell and Tillie Huddleson, the most dangerous team in the tournament, drew a bye in the first round. Semi-finals will be played from April 18 to April 23, and finals will be played during Tourney Week. Winners will have their names engraved on the Guardsman Cup. Previous teams who have won this honor are Betty Phillips and William Durfee in 1936, and Harold Mitchell and Faith Thomas in 1937.

WAAmblings:

Golf: Golfers are planning to organize a putting tournament, the finals of which will be held during Tourney Week.

Archery: Naomi Giffin, Jean Leonard, Betty McAllister, Ester Matson, and Leona Wilcox are the five junior college women who are qualified to shoot the Columbia round. The two archers who will represent the college at the Marin playday will be chosen from this group.

Baseball: It was.

Riding: The three important dates for riding enthusiasts to remember are: April 18, the moonlight ride; April 24, the ride at Sacramento, and April 27, the horse show.

Rifle:

The results of the Women's National Tyrr Match in which Virginia Kwiatt and Gail Hanna, leading college riflers, participated, have at last been received. Kwiatt took 15th place with a score of 190 out of a possible 200 and Gail Hanna took 27th place with a score of 184. The score of Virginia Kwiatt was the highest score of those from California.

Badminton: The tournament in this sport is rolling along on its merry way, according to Miriam Frazier, reticent manager.

Goody, done at last!

AMSTRUP PROMISES BEST SOPH FORMAL; ORCHESTRA CHOSEN

Plans for what High Soph President Irv Amstrup predicts will be "the biggest and best sophomore formal in the history of the college" have been progressing rapidly during the past week, with bids going on sale and with definite selection of Don Mulford of the University of California and his orchestra to play at the affair, which will be held April 2 at the San Francisco Country Club.

According to Amstrup, Mulford's orchestra has played with success at many dances at the University of California, as well as in the Rose Bowl at Larkspur. Numbers by the orchestra will be interspersed with acts, and it is intended to secure the services of a vocalist from one of the national radio networks as an added entertainment feature.

Bids have been selected which, according to the committee in charge, will be entirely novel, following the diploma idea. With each ticket sold to the affair the purchaser receives a map with directions for reaching the San Francisco Country Club. Bids are on sale this week at the bank at Galileo for members of the high sophomore class, and will go on sale the Monday after Easter to the general public. Price is $1.25.

Arrangements have been made with the management of the club to provide special parking facilities and attendants on the night of the dance, as well as maid service for the women. The ballroom will be bedecked with blossoms on the eventful night, lending a spring-like atmosphere to the occasion.

Any student w[illegible] desires to secure a tuxedo for the occasion may do so at the Fashion Clothing Company, 2304 Mission Street. The suits will be altered to fit the individual, and all accessories will be provided for in the cost of $2.50. Anyone interested should contact Amstrup as soon as possible in order to make the necessary arrangements.

WSS Rummage Sale April 22; 24th St.

April 22 and 23 have been set as the date for the Women's Service Society's Rummage Sale. It will be held at 3010 24th Street, near Folsom, the location of the last sale. The purpose of the event is to raise funds for the annual scholarship award.

Marian Yager, President of the club, urged all members of the student body to contribute rummage of any kind whatsoever. "We have not reached the quota of rummage necessary to make the sale a success," Miss Yager said. "We sincerely hope that the students will respond to our plea and start pouring in articles."

At the last meeting of the society Norma Parent, Margaret Wormell and Dot Canavan were appointed to the committee for revising the Constitution. The next meeting will be held at the home of Muriel Dodsworth, on Monday, April 18, at eight o'clock.

the assistance they are giving the Sophomore class".

Two meetings of the class have already been held this semester, at which the Sophomore Formal, to be on April 29, and graduation were discussed. There will be a special meeting of the class in the near future and several practices before graduation.

In conjunction with the selection of student speakers, Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, has announced that a survey of the grade point average of the entire Sophomore class is being conducted. All students are eligible for the valedictorian and salutatorian posts whether they have taken University subjects or not.

Sparse Golf Turnout Disappoints Conlan

by a high wind that swept across the course.

Coach Conlan was disappointed in the turnout. It was hoped that a representative team of the junior college could be selected after the tournament, eight men being needed to round a full team. At this time it appears there will be only four men available to compete in the junior college conference finals in May unless some of the better college golfers sign up.

The junior college conference finals will be held on the Stanford Golf Course at Palo Alto and in order to qualify divot diggers will have to secure an 80 or less.

Registrar Warns of Penalty For Failure To Take Med. Exams

Freshman men who have not taken their medical examination are requested by the Registrar's Office to do so at once. Mary Jane Learnard, assistant Registrar, said, "It is absolutely essential that those first semester men students who have neglected to have their physical examination report as soon as possible to Dr. Friedlander in Room 201 at Galileo. The doctor is there every afternoon from three to five o'clock."

Following is a list of the students who have yet to fulfill this important part of registration:

Robert Anderson, Maurice Archer, Robert Balsam, Steve Balass, Jack Barker, Juan Bello, M. A. Berliner, James Berns, Fred Blake, Peter M. Bogin, Austin W. Final French Meet April 30 For Dinner

Final meeting for this semester of the college French Club, "Le Circle Francais", will be held Saturday evening, April 30, at a French restaurant, the exact location of which will be announced in a later issue of The Guardsman.

M. Augustin Lusinchi, editor-in-chief of "Courrier Du Pacifique", daily French newspaper, will present a "causerie" (informal talk). A committee of three members has been assigned the task of choosing a restaurant.

Forum To Gather At Residence Club

Holding its last meeting before Easter vacation, the Forum Club will discuss Morals and Art next Friday night, eight o'clock, at the Residence Club, 940 Powell Street.

Paula Rossi will contend that there should be moral standards for art, while John Healy will oppose the idea. Expression of opinion on the controversial issue will be voiced by the students present, following the arguments of the two speakers.

Urging students interested in the topic to attend, Fred Vast, Forum chairman, declared "All students are welcome not only to attend the meeting but to become members of our organization. Besides the discussion of the evening the committee appointed to investigate possibilities of having a banquet at the end of the semester will give its report."

Japanese Group Thanks Students

Because their recent Benefit Raffle was quite successful, the members of the Japanese Students Club wish to extend their thanks through The Guardsman to the students of the college for their cooperation with the affair.

In an official statement, the group said, "We take this opportunity to thank the students of the college for their fine cooperation in supporting the Benefit Raffle sponsored by our organization.

"The proceeds of this raffle will be used to establish a scholarship for some well-deserving person who will benefit from a junior college education."

Faculty Conference April 30 At Sacto.

Northern California Junior College Association members will hold their first spring meeting at Sacramento Junior College on Saturday, April 30, revealed the Registrar's Office. Since the meeting is considered an institute session for all San Francisco Junior College faculty members, they are expected to be present. Registration begins at nine o'clock on Saturday morning.

. . . CLUB SLANTS . . .

A Capella To Sing In All-City Program

Outstanding on the A Capella Choir's spring entertainment program is the date Monday, April 25, when the choir will participate in an all-city program at the War Memorial Opera House for the opening of Public Schools Week.

Other activities include entertainment at a luncheon given by the Knights of the Round Table, a local organization, at the Palace Hotel on April 21, and, the same night, participation in the Music Club concert in the Galileo High School Little Theatre. Among other numbers sung on the latter program will be April Is In My Mistress' Face; It's Me, Oh Lord; and Jesu Priceless Treasure. Soloists will be Robert Scott, Patricia Keefer, and Bill Jackman.

Recently organized from the Women's Chorus was the Women's Glee Club, sponsored by Flossita Badger, music instructor. Officers in the new organization are Dorothy Doyle, President; Helen Nast, Vice-President; and Dorothy Gilberg, Secretary. "The women have done very well," said Miss Badger, "considering the fact that this is the first semester."

Army-Navy Club Meets April 8

Having successfully completed its program of Army Day participation and celebration, the Army and Navy Club settles down to routine matters in its next meeting to be held at the home of James Hughes, faculty adviser, on April 8. T. Gordan Sollman, President of the organization, will discuss plans for the remainder of the present semester.

All students are urged to bring their discarded magazines to the Powell Street Building and deposit them in the box provided for that purpose in the hall. Magazines of any type, no matter how worn or old they may be, are welcomed by those bed-stricken in the service hospitals. Magazines collected are to be turned over to the service hospitals in the Bay Region. Leaders of the club are expecting a large donation of magazines, because they consider the cause to be a worthy one.

After completion of their participation in the Army Day maneuvers, held in Golden Gate Park last Saturday, the club members departed the following day for the celebration at Hamilton Field, and the picnic immediately following the maneuvers.

Italian Beats St. Mary's Club

In a fast basketball game, the Italian Club of the college overwhelmed the Italian Club of St. Mary's, 61 to 54, last Tuesday night, at St. Mary's Pavilion. More than 100 spectators were silent as the demoralized Dante Club of St. Mary's was swept off its feet by the stellar playing of Gilbert McKinley and Bob Nicco, forwards, assisted by Lawrence Boci, center, Geo. Pera and William Solari, guards, were the reports received from the club.

Upon arriving at St. Mary's, the members of the college team were introduced to Brother Albert, President of the college, Lawrence Mana student body president, and others.

After the game, the home team was shown around the campus, visiting the chapel, dormitories, and the mess hall. The team was surprised at this display of courtesy and interest and intend to reciprocate, was the comment by the manager of the home team, Bob Nicco.

Future Medicos See Surgical Film

Showing technicolor moving pictures of surgical technique, Dr. A. C. Brown gave the members of the Pi Mu Gamma "the most interesting demonstration" they had ever seen, Tuesday evening, March 29, 1938.

Of Dr. Brown's lecture, John Hutchinson, Pi Mu Gamma member, said: "The pictures and lecture by Dr. Brown were the finest demonstration in medicine I have ever seen. It was the most vivid of all the meetings this semester."

Harold Hoffman and Jack Gilkey were among the other members of the Pre-med society who proclaimed Dr. Brown's demonstration by far the greatest thing the society has ever witnessed. The meeting lasted more than two hours—an hour and a half in answering questions about medicine asked by the students and forty-five minutes in showing the pictures.

Having traveled and practiced in various parts of the world, Dr. Brown informed the future doctors and nurses present of the entrance requirements to the medical universities in Europe, and the possibilities of socialized medicine in the United States.

Dr. Brown is one of the leading surgeons in San Francisco, and at present lectures on surgery in the University of California Medical School. His technicolor pictures on chest surgery in motion were taken primarily for use in instruction of medical students.

Astronomers Name Date of Excursion

Inviting all astronomy students and their friends to attend, the college Astronomy Society announced the date of their excursion to Lick Observatory at Mt. Hamilton, for Saturday, April 23rd.

"The trip is planned by automobile," said Elizabeth Rehbock, President of the Society, "and the students will share the expenses of the car in which they ride. As there are no eating facilities on the mountain, persons making the trip should provide themselves with sandwiches, or they may procure their supper in San Jose before the ascent to the top of the mountain."

Miss Rehbock, in emphasizing the educational values of the trip, stressed the opportunities for the persons making the trip to see the wonders visible through the 36-inch refracting telescope at the observatory. She said, "The arrival will be made in time to view the extraordinary sunset discernable from the summit. We will leave the observatory for home at about 9:30 or 10:00 o'clock, and in the event that the weather on Mt. Hamilton is adverse on the day of the trip, students will be notified and the excursion postponed."

Miss Rehbock again urged anyone interested in making the trip to contact either her or Dr. Berman.

Omicron Phi Pi Argues Labor Split

Discussing the history, structure and functions of the American Federation of Labor, was the principle theme of the meeting of the Omicron Phi Society held last Wednesday evening at the home of Bill Simonds, 101 Darien Way. The discussion was led by Doris Speroni, active member and was followed by Mike Klehenoff in defense of the C.I.O. question. A major controversy was raised when Michael Zarchin, faculty adviser of the organization, stated "There is no such thing as a disinterested general public."

Discussion on the Navy Bill will be the topic upon which the club will debate at its next meeting to be held Thursday, April 21. Where the meeting will be held is undecided.

Sketchers Inspired By Waterfront

Members of the Sketch Club will travel to the East Bay this coming Sunday, April 10, according to the President of the organization. The Oakland waterfront will be the locale for sketching.

Opportunity for this occasion has been long awaited, members said. The sketchers plan to use the numerous boats and colorful waterfront characters as the basis for drawings.

Chinese Group To Hayride April 10

With Santa Cruz definitely set as the destination for its hayride, scheduled for Sunday, April 10, the Chinese Club expects the affair to be quite successful. The club has been working on the details of the hayride for quite sometime and all plans are definitaly settled.

On the evening of April 1, the club sponsored a Jig at the Star Cafe, which was attended by more than 50 persons.

Members of the club were entertained by the Chinese students of the University of California at the latter's Berkeley clubhouse.

Beta Phi Scores With Card Party

The card party given last night by the college chapter of the Beta Phi fraternity was declared a success. The scene of action was at the Park-Presidio Hall on Eight Avenue in the Richmond District. Robert Kantner, Vice-President of the fraternity, was chairman in the absence of Ed Canepa, President of the fraternity.

The party was the highpoint of the social season of the fraternity and was open to the general public.

Peace Group Ponder Military Training

Military training will be discussed at the next meeting of the College Peace Society on Friday night, April 22, at the home of Doris Speroni, 441 Fair Oaks Street, between 25th and 26th Streets, near Guerrero, accessible by cars 9, 10, and 26.

Robert Porter will condemn military training in educational institutions while Jean Page endeavors to defend it. The argument will probably center around the Reserve Officers Training Corps. The group has already gone on record favoring the Nye-Kvale bill in Congress which abolishes compulsory ROTC.

"The discussion will not center around the advisability of having optional or compulsory ROTC," said Ray Valdez, president of the Society, "as we have already opposed compulsory training. The debate will be on whether there should be any kind of military education in a school or college. Students interested are invited to attend."

Deigle Guest Of College Foresters

Deigle's talk was highly entertaining, featuring forest fires and their causes and means to fight them. Deigle also urged students preparing to enter forestry work to specialize in a particular branch of forestry.

John Bell and Gerry Stewart, club members, gave short talks on Douglas Fir trees and Redwood trees.

Next meeting of the Forestry Club will be Thursday evening, April 7. Members will meet at Galileo in room 453 at 7:30 o'clock. At this time plans for an Easter vacation field trip will be made.

George Green, geology instructor, will also be a guest speaker at that time. He will discuss A Comparison of Tropical and Temporate Trees. All members and those interested are urged to attend the meeting.

HEA Excursion To Marin April 9

April 9 has been selected as the date of the Home Economic Association's excursion. All who attend should meet in front of the Ferry Building at eight o'clock. The expedition is not confined to members of the association, but only to junior college women. Members will venture to Rattlesnake Camp, which is located out of Mill Valley. The group will wait for stray members so anyone who fails to catch the 8:20 ferry, should take the next one.

Some of the day's events will be hiking, exploring, games, and a barbecue. There is no charge, but each one is to bring her own lunch.

"We hope that a large group of women will take advantage of this outdoor trip," said Cecil Thompson, club president.

Hotel Staff Places Two More Students In Salaried Jobs

Giving additional proof of its practical value, the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division had two more employed students to its credit. Barbara Mangum was placed as assistant to Helen Hacker, executive housekeeper of the Clift Hotel. Miss Mangum will start work in her new position April 15.

Paul Weber started work April 1 as assistant to Charles Stranberg, pastry chef of the St. Francis Hotel. Unlike the laboratory work required for graduation, which consists of part-time positions without a salary, the two positions filled by these students are permanent and salaried.

Instructors of the hotel group have been invited by the University of California at Berkeley and at Los Angeles to prepare a series of vocational trade tests involving hotel and restaurant management occupations. Co-operating with the State Department of Industrial Trade, Hilda Watson, Cliff York and J. Graham Sullivan, instructors of the hotel division, prepared material and aided in conducting a conference of restaurant operators in Berkeley last week. Next week they will conduct a similar conference in San Francisco. The discussions are concerned with the problems confronting restaurant operators daily.

Sorority Changes Plans; To Breakfast

Unable to obtain a hall for the "Bad Taste" party, the Phi Beta Rho women have decided to have a breakfast to honor the pledges. Breakfast will be served at the home of Lorraine Haffmeyer's on April 10, to be followed by a picnic at Searsville Lake, which is located near Woodside.

Formal initiation of the new pledges in the French room at the Palace will take place at a dinner to be held Hotel, April 29.

Geologists Meet Today Room 260

The Geology Club will hold a meeting today at Galileo in Room 260 at 5:30 o'clock, announced Chas. Vaughn, temporary chairman.

The club is one of the latest clubs to be organized in the college, and George Green is the faculty adviser. Although there is a limited membership, there are only fifteen members at present. Anybody interested in joining may attend the meeting today.

Tonight the club will take its first field trip to view a collection of minerals.

Deutscher Verein Sees German Play

Members and friends of "Der Deutsche Verein", college German society, traveled across the bay last week to see "der Zerbrochene Krug" (The Broken Jug).

The author of this popular German comedy is Kleist, one of the foremost German writers of the day.

Sponsors of the club, who also went to see the comedy, were Eric Moeller and Annemarie Delfs.

AFTER COLLEGE WHAT?

By Anne Rabinowitz

Mental alertness, neatness, and precision are required of a pharmacist. An error in filling a prescription may cause great injury. Engaged in one of the oldest-known occupations, the druggist's position in the community stands high in character and interest.

The work and methods of pharmacy have changed with modern conditions, and as limitations have been removed from old-style pharmacy, opportunities have been added for the worker of today.

Openings are found for the licensed pharmacist on the staff of pharmaceutical houses, in domestic and foreign work, in laboratory investigation, and in experimental fields.

There are also positions open in the Navy.

The cost of equipping a retail pharmacy or drug store varies. If a store is already outfitted with furniture, showcases, and all the necessary stands, the only investment is for the stock. A man with a thousand or $1500 invested may soon find himself doing an annual business of ten times that much if he handles his stock wisely and efficiently.

A great deal depends upon the druggist's personality, business ability, judgment in buying, display, advertising, and salesmanship. The independent druggist has much competition in the united pharmacies.

As a profession, pharmacy offers as good opportunities as it does in the merchandising field. A man may become a physiological chemist, an analytical chemist, or a manufacturing chemist, through drug store beginnings.

The career of a successful pharmacist is an interesting one, even when only the technical work of the profession is undertaken. The chief attraction lies in the numerous and varied opportunities developing from it. The disadvantages, however, are that the hours are longer than in some occupations, and, also, the responsibility is very great.

Young men and women who study pharmacy are able to earn money as they go through college by working in drug stores after class hours. This profession is not an easy one for women to enter, but druggists often do require the assistance of a woman in selling cosmetics. In fact, some have crashed the barriers by starting as fountain girls in a large drugstore.

Bound Magazines To Be Added To Library

Many more volumes of bound magazines are to be added to the shelves of the reading room in the P. G. and E. Building this week. There will be 75 volumes added this week and 70 more are to be added within the next few weeks.

These bound volumes are the 1936 and 1937 issues of magazines to which the library subscribes. They are all of permanent value to the students of the college, particularly those studying Art, English and Social and Physical Sciences.

TOURNEY WEEK BANQUET GOES COEDUCATIONAL

WAA Dinner Tomorrow At Galileo Climaxes Term's Activities

By Jean Page

Coeducational for the first time, the semi-annual banquet of the Women's Athletic Association will be held tomorrow evening at 6:15 o'clock in the Galileo faculty cafeteria. Price of the banquet is 50 cents. Men from any of the six coeducational sports, archery, badminton, ice-skating, tennis, rifle, and riding are invited to attend, and as special guests the WAA has invited Don Mix, student body president; Jerry Flamm, Block S. F. president, and Al Williams, president of the Associated Men Students.

Tickets may be obtained from any committee member or at the cafeteria tomorrow night. Guest speakers will be Margaret Dougherty, college women's adviser, and Ray Dougherty, head of physical education in the city's public schools. The banquet marks the conclusion of WAA activities for this semester and is the climax of Tourney Week, in which finals in all sports are held.

Movies Shown

A highly entertaining feature of the evening's program will be the projection of movies taken recently by Virginia Kwiatt and Vera Spencer, club sponsor, of the various sports and the convention which both AWS and WAA delegates attended three weeks ago. Some of the pictures will be in technicolor.

Both first team awards and block awards will be presented during the evening, and it is imperative that all women who are proficient in any sport come. Election results for next semester's officirs will also be announced. Dancing classes of instructor Laurine Bergin, which were a successful part of last semester's entertainment, will perform again.

"We are making our banquet coeducational for the first time," Dorothy Canavan, president of the organization, said. "This is because of the increase in number and popularity of coeducational sports at the college. We have made extensive preparations and urge every member to be present."

Committees Named

Committee chairmen who have made complete arrangements for the banquet are: general chairman, Mardis Mullin; program chairman, Margaret Meader; banquet chairman, Dorothy Pilgrim; decoration chairman, Edna Wedam; entertainment chairman, Elizabeth Rehbock; invitation chairman, Betty McKenzie; re-arrangements chairman, Annette Schunick.

Special guests include President Archibald J. Cloud, Dean Edwin C. Browne, Bertha Keller, Verrel Weber, and Laurine Bergin, physical education instructors; Russell Sweet, football coach; Arleene Freziers, Ruth Johnson, and Gloria Swicegood, past presidents of the WAA; Ann Geiger, and Anita Geiger, who will also serve as judges at the Tourney Week horse show; and the presidents of the Girls Athletic Associations of the eight San Francisco High Schools.

Anti-War Rally Set For 10 A.M. In Lecture Rm.

Gabbert, Cohen, Students Will Address Peace Meetings Today

Together with over a million students throughout the country, students of San Francisco Junior College will demonstrate for peace from 10 o'clock to 12 noon today in the Powell Street Lecture Hall.

Two different programs will be presented by the College Peace Society at 10 and 11 o'clock. Dr. Myer Cohen, instructor at the School of Social Studies, will speak at the first meeting on whether the United States should choose isolation or collective security for its peace policy.

Gabbert, Students Speak

Dr. Thomas Gabbert, foreign language instructor at the college, will speak on the war in Spain, explaining the isues involved and the present status of the conflict. There will also be several student speakers at the two assemblies, including a guest orator from the University of California.

Chairmen of the meetings will be Ray Valdez and Elizabeth Rehbock. Legislation before Congress affecting peace, women's part in the peace movement, and the movement to combat war will be discussed by Doris Speroni, Frank Matsumoto, and Robert Porter.

Action Necessary

In a message addressed to the student body the Peace Society declared: "We recognize the increasing threat of war and accept our responsibility for creating and supporting an aggressive peace policy through a nation-wide demonstration of solidarity for world peace.

"Testify your determination to preserve peace by a united and organized expression on Wednesday, April 27. Join over one million students in this national demonstration for peace. Come and listen to speakers discuss pertinent issues and then take concerted action by supporting the resolutions to be presented.

John Julius Elected Club Advisory Head

John Julius, Army-Navy Club delegate to the Club Advisory Board, was elected first president of the board at an election meeting held last Friday. He defeated Hugh Waite, Beta Phi fraternity, and Robert Porter, Peace Society, for the position.

The vice-president's post was given to Merv Weiner, Block SF Society, in preference to Walter Thompson, Army-Navy Club. Secretary of the group is Gordon Sollman, Hotel and Restaurant Society, who defeated Howard Cloud for the duty.

Next meeting of the board will be held Friday afternoon, 1 o'clock, in Room 207, Powell Street. Applications by new organizations for college charters will be considered and any organizational problems that any group has will be discussed by the group.

Representatives of all college organizations are urged to send delegates. This applies to those which have not been chartered or which are still being formed.

BLUMENTHAL, KENCHELIAN TO SPEAK AT MAY COMMENCEMENT

Eugene Blumenthal, last semester's student body president, and Karnig Kenchelian of the May graduating class, have been selected as the student speakers at Commencement on May 20.

The two speakers were chosen Tuesday, April 19, by a faculty committee composed of President Archibald J. Cloud; Paul Pitman, assistant to the president; J. Paul Mohr, registrar; Bertha Keller and Arthur McCarty, high sophomore sponsors, and James Hughes and Lloyd Luckmann of the college speech department. Scholarship and oratorical ability were the bases upon which the students were judged.

Twelve high sophomores, both from the January class and from the May class, who were highest in scholarship of the two hundred graduating students, were invited to try out for the two positions. Students who attained this honor are: George Barden (May), Eugene Blumenthal (Jan.), Max Chenoweth (May), David Chin (Jan.), Ilda Church (May), Karnig Kenchelian (May), Mitsue Kono (May), Bonnie Moyor (May), Charles Schardin (May), Doris Speroni (May), Amy Swift (May), and Lena Way (May). These students received a letter from the junior college congratulating them upon their scholastic ability and inviting them to give trial speeches before the judging committee. It was by these speeches that Blumenthal and Kenchelian were chosen.

Seasoned Speaker

Blumenthal, who is now attending the University of California, was an active leader at college for four semesters and an outstanding debater. It was he who made the student's speech at the ground-breaking ceremonies of the college site last year.

The Sophomore class was not called upon to give its deciding vote in the selection of speakers, as there was no tie between contenders. As before, graduation will be held this semester at the War Memorial Opera House. A rehearsal will be held at the Opera House on the morning of May 20, at 9 o'clock. All graduating students are requested to be present and if a student finds he has an examination scheduled then, he should see J. Paul Mohr, registrar, and arrange to take the examination at a different hour.

Recognize Leaders

A new plan to give more recognition to student body and class officers has been adopted this semester. Caroline Orginos, vice-president of the January student body, will introduce Eugene Blumenthal of her class, and Norma Parent, vice-president of the May student body, will introduce Karnig Kenchelian. Bob Neal, president of last semester's High Sophomore class, and Irving Amstrup, this semester's High Soph president, will be introduced by the present student body president, Don Mix.

The commencement committee has decided that the Low Sophomore class and the High Freshman class will provide the ushers for commencement. Thirteen students will be picked from the Low Sophomore class and twelve students will be selected from the High Freshman class. Annemarie Delfs and George Green, Low Sophomore sponsors, will choose the thirteen ushers for their class and Joseph Williams and Alice Cooper, High Freshman sponsors, will select the High Freshman ushers. This is a new procedure, as at previous graduations the Men's and Women's Service Societies have served as ushers.

Concrete Poured For Building's Foundation; Grading Completed

By Dick Simpers

Pouring of concrete yesterday on the newly-laid foundations of the first building of the San Francisco Junior College plant marked the end of months of grading and leveling on the site, and the first step toward actual erection of the initial building.

Although there is still some grading to be done, this phase of the work is almost over, and it is expected that all foundation work will have been completed by the end of May, at which time the plans and specifications for the building will be presented to various contractors for bids. Forms for the foundations have been made, and when the concrete has been poured the job of the Sibley Company, which holds the grading and foundation contract, will be finished. Subsequent work will be done by a contractor who will be named after all bids submitted have been considered.

Plans Approved

The plans for the building returned last week from Sacramento, where they had been sent for the approval of the State Board of Architecture. Only a few minor changes were made by the Board, so the plans remain practically intact. The few details marked for changes have already been taken care of by Timothy Pflueger, architect in charge.

Conclusion of the activities of the Sibley Company will coincide almost exactly with the letting of the construction contract, so that work should progress with little or no interruption.

High-lights Week

The pouring of the concrete came at an opportune moment, high-lighting San Francisco Public Schools Week, which was featured last year by the ground-breaking exercises of the college.

Some difficulty was occasioned the architects by the intricacy of the plans of the first building, which will house the science department. Necessity of making accommodations for laboratories and their apparatus slowed down the work somewhat, but the plans are now virtually complete. Although work was slowed up considerably by the

BOARD VOTES $$$

As The Guardsman goes to press word has been received that the Board of Education has voted $2000 in order to level off the athletic field at the new plant so that it will be in readiness for football practice next term. Although the plant will not be occupied at that time, Coach Russ Sweet plans to make use of the field as a practice ground for the team.

Bloomer Girls Bow To WAA In Faculty Student Game

Five "reds" were loose at college last Thursday afternoon. For half an hour they exhibited all sorts of radical tendencies in the Galileo gym. But to no avail, for feminine virtue triumphed and the Women's Athletic Association basketball team tipped in one more basket to win 12 to 10. The brave but beatable faculty six was composed of Laurine (dead-eye) Bergin, Bertha (batter 'em) Keller, Vera (I take Swedish at night school) Spencer, Verrel (batter 'em again) Weber, Eileen (Baggy bloomers) Rue, and Mary (I help the other side) Perry.

The "reds" were swathed in bright crimson sweatshirts, except for Vera Spencer, whose faded appearance testified that she had forgotten to wash hers in Lux. Warmed up to a white heat by the prospect of doing or dying for old faculty association, Laurine Bergin was the stellar starlet of the game and many a ball passed between the cup and lip of the basket at her hands.

Ah! Bloomer Days

Reminiscent of the Bloomer Days and forgotten maiden modesty was the costume of recruit from the registrar's office, Eileen Rue. Her billowing emerald bloomers reached quite below the knees, like those of the Sultan of Turkey (the bloomers, not the knees).

Not sure what it was all about but willing to find out, was Mary Perry, also of the registrar's office, who stalked the trail of her wandering forward, with eyes askance and mouth open (Mary Perry, not the forward).

No Hard Feelings

Symbolic of the true sportsmanship which has pervaded the imaginary halls of our historic institution since the dawn of its existence, each team gave a rousing cheer for the other at the end of the game. No Hard Feelings Here! And in a touching speech Margaret Wormell presented the sturdy six with a beautiful tin loving cup as an indication of the love which students feel for their instructors along about finals time.

Faculty Voting In Hot Election Battle To Close This Afternoon

Politicians of the old school will be relieved of their duties late this afternoon when final tabulations are made concluding one of the closest political battles in the history of the college Faculty Association.

"The election this year," stated Joseph Williams, retiring Association president, "has been one that the organization will not easily forget. Candidates have resorted to practically every point of cunning in order to make their candidacy a successful one. However, in spite of the political intrigue that has ensued during the campaign, I expect the victorious sage will be one of the foremost educational giants on the instructional force."

Platform Firm

Four candidates for the presidency, Robert J. Parker, Edward E. Sandys, Franklin Cuenta Sewell and J. Graham Sullivan, are representatives of the four factions fighting for the leading position. As stated previously in the electional race, Dr. Parker will carry out the ideals of the "Western Americas' Party" if elected. Violently opposed to this "wild western outfit" is Franklin Cuenta Sewell, representing the "Continental Party." Operating manager of a string of school cafeterias, J. Graham Sullivan is hopeful of bringing his "Labor Party" to victory. Close watch is being kept on Edward Sandys, the dark horse entrant. Sandys claims he is "agin" the principles upheld by his rivals, but thus far has not yet made public his platform for election.

Other Candidates Named

Vice-presidential candidates include Laurine Bergin, John Ross and the omnipresent Edward E. Sandys.

Secretarial duties will be taken over by one of these candidates: Jennett Henderson, Yvonne Stoupe or Mildred Williams, while Evans Ecke, Kenneth Hobbs, Uhaldo Maggetti, Glen Noble and Don Perham vie for the honor of the treasurer's chair.

Three members-at-large will be chosen from the following group: Richard Allman, Laurine Bergin, Edwin Cranston, Margaret Flournoy, Tom Gabbert, John Gerstung, Kenneth Hobbs, Paul McKelvey, Eric Moeller, Robert Parker, Henry Ralston, Verrell Weber and Joseph Williams.

AWS Tea May 3 At Century Club To Honor Grads

Faculty, Students, School Representatives Invited To Social Gathering

Concluding activities of the Associated Women Students for this semester, a final tea, to which all students and all faculty members are invited, will be held May 3, from 3:30 to 5:30 o'clock at the Century Club.

The tea is in honor of graduating students and men students are invited. The AWS has also invited four men and women representatives and their faculty sponsor, from each of the eight San Francisco High schools. It is expected that students from all of the high schools will accept the invitation. The invitation to high schools is a custom which was initiated last year, and is for the purpose of acquainting these groups with the educational and social advantages at the junior college.

"This is our final tea of the semester," said Barbara Randall, AWS president, "For the first time we are inviting men students as well as women students to attend the tea. We felt that the graduating men as well as the graduating women should be given recognition. We intend to furnish interesting entertainment and hope that all members of the student body who find it possible will attend."

Hostesses for the tea will be Barbara Randall, Jane Mitchell, Muriel Dodsworth, Miriam Dunne, Annabelle Benson, Marian Corley, Marian Androvitch, Marian Delnno, Barbara Currier, Marion Dondero, Leona Wilcox, Viola Gibson, Cecil Thompson, Gerda Mangels, Yoshia Kawaguchi, Janet Low, Ruth Logne, Marjorie Culp, Helen Iluker, Janet Leoy, Pat Smith, Nancy Ross, Jane Ganow, Louise Kitty, and Teckla Regoli.

This is the third tea sponsored by the AWS this semester. Early in the semester, a tea was given in honor of new women students. Later a vocational tea was held at which important business women of the city spoke.

Faculty Invited

The color scheme will be red and white, the college colors. Music will be furnished by the music department, with both Flossita Badger, director of the A Capella Choir, and Charles McKiernan, music instructor, arranging some selections. Instead of a special faculty guest list, the AWS has decided to invite the entire faculty.

The organization's officers for this semester have been Barbara Randall, president; Annabelle Benson, vice-president; Jane Mitchell, secretary, and Miriam Dunne, treasurer.

HEA Offers Spring Fashion Display At 317 Galileo May 5

Current fashions in women's clothing will be displayed for the Junior College women next Thursday, May 5, by members of the Home Economics Association in room 317.

"The show will begin at 2:15 in the afternoon," informed Cecil Thompson, president, "and will probably last for an hour or more. The fashion collection of McCall school will be exhibited and we expect it to be very good."

Gowns presented will have been made by the mannequins themselves, and in some cases the design and pattern was created by the wearer.

All Are Welcome

"Anyone is welcome to attend the display," said Miss Thompson.

Because of a woman's tendency to turn to clothes in the Spring, HEA members decided to hold their show during these months of the year.

Second Show

This is the second Spring fashion show presented by the Association. Last year the group displayed wearing apparel at O'Connor Moffatt's. The styles then ranged from beach costumes to evening wear.

A meeting for election of officers will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:15 in room 317. "It is imperative that all HEA students be present," stressed Miss Thompson.

Nominations Open

Nominations are open for all members, including those that for some unavoidable reason can not be present, provided their consent is given.

Ballots must be cast before May 4. A ballot box will be in room 317 until that time.

ADAMS HEADS COMMITTEE TO SUPERVISE ELECTIONS

Nomination Rally May 4 To Present Candidates For Associated Student Offices; Petition Deadline Monday; Williams Opposes Fex

Appointing Stan Adams, college yell leader, as chairman of the election committee, President Don Mix announced late last week that candidates for Associated Student offices for the fall semester will be presented at a nomination rally on next Wednesday, May 4. Adams, who will be assisted by a committee of his own choosing, will also have the support of Dean Edwin C. Browne, who will act as supervisor for the group. In addition to their duties during the elections, this group will see that petitions are in by May 2, obtain voting machines and perform other duties necessary to the success of the elections.

Appearing at the nomination rally will be candidates for the office of president, vice-president, secretary and yell leader of the Associated Students, and for president of the Associated Women Students and Associated Men Students, respectively.

Much Competition

In contrast to last semester's election, there is a great deal of competition for the office of president, with Al Williams, former yell leader and present president of the Associated Men Students, running against Bob Fex, erstwhile football star, and vice-president of the Block SF Society. Both men have been active in student affairs since their entrance to the college, and both seem to have an equal number of ardent supporters.

For the office of vice-president, it is almost definite that Barbara Randall, Associated Women Students president, will compete with Muriel Mills, Low Sophomore president, with the possibility of a dark horse in the form of Micky Berman, baseball ace and popular winter boy for the college football team.

Louise Jameson, Phi Beta Rho member, will probably run for the office of secretary, opposed, it is believed, by Jane Mitchell, Associated Women Students secretary and active member of the Women's Service Society.

Chicazola, Hill Running

Aspiring for the position of head yell leader, which will be left vacant by Adams, are his two assistants, Mel Chicazola and Bob Hill. This will probably be a fairly close election, but at present writing Chicazola seems to have a slight edge over his rival.

The office of Associated Men Students president will be sought by Howard Cloud, present vice-president of the group, and Hugh Waite, long active in college political circles. As Cloud and Waite are members of the same fraternity, it is believed that this race will be a close one. There is some chance, however, that there may be several more aspirants for this position, as it has been one of the most sought-after during the past few semesters.

No Card, No Vote

Logical candidates for Associated Women Students president include Betty Nelson, Phi Beta Rho president; Marge Wright, Women's Service Society treasurer, and Jeanne Kelly.

Setting a goal of 500 votes, President Mix expressed a desire to arouse student interest in the forthcoming election to such an extent that every student officially registered in the college will cast a vote.

"Students wishing to vote must present their Associated Student cards at the polls on the day of election," he said, "so all of those who have loaned their cards to friends or misplaced them at home should start looking around for them before election day."

May 2 Deadline

Candidates desiring to run for any Associated Student office should obtain petitions from Dean Browne or Stan Adams as soon as possible and must have these signed by 75 students and filed in Dean Browne's office by Monday, May 2, at 4 o'clock.

Candidates for AWS and AMS offices do not have to secure petitions, but must present their names to the election committee prior to the deadline for petitions.

Three Days Left To Buy Bids To Soph Formal Friday

With but three days left in which to buy the few remaining bids, the Sophomore Formal will definitely take place on next Friday evening, April 29, according to Irving Amstrup, High Sophomore president.

"All of our plans are completed," Amstrup said, "and with the San Francisco Golf and Country Club fittingly bedecked with bright blossoms, the music of Dan Mulford and his University of California orchestra, and our novel dance bids, there seems absolutely no reason why the formal cannot be the most successful dance of this or any other social season."

Orchestra Praised

According to Amstrup, Mulford's orchestra has played with great success at many dances of the University of California and in the Rose Bowl at Larkspur. Numbers by the orchestra will be interspersed with entertainment of various sorts and it is hoped that the committee will be able to follow it's plan to obtain the services of a vocalist from one of the national radio networks as an added feature.

Setting Unique

"Arrangements have been made," Armstrup said, "with the management of the club to provide special parking facilities and attendants on the night of the dance as well as maid service for the women. We will follow our original plan of having the ballroom decorated with lovely spring blossoms and this should lend a spring-like atmosphere to the occasion."

This particular Sophomore Formal

Geology Department, Honor Society Stage Programs Tomorrow

Attention of the college focuses tomorrow on two major assemblies, one sponsored by the local chapter of the state-wide scholarship society, Alpha Gamma Sigma, and the other by the college Geology Society. The second assembly, for which all students will be excused from classes, will be that of Alpha Gamma Sigma, which will be held in the lecture hall at Powell Street at 11 o'clock. The Geology assembly will be in the same place at 10 o'clock.

Feature of the scholarship society's conclave will be a talk by Robert Sibley, secretary of the University of California Alumni Association and prominent local educator. Another speaker will be Mrs. Mary Walker of Santa Rosa Junior College, who will present the local chapter with its charter from the headquarters of the organization.

Purpose Outlined

The purpose of the assembly is, according to Jerry Flamm, president of the group, to acquaint the students with the aims and purposes of the society and the requirements for membership in it, which include possession of a grade point average of 2.3, and no grade lower than "C" on the member's junior college record.

Organized here for the first time this semester, Alpha Gamma Sigma has a membership at present of about eighty students, and its officers hope, by means of the assembly, to arouse student interest in its activities. Members of this society have, says Flamm, a number of advantages, including the opportunities to try for various scholarships not open to the ordinary student.

Jeweler to Speak

The Geology Society, another newly-organized group, will hold its assembly under the direction of George Green, geology instructor, and all students interested in geology, science, or geography are invited to attend. Featured speaker will be Albert S. Samuels, local jeweler, who will deliver an address on diamonds.

NYA Hours Extended; May 20 New Deadline

"Time slips for NYA students will be due on May 20, which is the last day of the semester," announced Helene Turner, faculty adviser to the association. Workers will be allowed 40 hours this month instead of the usual 30 hours, she said, which will bring more pay.

Miss Turner represented the college at the inauguration of Dr. Alfred Atkinson as President of the University of Arizona, at Tucson, Arizona, recently.

STUDENT HEALTH

REGARDLESS of how well the appointments for the student's medical examinations are publicized in The Guardsman, it seems that there are always a number of persons who feel that the examinations are something to be avoided, and therefore they pay no attention to their appointment.

Persons of college age should certainly be intelligent enough to realize the value of this important service. It is amazing to find that there are so many people who evidently do not want to take the examination, even though it might be to their best interests.

Dr. Friedlander, the college physician, says, "Policy of examining students, a public health measure which has personal advantages in that a timely discovery of a physical defect provides an opportunity for correction of that defect. Students not availing themselves of a free physical examination must be considered as not giving their personal health the consideration it deserves.

"The college health service at present cannot provide an infirmary service for the treatment of conditions that may be treated by the student's own physician. Students financially unable to consult a private physician may be treated at the various free or part-pay clinics in San Francisco.

"The college health service, however, upon the completion of the student's physical examination, advises the student as to the state of his physical condition and what may be done to remedy any defects. The students should feel free to discuss their personal health problems with the college physicians at any time, as the solution of student health problems is an integral part of the college program, individually or as a group."

Dr. Friedlander's statement can leave little room for doubt as to the value of the medical attention given students of this college, as an integral part of the registration program.

When the college has moved into its new quarters and facilities for permanent offices for all the various departments are available, the college medical staff will have a chance to broaden its present field of endeavor. The resulting opportunities for free observance of student ailments cannot be over-emphasized.

However, until such time as those facilities are available, it would be the smart thing for all students to take advantage of the opportunity that does exist for a free medical examination. If there is anything wrong with a student's health it may be brought to light there.

Sometimes there are ailments discovered by doctors when the person is unaware of the existence of any; in any case it is a fine feeling to know that there is nothing wrong.

MAKE THIS THE BEST

There is no reason why the students of this college cannot fulfill the expressed hope of our student president and register a total vote of forty percent more than any previous election.

There is good reason why the students of this college should want to see this accomplished. Our form of student self-government is now in a highly polished condition; a condition that should find it functioning with a maximum of efficiency from now on.

At the end of three years of groping and fumbling there has evolved from the mass of trials and mistakes a fairly workable system of conducting student affairs by the democratic method. It remains strictly up to the general student body to supply the right officers.

It has been pointed out time after time that the best way to insure the highest degree of democracy is for everyone to have a hand in the instituting of each regime.

If the best possible choices to fill the student posts are to be selected, they must be the choice of the majority of the entire college.

It is the duty of every self-respecting student to take an interest in his student government and VOTE in the coming election. Make this the best election in the college's history!

STUDENT PEACE DAY

Today American students throughout the nation will demonstrate their desire for peace. At 11 o'clock the fifth annual student strike against war takes place. Classes will give way to peace meetings. In one united action at the same hour, college and high school students will testify their determination to maintain peace.

In view of the tense international situation, with the earth on the brink of another world conflagration, the student body of America realizes that only by a united and organized expression of its will for peace can students present a solid front to the forces that would send them on another death march.

Although today's action does not remove the roots of war, nor does it insure peace or remove the motives for conflict, it does influence the policy of America. It is an effective means of impressing one's convictions upon a person, group, or institution.

This morning's demonstrations can demand that the Nye-Kvale bill, eliminating compulsory military training, be passed. Effective opposition can be offered to the industrial mobilization plan, embodied in the May bill, which introduces a military dictatorship in time of war. The demonstrations can urge the government to define "adequate national defense." Recognition of the fact that Fascism breeds war and increases the danger of war as is shown by recent events in Europe, the Spanish conflict, and the statements of dictators can also be made.

Today we should resolve to keep America out of war and realize that war anywhere is a threat to the peace of the United States. Only by cooperation of the peoples of the world can permanent peace be established.

The students of America are to be congratulated on their powerful and united peace movement. Their activity is a fine example for, and an inspiration to the rest of the country. It is through such determination and action as has been displayed by the student movement that results are obtained. Working together with the rest of the population, students can maintain peace.

Mental Mutterings

By Fem

Well, it's finally finished! We mean, of course, our survey to find out what junior college men like about women and why. The following paragraphs tell the story, so hold on tight, ladies, har she blows!

In response to a question regarding the type of women preferred, thirty-eight gentlemen stated that they preferred girls of medium height. Nine like them tall and six like them short with several easy-to-pleasers stating that they liked any size. Brunettes lead as to hair color with the blondes close behind and the red-heads polling six votes. A good fifty percent prefer blue eyes, while nineteen like brown eyes and two hazel eyes, with one vote apiece for the grey, green, dark and (shades of Spring!) violet eyed damsel.

Asked whether beauty or brains was most important to them, fifteen men admitted that beauty was most important and eleven preferred brains. The majority, however, stated that it preferred a combination of the two virtues.

When meeting a girl for the first time most men notice her general appearance. A great majority notices the figure first and this was called everything from "chassis" to "how she is stacked." Ten men notice a girl's personality first, while four notice eyes, three the amount of "yumph" in evidence, three her features, three her "stance," two her eyes and one vote each for friendliness, complexion, coiffure, cheerfulness, conversation and amount of money.

In naming the qualities most important to them, personality comes first with a third of the men questioned. A fifth counts beauty first with nine considering character most important, six a sense of humor, five a good disposition and the remaining eight votes divided evenly between intelligence and understanding.

Perhaps the most informative part of the questionnaire was the last section which asked, "What trait that women possess annoys you most?" The faults receiving the most votes were "talking too much" and "snobhishness," with "conceit" a close second. "Independence, "possessiveness," "red fingernails," "too much makeup," and "discussion of dates with other fellows" received two votes each while the following faults received one vote apiece: "smoking," "saying cute," "chewing gum," "attire," "too much money," "no money," "mooching," "being late," "jealousy," "pseudo-sophistication," "habit of spending money," "superior attitude," "desire to dominate," "sloppy attire," "nervousness," "silliness," "slavery to fads," "looking in mirrors" and "familiarity."

Two young men (they're both campus politicians as if you couldn't guess) had very original and decidedly diplomatic answers, stated thusly: "In the Spring, nothing!" and "Can't get annoyed." Several of the answers seemed to have a sad story lurking behind them, namely, "trying to reform a guy," "not knowing where you stand with them," "their liking for Freud" and "the habit of wanting an account of all your actions when you are going steady, in other words 'time clock babes'."

Summing it up, one could judge that Miss San Francisco Junior College, were there such an animal, would be a medium brunette with blue eyes, who possessed the perfect combination of beauty and brains. She would have an excellent personal appearance, with a nice figure and a little "yumph," would have a super-swell personality which would consist of a careful blend of beauty, intelligence, character, good disposition, understanding, and sense of humor. She would not talk too much nor be snobbish or conceited. She'd lay off red nail polish, go easy on the make-up and not be possessive or talk about other dates when out with the current flame.

Anyone who feels that she meets these requirements will please inform yours truly at once, so we can pick up a little spare change by selling your phone number to interested gentlemen!

CABBAGES AND KINGS

By Dick Simpers

SWINGING into the home stretch, we view with dismay the dismal prospect of finals in the near future and term papers that were assigned in January and must be completed by next week, and we find ourselves wondering, along with everyone else, what has become of the semester. After years of waiting until the middle of June for vacation, being cast suddenly adrift ahead of schedule comes as rather a surprise, although by no means an unpleasant one.

A distinct reddish hue is noticeable about the campus these days, since the arrival of the new block sweaters, which are being worn day in and day out by their proud possessors, who strut up and down in front of school for hours on end with contented smirks on their faces. There is one hairy fellow in particular who glories no end in his new raiment, but, since we have sworn to give him no more of the publicity he craves, his identity must remain untold. It is rumored, however, that the members of the block society are planning a warm welcome for him at the time of the initiation. Whispers have also reached us of the formation of a special "Torture Simpers" committee appointed for the occasion, but we place no credence in such tales.

And we'd hate to see those white second-year sweaters after a few weeks of wear. Snowy white when they arrived, some of them are already assuming a grayish tinge, and with a little more exposure . . . oh, well, they're warm, anyway.

* * *

At the request of our old compadre, Irv "Leviathan" Amstrup, we take this opportunity to insert a plug for the coming Soph Formal, which, according to the blubbery one, will eclipse all previous jigs in magnitude and magnificence. Don't miss it if you can!

Regarding the much-discussed suit of Jackie Coogan, who demands that his mother turn over to him the $4,000,000 he allegedly made as a child actor, it looks as though poor Jackie has taken an awful rooking. Any system which allows a parent to appropriate the earnings of a child without giving him anything in return is obviously unfair and should be amended, but, as it exists, we are afraid that young Coogan's chances of getting anything like the sum he demands are pretty remote. If popular sentiment has any influence, however, he should come out on top with a conventional Coogan "happy ending."

Attention is focused for the nonce on the column to your left, in which the inimitable (thank heavens!) FEM reveals the results of a vast poll among Lotharios to determine the "ideal junior college girl." Digging into the files of a couple of years ago, we discover that a similar poll conducted at that time among women of the college really tore into the members of the "stronger sex," accusing them of loquacity, conceit, and other short-comings too numerous to mention. The favorite type was a tall, intelligent, brunette.

Shucks.

RAM'S HORN

FINALS SKED HOPEFULLY CRITICIZED

Dear Editor:

I'd like to offer a suggestion as to the way in which the final examinations here are run off. I realize, of course, that it is extremely difficult to draw up a schedule for them and that they will probably never be fixed to the satisfaction of everyone, but, considering the large and growing number of courses in the college which require a final examination, it would be only practical to allot a longer period of time to them. Seven days is a very meagre allowance for so many exams, and there are always many students who are forced to take two on the same day, so that they can do themselves justice in neither. It should not be too much to ask that the period allowed for finals be extended.

Hoping that this suggestion will meet with at least a little consideration, I remain, Respectfully yours,

WORRIED.

Dear Ed:

My I tender verbal posies to our very successful student president, Don Mix for his excellent work on the recent re-organization of student administration.

Of course, this is only one item on his list of executive accomplishments. Nevertheless, I believe the new constitution will last indefinitely at the Junior College and will always be a guide for student leaders in successive generations.

Popular support of the new constitution can very easily be seen by the success of the Club Advisory Board which had 95 per cent of its eligible delegates in attendance at its election meeting, chose officers, and is ready to review applications for club charters at its next meeting, this Friday, I believe.

With the ultimate enlargement of the college, this affiliation of organizations will take on a new and greater significance. Perhaps it will divide into practical sections; namely, pan-Hellenic social organizations, pre-professional clubs and so forth. Although its only actual attachment to the local administrative system is one vote on the Ex Council, there is no reason to doubt that eventually the Board will be very active within itself, doing much to make the organizations system here comparable to the best in any college.

If the board meets regularly, I think that it will truly be representative of the prevailing interests of the college. Therefore, let all groups send representatives to the Board meetings, as they have in the recent meetings and by next semester, student opinion will agree that The Guardsman make the Club Advisory Board "front page news".

"Here-for A-while."

Dear Editor:

Just to remind you of one phase of your editorial policy; namely, "Give 'em what they want." I consider the continuous use of the John Ward "After Dark" column a direct violation of this rule.

I think that most of us want to hear things new and constructive in the higher forms of entertainment. Therefore, why the "tearing-down" week after week?

In the beginning of the semester, I would turn to "After Dark" thinking I would learn something about music or plays only to find out somebody's contrary ideas. Then I gradually got out of the habit of reading opinions that fail to have any information behind them.

This may seem to be one person's opinion, but I'm sure there are others who agree.

Phooey

AFTER DARK

By John Ward

Since the San Francisco symphony has established itself sedately and quite permanently as the center of the Far West's Main Street, we suppose it is time to sing a not too unbecoming mass for the dead. Everyone else has knelt down in dumb adoration of things dead, so, let us join in the general celebration. But let us join with a last good, healthy shout.

During a season of some fifty or more concerts, the San Francisco symphony has condescended to resurrect the long dead and the fresh dead among music's masters. We have heard Bach and Beethoven, Sibelius and Debussy. We had heard them played well and listened with pleasure. But we have heard only four examples of music written during the last ten years—two of which examples were rank nonsense, one of which was a nice job of unoriginal borrowing, and the last left nothing but a pretty memory. No work appeared from the 20th century's recognized great.

It would be as well to live in the 1800's as in 1938. Certainly, Mr. Monteux gives us little reason to believe that artists live today. And such an example of negligence only gives greater strength to that strange nonsense about art being finished, the last of the titans dead and only the bad echos left.

To know the contrary, however, gives the picture a touch for the worse. Nothing can be more revolting than the ever current attitude, moderns have so little to say and they say it so badly, let the next generation listen if it wants, we won't. We disown recent inheritances, their credits are not in pedigree form yet. Thus speak the sentimental, the bigoted, the hypocritical, the ignorant.

In the present case the audience belongs in the first and last categories, the conductor in the third. We leave the second for those who choose it. The audiences love to wallow in easy stages through Beethoven and Brahms. The conductor too often lacks the guts to change the situation, much as he might desire other circumstances. How hypocritical the audience can become when they claim modern music bad and they know nothing whatsoever about it. Still more hypocritical the conductor who wants to do modern works yet bows himself out of all controversy.

And without shout we gather silently and kneel with the ignorant, the sentimental, the hypocritical—for little the shout will reward us. The critics of the dailies murmur constantly and a few good souls murmur with them, but it avails promises and, of course, nothings. Monteux promised much this season—the way of modern music, he fulfilled none of his promises. The only breath of actual air in the stagnant atmosphere came from the W. P. A. God grant that living composers never look to San Francisco as a haven of willing and patient ears. It is only a nest of insidious dervishes whirling in blind circles, gathering no momentum—rather losing what momentum it has.

Presidential Notes

By Don Mix

Our job is almost finished. At the outset of our 16-week task we outlined an ambitious program that aimed at remedying the ills of student administration. There were many issues that were brought to the attention of the students, such as executive decorum, constitutions, judicial committees, organization of a club advisory group and many other problems of varying importance. In reality, however, we had but a single ultimate goal through all these issues—the development of a healthy and intelligent interest by the entire student association in the governing activities of the college.

Our foe was student apathy. The weapons utilized in combatting this attitude were the application of a workable system of government which would be fashioned according to that prime axiom of democracy, "by the people and for the people."

That interest has been stimulated is undeniable. But soon we will apply the acid test to determine whether that interest is sincere and constant or merely a sporadic flash of no lasting value.

This so-called "acid test" is the forthcoming student body elections scheduled for Friday, May 6. If the students are really interested in the affairs of their government they will demonstrate it by a representative vote. If not, well . . .

We have set as our objective the figure of 500 votes registered at the polls. This is a 40 per cent increase over last semester's figure, and would be a fine step forward in the creation of a true college spirit.

The student body is extremely fortunate in having two fine candidates for the presidential post—both finely fitted to assume the executive position. The stage has been set for a really representative election—do your part by casting a vote.

McCarty Named To Fellowship In Am. Science Federation

Distinguished through a vote of the Council of the American Federation for the Advancement of Science, Arthur L. McCarty, mathematics instructor, has been awarded a fellowship in that organization. Although elected to this position on December 30, 1937, it was not until April 12 of this year that McCarty received the certification of the award, signed by Wesley C. Mitchell, president, and F. R. Moulton, permanent secretary of the Federation.

Similar to the Royal Society of England, the American Federation for the Advancement of Science is the largest and oldest organization of its type in this country. Its members total 17,000; however, only a very few of this number are awarded the distinguished honor of a fellowship.

"I was totally unaware of the fact that I was being considered for a fellowship, and I feel deeply honored by this unusual recognition," said the modest mathematics instructor.

Aside from this latest honor, McCarty already holds memberships in the American Mathematics Society, the Mathematics Association of America, the Central Council of Mathematics Teachers, the Association of Science Mathematics Teachers and the National Education Association. McCarty also is the organizer and chairman of the Northern California Section of the Mathematics Association of America.

The college lost her most noted athletic figure when the famed national swimming champion, Herb Brotman, left college. Brotman won the national junior 100 meter free style event last year and was rated as one of the most promising young swimmers in the country. He competed for the college in several aquatic meets and besides performing the function of a one-man team he was the moving spirit in the organization of the sport. He will be missed.

The mystery miler, Art Nelson, is an entry in the mile run against State next Saturday morning. If the rumors about the sensational times recorded by this lad are true, the college might get a first place in the distance event.

Open letter to Russ Sweet:

Dear Russ,

For the past several issues this column has contained several apparently ill-directed barbs at the college track team. The purpose of this bit is not to serve as either an apology or an explanation, but merely to assure you, the track team and the college at large that there was nothing malicious in our blutherings. Because of the limited facilities of the college at the present time a situation was created for what we believed gave an opportunity for a humorous interpretation.

If in trying to draw a giggle we injured anyone we are sincerely sorry. We have nothing but admiration for both the team and the coach that continues to battle against the handicap of improper training conditions.

Yours sincerely,
Don Mix.

While the ball team was touring the southland, two of the lads ran into a newspaper headline concerning the defeat of the Reorganization Bill.

"Dictator Bill Killed," ran the 96-point streamer.

"Say," inquired the tall third baseman of his chum as he became aware of an awakening social consciousness, "who is this guy Dictator Bill that they bumped off?"

It's true, so help me.

A healthy note in the growth of college athletic activities is the fine showing made by this year's Block "SF" Society. The group experienced a complete and thoroughgoing revival, staged a full program of activities and, in general, raised itself to a position of respect within the college. The officers of the group may be well satisfied that they performed a fine job this semester.

It's fun to write about champions. Such being the case, we would like to spill a little ink concerning the activities of Tom Wilson's tennis team.

Led by the chubby Harold Wagner (somehow, when we think of Wagner the adjective chubby just naturally rolls out) the racquet men have gained a strangle hold on the junior college net conference title. Number two man is the dashing dandy with the curly locks, the periodically amazing Bob Lazare.

Veterans of last year's championship outfit are Al Altfield and Chan Ennis. Bob Kun, Ray Bern and Carl Christiansen are the other gents you can get to turn around by squeaking "Hiyah Champ."

California Freshmen Defeat Eisan's Team

Ram baseballers traveled to Berkeley last Thursday to cross bats with the California Frosh team, and came out on the short end of a 5 to 4 score.

Bob "Skippy" Gardner and Paul Hjort divided pitching chores for the San Francisco team, and gave a good account for themselves only to lose in the ninth inning on errors by their team mates.

Banta, Baird and Galbraith got two hits apiece for the Rams, while Ongerth, Heilman, and O'Toole hit two each for the Bearcubs.

SAN MATEO BULLDOGS INVADE FUNSTON FOR RAM BALL TILT

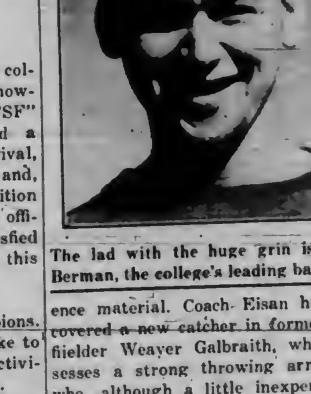
Locals Place Hitting Hopes On Mickey Berman As Big Ed Curcio, Ossie Gardner Chosen To Ascend Mound Against Potent Peninsulans

Coming to town tomorrow to engage the San Francisco Junior College Rams in two games of baseball, is the Growling San Mateo "Bulldog". The doubleheader will be played at Funston Field with the first game getting under way at twelve-thirty in the afternoon. San Mateo will be out to down the Rams in both ends of the doubleheader to slide the hometowners down to third place in the conference and place themselves firmly in second place.

Coach Lee Eisan's boys will be ready to shoot everything at the fighting San Mateo team. "Big Ed" Curcio will hurl the first fray and will probably be opposed by Bill Cheregino the "Ace" of the San Mateo pitching staff, while in the second game "Ossie" Gardner will match pitches with "Bud" Silva. Both games look to be nip and tuck affairs with the possibility of one run deciding either game.

So far in the conference race Bettencourt at third base, Sequeira in right field, and Cardoza behind the plate have been the outstanding men on the "Bulldog" team. All three boys are hitting the ball well over the 300 mark, and should provide the Ram pitchers with plenty of trouble throughout the afternoon.

Berman Hitting



The Ram hitting will probably be led by first sacker "Mickey" Berman who is lacing the ball at a mean .516 for conference competition and will be in there trying to keep his average up, and if he keeps hitting and fielding as he has been, mark him as all conference material. Coach Eisan has uncovered a new catcher in former outfielder Weaver Galbraith, who possesses a strong throwing arm, and who, although a little inexperienced behind the plate, has shown that he is willing to learn, and before the season is over should be a first rate backstop.

Ram Starters Named

Other starters for the Rams will be Jim Coen at second base, Kent Baird, who has been playing great ball, will open at shortstop. Arni Banta, the boy who has really started to hit, will cover the torrid corner. In the outfield will be Frank Nilan in left, Paul Hjort in center, and "Bubbles" Egelhofer will cover in the right field pastures.

Dave Johnson has fully recovered from his broken finger and will probably be used in one of the outfield spots during the afternoon.

SLUGGER

Menlo Surprises By Getting Even Break In Two Game Series

Menlo Junior College pulled the surprise of the season by taking the second game of its scheduled doubleheader from the college Rams last Saturday at the Menlo diamond by a score of 5 to 3. The Rams blasted out a 15 to 1 victory in the first contest.

Big Ed Curcio hurled masterful ball in the initial encounter allowing the Menlo team only six scattered hits. Ray Egelhofer was the big gun for the Rams in the first game knocking out three basehits, two of which were doubles. Frank Nilan and Jim Coen also hit well; each connected for two hits.

The Menlo board of strategy pulled a sneaker on Coach Eisan's boys by holding their ace hurler Clarence Graham out of the first game and pitching him in the second. Graham pitched great ball, allowing the Rams only three hits. Besides hurling masterful ball . . .

WOMEN'S SPORT PARADE

By JEAN PAGE

The zero hour has come! Tourney Week is here! At all locations, the college is bombarded by a fusillade of WAA activities. There have been finals in badminton, in golf, and in tennis. The ice skating class staged a party last Friday. And the horse show, swimming exhibition, rifle match, tennis mixed doubles finals, exhibition basketball game, and semi-annual banquet are yet to come. Yes, everyone is very, very busy these days.

* * *

The banquet tomorrow night (see page 1, I hope) promises to be entertaining, imposing, outstanding, stupendous, colossal and gigantic. The tables should be filled by just the promise of a squint at those motion pictures which Virginia Kwiatt and Vera Spenser have been taking.

We would pay a lot more than fifty cents to see some of our best friends in shorts upon the screen. It will be such a lovely thing to hold over their heads ever after. Besides that there is the meal, and the presentation of awards, and the election results. The committee chairmen have certainly worked hard enough to merit more than mere mention in the column but here they are: general chairman, Mardis Mullin; program chairman, Margaret Meader; banquet chairman, Dorothy Pilgrim; decoration chairman, Edna Wedam; entertainment chairmain Elizabeth Rehbock; invitation chairman, Betty McKenzie; and rearrangements chairman, Annette Schunick.

* * *

As Morton's Salt Company says, "It never rains but it pours," and WAA elections have also reared their heads above the horizon. Elections started Monday and the results will be announced at the banquet tomorrow night. All women enrolled in WAA are urged to vote and as all the candidates are well known and have their pictures posted there is no reason why there should be a lack of interest in voting.

9:00 o'clock—general assembly.

9:30 o'clock—various games in which all competed. Color teams were chosen.

11:45 o'clock—an exhibition game of basketball between the San Mateo junior college women and our WAA group.

1:00 o'clock—luncheon.

The Ice Skating party last Friday wound up a very successful semester for the new sport, ice skating. Margaret Wormell wishes to thank everyone who has aided in making the venture a success. The WAA plans to continue the sport next semester, as it proved to be one of the most popular sports at college.

BOXING SQUAD IN SAN JOSE TOURNEY

Tommorrow night seven of Instructor Joe Amori's boxers will travel to San Jose to participate in a four-way tournament with San Jose State, Salinas Junior College, and San Mateo Junior College.

The fighters who will compete are: Frank Matsumoto, 119 lbs.; Frank O'Connor, 129 lbs.; Lionel Cade, 139 lbs.; Terry Isaacson, 149 lbs.; James McNeil, 159 lbs.; Ray Greenwood, 169 and 179 lbs.; Sims Hamilton, heavyweight.

These boys have all learned boxing under the tutelage of Amori and have been training since the beginning of the semester and according to Amori, they are all in good condition.

Amori also said that these fights are being put on by San Jose State College as a preliminary to a series of bouts which they will promote next year. This series will consist of a number of elimination bouts in each division, the winners of the finals to be hailed as the Northern California Junior College Champions. This will be the beginning of the Northern California Junior College Conference.

Tomorrow night will be the first time in the history of the college that boxers have competed in any inter-scholastic competition.

The fights will consist of three two-minute rounds for each fight, and minute-and-a-half rounds for those fighters who have to fight in more than one bout. They will start at 8 o'clock and will be held in the San Jose State gym.

Rambling Diamond Boys Take Placer

The college's Rambling-Ram baseball team, after sojourning to "sunny" California, came back and before unpacking its bags took off again on Monday, April 18, to Auburn to tangle with the Placer Junior College team in the postponed conference doubleheader. The Rams were at their best, winning both games. They were victorious in the first contest 7 to 4, and won the nightcap 8 to 4.

"Big Ed" Curcio hurled the first encounter and pitched great ball although touched for eleven safeties, the hits were scattered and Curcio was never in much danger.

In the second game the up and coming "Ossie" Gardner hurled great ball, limiting the Placer team to five hits.

"Mickey" Berman was the big gun in the San Francisco attack, coming to bat nine times during the afternoon, and slashed out seven basehits, scored five runs and batted in six tallys. Frank

Track Squad Meets Powerful Staters Saturday At Kezar

Using past performances this season as pre-meet dope, San Francisco State should triumph over the college track team when they hold their annual track and field meet Saturday morning, April 30 at Kezar Stadium.

A dope sheet, prepared on the previous efforts of the athletes, gives State a win, 90 to 32.

Although decidedly the underdog in the coming event this Saturday, the local team is undaunted and is preparing strenuously for the strong squad of the Gater's.

In the 100 yard dash Theofield is expected to win, but Boitano and Stern will be right at his heels and they may overtake the colored flash from State.

The 220 will also be a close race with the same men running. The furlong is Stern's best race and he has a good chance of being in front at the tape.

Kannisto, State's star middle distance runner, is a sure win in the 880 and if he runs the 440 he may also take that race. Regan figures to take a point in the quarter mile.

If Mitchell is in good condition it is probable that he will win the mile from Kline of State. Carolan, a fine runner in the distances, has been working hard lately and training daily. There is a good chance for him to pull a surprise on some of the favorites in the mile and go on to win.

Both hurdle events are all fixed, with "Iron Man" Hopkins ready to grab off the two first places. Bitgood, one of the few Ram Hurdlers, is expected to garner some points in these events.

In the broad jump, Emery and Cade are possible point-earners. Theofield is granted a win as the broad jump is one of his specialties.

The pole vault is conceded to Harkness as he has cleared 12 feet and no man on the local team has neared that height.

Contesting the shot-putting ability of Pantages will be Boitano, Korchet, and Bedrosian. These men all throw the shot about the same distance and there will be a battle for scoring honors in this event.

Duke Worsham has slung the javelin further than Robbey in practice, but as the latter has the best mark in a meet he gets the nod. If Worsham finds the conditions to his liking, he will probably be victorious.

In the discus, Jerry Flamm is expected to break up the combination of Stein and Pantages by getting a second place or scoring a victory.

Hopkins is donated the high jump first place with Emery possibly breaking through the State line-up for a point.

The inconsistency of the Gater relay squad may make it not too difficult for the Ram mile relay team to win over State's stellar quarter in what should be a very close race.

Free Admission To WAA Horse Show Tonight At 8 P.M.

Riding classes of the junior college will present a horse show tonight at 8 o'clock as their contribution to the Women's Athletic Association's Tourney Week. The show will be at the San Francisco Riding School, located at Stanyan Street, near Haight. Everyone is invited to attend and admission is free.

Beginning, intermediate, and advanced classes will participate. The beginners will compete in the walk, trot, and canter. There will be a trophy game between the beginners and the intermediates. The intermediate class will also illustrate the correct way to walk, trot, and canter. As an added attraction, the advanced class will hold a jumping contest as well as participating in the regular events. Members of this class will also participate in a trophy game.

Several feature stunts will be presented. Students will team up in pairs and be forced to feed each other while on horseback. Anita Geiger, one of San Francisco's most proficient horsewomen, will give a special performance and another novel feature there will be a children's act in which Shirley Parkinson, Juliet Knowles, Jackie Kent, and Max Knusche will take part.

"There has been a great improvement in the skill of the junior college riding classes this semester," declared riding manager, Mardis Mullin. "We expect a good audience to watch our horse show, which we think will be very interesting this semester."

Thirty-six ribbons will be presented to those who prove to be the most skillful in riding. Vera Spencer, physical education instructor, will present the ribbons. Several trophies, which have been donated by the WAA, will also be given out. Ann Geiger is to serve as judge of the various acts, with perhaps another judge being chosen to aid her.

Some of the best riders at the college who will participate in the horse show are: Kay Russell, Betty McKenzie, Gloria Swicegood, Mardis Mullin, and Mildred Dray . . .

WAA SPORTS TO CLOSE TOMORROW IN VARIED EVENTS

Tennis, Riding Finish Today; Swimming, Life Saving Art Tomorrow

Tourney Week, during which finals in all sports sponsored by the Women's Athletic Association are held, began last Friday and will be concluded Thursday night, by the semi-annual WAA banquet.

Events completed include an ice skating party at the San Francisco Ice Skating Rink and badminton finals in the Galileo gymnasium, last Friday afternoon, a golf putting tourney at Funston Field, and the women's tennis singles finals at the Palace of Fine Arts yesterday.

Today the women's doubles tennis finals will be played off at 11 o'clock at the Palace of Fine Arts. Tonight at 8 o'clock a horse show, sponsored by the riding classes, will be presented at the San Francisco Riding Academy, located at Stanyan and Haight. Beginners, Intermediates, and Advanced riders will participate in exhibiting walking, trotting, and cantering, and in trophy games.

From 12:30 to 1:30 o'clock tomorrow the swimming classes will stage a demonstration of form swimming, drills, life saving techniques, at the YWCA Pool. Elementary, intermediate and advanced classes will participate. Tennis mixed doubles finals will be held at 11 o'clock at the Palace of Fine Arts.

At 3:10 o'clock there will be a fencing exhibition in the Galileo gymnasium and at the same time the Freshman basketball team will play the Sophomores in an exhibition game, in the other gym. The final rifle match will be held in the Galileo Armory at 4:30 o'clock.

Winding up WAA activities for this semester, the banquet will be held tomorrow night at 6:15 o'clock at the Galileo faculty cafeteria and for the first time men as well as women have been invited to attend. First team and block awards will be presented at the banquet and the election results will be announced.

Women who have acted as managers this semester are: badminton, Miriam Frazier; ice skating, Margaret Wormell; golf, Gloria Swicegood; tennis, Jean Lonkey; riding, Mardis Mullin; swimming, Marion Falconer; basketball, Ethel Vizzard; rifle, Virginia Kwiatt; fencing, Margaret Parks; and dancing, Esther Tani.

Bertha Keller is instructor of ice skating and tennis; Vera Spencer is instructor of basketball, swimming, and badminton; Laurine Bergin is instructor of riding, dancing, and golf; Verrel Weber is instructor of fencing. Other sports are offered at the college but these are the sports in which enough interest was shown to warrant them a position in the WAA. Baseball, which was a WAA sport at the beginning of the semester, was forced to be disbanded because of lack of interest and lack of suitable weather.

First team awards will be presented at the banquet in all of the above sports. Only those who excel in a sport will obtain an award. The first teams are imaginary and the manager and instructor of the sport, who select the women who are to win awards, are qualified to give as many or as few awards for a sport as they wish.

BILLION DOLLAR NAVY APPROPRIATION TO BE ARGUED BY DEBATERS

Justification of Roosevelt's billion-dollar navy rearmament program will be the topic affirmed by Ken Germann and Lorraine Johnsen, in a debate with Sacramento Junior College, April 29, in Sacramento.

"It is rather unfortunate," said Betty Rehbock, secretary of the forensic society, "that this team will not debate on the college campus, and thus afford the students of the college an opportunity to hear, not only this important current question from both sides, but the debaters themselves, who have won renown in establishing the forensic relations of the college with other local colleges."

On Thursday, April 28, James Armstrong and Betty Rehbock will travel to San Mateo to represent the Rams, by taking the affirmative on the question, Resolved, That the United States should protect its property and citizens in foreign countries.

Tom Tillberry and Searle Williams encountered Sacramento Junior College in a debate on the Ludlow amendment recently "and everything went well," according to Miss Rehbock.

With May 6 set as a tentative date for a debate with Salinas Junior College, the Ram debaters, Charles Vaugn, Dave Levy and Joe Meeko, will travel to Salinas to take the negative on the Ludlow amendment, said Miss Rehbock, and on the same day Salinas will send a debating team here to represent that college.

Luncheons, Banquets Occupy Restaurant Dept. During Week

Banquets and luncheons were the order of the day in the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division this week. On April 22nd the division was the scene of the annual banquet of Dr. B. E. Mallory's vocational education seminar at the University of California. J. Graham Sullivan, Coordinator between the college and the restaurant division, is enrolled in the course. This unit is a part of the requirement technical instructors must fulfill in order to obtain a teaching certificate.

After the banquet the group will make a tour of the kitchens of the city's leading hotels and of Chinatown. Bill Chittick, student of the division, was in charge of the dinner.

The Mutual Business Club of the city is going to have its monthly luncheon at the hotel division on April 27, where Hon. C. Harold Caulfield, member of the San Francisco Board of Education, will be the guest speaker.

Thursday will witness the Women's Athletic Association banquet. The hotel division will be responsible for its culinary success. On Wednesday, April 27th, the hotel group will serve at the Faculty Association Tea.

Leo Noren, student of the hotel division, was asked to fill a position as chef in a hospital in Wilmore, Minnesota. He has not accepted the position as yet.

A. J. Cloud Attends Washington Parley

President Archibald J. Cloud left for Washington, D. C., last week to participate in a meeting for a cooperative study of secondary school standards being sponsored by the American Council of Education.

Cloud will represent the Western Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools of which he is the secretary. He is expected to return to San Francisco next week, about May 3.

is unique, according to Amstrup, in that it is the first one to be held at a country club. In the past these dances have been held at various hotels within the city and on two occasions at the San Francisco Yacht Club.

In order to facilitate matters for people driving to the club, Amstrup has had maps printed showing the exact location and best road to take and these have been, and will be, given out with each purchase of a bid to the dance.

Tuxes Available

Any student who desires to secure a tuxedo for the occasion may do so at the Fashion Clothing Company, 2304 Mission Street. These suits will be altered to fit the individual, and all accessories will be provided for in the cost of $2.50. Anyone interested should contact Amstrup as soon as possible in order to make the necessary arrangements.

Accounting College Offers Scholarship To Local Students

Announcement that a four-year scholarship to the San Francisco College of Accounting will be offered to students of San Francisco Junior College was made last week by President Archibald Cloud, who accepted the recommendation of a scholarship committee made up of faculty members that that institution's offer of a scholarship be accepted.

Requirements for the scholarship are, first, that the applicant shall have passed at least 60 units of junior college world; second, that he shall have maintained a "B" average throughout his second year; third, that he should have at least 20 units in business, economics, and allied subjects. The student to receive the scholarship will be selected by a faculty committee.

Further discussion of the scholarship will take place at a meeting of the scholarship committee today at 1:15. The committee is composed of F. Grant Marsh, Ward Nichols, James S. Hughes, Carl F. Stough, and J. Paul Mohr. Interested students should contact one of the members of the committee in order to secure detailed information as to the method of securing the scholarship.

Men's Chorus Sings At Galileo Program

San Francisco Junior College will officially participate in Public Schools Week tomorrow night when it joins with Galileo High and Evening High Schools to sponsor a program in the Galileo auditorium.

The newly organized Men's Chorus will make its first public appearance when it renders several vocal selections under the direction of Charles H. McKiernan. A Capella Choir represented the college last Monday night in a program at the War Memorial Opera House.

Paul M. Pitman, assistant to President Cloud, will officially represent the college. Chairman of the evening will be Carl A. Anderson, principal of Galileo High School.

Musical numbers will be offered by students of Galileo and Galileo Evening High Schools. Principal speaker of the program will be C. S. Morris, San Mateo Junior College president.

Ribbons Identify Sorority Pledges

Red and yellow ribbons will be worn by pledges of the Phi Beta Rho sorority until that group has its formal initiation at the Palace Hotel this Friday night.

In celebration of this year's pledges, a picnic was held recently. Faculty sponsor is Helen Kelly, instructor of French.

Japanese Raffle Tickets Available

Because the Japanese Club's Raffle will be held on April 30, there is still time to buy tickets which may be secured from any member of the organization. The member selling the most tickets will be awarded a book store merchandise order of $1.50, the club president said.

The purpose of the raffle is to establish a scholarship for some worthy individual.

BASEBALL

Nilan also had a big day with the willow, getting five hits in ten trips to the plate.

Outstanding for the "Mountaineers" was Sam Takagishi, who looked to be the best fielding infielder in the junior college conference. Although not a hard hitter, Sam came up with several difficult plays in the field to mark him as one of the best players the Rams have faced all year.

The Rams also looked good in the field, coming up with four double plays, two in each contest.

BUILDING

heavy rains earlier in the year, there is no reason, accoding to Pflueger, to place the date for the opening of the new plant later than March, 1939, barring unforeseen difficulties.

The plant, which, when completed, will have accommodations for an estimated 2500 students, will be erected on the Balboa Park site at Ocean and Phelan Avenues, and will be composed of two buildings devoted to classes, a library, and the administration, a Students' Union building, with provisions for the carrying on of extra-curricular activities, and a gymnasium and athletic field. The first unit of the plant, that now under construction, will be completed within the next year and the other buildings will be erected concurrently, so that the entire plant should be complete within a year after its first occupation.

Omicron Phi Pi Ponders Navy Bill

Climaxing a series of interesting group discussions, the topic of the last regular meeting of the Omicron Phi Pi Society was the discussion on the Navy Bill. The meeting was held Thursday evening, April 21st, at the home of Doris Speroni.

John Healy, of the Omicron Phi Pi college economics honor society capably presented both sides of this highly controversial topic and then the entire group argued the pros and cons of the issue.

Plans are being made at present to have one more meeting of the society this semester, at which time a group of new members will be initiated. A list of those eligible for membership is being prepared and they will be notified by mail sometime this week. Qualifications for membership are: a B average in at least 6 units of economics. Anyone who has fulfilled this requirement and wishes to join is asked to contact Dr. Michael Zarchin, of the economics department and faculty adviser of the club.

As part of its educational program, the society is sponsoring a petition which is being circulated among the students asking for a new economics course.

"Since the object of this society is to further economic interests among the students we are very interested in seeing this course given," Charles Vaughn, president of the society, concluded.

Forum Discusses Democracy, et al

"With "democracy versus totalitarianism" the subject for discussion, the college Forum will meet Friday night, May 6, at the home of Evans Ecke, 2429 Vallejo Street, near Steiner.

Joel Lee will uphold democracy, pointing to its advantages, while Henry Evans takes up the cudgels for dictatorship. All students interested in the topic are invited to attend. Following the presentation of arguments by Lee and Evans, general discussion by the group will be called.

Saturday, May 21, has been set as the date for the Forum's annual banquet. The affair is the organization's only social event during the year; this time it will mark the second anniversary of the group's organization. Plans call for a dinner at a popular restaurant, and a social evening following it at the home of Margarita Williams. Reservations for the banquet should be made with John Healy, chairman of the committee arranging the affair.

Army-Navy Mag. Drive Continues

With no meeting scheduled until the latter part of May, the Army and Navy Club is continuing its efforts to secure magazines for its current magazine drive.

For the benefit of those who may have missed the previous announcement of the drive in a former issue of The Guardsman, President T. Gordon Sollman wishes to make clear the purpose of the drive.

"The organization is staging this magazine drive in an effort to secure magazines for disabled and bed-stricken veterans in nearby service hospitals. All magazines of any type are appreciated and are gratefully acknowledged by those receiving them. Magazines are to be brought to the Powell Street Building and are to be deposited in the box provided for the purpose in the hall."

The magazines already deposited in the box have been turned over to the hospital heads. President Sollman hopes that he may be privileged to present many more magazines to the hospitals in the name of the organization and the college.

Gym Club Honors First Anniversary

"First Anniversary of the foundation of the Women's Physical Education Club will be celebrated sometime in the last part of May," revealed Margaret Wormel, president of the group. "Alumni members will be invited to attend and we expect to offer something extra special."

Most recent activity of the group was a party held at Sigmond Stern Grove. Guests were Vera Spencer and Laurrine Bergin. A guest speaker from California answered many questions about the Physical Education Department at California.

Women's Chorus At San Jose State

After sprucing up their white outfits and buying new red scarfs, members of the Women's Chorus are preparing to travel to San Jose May 2 to sing in the Spring Festival there. There are 17 members in the group and, according to Flossita Badger, faculty sponsor, they hope to have more.

The group made its debut last Thursday night in the concert given by the music organizations of the college at Galileo High School. They sang two selections, Lullaby and Lift Thine Eyes.

Peace Group Meets Next Wednesday

Final meeting of the Peace Society for the spring semester will be held next Wednesday night, May 4, at the home of Doris Speroni, 441 Fair Oaks Street, between 25th and 26th Streets, near Guerrero, accessible by cars 9, 10, and 26.

The discussion on military training to be led by Jean Page and Robert Porter which was scheduled for the next confab has been dropped. Reason for its elimination is "that there will be too much business since this will be the last meeting of the semester," according to Ray Valdez, president of the Society.

The group has been busy the past week preparing this morning's peace rally at 10 and 11 o'clock in the Powell Street Lecture Hall. Causing a sensation last week were small folders issued by the organization. The folders purported to present the "arguments for war," but upon opening them one found a blank space indicating there are no reasons for armed confidence. On the back of the folder is written "for arguments for peace attend meetings of the San Francisco Junior College Peace Society."

Chessmen Aim To Improve Tactics

Having lost 5 to 3 to the University of California, and tied with the Chinese Y. M. C. A., developing a strong chess team is the principal aim at present for the college Chessmen.

According to Bill Switzer, the Chessmen's president, fundamental plans are being formulated for a Junior College Chess League which will include San Francisco State and University of San Francisco.

Chess Club meetings are held each Friday evening in the home of Henry Ralston, faculty adviser.

WSS Rummage Sale Termed Successful

April 22nd and 23rd witnessed the Women's Service Society's Rummage Sale. It was held at 3010 24th Street, and was well attended. Old clothing disappeared quickly the first day with bric-a-brac coming in a close second.

At the last meeting of the society Dorothy Canovan made a report on the advances made by the constitution revising committee. The next meeting will be held on May 2nd.

Circle Francais Sees French Play

Members of Le Circle Francais attended the French play entitled "L'Abbe Constantin" by Halevy at the Andre Ferrier Theatre D'Art last Friday night. This theater is the only French theater in the United States.

There will be no more business meetings this semester and the final get-together will be on May 7, when the club will go to dinner at one of the leading French restaurants of San Francisco.

Geologists Convene Friday, At 2 P.M.

Both men and women students are eligible for membership in the newly formed Geology Club, which holds a general meeting this Friday afternoon at Galileo, Room 464, at 2:10 o'clock.

"All students who have completed one semester of college geology or who intend to enroll in one next semester are urged to attend this Friday's meeting," said Delmont Dunann, president.

Minerology Too

"We are planning an extensive, active program which we will launch at the very beginning of the fall semester. This will consist of field trips, lectures and various events furthering the interest of geology and minerology," Dunann explained.

Co-Sponsors

A permanent name for the organization will be considered at the Friday meeting as well as the program of activities. One of the first official acts of the club will be a trek to the college building site at Balboa Park, to anslyze the rock and soil there.

Hobbs Tells of Medicine in P.I.

Experiences in Medicine in the Philippines was the title of an address by Kennet L. Hobbs, Botany instructor, at the Pi Mu Gamma Pre-Medical Society meeting, Tuesday evening, April 26, at the Krakow home, 2035 24th Avenue.

Hobbs was the second speaker to present views of the medical profession to address the Pi Mu Gamma this semester. The other speaker was Dr. A. L. Brown, who demonstrated a system of teaching surgical technique by means of technicolor moving pictures of actual operations.

The pre-medical students will have Dr. Alice Potter, college women's physician, speak before them at a later meeting.

In several members' opinions the club has had the most successful semester since the foundation of the club three years ago. The Pi Mu Gamma has been under the guidance of Glenn Noble, Zoology instructor.

Chinese Students Plan Banquet

To discuss plans for the semester banquet, Andrew Auyong, president of the Chinese Students Club, announced a general meeting to be held at the Chinese Y. M. C. A. on next Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock.

President Auyong is particularly anxious for this banquet to be a big success and hopes to see a full turn-out of members at the meeting.

The club recently held a bicycle party in the Golden Gate Park and reportedly the members all enjoyed themselves immensely.

Newmaneers Plan May Day Picnic

Discussion of a picnic to be held Sunday, May 1, at Saint Mary's College, situated at Moraga, was the main business of the last Newman Club meeting.

A report was given by a committee in charge of transportation. Anyone who desires to attend the picnic should see President Bob Fex.

The next meeting of the club will be held the third Monday in May, according to President Bob Fex.

WAA Members Urge To Vote On Leaders At Powell St. Polls

Election of next semester's WAA officers began last Monday and will continue until tomorrow at 1:00 o'clock, when the polls at Powell Street will be closed.

Gail Hanna, vice-president of the Women's Athletic Association, urges all members to vote. "The election of officers in this organization, which has a larger membership than any other women's organization in the college, is not to be considered unimportant," she says, "but should be given careful consideration."

Wormel vs. Parks

Rivals for president are Margaret Wormel and Margaret Parks; vice-president, Margaret Meader and Dorothy Sanderson; secretary, Dorothy Pilgrim and Annette Schunick; and Elizabeth Rehback and Ruth Gustafson for treasurer.

A nominating committee composed of chairman Gloria Swicegood, Dorothy Canavan, Ellen Cumming, and Gail Hanna considered the records of the women eligible for office and after selecting those with the best record, recommended them to the counsel for approval. Those approved are put up for election.

On the Mezzanine

Voters may cast their ballots on the mezzanine floor at Powell Street in the morning and in the A gym at Galileo in the afternoon. Pictures of the women running for office are posted in both buildings.

"The largest number of votes ever polled in a WAA election was this semester in the election of managers," said Miss Hanna; "let's keep up the good work." Managers are elected at the beginning of each semester.

Italian Club Joins Convention

Attending every affair that is being held in conjunction with the Italian Club convention at the University of San Francisco is Bill Solari, president of the college group, and a large majority of the members.

President Solari promised full details of the convention from the beginning day to the last for a later issue of The Guardsman.

AFTER COLLEGE WHAT?
By Anne Rabinowitz

As the printed word is one of man's most powerful tools, the skilled trades associated with printing are enduring and useful. Printing is not one trade, but is a group of allied crafts—all highly skilled, highly paid, and extremely technical.

Printing trades are taught in many high schools, and young boys, who start their training there, have the advantage of learning complicated machinery at an early age.

Printing jobs in the United States governmental departments give employment to many thousands of printers, binders, electrotypers, engravers, pressmen, compositors, linotype operators, and machinists.

In the departments where material is prepared for publication (in government or private work) numerous editors, editorial assistants, proof readers, illustrators, and other experienced, qualified men and women are needed. Training for these positions includes much academic study, because knowledge of countless written subjects is called for on a moment's notice.

Training for ordinary printing trades is obtained on an apprenticeship basis.

The modern printing shop and electrotype rooms usually provide good working conditions. Rooms are well-lighted, equipped with safety devices, and provided with conveniences for the comforts of workmen. Health hazards, except for high strain and nervous tension due to confined work, are not great.

Practical experience, good fundamental education, and technical training are the lines which lead to steady employment and promotion in this field. However, printers can seldom stop studying, as new methods and difficult processes are often introduced into their work. The man who keeps constantly up-to-date, and strives for specialization, will seldom lack employment. If the youth of today makes the strides of the past generation, new fields and opportunities in printing will beckon the ambitious.

CANDIDATES SPEAK AT RALLY TODAY

ITALIAN SOCIETY PARTICIPATES IN BAY AREA MEET

Local Delegates Vote Convention Great Achievement

Participating in a convention of Italian Clubs of all the Bay Area colleges, the college group met April 21, 22, and 23, under the auspices of the Maraschi Club of the University of San Francisco. All delegates who attended, agreed that the convention was successful. New acquaintances were formed from other colleges and universities, and a gay convention spirit ensued.

Beginning Thursday evening, April 21, there was registration of the delegates at the University of San Francisco, after which, delegates gathered in the auditorium to hear a talk by the Rev. Harold E. Ring, S. J., President of the University of San Francisco, and Tully Simoni, convention chairman. An art exhibit, moving pictures, Italian Travelogue and music by the Neapolitan Trio concluded the session, after which delegates gathered for a buffet in the Francesca room.

Friday morning at 9 o'clock, the convention gathered for mass at Sts. Peter and Paul's Church, later touring North Beach, Telegraph Hill, Fisherman's Wharf and other points of interest. Delegates then returned for a session at the Pompeiian Hall in the Dante Building and heard an address by the Rev. Joseph Galli, S.C., afterwards enjoying a Cioppino lunch.

CONVENTION SECRETARY

ATTILIO RUGGIERO

Sports, Addresses Interest

Sport enthusiasts attended a tennis match, at 2 o'clock at the Palace of Fine Arts, between the University of San Francisco and the University of Santa Clara. The University of San Francisco team won the honors of the day. Later that day, the delegates had a session at the University of San Francisco, where talks were given by Reynald J. Bianchi, assistant city attorney of San Francisco, on "Pursuits Open to Italian-American Youth in Catholic Action." That evening, the convention dined at the Exposition Grotto, later hearing a talk by Professor Hagerty of St. Mary's College on Dante. Chairman of the evening was Lawrence Mana, president of the student body of St. Mary's College.

The convention was concluded on Saturday, April 23, with a talk by Richard E. Doyle, Jr., on "Italian Tradition", followed by a buffet at noon; tea at 2:30 p.m. at the San Francisco College for Women, preceded by a talk by Mrs. Louis M. Piccirillo, in Italian, on "Italian-American Women and the Advancement of Culture"; with a grand finale, a formal dance, in the French Room of the Palace Hotel.

Solari Praises

According to Bill Solari, president of the college group, the convention "went over in a big way," and the work of the officers of the convention was not in vain. Solari said, "Without a doubt, the convention was enjoyed by all and the work of Tully Simoni, president of the convention; John Garzero, treasurer; Attilio Ruggiero, secretary; and Angelo A. Fusco, faculty moderator, was not in vain, as everyone was impressed with its cultural and educational value. In fact, it went over so well, that probably another college will attempt to continue it next year."

Club Advisory Board In First Business Meet

Four Charters Granted By Council; Geology Club, Radio Group Started

By John M. Julius

Four organizations were granted charters, one constitution was approved, and one charter was declined at the first business meeting of the college Club Advisory Board held late last week.

Pick and Hammer Club, Radio Engineers Society, Alpha Phi Omega Sorority, and Tri Epsilon Fraternity are the newest organizations on the official club roster. All were unanimously voted charters.

Although the Block SF Society has been in duration almost since the very beginning of the college, a new constitution replacing the old outdated one was accepted as official by the board.

"It must be realized," said Board delegates, "that although it is not necessary for all organizations to have constitutions, in the event that one is drawn up or an old one revised, it must be approved by the Club Advisory Board."

Contrnct Bridge Club, although it has a large following, was declined a charter because no faculty sponsor was named in the petition. All organizations seeking charters must have a faculty sponsor or sponsors.

Pick and Hammer

The first accepted organization, the Pick and Hammer Club, is in reality a Geologic organization organized "in order to promote cooperation in the exchange of information of a Geological and Mineralogical nature, and to achieve a more perfect perfection in these fields."

Pick and Hammer sponsor is George Green of the college Geology and Minerology department and Jennet Henderson, who is in charge of the women's section of the club.

Activities will include field trips, lectures, and whatever else may prove of interest to the school at large in the Geologic line. Last week, this group sponsored a lecture by Albert S. Samuels, local diamond expert, on "The History of Diamond Cutting."

Marconis Too

The Society of Radio Engineers, as its name implies, was organized by and for Radio Engineering majors. Officers are President Vincent Sherman, Vice-president Bill Williams, Secretary Max Hoberg, Treasurer Lee Bollinger, and Publicity Agent Barny Viner.

Alpha Phi Omega Sorority was organized "in order to promote social fellowship and educational activities," as stated in the constitution of that group. Jennet Henderson is faculty sponsor.

Tri Epsilon (Epsilon Epsilon Epsilon) signifies three Greek words beginning with Epsilon; namely, Companionship, Knowledge, and Good Cheer. Membership in Tri Epsilon is perpetual.

ALLEN WILLIAMS

WILLIAMS SAYS:

"The semester which is about to be concluded is unprecedented in the history of the college. Activities have risen to a new level. A new constitution has been molded. But most important—there has been no internal strife among the student leaders.

"Congratulations to Don Mix, a real fellow, a real leader. Let us maintain the school friendship that he has developed, for it is in friendship that lies the secret of success. Friendship is the mother of cooperation, cooperation is the mother of success."

Consideration of the Club Advisory Board's charter-granting power will be the first order of business at today's Nomination Rally, according to last minute word received from student officials.

President Mix says, in an appeal to all voters of the college, "Don't fail to attend this Nomination Rally. It is your only chance to become acquainted with the candidates before the election. And don't forget to bring your student body cards to the polls!"

ROBERT FEX

FEX SAYS:

"In placing my name before you, the Associated Students, as a candidate for president of your student body, I do believe that I am capable of handling the position. I have acquainted myself with the duties of the office and am sure that if I am elected I will give you my untiring efforts to fulfill the job. In the way of promises I can only say, that, if I am elected I will do my best."

Nominees Presented This Afternoon; Voting Begins Friday Morning At Nine O'clock On Powell Street Building Mezzanine Floor

Candidates who will run in the all college elections will be presented at a special nomination rally to be held today at 2 o'clock in the Galileo Auditorium. Final election of the new officers will take place next Friday, May 9, with the polls remaining open from 9:00 to 1:30 o'clock on the mezzanine floor of the Powell Street building, and will re-open at two o'clock, with balloting until four at Room 150 in the Galileo High School building. Stan Adams, chairman of the elections committee, announced that voting machines have been secured. Adams said, "The machines were secured in the carrying out of the committee's program to insure a strictly "on the level" election.

In an effort to avoid any possible misuse of voting privileges by duplicate presentation of student body cards, the committee has arranged to have inspectors stationed at the polls, whose duties will be to register each voter and stamp a cancellation mark on the voter's student card. This procedure will forestall any possible double usage of the cards.

Don Mix, associated students president, responded optimistically when queried as to the amount of interest and the possible total number of votes which he expected. Said Mix, "Every effort has been made to insure this election's chance of going down in the college's history as the biggest and most hotly contest ballot to date. The members of the election committee have worked long and hard toward this end. The rest is up to the voters of the college. May the best man win!"

Candidates for the various offices have expressed themselves as "fit and ready" for the acceptance of the final choices of the voters, and each has voiced the hope that a record vote may be forthcoming.

VOTING RESULTS TOLD AT WAA BANQUET

Election results and the names of winners of both the first team and block awards were announced at the Women's Athletic Association cemi-annual banquet last Thursday.

Margaret Park was electen WAA president for the coming semester, defeating Elizabeth Rehbock. The vice-presidency went to Dot Sanderson, who polled more votes than her opponent, Margaret Meader. Annette Schunick defeated Dorothy Pilgrim for the secretarial post, and Betty MacKenzie was chosen as treasurer.

Membership in the Block Society, highest honor which the WAA bestows, was awarded to the present treasurer, Ellen Cumming, and rifle manager Virginia Kwiatt, both graduating students.

Women who won first team awards are:

Badminton: Tillie Huddleson, Miriam Frazier, and Dorothy Canavan.
Basketball: Marion Dickey, Ruthelora Hail, and Annette Schunick.
Golf: Gloria Swicegood.
Fencing: Margaret Park.
Ice Skating: Ellen Cumming and Virginia Kwiatt.

Riding: Betty MacKenzie, and Mildred Orendorff.
Swimming: Marion Dickie.
Rifle: Virginia Kwiatt, Edna Wedam and Gail Hanna.
Dancing: Agnes Weise, and Esther Tari.

The banquet, which was coeducational for the first time, was larger this semester than ever before. Guest speakers were Ray Dougherty, director of physical education in the San Francisco Public Schools, and Dr. Alice Potter, women's physician at the college.

"We are immensely pleased at the success of this semester's banquet," declared WAA president Dot Canavan. "A large number of men as well as women attended and it was a fitting climax to what has been a semester in which all of our activities have turned out unusually well".

Vera Spencer and the WAA council present Miss Canavan with a badminton racquet and press in appreciation of the services which she has rendered as WAA president. The banquet marked the close of WAA activities for this semester.

HOTEL DIVISION ISSUES CATALOG

Last week marked the publication of the third bulletin of the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division. The first catalogue made its appearance at the birth of the hotel division in April, 1936. It contained pertinent information concerning the curricula offered, entrance requirements and a directory of instructors. This first edition soon proved inadequate, and in April, 1937 the second bulletin came forth. The addition of new courses and new instructors coupled with the fact that the second edition became increasingly rare as the days went by, proved to be reason for a third edition to be published.

Publication of the new bulletin was supervised by J. Graham Sullivan, coordinator, assisted by Mozelle Milliken, hotel survey instructor. The cover is embellished with a view of the "Pageant of the Pacific", the 1939 World's Fair on San Francisco Bay. Three thousand copies of the catalogue were printed and at present the mailing list includes fifteen hundred names. Copies of the booklet will be sent all over the country with some going to Hawaii, the Philippines, Mexico, Canada and Europe.

FACULTY BUNCH FINALLY QUITS POLITICS SPREE

Closing the hottest political race in the history of the Faculty Association, Edward E. Sandys of the English department was elected to the honorable position of president on last Wednesday, April 27.

The crowning feature of the election was the presentation of a poem written by the man of destiny, Sandys.

Joseph Willinms, retiring president, described the poetical works as "quite cute." Other remarks were, "it did the trick," and "why didn't I think of that?"

John Ross tallied a majority of the votes for the vice president's chair. Secretarial duties are being assumed by Mildred Williams while Ubaldo Maggetti takes over the duties of treasurer.

The three members-at-large chosen were: Dick Allman, Thomas Gabbert and Joseph Williams.

At the next meeting, a formal dinner to be held Wednesday, May 11, at the Hotel Mark Hopkins, Sandys will take office.

GRADUATING STUDENTS TO REHEARSE MAY 20TH

Conflicting Exams Changed To Saturday, May 14 To Provide For Commencement Practice; All Grads Expected To Participate

By Jean Page

Finals in all Monday, Wednesday, Friday, 8 o'clock classes will be held Saturday, May 14, to permit graduating students to attend a morning rehearsal of commencement at the War Memorial Opera House, Friday, May 20 at 8 o'clock. Graduates will be admitted to the building from the Grove street ramp, and all students who will participate in the commencement exercises are requested to be present at the rehearsal.

The Sophomore class sponsors, Bertha Keller, and Arthur McCarty, aided by women's advisor, Margaret Dougherty, have been completing arrangements for graduation. Each graduate will be given two invitations, and those who wish more, may obtain them. The boxes and lower tiers of the Opera House will be reserved for special guests and for the faculty. The committee in charge has obtained the services of the San Francisco Municipal Orchestra, conducted by Phillip Sapiro.

The main speaker at commencement this year will be Judge Curtis D. Wilbur. Wilbur, who is a district circuit court judge, will be introduced by Superintendent of Schools, Joseph P. Nourse. The college A Capella choir, and vocal soloist, Robert Scott, will contribute to the musical part of the program.

Ushers Named

Annemarie Delfs and George Green of the low sophomores, have chosen the students from this class who will serve as ushers. The low sophomores who have been selected are: Annabelle Benson, Davis Carter, Joseph Coccelato, Howard Markovito, Jane Mitchell, Margaret Park, Lilly Phillips, Allen Williams, Muriel Mills, Betty Nelson, Marie Louise McNutt, Alan Searles, William Solari, and Jean Loukey. Alice Cooper and Joseph Williams, sponsors of the high freshman class, have chosen Grace Piltz, Phyllis Learned, Elviera Oberti, Jack Shaw, Vincent Giantvalley, Maynard Gooby, Eugene Bunton, Ellen Cumming, Margaret Wormell, and Mariam Yager to serve as ushers from the high freshman class.

To Be Honored

A plan has been initiated this semester to give recognition to graduating honor students. The registrar's office has not yet finished compiling this list of graduates. Graduating members of the recently organized honor society will be among those honored.

Yesterday all graduate students were invited to a tea given in their honor by the Associated Women Students.

Women's Service Group Offers Scholarship

With the Rummage Sale of last week a definite financial success, the Women's Service Society is once again offering a $50 scholarship to students of the college, according to Marion Yager, president of the organization.

Miss Yager announced that any student who has a grade point average of 1.5, and who needs financial assistance in order to complete his or her work at this college, is eligible to apply for the scholarship and may secure applications either at Galileo or Powell Street any time after today.

"Students must have at least a high freshman standing when applying," Miss Yager said. "The successful candidate will be selected by a committee composed of faculty members and the service society's scholarship committee, and the award will be given as soon as all arrangements are completed."

This time last year the society awarded its first scholarship to Anne Rabinowitz who was selected from a number of applicants because of her outstanding scholarship, character and worthiness by a committee composed of Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrant, Helene Turner, NYA director in the college, Norma Parent, serving as member-at-large from the society and Florence Murphy, then WSS president.

"We are particularly anxious", Miss Yager said that as many students as possible submit applications for our scholarship award because we would like to be sure that it is given to the person who most deserves it. Remember that both men and women may apply and try to get your applications in as soon as possible."

Miss Yager said that the next important item on the society's calendar was the formal initiation banquet which will be held at the Western Women's Club sometime within the next two weeks. At this time new members will be formally ushered into the group and officers for the fall semester will be elected.

NYA Workers Given 40 Hour Allotment

Students employed under the National Youth Association will be allowed 40 hours work this month, revealed Helene Turner, faculty sponsor to the Association. Present members may sign up for work for next semester any time after Monday, May 2. Applications must be made so that the NYA list for next semester can be composed. Time slips will be due on May 20, which is the last day of the college semester.

FIRST COED MOVES IN ON SITE

By Florence Murphy

While men students of the college have been calmly going about the business of selecting a mythical ideal girl to reign over our temporary campi, another little girl, whom we shall call Blanche Co-ed, has firmly established herself as Miss San Francisco Junior College on the site of our new buildings at Balboa Park.

Why wait, thunk she, until the first registration day? Why get old and grey without ever having registered in a junior college? Why worry about finding a boarding house on the approved list? Why not move in now and avoid the rush?

And move in she did! Lock, stock and barrel, with an emphasis on the barrel which is of tin (formerly a container of oil) and which serves the same purpose as an elegant English type Sorority house in the life of Blanche.

What! A girl living in an oil barrel? And on our lovely site, too! A sin! A shame! And how can a girl fit in an oil barrel anyhow? Ah, but this girl is different! You see she is a girl dog!

Yes, friends, on the day that the first action was taken on the forthcoming buildings, Blanche moved in, just a puppy. Now with progress progressing, she's still there and growing older and stronger every day but gaining character with every second.

When California moved into its buildings did they find a grown-up bear? Did Stanford find a grown-up Indian? Did Oregon find a grown-up duck? No! But when students of San Francisco Junior College descend upon Balboa Park, blue-books in hand, there, waiting to greet them, will be the honest-to-pete and absolutely grown-up dog!

EXTRACURRICULARITY

QUOTING The Daily Nebraskan, "The emphasis on activities as a part of education is largely misplaced. Activities offer not education but the opportunity to apply what is already acquired. Nor do activities develop personality, because it is the students with fine personalities, for the most part, who engage in activities. Any necessary contact with people, so highly lauded by proponents of activity careers, might better be had with some intelligent conversation over a coke or in a fraternity or room house . . ."

While it is possible that there has been an undue emphasis placed, especially in the last few years, on the participation in extracurricular activities as an essential portion of the education of college students, it is very probable that The Nebraskan editorial writer may have been voicing a personal prejudice when he stated that activities "do not develop personality."

It is hard to conceive of any person, possessed of sufficient intelligence and initiative to desire to go to college, who is utterly devoid of a personality of any sort.

It seems more probable that there are numbers of students who, either through timidity or lack of understanding, so fail to impress their individual character on their associates, that they consequently appear to have no personality. In any case, it would seem fairly certain that students could have a very definite personality that had never been recognized by their fellows.

These persons would be very apt to "develop" or "come out" under the stimulus of participation in the discussions or activities of a congenial group of students mutually interested in some form of self-expression.

It is also hard to believe that conversation "over a coke" or "in a fraternity house" would necessarily be as "intelligent" as the conversation among members of a group interested in the study of literature, or any other subject which people band together to discuss and study as a group.

It is not to be thought that the mere participation in activities outside the classroom can make up for an actual deficiency in scholastic ability, or to presume that any amount of participation in activities alone can produce an intelligent, well-informed and well-educated individual, but it seems ridiculous to think that there are no activities open to college students that might offer educational returns for the time invested.

Perhaps there are many activities that are a waste of time, but if one is to grant a student the ability to engage in intelligent conversation, then it would also appear logical to assume that this student could choose intelligent activities in which to participate, and if such would be the case, then it seems equally logical to believe that a person could stimulate and "develop" his latent personality through contact and conversation with the other students also participating in the activity chosen.

If, as The Daily Nebraskan feels, it is impossible to develop personalities through participation in the extracurricular activities, then it would be just as well to eliminate all such activity. Think what a collection of super-dull universities and colleges we would then be burdened with.

SHINING UP

Laudable is the spirit displayed by the students and faculty of Galileo High School in the school's current campaign to "shine up" the physical and oral beauties of their institution.

Concentrating their efforts not only on cleaning out the material rubbish that collects around any building or group of buildings, this enterprising body of young people has instituted a determined campaign to sweep out the "unsightly" and decidedly unmusical heaps of verbal debris, by launching a forceful war against unnecessary noise and chatter.

Such industrious expenditures of energy should not go unnoted in a world that is already over-burdened with a superfluity of rant and bombast. Best of luck Galileans!

INTELLECTUALLY SPEAKING

Somewhere, some place along the line of least "insistence", there is a happy medium between the purely intellectual status and the so-called "dumbell" or "deadbeat" student.

In educating one's self to appreciate more the world in which of necessity one must live, there is, as in all things, a middle course which is perhaps the most desirable.

It must make the world an all-together more livable place, if college students, particularly those who are young and still undecided as to which course to pursue in their future life, would make a sincere attempt to place themselves in the middle category.

It is not to be thought that mediocrity or "averageness" is a condition to be sought in the attainment of an education in the field of so-called liberal arts. It is probable that students could cultivate an outlook that might make for a more healthful viewpoint on the problems that face them during their college days and in the life that lies ahead, if they would steer clear of "going off the deep end," either into a state of purely intellectual dogmatism, wherein they sneer with contempt at their more unenlightened brethren, or into a shell of complacency, wherein they frown and scoff at any attempts on the part of their fellows to acquire an appreciation of things intellectual.

In a day and age where so much emphasis is placed on specialization, there is great danger of over-specialization, with the resultant narrowing of the individual's views and the eventual self-satisfaction of personal achievement.

What seems much more compatible with an ease of adjustment to society and what ought to be much more conducive to self-expression and the attainment of comparative happiness, is that condition, wherein the student tries to understand and appreciate the myriad of things that go to make up the education of an individual, both the commonplace and the sublime.

It is well to be able to appreciate the great works of art, fine to be able to thrill to classic music, but how much better it is to know and like, not only these things, but also the simple things that form the swiftly-moving background of our daily lives.

CONGRATULATIONS . . .

To the members of the Forum staff who worked long and diligently to turn out a publication that would be a credit to an organization ten times their size.

Blazing the way for other organizations of the future, this progressive society has offered a project that is unique in this college. There are many institutions which publish anthologies of literature, but it is doubtful if any of them are faced with greater obstacles in their path of accomplishment. Another instance of a good job well done.

Out Of The Fog

By Mac

For want of a more fitting title, we've decided to call this piece, An Open Letter To Posterity", although in actuality, it is not directed to all of posterity, but only to those future generations of young hopefuls who will endeavor to glean an education during their varying numbers of semesters at San Francisco Junior College. Accordingly, it is without the least bit of compunction, with a heart utterly calloused, with absolutely no thoughts of possible regrets at the consequences of writing this dastardly bit, that we stagger out with the following:

Dear Posterity:

For some time, we've contemplated with relish, yes, with even a few thrills of malicious delight, the writing of this, our journalistic obituary. It goes without saying that we shall soon be leaving these hallowed halls, for if we weren't, we certainly could not have the awful temerity to print the truths which we are about to unfold.

At heart, we must be "such stuff as fiends are made of" else we simply wouldn't dare even to consider making the startling revelations that we are about to set down on this paper.

We are well aware of the fact that the finger of scorn will be promptly and unerringly directed at us for abusing our columnists privilege, for breaking the Hippocratic oath, destroying the vows of editorial courtesy, and in short, violating all the rules of decency that have governed the actions of gentlemen through the ages.

Of all this we are well aware, but come what may, we feel it our solemn duty to warn future students of the college against the shams that will be perpetrated upon them immediately after they register in this institution, therefore we shall stand unflinchingly by our word, and through all the storms of rebuttal that may descend on our "bloody but unbowed" head, we shall continue to believe that we acted as we thought best.

We feel it is only fair that prospective students be forewarned about certain conditions which they will encounter, if they enter this college. First and foremost, there is the matter of Dean Browne. One of the most monstrous hoaxes ever played on us, came when, as innocent freshmen, we were led to believe that the worthy dean was a fierce, fire-eating, hobgoblin. This is utterly false. He is a very, good-natured, mild-mannered gentleman. He will be eager to be your friend. (We hope.)

Next, there is the paradoxical situation that finds two-thirds of the student body adding to your bewilderment by telling you that this is one of the "lousiest schools they've ever seen". This is simply another scheme to try your patience. The curious psychology of this college's students reflects itself in a backwards, or reverse sort of speech. The people who declaim the college the loudest, are really the ones who stay here the longest. (We ought to know—"Pioneer" McGee, etc.)

Another thing that may cause you a bit of puzzling is the curious case of the college newspaper. If you listen to student comment, you will think the paper is terrible, that there is absolutely nothing in it; do not let this fool you, for the proof of this fallacious situation lies in the fact that it is next to impossible to find a stray copy of the paper the day after it comes out. (Of course, maybe they take it to pad the seats of the benches in Union Square, but it's the same difference.)

(To be concluded next week)

Mental Mutterings

By Fem

Just for the sake of retaliation and all that sort of thing, we hereby present the women's side of this "what-type-do-you-prefer" business. Although we were not able to reach as many women as we had hoped (time's a-wastin', you know!) we did manage to get some sort of a cross-section and here it be:

Almost to a girl they like their men tall although several votes were cast for the man of medium height. The brunette was favored with the blonde only four votes behind. Only three others share our enthusiasm for redheads, which is a slightly higher average than in our poll of a year ago. Brown eyes were the most popular with blue eyes only slightly behind and with two votes for green eyes and one for hazel eyes.

The majority of the ladies interviewed prefer brains to brawn with only three favoring brawn and four voting for a combination of the two.

In meeting a man for the first time nearly half of the women notice his general appearance which (remember?) is also what most of the men admitted noticing first about the women. A great many girls admit that "clothes make the man" by noticing, first of all, "how he is dressed". Several girls notice a man's manners first, and an equal number his smile, with feet, hands, English, shoulders, height, build, face, eyes and personality getting one vote each. One young lady notices "whether his voice squeaks or not"!

Asked to number a certain list of qualities in the order of their importance, most women marked character first. Personality was chosen first by the next highest number, with several votes for sense of humor and one vote each for intelligence, good disposition, consideration and good looks.

In answer to the query regarding the annoying faults possessed by Mister Male, more than three-fourths (!!!) of those questioned put as their answer "Conceit" Next to this was "talking about themselves" with "feeling of superiority over women" close behind. Votes were also cast for "freshness", "jealousy", "lies", "making a gal wait", "picking girls apart", "self-interest", "condescending manner", "being in a hurry", "conspicuousness" and "carelessness". One young lady, undoubtedly a victim of that far-flung globe circler, the love bug, answered, but firmly, "nothing"!

The ideal man, then, would be a tall brown-eyed brunette (Ah, the Latin type!) with lots of brains, a very fine general appearance, and with good taste in dress, good manners and a nice smile. He would have an exceptionally fine character, a pleasing personality, and a good sense of humor to say nothing of a certain amount of disposition and consideration.

He would not, above everything, be conceited! He would not continuously talk about himself and his accomplishments, nor would he act in a superior manner toward members of the opposite sex. Altogether, he would be quite a guy, huh girls? And if he should ever crop up we'll probably put him (stuffed, of course) in the museum of our new junior college buildings!

A little off the record, but definitely on the subject, a bunch of girls were talking over the men of the college (as girls are wont to do on occasions) and they agreed, almost one hundred percent that the three nicest (their words) men in the college are Ed Frediani, Don Mix and Jerry Flamm. Take a bow, boys!

CABBAGES AND KINGS

By Dick Simpers

ADDING a mysterious touch to last week's sophomore formal affair were those hieroglyphic covered maps hopefully passed out to the purchasers of bids. Supposedly designed so as to show the quickest and most convenient routes to the scene of the jig and guide patrons to it with a minimum of wandering, these samples of the cartographer's art bore more resemblance to the charts of the ancient Hindu navigators than to the simple outlines they professed to be. A maze of criss-crossing arrows pointing to all points of the compass did more to confuse most of the formal-bound couples than did the to the pavilion of mirth, with the result rather remote and twisty roads leading that some of those who took the directions literally found themselves floundering in just as the orchestra was tuning up for its closing number.

The delicately executed sketches of ships plowing up and down the bay, airplanes whizzing over the Pacific, and automobiles hurtling across the bridges added a colorful and exotic note to the mass, but were of little aid to marooned autoists, who found themselves wandering in the wilds of Daly City at a late hour Friday night. According to the creators of this six-dimensional masterpiece, it was all the fault of the mimeograph machine, but we have our doubts. No mimeograph machine could be that mixed up.

Continually amazing is the guillibility of a large proportion of what is generally supposed to be an intelligent and up-to-date nation. The number of astrologers, palmists, and similar professed soothsayers who manage to wring millions of dollars out of the American public every year with their silly pretenses at fortune telling and magic is astounding. Of course, there will always be suckers, but that there should be so many in this day and age who are willing to fall for such hackneyed and obviously phoney tricks is almost unbelievable. Statistics recently released on the "hokus-pokus" business are anything but flattering to the intelligence of the general public.

* * *

The next time Jerry Flamm volunteers to give anyone lessons in the manly art of self-defense, he plans on selecting a promising flyweight as his pupil. Several days of wandering about minus one of his large front fangs as a result of warming up an over-grown local heavyweight pugilist have convinced Jerry that it might be well in the future to confine his boxing activities to subjects with a less potent wallop.

One would think that some action would be taken against those red-hots who insist on passing out pink propaganda sheets in front of the Powell Street building. If these saffron agitators want to enjoy themselves in their own little way with their inane prattle, all right, but when they start trying to influence the college student body, they should be curbed in no uncertain matter. (This is a purely personal opinion.)

FINIS WRITTEN TO ARGUMENTS OF SEMESTER

Editor's Note:

The Guardsman herewith presents both sides of the various disputes which have raged in these columns during the past semester, thus defending itself from any possible accusations of partisanship.

This pictorial representation of the numerous wordy conflicts carried on between different warring factions in the college through the medium of the Ram's Horn affords to one and all, an opportunity to choose whichever side of any argument they desire and they may place any interpretation they like upon this depiction of the antagonistic groups which have beset each other with roars and shouts of rage during the last few months.

The hats have been tossed in the ring and all is in readiness for the college's annual three ring political circus. Today at 2 o'clock the candidates will be paraded before your approving gaze at the Nomination Rally at the Galileo Auditorium.

At this writing (April 29) two candidates have appeared on the list seeking the office of Associated Students president. These prospective executives present an interesting study in contrast.

Alan Williams has had a brilliant college political career, served in the Executive Council for two semesters by virtue of his being Head Yell Leader and President of the Associated Men's Students, and has been a moving spirit in practically all major activities of the past year. He gives definite promise of being a competent and experienced student leader.

Also identified with a record of successful activities is the second candidate, Bob Fex. He gained his executive experience by piloting one of the college's largest organizations, the Newman Club, through its most productive year. Fex was also a motivating factor in the amazing Block "SF" Society revival accomplished within the past few months. The record of this athletic star indicates that he would be a sincere and personable executive.

* * *

In the contest for president and for practically all the other posts you have a wide variety of well qualified students from which to make your selection.

Consider carefully the qualities and records of each candidate, and then recognize your responsibility as a member of the Associated Students by casting your ballot next Friday.

Remember, my dear people, this is to be a different election—a representative election with at least 500 students voting.

And you must present your student body card before you will be allowed to vote!

Continual artistic achievement is what one always expects and receives from the U. of C. Little Theatre. Struggling notoriously as the group does against unreasonable facilities, the performances smack of integrity and high purpose. The production of Maxwell Anderson's "High Tor" proved this. The primary excellence of the play came from the sustained comedy and fantasy, and the actors of the Little Theatre made the most of every laugh and thrill. It is surprising to find such artistic ability in a non-professional group, especially when professional organizations seek, but rarely achieve, such effects as sincerity.

Certainly Hollywood, spending a million on "High Tor", could never have employed its money half so excellently as the Little Theatre used its far more slender means. And, as long as a little theatre can manage so well, it is to be hoped that Hollywood keeps its Midas touch away from "High Tor" (that and other good plays). But, to return to our laudation, any theatre group, large or small, that can present three such commendable and prodigious works as O'Neill's "Morning Becomes Electra", Strindberg's "Dance Of Death", and "High Tor" and present them well, shows high nerve and astonishing fibre.

For people who do not let history interfere with their aesthetic enjoyment, we should like to suggest the current exhibit of prehistoric rock drawings on display at the San Francisco Museum of Art. Beautifully reproduced, these strange, expressionistic pictures from primitive men are as exciting as they are puzzling. Full of inverted, elongated, super-imposed men and animals, the surprising thing is that these fierce, barbaric efforts have a tremendous emotional appeal today.

The passion for the hunt may have changed from mud to mere pleasure, and religion has become less simple; nevertheless, prehistoric man presented such events in economic and telling lines. Some of the figures, extracted from the compound whole, are vivid and incredible. The common opinion of the caveman's ignorance loses all art's justification when faced with these accurate records of nature. It also proves art to be neither had nor beginning, but a continuous whole, vital and alive as the men of today.

The current movement to put great art in every home has gained a good deal of momentum during the last year. Through various newspapers in the U. S. an offer for the art education of the masses presents a splendid set of master paintings. At present this group of 48 paintings may be obtained from the San Francisco News office for the small sum of 10c a piece.

The set makes an interesting history of art from the Renaissance to the Moderns. There is an Angelo, a Rembrandt, a Van Gogh, and a Kent. As a

Although "scholastic" irregularities may halt one or two of them, the outstanding members of the college track squad will journey to Modesto Saturday for the annual Conference Meet.

Walt Boitano, a point winner in the dashes last year, might come through in either the running or the weight events. If Mitchell can return to his form of last spring, when he turned in a 4:38 mile, he may be among the top flight in the distance duel. The occasionally brilliant Duke Worsham could garner a place if he can equal his javelin toss against the Cal. Frosh.

Carolan in the 880, Flamm in the discus, Corchet in the shot, and Emery in the broad jump are other possibilities.

With the advent of Robin Fex into the mire of political activity, college athletes are demonstrating enthusiasm toward Friday's election. If they could only remember where they left their student body cards, they'd even vote, I betcha.

From the standpoint of professional possibilities, the Eisanites best baseballer is the oversized moundsman, Ed Curcio.

"Big Ed" fulfills the talent scout's demand for size, has speed, fair control, and a change of pace. Most important of all, this Oakland lad has natural baseball ability, and is blessed with the factor of fine coordination, which allows him to constantly improve properly developed and given the right breaks, he may go far.

The college boxing team's long planned tour to the San Jose Tournament was called off at the very last minute, because it was discovered that the Men's Ballet class was staging a rehearsal in the gym on the same night that the fights were to be held.

Boxing Coach Joe Amori admits that it was a distinct novelty to have the dancers chase the leather pushers from any desired objective. Our only comment is that they must have some very bemuscled ballet dancers at the San Jose institution.

After spending three semesters developing his muscles by working out on a typewriter, Old "Doc" Simpers has become the athletic marvel of the spring. The bespeckled journalist garnered a block in crew, gained a first team spot on the college bowling team, was the deadeye of the infamous Hottentot casaba circus, and incidentally retained his title as the Poker champion.

The good old days: When Fex was just a ball player, and Al Williams just a good welterweight fighter . . . when Howard Cloud was merely a Flying Lamb gridman, and Paul Le Baron spent his time playing basketball . . . Sports Editorial—The Block men are constantly being praised for their fine showing this semester. If they have really reformed the periodic outbursts of animal spirits that characterized their activities in the past, they will make no group demonstration at the two rallies staged before finals start.

KENTFIELD TUSSLE TOMORROW; RAMS ENTER DIAMOND FINALE

First Game at 12:30, Second Following Directly After; "Scoop" Carlson's Marin Players a Game Behind Modesto Pirates In College Contests

By Bob Fex

Baseball season for the Rams goes into its final week when the San Francisco team travels to Kentfield, tomorrow to engage the Marin Junior College nine in a double header. The first game will get under way at twelve-thirty, with the second contest starting directly after the close of the first fray. "Scoop" Carlson has a veteran team this year and at the present writing are entrenched in second place only one game behind the league leading "Pirates" from Modesto.

Veteran Infield

Coach Carlson had the good fortune of a veteran returning to each spot in his starting infield. He has the tall, good fielding, Ken Hildebrant back covering the initial sack. Frank Fielding, another good fielder as you might judge from his name, playing second base. At the torrid corner Carlson has a boy with one of the strongest throwing arms in the league in Joe Byrne. Carlson has really built his infield around the great all-around athlete Johnny Allen. Allen was selected on the all-conference team last year and this year is playing better ball, both in fielding and hitting, his batting average is well over the .500 mark.

In the way of pitchers Carlson has Russel Leback, a right-hander, who will hurl the first game. In the second contest he will probably use Jack Jasper, a southpaw. Behind the log will be another veteran, Charlton Hoberg, whose experience should stand him in good stead against the Rams. Carlson's choices in the outfield are usually kept to game time with a chance of three out of a possible six to get the starting role.

Curcio Will Hurl

Coach Lee Eisan of the Rams will start his ace hurler, "Big Ed" Curcio, in the first game. Curcio has pitched outstanding hall all year only being defeated once. "Ossie" Gardner will assume the starting spot in the nightcap. Gardner has improved rapidly and should give the hard-hitting Marineer's plenty of trouble. Weaver Galbraith will do the catching in both games.

Little has been said of the starting Ram outfield all year, but these boys have been playing great ball all year and are probably the best fielding group in the league. Paul Hjort in centerfield, although he has had trouble finding his batting eye, is judged by many experts as the best fielder in the conference. Frank Nilan and Ray Egelhofer are the other lads who have been doing great things for the Rams.

Eisan is starting his regular infield, "Mickey" Berman at first, Jom Coen at second, "Arni" Banta at third, and Kent Baird will start at shortstop. There is a possibility that Dave Johnson will play second base in place of Jim Coen.

BLOCK SOCIETY INITIATES TODAY

Members of the Block SF Society plan to initiate new members today. This morning the scene of action will be on Powell Street and in the afternoon it will shift to Galileo High.

New members of the society who have been awarded Block SF and circle blocks this semester are to be initiated, according to Jerry Flamm, president of the Block society. "Verducci and Tobiason will head the committee in charge of the affair," continued Flamm, "and the initiation will be climaxed by a banquet at "My Rendezvous."

Members of the society desiring to attend the banquet must contact any of the Block SF officers today. The dinner will start at seven o'clock at 840 Sansome Street and will cost fifty cents.

Members to be initiated into the society today must be dressed in the sport uniform for which they received their award or in girl's dress. Also they must comply with certain regulations that will be given to them this morning and failure to do so will result in some form of appropriate punishment.

"Absence from school or any effort to avoid being initiated is not advisable," said Flamm, "and we will take steps to prevent such actions and apply penalties where necessary," Flamm further stated.

This is the first block society initiation to be held at Galileo since last spring. It is hoped that candidates and members will fully observe regulations thus setting a new high standard for such activities in the college.

Amori Keglers Enter Big Time Bowling League

College Trundlers In West Coast Congress, Mid State Tourneys

Joe Amori's Ram keglers will climax their ten-pin sessions as collegiate alley pioneers, competing in the West Coast Bowling Congress and the Mid-State Championship tournaments as big-time trundlers this month.

Two teams of top-notchers from the bowling physical education classes will vie in the events, the West Coast next Friday night, May 6, at San Jose, the Mid-State in Fresno either May 14 or 21.

Their participation will mark the first appearance of scholastic bowlers in big time competition and is the topic of much comment in both San Jose and the Raisin City. While the team sponsorships for the Fresno event have not been received here as yet, Amori announces that the Hotels DeAnza and Montgomery will lend the Rams their respective banners in the West Coast.

The stronger of the two will represent the DeAnza Hotel. The lineup will consist of Howard Cloud, 165; Robert Sullivan, 152; Grant Farley, 155; Dominic Manfredi, 165; and Jack Schmale, 161. The team will average 786, and will compete in the Booster division of teams averaging 800 or under.

The Montgomery five will consist of Ray Laughton, Joel Lee, Stan Adams, Ben Papietro and either Bill Flynn or Dick Simpers.

Practically the same lineups, although with Fresno sponsors, will be seen in the MidState. The Ram bowlers, accompanied by Amori, will leave for the Valley town on Saturday morning, either the 14 or 21, and will compete on one of the three Saturday night squads. Entertainment will be provided following the competition in the tournament, with the return home slated late Sunday afternoon.

The Mid-State is a regular handicap tournament, with all its potential 200 teams competing in one big class. The Rams will therefore be competing against the best keglers in the West, —and will have just as much chance!

POINT WINNER ? ? ?

The spear thrower pictured in action above is Preston "Duke" Worsham, who it is hoped will score his share of points in the javelin throw at the Conference Meet on next Saturday at Modesto.

Rams Swap Menlo In Swimming Meet At Peninsula Tank

Meeting Menlo Junior College in a dual swimming meet the Rams downed their first junior college opponents by the score of forty-eight to twenty-six. The meet was held at Menlo last week. The Ram mermen copped seven first places while Menlo tallied first in the medley relay and the 200 yard breaststroke.

Norman Forte and Marcus Hoffman were both double winners. Forte won the 50 yard and 100 yard free style events while Hoffman emerged victor in the 220 and 440 yard free style events.

The college team that competed in the meet with Menlo was composed entirely of freshmen who will return for another season of competition next year. Herb Brotman, mainstay of the team earlier in the season, has left school. Despite the loss of Brotman the college team has downed a strong Olympic Club and Jewish Community Center teams already this year. In a third meet they lost to the University of California Frosh by a small margin.

According to Russ Sweet, coach of the team, a meet will be held with San Mateo in the near future. While there is not a conference for junior colleges it is probable that one will be formed next year among the junior colleges of Northern California.

Swimming Summary

Medley—Menlo.
220 Free Style—Marcus Hoffman, Mitch Hoffman, Menlo.
50 Free Style—Forte, Stoddard, Menlo.
Diving—Carriker, Menlo.

200 Breast Stroke—Menlo, Mitch. Hoffman.

Relay—S. F. (Stoddard, Mitch Hoffman, Marcus Hoffman and Forte).
Final Score: S. F. 48, Menlo 26.

Commerce High Falls Victim To Eisanmen

Ram baseballers made it two in a row over Commerce High last Wednesday at Funston Field when they defeated the Bulldogs, 9 to 2, in a one-sided contest.

Ossie Gardner hurled for the Rams and pitched good ball. Frank Nilan played outstanding ball for the junior college when, moved from left field to second base, he turned in one of the best fielding performances of the year for the Powell Street nine. Nilan also smashed out two hits, as did Berman and Egelhofer.

Mustandish, Commerce catcher, was the outstanding high school player, catching a great game, and knocking out two of the Bulldog hits.

TRACK, TENNIS TEAMS COMPETE IN CONFERENCE MEETS NEXT SATURDAY

Outstanding Cinder Stars Journey To Modesto For Final Contest; Victory Chances Slender

Outstanding men on the college track team will travel to Modesto for the annual Northern California Junior College Track and Field Meet to be held next Saturday, May 7, at the field of the Modesto Junior College.

A tentative list of the men who will make the trip are: Boitano, sprinter and weight man; Mitchell, distance runner; Flamm weight man; Worsham, javelin; Stern, sprinter; Korchet, shot put; Carolan, distance runner; and Bedrosian, weights. This list may be added to or cut down as the men progress through the final week of training for the meet.

Boitano, who will be entered in the sprints and the shot put, is expected to be a point winner at the meet. In the 100, Boitano ha sa mark of 10 flat and this is probably good enough for a point. In the shot put he is expected to do better and may take a second or a third.

Mitchell, star half-miler and miler of the college, is looked for to make a good showing. He is capable of collecting several points in these events.

Jerry Flamm has some good marks in the discus and is liable to pull a surprise on some of the favored platter throwers.

Duke Worsham made points in the conference meet last year and it is likely that he will do the same this year. Hard practice will put him in shape and may make it possible for him to win this event.

Stern, a sprinter, will probably make the trip and may show up well in the dashes, notably the 220.

Carolan, half-miler and miler, expects to grab off a place in the distance events.

Two more weight men are named as possible entrants—Korchet and Bedrosian. These men look good in practice and may gather a point or two for the Rams.

Men who may also go to Modesto are: Bitgood, hurdler; Regan, quarter-miler; and Emery, broad jumper.

Taking the men to Modesto will be in charge of Russ Sweet, head coach of the squad. Sweet, who has coached the team through a fairly good season, deserves credit for his fine work, as he has little material to work with. The college is noted for its lack of track talent and with the material available Sweet has done a good job.

Netmen Cinch League Championship By Victory Over Modesto Bucs Final Matches At Farm

By Dick Simpers

Finis was written to another banner season last week by Coach Tom Wilson's tennis team when it clinched the conference title for the second consecutive year by victories over San Mateo and Modesto. This Saturday will find representatives of the Ram squad competing in the conference individual championships at Stanford, where they will collide with other outstanding conference players in order to determine the individual standouts of the league.

The regular season came to a close for the Wilsonmen last Friday when they scored a 4-2 win over Modesto, which gave them a total of 20 matches won and four lost for the season and gave them exclusive title to the top spot in the "A" division of the Northern California Junior College Conference. Previous to the Modesto encounter, the Rams bowled over their opponents from San Mateo on Wednesday by a 4-2 count, losing only the first and second singles matches, which were played by Harold Wagner and Bob Lazare.

Ennes Wins

The final and decisive match saw Chandler Ennes, Bob Lazare and Ray Berns scoring victories in the singles, and Ennes and Altfield combining to take a doubles match from Louie Moller and Bob Mitchell of Modesto by the score of 6-2, 6-3. Only setbacks suffered were by Bob Kun, who dropped his singles match to Jack Dixon of Modesto after a hard-fought battle, 6-3, 3-6, 7-5, and by the team of Lazare and Kun in the doubles, which dropped a 5-7, 6-3, 8-6 decision to Dixon and Hogin of Modesto.

Until their last two matches, the Rams had gone through the entire conference season without the loss of a match, and, after beating San Mateo, had the coveted conference crown virtually in the bag. Victory over Modesto merely served as a climax for the season and made doubly sure of San Francisco's possession of the title for another year.

Veterans Star

Led by several veterans from last year's title-winning squad, the Red and White netsters encountered no great difficulty in downing all their local opponents. Second-year champs on the squad are Chan Ennes, Alvin Altfield, Bob Lazare, all of whom were instrumental in leading the team through another undefeated season, thereby adding another feather to the cap of Coach Wilson, who grinned with satisfaction as he saw all his pre-season predictions come true.

Entered in the individual championships next Saturday will be both singles and doubles players, who are conceded more than an even chance by Wilson to come out on top of their respective divisions.

WOMEN'S SPORT PARADE

By Blanche

And so WAA has wound to a close leaving Women's Sports Parade high and dry with two issues to go. The banquet was tops. Among the honored guests were Ray Dougherty, Doctor Potter, Dean Browne, Florence Murphy and Blanche. Ah yes, and the men students who braved the feminine multitude to attend.

Congrats to everybody: to President Dot Canavan and new President Margaret Park, to the other new officers, Dot Sanderson, Annete Schunick, and Betty MacKenzie. Congratulations to general chairman Mardis Mullin and all the chairmen who worked with her. Congratulations to the gym instructors for the fine work they have done this semester. Congratulations to the block award winners, Virginia Kwiatt, and Cummings. Congratulations to the winners of first team awards. Yeah, congratulations to everyone.

Last Saturday a group of our more proficient women athletes journeyed to San Mateo where they participated in a playday. Golf, riding, badminton and tennis were on the day's schedule—and lunch. Among those who attended the play day were Dorothy Canavan, Miriam Frazier, Tillie Huddleson, Elvira Oberti, Ethel Vizzard, Ellen Cumming, Esmeralda Patterson, Jerry Fisher Elizabeth Rehbock, and Blanche. How about a trite "and a good time was had by all"?

Ann Bertolucci defeated Jackie Kramer in the women's tennis singles last week. Ann Bertolucci and Tillie Huddleson were the victors over Jackie Cramer and Dot Canavan in the doubles. Tillie Huddleson and Harold Mitchell will have their names engraved on the Guardsman Cup as winners in the mixed doubles match. J. Paul Mohr and Laurine Bergin were the officials in the various matches. Congratulations to them, too.

The best comedy movie in years was the pictures of various WAA sports taken by Vera Spencer and Virginia Kwiatt and shown at the banquet last night. "The Awful Truth"? "Mad About Music"? Phooey I'll take the "WAA". Best among the pictures were those of the modern dancing class and the council pictures. Not that they weren't educational as well as entertaining for they were that, too. And it is gratifying to learn that more film will be given to the WAA next semester so more pictures may be taken then.

Well, congratulations to everyone, including Blanche.

Berman Tops Batter List With But Six Games To Be Played

Sporting an impressive looking .459 average, Mickey Berman, ace Ram first sacker, led the parade of college batsmen into the final week.

Far behind Berman is Pitcher Ossie Gardner who ranks second in the averages with a .351 total. Number three man is Frank Nilan who has been hitting the horsehide at a .341 clip.

These are the only three baseballers who are hitting above .300 on the entire squad. The remainder of the Ram diamond contingent is decidedly of the light hiting variety, according to Coach Lee Eisan.

Berman's average at the plate coupled with his outstanding performance around the initial sack makes him an outstanding contender for all-conference honors. The roly poly Mickey has banged out 17 hits in 37 trips to the plate in league play.

Banta leads in the runs scored department having managed to come across with 15 tallies.

Base stealing honors are divided between Banta and Nilan with each having 16 to their credit.

The batting averages with six games yet to be played:

Player	AB	H	SB	R	Per.
Berman	37	17	12	12	459
Gardner	14	5	0	1	351
Nilan	44	15	16	15	341
Curcio	32	9	4	7	281
Egelhofer	30	8	7	8	266
Galbraith	32	8	13	10	250
Coen	18	4	3	7	222
Baird	33	7	10	13	212

Golf Championships Slated For Saturday

Hopeful of bringing home the first team Golf Championship in the history of the college's divot diggers, Coach Louis Conlan has entered a four man team in the Northern California Junior College Golf Championships to be held at the Stanford University course on Friday and Saturday, May 6 and 7.

Phil Gordon, who shot rounds of 70 and 74 in the Ram tournament held early in April, will lead a team consisting of Bill Jellick, Roy and Gordon Romey and himself. Both Gordon and Jellick have excellent chances of annexing medal honors.

Play will begin Friday morning and those golfers who stand in the lowest eight will qualify for medal play. Elimination of six of these eight men will take place Friday afternoon and Saturday morning. The two finalists will decide the championship on Saturday afternoon.

Competition will be furnished by teams from most of the Northern California Junior Colleges including Sacramento, Modesto, San Mateo, Marin and Menlo.

SOCCER SQUAD ENTERS MAJOR LEAGUE IN FALL

San Francisco Junior College soccer team is planning to enter the Pacific Coast Soccer Conference this fall according to Tom Wilson, coach of the team. Up to now the college soccer team has only played in the Northern California Junior College Conference and met the teams of leading bay area universities in practice games.

The soccer team was hit hard by graduation but those who will probably return for one more season are Fischer, Nieco, Latz, Stoltze, Campbell, and Paizes. Among the newcomers who are rumored ready to sign up, are Ed Curcio and Henry James of basketball fame. Already enrolled in the college are several outstanding high school players who also will turn out next semester.

In entering the "big-time" it is fairly certain that soccer will be classed once more as a major sport, thereby making it possible for members of the team from last season be awarded with second year letters as done in the past. Other schools in the Conference are University of California, San Mateo Junior College, University of San Francisco, Stanford and San Jose State.

According to Wilson, the college will not withdraw from the junior college conference but will play in both circuits. San Mateo Junior College also plays in both conferences.

LITERARY PUBLICATION WILL APPEAR FRIDAY MORNING AT POWELL

1938 edition of "Forum," the college's literary publication, will appear next Friday, May 6, according to John Ward, editor-in-chief of the magazine.

Containing "the pick of student literature," the annual book will consist of short stories, poetry, drama, and articles. Joel Lee won the prize for the best piece of writing submitted. It is a short story, entitled "Lonesome Road."

Novel Work

Tom Tillberry has written an article entitled "Whither World?" Ray Veldez writes about labor and capital. Other short story authors besides Lee, are Ward, George Devany, and Jean Page. There will be a good deal of poetry with Henry Evans' work heading the list.

John Healy, business manager of the Forum Club's project, has announced that there are still a few tickets left and "anyone who wants to get a copy of "Forum" had better get their ticket, because there are only a few on hand."

Though not definite, it is expected the publication will be distributed in front of the Powell Street study hall next Friday morning.

A Cappella Choir To Sing At Graduation Ceremonies, May 20

Outstanding among the features on the graduation program of May 20 is the A Capella Choir, which will sing three selections. Beginning with the Alma Mater the group will continue with Tenebrae Factate Simt by Palestrina, April is In my Mistress' Face by Morley, and Glorification by Christensen.

In the midst of the busiest season since the organization of the college, the Choir, Men's chorus, and Women's chorus traveled to San Jose for the Music festival last Monday. Tuesday, May 3 saw the A Capella Choir singing at the Portal Heurst Guild and the AWS tea. Recently they accepted an invitation to sing at the PTA Congress, which meets here a week after school closes.

The Music Club has had a very successful season, said Miss Badger. "Many members were new this term and we started from scratch, so to speak. This year saw the introduction of not only the men's chorus and women's chorus but also several smaller groups, such as duets, quartets, and the double quartet."

High Sophomore Day Set For Wednesday; Rally, Dance Slated

High Sophomore Day, a new event on the social program of the college, will take place on May 11 at Galileo with a rally and a dance as main entertainment for the Day.

The idea to have a day set aside for the High Sophomores was originated by Stan Adams, head yell leader.

The rally will be from 2:30 to 3:30 o'clock with a dance following the rally from 3:30 to 5. The music at the dance will be supplied by the college orchestra. The rally and dance is not for High Sophomores alone but is open to all members of the college.

whole the reproductions are well done; only a few give false impressions of the originals.

The only fault to be found is in some of the selections. Varied as some tests may be, it seems to us that four or five of the paintings are just bad art. They could have represented Rubens, for instance, as something better than a poor draughtsman.

But for those who like to have good art around to look at once in a while, we could suggest nothing better than these inexpensive reproductions. The best part of this set is that you can change to suit your taste and mood without signing your life over to the more expensive methods of art buying.

This is only a bit of a note to those who have not made the pilgrimage to Bufano's Sun Yat Sen. One of San Francisco's few choice spots, this great statue stands in one of the two Christion parks (we can't remember which). Best go see it in the early portion of the evening, or in the early morning when the sun does not make the stainless steel too blatent.

Former Student Now Acting In Molière's Drama At Wayfarer's

Currently appearing in productions at the Wayfarer's Theatre is a former student of the college, Robert Vinson. Last week he appeared in Moliere's "The Miser." He has also taken part in several Shakespearean plays.

Commenting on the former student's ability, Miss Jensen said: "While attending the college he did outstanding work in the dramatics classes, although because of the lack of public performance facilities, few were aware of his true talent."

Little Theatre groups have sprung up all over the country in recent years. Through them many actors and future stars have received their first chance in the climb to success. They have also given pleasure to many others who enjoy acting but have no particular ambitions to become professional thespians. In San Francisco there are four or five playhouses of this type and also many smaller groups which are strictly private affairs.

English Department

For the members of the class in Speech 21B, Ruth Jensen, speech instructor, will give an abridged version of Maxwell Anderson's "The Star Wagon" at 1:00 o'clock, Wednesday, May 4, in room 303, Powell Street. A limited number of visitors will be welcome.

Learnard Warns Of Final Exams Change To Saturday, May 14

Students must be sure to check their final examinations schedules, so that they have the right time and place, warned Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar. All M-W-F and daily classes have been changed to Saturday morning, May 14, at Galileo High School.

> According to Francis Colligan, college librarian, the library schedule will not be changed during final examinations except that the Extension building will close at one o'clock in the afternoons.
>
> All books must be returned by Thursday, May 19, 1 o'clock in the afternoon. Grades and transcripts will not be issued by the registrar's office unless the library records are clear.

All temporary members of the Alpha Gamma Sigma, the California Junior College Honor Society who wish to apply for membership, should call at the registrar's office for permanent standing.

A four year scholarship offered by the San Francisco College Evening School, 833 Market St., is open to any man in accounting, who has completed 60 units of college work. Applications may be filed with Mr. Mohr, at the registrar's office, by any student interested.

Hotel & Restaurant Students Placed At Brookdale M. Lodge

With commencement exercises practically here, more Hotel and Restaurant Management Division students are being placed. This week Lawrence Wong, senior student, was offered the position of bookkeeping and purchasing agent of Brookdale Lodge, Brookdale, California. Trevett Wilson was given the position of head room clerk at Brookdale Lodge and Isle Sommer and Robert De Shields will work in the storeroom.

On May 10, the hotel division will have the Librarianship class of the University of California as its guest. On May 6 and 7, J. Graham Sullivan, coordinator, and Ernst Hjorth, food preparation instructor, will give an examination to prospective trade instructors at the University of California at Los Angeles. Sullivan and Hjorth prepared the test which is concerned with hotel and restaurant management.

Germann: Je[illegible] Debate Sac[illegible] On Navy [illegible]

FINAL E[illegible]

1938 edition of "Forum," the college's literary publication, will appear next Friday, May 6, according to John Ward, editor-in-chief of the magazine.

Containing "the pick of student literature," the annual book will consist of short stories, poetry, drama, and articles. Joel Lee won the prize for the best piece of writing submitted. It is a short story, entitled "Lonesome Road."

Novel Work

Tom Tillberry has written an article entitled "Whither World?" Ray Veldez writes about labor and capital. Other short story authors besides Lee, are Ward, George Devany, and Jean Page. There will be a good deal of poetry with Henry Evans' work heading the list.

John Healy, business manager of the Forum Club's project, has announced that there are still a few tickets left and "anyone who wants to get a copy of "Forum" had better get their ticket, because there are only a few on hand."

Though not definite, it is expected the publication will be distributed in front of the Powell Street study hall next Friday morning.

A Cappella Choir To Sing At Graduation Ceremonies, May 20

Outstanding among the features on the graduation program of May 20 is the A Capella Choir, which will sing three selections. Beginning with the Alma Mater the group will continue with Tenebrae Factate Simt by Palestrina, April is in my Mistress' Face by Morley, and Glorification by Christensen.

In the midst of the busiest season since the organization of the college, the Choir, Men's chorus, and Women's chorus traveled to San Jose for the Music festival last Monday. Tuesday, May 3 saw the A Capella Choir singing at the Portal Hearst Guild and the AWS tea. Recently they accepted an invitation to sing at the PTA Congress, which meets here a week after school closes.

The Music Club has had a very successful season, said Miss Badger. "Many members were new this term and we started from scratch, so to speak. This year saw the introduction of not only the men's chorus and women's chorus but also several smaller groups, such as duets, quartets, and the double quartet."

High Sophomore Day Set For Wednesday; Rally, Dance Slated

High Sophomore Day, a new event on the social program of the college, will take place on May 11 at Galileo with a rally and a dance as main entertainment for the Day.

The rally will be from 2:30 to 3:30 o'clock with a dance following the rally from 3:30 to 5. The music at the dance will be supplied by the college orchestra. The rally and dance is not for High Sophomores alone but is open to all members of the college.

AFTER DARK

whole the reproductions are well done; only a few give false impressions of the originals.

The only fault to be found is in some of the selections. Varied as some tests may be, it seems to us that four or five of the paintings are just bad art. They could have represented Rubens, for instance, as something better than a poor draughtsman.

But for those who like to have good art around to look at once in a while we could suggest nothing better than these inexpensive reproductions. The best part of this set is that you can change to suit your taste and mood without signing your life over to the more expensive methods of art buying.

This is only a bit of a note to those who have not made the pilgrimage to Bufano's Sun Yat Sen. One of San Francisco's few choice spots, this great statue stands in one of the two Christion parks (we can't remember which). Best go see it in the early portion of the evening, or in the early morning when the sun does not make the stainless steel too blatent.

Former Student Now Acting In Molière's Drama At Wayfarer's

Currently appearing in productions at the Wayfarer's Theatre is a former student of the college, Robert Vinson. Last week he appeared in Moliere's "The Miser." He has also taken part in several Shakespearean plays.

Commenting on the former student's ability, Miss Jensen said, "While attending the college he did outstanding work in the dramatics classes, although because of the lack of public performance facilities, few were aware of his true talent."

Little Theatre groups have sprung up all over the country in recent years. Through them many actors and future stars have received their first chance in the climb to success. They have also given pleasure to many others who enjoy acting but have no particular ambitions to become professional thespians. In San Francisco there are four or five playhouses of this type and also many smaller groups which are strictly private affairs.

English Department

For the members of the class in Speech 21B, Ruth Jensen, speech instructor, will give an abridged version of Maxwell Anderson's "The Star Wagon" at 1:00 o'clock, Wednesday, May 4, in room 303, Powell Street. A limited number of visitors will be welcome.

Germann, Johnsen Debate Sacramento On Navy Expansion

After a postponement of one week, Ken Germann and Loraine Johnsen will travel to Sacramento Friday, May 6, to take the affirmative on "Roosevelt's billion dollar navy enlargement bill," in a debate with Sacramento Junior College.

"Because of a rodeo in the capital city, public schools were dismissed for a few days, thus causing the postponement of this battle of wits," said Ken Germann, one of the foremost members of the forensic society.

"One of the most exciting debates of the year occurred when Betty Rehbock and Jim Armstrong met Archie Brown and Phillip Dignon of San Mateo Junior College, on the question "United States protecting her property abroad in war zones," said Germann, and that the Rams upheld the affirmative, at least during the formal debate, after which a forum was conducted. It was in this forum that Betty Rehbock dramatically went to the other side to deny that United States should use the maintenance of forces to protect American capitalists, who refuse to evacuate the battle zones."

According to the debaters, another of these exciting debates with San Mateo will take place here in the very near future, and the students who are interested will be allowed to attend. The exact date will be placed on the bulletin within the next few days.

Tuesday, May 3, Jim Armstrong, Charles Vaughn, David Levy and Joe Meeko will travel to Salinas Junior College to negate the "Ludlow amendment."

"This foursome promises a bit of effervescent entertainment, as well as an excellent presentation of facts denying the practicality of the Ludlow bill," said Betty Rehbock, Phi Rho Pi Secretary.

"The outstanding debater," according to Miss Rehbock, "will be Charles Vaughn, a veteran debater, who has admirably represented the college for three semesters.

"Although the bill is not new, and even though it has been the subject of much heated discussion, the basic logic and the fundamental issues of the proposed amendment will be current for a long time to come," she added.

AFTER COLLEGE WHAT?

By Anne Rabinowitz

First in importance in the college graduate's mind is usually his own career, and he can rightly feel that one brief column devoted to his particular field scarcely tells him what he wants to know about it.

Therefore, to appease the grumblings heard here and there, we'll attempt to tell of some of the places where information may be sought.

Students desiring government positions are given data at 108 State Building in San Francisco, by writing to Sacramento, or by following the blue bulletins posted in Girls' High School, Galileo High School, and the California Extension Building.

Consultations at any large San Francisco hospital are available for pre-medical students.

Interviews at hotels or with some member of the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division will prove valuable to the anticipant of hotel work.

Literature or statistics concerning other types of employment may be obtained from public libraries (believe it or not, they have some enlightening information), on the magazine stands, and in the college library.

Dull as poring over statistics may seem, it might prove the difference between selecting and not selecting an overcrowded field.

When finding a job occupies every thought of the young graduate, it is difficult for him to try to see the employer's point of view. The employer, too, is a self-centered individual—that is, his desires are wrapped up in the advancement of his business, hospital, or hotel, and not in the advancement of the applicant for work. For that reason, before looking for any job, be sure to find out exactly what the employer will gain by hiring you—even if it is only some small but unique idea you can bring to his firm.

It is a mistaken idea that a person who offers his services at an extremely low salary will get and keep a position. The employer accepts the value you place upon yourself. Not to preach on statistics again,—but try to look up the average wage offered for the work you are equipped to undertake. And before taking that first job, find out what the job just above it is. If you feel capable of filling it, there is nothing like intensive study to help you obtain it.

FEX WINS PRESIDENT'S POST IN HEATED RACE

Barbara Randall Elected To Vice-Presidency; Hugh Waite To Head Rally Committee For Fall Semester; Record Vote Tallied

Defeating his opponent Al Williams by a plurality of sixteen votes, Bob Fex was elected president of the Associated Students for the fall semester at an election held last Friday.

Barbara Randall, this semester's AWS president, was chosen to fill the place left vacant by Norma Parent, Associated Students vice-president and Jane Mitchell will take over the duties of Florence Murphy, present Associated Students secretary.

Hugh Waite, who defeated Mel Chicazola, will be head yell leader and chairman of the college Rally Committee replacing Stan Adams as official representative to the Executive Council.

Associated Women Student officers elected for next semester include Miriam Dunne as president, Barbara Curryer as vice-president, Barbara Mills as secretary and Lorraine Johnson as treasurer.

Micky Berman, college baseball star, was chosen to lead the Associated Men Students and he will be assisted by Hal Fischer as vice-president, Ray Greenwood as secretary and Treacy Slattery as treasurer.

The outstanding feature of this semester's election was the large turnout of students at the polls. There were 42 voters registered, showing an approximate increase of 100 votes over the elections of last semester. As has happened in most previous elections, many students were unable to cast ballots because they had either lost, misplaced or loaned their student body cards to outsiders.

Stating that much of the credit for the success of the election goes to Stan Adams, chairman of the Election Committee, and Tom O'Neil, who acted as faculty adviser, president Don Mix said that he was very satisfied with the turnout of student voters although the total did fall short of his expectations.

"Although we did not quite reach our goal of 500 voters," he said, "the number of votes cast exceeded that of the past four semesters and showed a definite increase in student interest. It is the hope of the new student leaders that the active participation of students in college affairs will continue."

Complete election returns were as follows:

MILITARY CAMP INFORMATION RELEASED

Working with the Citizens Military Training Corps, the Army and Navy Club desires to present information to all men students of the college who may be interested in attending a free summer camp of the C.M.T.C. at Monterey from July 8 to August 6.

Objects of the camp are "to bring together young men of high type from all sections of the country and thereby develop closer national and social unity; to teach the privileges, duties and responsibilities, of American citizenship; to stimulate patriotism; to interest young men in the importance of military training; to teach self-discipline and obedience, and to develop the physical standard of American youth through participation in military exercises, athletic games and sports, conducted under expert directors.

All Expenses Paid

The benefits to be derived from these camps are secured without expense to the students as the War Department provides transportation to the camp and return, board, lodging, expert medical attention, uniforms, equipment, arms and laundry.

It is not necessary to have had previous military experience, the only requirements being that the applicant be between the ages of 17 and 29, must possess an average general intelligence, be able to read and write English, and be of a good moral character.

Sports Too

The basic course provides "preliminary training, athletics, school of the soldier, squad and company drill, rifle marksmanship, personal hygiene, military courtesy, meaning of discipline, first aid, camp sanitation, and citizenship. Higher courses are available for those already having taken the basic course."

No Obligation

There is no obligation for future service in any component of the army of the United States attaches to attendance at a C.M.T.C. camp. Besides the benefits already mentioned, every camp will have on duty a surgeon, a chaplain, a morale and recreation officer and an athletic officer whose duty will be to safeguard health and moral of the trainee.

Religious services will be held for each creed; there will be a Post Exchange, mail service, and food of substantial quality, plentiful and well cooked.

Any college men who feel that they are interested in attending the camp at Monterey this summer or who wish to secure more information on the subject should see James Hughes, faculty advisor of the Army and Navy Club. Hughes also has a number of application blanks on hand.

VICTOR SMILES

Bob Fex, winner in the presidential election, smiles happily as the returns of the record vote find him leaning against the Galileo lion.

Service Society Postpones Award Of Scholarship To Next Semester

Because of the short amount of time left in the semester, awarding of the Women's Service Society scholarship will have to be postponed until early next semester, according to Marion Yager, WSS president.

"Students may secure applications, however, any time between now and the close of school," Miss Yager said, "and we are anxious that as many students as possible apply."

As was announced last week, students must have at least a high freshman standing when applying, and the successful candidate will be selected by a committee composed of faculty members and the Service Society's scholarship committee. Students must have a grade point average of 1.5, and the award will be given on a basis of scholarship, character and worthiness.

"Blanks may be secured at either the Powell Street or Galileo offices, and after they are filled out they may be returned to the offices or given to any Service Society member."

Miss Yager announced that the last activity for the semester was an initiation banquet which was held last Tuesday evening at the Western Women's Club.

Probationary members, who were installed as regular members at this banquet, include Marjorie Culp, Muriel Dodsworth, Joyanna Mack, Ellen Cumming, and Margaret Park.

Fred Vast Selected "Guardsman" Editor

Elected at a meeting of the present editorial staff, which was held last Wednesday, Fred Vast, present managing editor of The Guardsman, was appointed to fill the chief of staff position for the Fall semester.

Vast has performed outstandingly in the assistant's post this semester, and is expected to carry on admirably.

John Julius, who aided Don Mix in the editorial duties on the sport's desk, will assume the position left vacant by Mix who graduates this semester. Other positions will be named next semester.

Giubbini, Graves Win Scholarships To USF

Walter Giubbini and Albert Graves have been awarded scholarships to the University of San Francisco for being the two highest students in the recent scholarship contest conducted jointly by the University and the College.

Giubbini won the two year's free tuition and Graves won the one year award. The latter is secretary of the local chapter of Alpha Gamma Sigma, California scholarship society.

The annual scolarship examination included English, philosophy, hygiene, economics, public speaking, sociology, and current events. Entrants for the test needed at least a "B" average to qualify.

The two junior college students will officially receive the scholarships at the University of San Francisco's commencement exercises on May 29, 1938.

Hotel Book Brings Immediate Results

Evidence of the success of the third Hotel and Restaurant Management Division bulletin was offered this week in the form of a number of applications. These applications were received from sources that had received catalogues. It represents the keen interest aroused by the booklet.

On Monday, May 9, the hotel division prepared a dinner given in honor of The Guardsman staff. Bill and Clark Chittick have been asked by their father to operate a coffee shop this summer at La Jolla Manor, San Diego. The elder Chittick owns and operates the hotel. Naomi Giffin will work at the Berkeley Women's Club this summer and then in the fall she will take a position at Stanford University as assistant to the director of Encina Commons.

> GRADES READY JUNE 1
>
> Final examination grades will be available at the registrar's office after June 1, announced Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar. Students may call for their grades or leave a self-addressed stamped envelope, 4 by 6 in size.

Exams For Aptitude Scheduled May 26, 27

Aptitude examinations will be given May 26 and 27 at 1:15 o'clock in the afternoon at Galileo High School in the faculty cafeteria. The English A and vocational interest test will be given May 26, and the Iowa High School content and Psychological tests will be given May 27.

Thests will be given in the same manner at the Oakland Technical High School in Oakland, on August 10 and 11 at 1:15 o'clock in the afternoon.

Local Debate Group Gains National Membership

Climax to a semester of activity for charter from the National Junior College debaters came last week when the local society received its lege Debating Society, Phi Rho Pi.

Debating activities hit a new high during the semester just past, according to Lloyd Luckmann, faculty sponsor of the group. Debates were held with a number of teams from other colleges, the outstanding ones being with Sacramento, Salinas, and Stockton Junior Colleges. Ram forensic students also took part in the meet of the College Forum Society, debating with representatives of the University of California and the University of San Francisco. Three debates were held with San Francisco State on the merits of the National Labor Relations Board. Coalinga Extension, Modesto Junior College, San Mateo, Sacramento and College of the Pacific were also represented in the verbal combats.

Lloyd Luckmann, faculty director, met Professor Hoover of Mills College on the merits of the Ralston Single Tax Amendment, Lorraine Johnsen and Kenneth Germann also debated the Lowell group, champions of the local high school league. The team traveled approximately one thousand miles, competing in 21 contests, 17 debates course, listed as Speech 16 A-B and and 4 conferences on forums.

Debating is a Sophomore academic granting two units of credit. Under the direction of Luckmann, the class meets on Tuesdays at 2:30 p. m. Aspirants to Phi Rho Pi may also join as candidates before their third semester with credit. After the third semester the class is given without credit.

"First The Blade" Announces Winners

Announcement of prize winners in the California student poetry contest, sponsored by the Intercollegiate Fellowship of Creative Art, was made last week by the English Club of Mills College, which published the winning poems with other contributions in the anthology, "First the Blade".

First prize went to Joyce Lois Hoeft of the University of California, who won the Ann Bremer prize of $25 for her poem, "New Frontier". Evelyn Boltuch of the University of California at Los Angeles won second prize for her poem, "Step Upon Stones". John Edgar Berry, also of the southern branch of the University, took the third prize award for his "Later Prometheus".

Only contributor from San Francisco Junior College to gain a place in the anthology, was Henry H. Evans whose "Ode To Ecclesiates" was included in the book. Evans was a member of the staff that edited the "Forum" magazine.

Hi Soph Rally In Auditorium Today At Two

Adams Announces Event In Program For Graduate's Day; Dance In Gym

As a fitting climax to all the Associated Student activities of the semester, a High Sophomore Day will be held this afternoon at Galileo from 2:30 to 5:00 o'clock, according to an announcement by Stan Adams, head Yell Leader and Rally Committee chairman.

"The highlight of the afternoon", Adams said, "will be a rally in the Galileo Auditorium at 2:30 o'clock. At this time next semester's Associated Student officers will be officially presented and at the same time members of the Block SF Society will receive their awards."

"The presentation of the awards is one of the customary parts of our last rally every semester and each of our coaches will deliver blocks to the members of his team. Basketball, track, baseball, swimming, light-weight basketball and crew awards will be given out and graduating winners of major block awards will be presented with life time athletic passes."

Entertainment for the rally, Adams said, will be provided by the newly organized Men's Chorus and Dave Carter, college clarinet player, who is said to be a second Benny Goodman. Negotiations are now under way to secure a well-known orchestra, now playing at the Hotel Whitcomb, to appear at the rally with several members of his organization. Adams said that he hoped to complete plans for this feature as all students who were in the college last semester remember the splendid reception accorded Sterling Young and his vocalists who appeared at one of the college rallies.

A few moments of the rally will be spent in business as President Don Mix will ask the students to vote on the approval of the charter granting power of the newly formed Club Advisory Board.

All students are requested to report to their 2:30 classes before attending the rally as they will be excused in time to attend. Immediately afterward a dance will be held in the Women's Gymnasium to which all students are invited. Music will be provided by the college dance orchestra and as this is the first afternoon dance held this semester a large crowd is expected.

"We have worked hard to make this day a success," Adams said "and we hope that all students will come to both the rally and the dance. As this is absolutely the last social event on the college calendar for this semester it will be the last chance for all students, and High Sophomores in particular, to get together and have a lot of fun.".

Econs Plan Meet On Angel Isle 22nd

A grand finale, or climax, will be staged at the final meeting of Omicron Phi Pi on Sunday, May 22. The opportunity of this final group meeting will afford old, new and prospective members to get together and to honor recent initiates. This informal meeting will be held at Angel Island the first Sunday after school is over.

Intending to make this event the largest social ever attempted this semester, over fifty members of the society are expected to attend. A novel feature of the evening will be the initiation of several new members, who were unable to be present at the last initiation to take their vows at the initiation ceremony held last week. This will be the first time an initiation has been held out of doors.

Last Monday, May 2, six new members were initiated into the society at impressive ceremonial rites held at Galileo High School. After the ceremonies a general meeting was held at the home of Michael Zarchin, head of the College's Economics Department and faculty adviser of the society. This informal meeting gave the initiates an opportunity to get acquainted. Those received into the society at the last meeting were as follows: Elizabeth Rehbock, Margo Skinner, Edwin Gassody, Tom Tillberry, Robert Porter, and Bob Johnson.

The committee in charge of the picnic to be held at Angel Island has as its chairman Betty Rehbock and Tom Tillberry. Those who will assist in the mammoth affair are: Bob Johnson, Cecilia Elliot and Bob Porter.

MEMORIAL OPERA HOUSE SCENE OF GRADUATION

Rehearsal Scheduled May 20 For Commencement; President Cloud Presides at Ceremony, Judge Wilbur To Be Guest Speaker

By JEAN PAGE

Final arrangements have been made for the third annual commencement of the college, to be held May 20 at 7:45 o'clock at the War Memorial Opera House. Chairman of the exercises will be President Archibald J. Cloud. Two hundred students will graduate this year, 150 from the May class and 50 from the January class. There will be one rehearsal before commencement. It will take place on the morning of commencement at 9 o'clock and all participants in the graduation ceremonies are requested to be present. The registrar's office has arranged to eliminate conflicting examinations. All who come are to enter by the Grove Street ramp. Graduates must be in attendance at the Opera House by 7 o'clock on commencement evening.

The main speaker this year will be Judge Curtis D. Wilbur. Wilbur, who is district circuit court judge, will be introduced by Superintendent of Schools, Joseph P. Nourse. The college A Capella choir, and soloist, Robert Scott, will contribute to the musical part of the program. The services of the San Francisco Municipal Orchestra, conducted by Philip Sapiro, have been obtained.

Caps and Gowns

"Graduates will wear the formal academic costume of a black cap and gown. The women are asked to wear a white dress and white shoes with cuban heels with their costume, and the men are asked to wear dark suits, white shirts, a dark tie and dark shoes", requested one member of the committee in charge, Bertha Keller, high Sophomore sponsor. The committee is composed of Miss Keller, Arthur McCarty, and Margaret Dougherty, women's advisor. The committee is being assisted by faculty members, AnneMarie Delfs, George Green, Alice Cooper, Joseph Williams, Claire Cunen and John Ross.

Invitations will be presented to graduates, beginning on Thursday, May 12 by a representative from the High Sophomore class, appointed by the class president, Irving Amstrup, at the Powell Street office and at Miss Dougherty's office at Galileo. Two or more invitations will be given to those calling for them.

Low Sophs, High Frosh Usher

Annemarie Delfs and George Green of the low sophomores, have chosen the students from this class who will serve as ushers. The low sophomores who have been selected are: Annabelle Benson, Davis Carter, Joseph Coccelato, Howard Marknvito, Jane Mitcheli, Margaret Park, Lilly Phillips, Allen Williams, Muriel Mills, Betty Nelson, Marie Louise McNutt, Alan Searles, William Solari, and Jean Lonkey. Alice Cooper and Joseph Williams, sponsors of the high freshman class, have chosen Grace Piltz, Phyllis Learned, Elviera Oberti, Jack Shaw, Vincent Giantvalley, Maynard Gooby, Eugene Bunton, Margaret Wormell, and Marion Yager to serve as ushers from the high freshman class.

A plan has been initiated this semester to give recognition to graduating honor students. Students will be selected on the basis of requirements set up by the recently organized honor society, the Alpha Gamma Sigma. The final list of those who meet these requirements has not yet been compiled.

"Any graduate with a problem regarding the robe which graduates are asked to wear on commencement should see or telephone me", announced women's advisor, Margaret Dougherty. "And students who discover they will be unable to attend commencement should call Ordway 38 and report to J. Paul Mohr, the college registrar."

Blumenthal, Kenchelian To Speak

Eugene Blumenthal, last semester's student body president, and Karnig Kenchelian of the May graduating class, have been selected as the student speakers at Commencement. They are being assisted in the preparation of their speeches by Lloyd Luckmann and Franklin Sewell of the college speech department.

President Cloud, members of the Board of Education, the college administrative staff, and the guest speaker, Judge Curtis Wilbur will appear on the platform with the graduates. A new plan to give more recognition to student body and class officers has been adopted this semester. Caroline Orignos, vice-president of the January student body, will introduce Eugene Blumenthal of her class, and Norma Parent, vice-president of the May student body, will introduce Karnig Kenchelian. Bob Neal, president of last semester's High Sophomore class, and Irving Amstrup, this semester's High Soph president, will be introduced by the present student body president, Don Mix.

CLUB ADVISORY LISTS RULES TO CHARTER

"Although the date has not been definitely scheduled, there will be a meeting of the college Club Advisory Board within the first two weeks of the fall semester," said John M. Julius, president of the board.

Representatives of all college organizations should attend, he also said, but those desiring official charters must comply with the rules as set down by the board.

Qualifications

An organization must have 15 active members.

An organization must have at least two regularly announced meetings a semester.

An organization must have a faculty sponsor.

An organization must have an outlined plan of activities planned.

All of these prerequisites were "hashed over" and adopted by members of the Club Advisory Board at a recent meeting.

Officers of the Board are to be elected at the beginning of each semester by a majority vote.

Committees

In order to expedite business there will be appointed a Charter Committee composed of three people and a Calendar Committee. The latter group will be a clearing house for all college events of each semester. This was planned for the purpose of avoiding confusion that has often arisen from isolated program planning on the parts of various organizations.

Meeko, Levy Debate Salinas JC May 11

In a debate with Salinas Junior College, Wednesday, May 11, Joe Meekn and Dave Levy will travel to Salinas to negate the "Ludlow Amendment."

"Jim Armstrong, John Healy and Charles Vaughn will accompany these two debaters, and will be prepared to engage in any informal discussion," said Betty Rehbock, Phi Rho Pi Secretary.

"The Salinas affair," added the secretary, "will be the last of the semester's activities, and should close, in a brilliant manner, a busy semester, in which the forensic society has encountered 16 debating teams, representing the most important colleges and junior colleges in the state."

According to Miss Rehbock, the debate with Sacramento, in which Lorraine Johnsen and Ken Germann were to participate, has been cancelled because of the nearness of finals, and a diminishing of funds in the treasury.

Forum To Celebrate 2nd Birthday 21st

Members of the Forum Club will celebrate the second anniversary of the organization at a banquet and social Saturday, May 21.

At seven o'clock the group will feast at Veneto's Restaurant, 389 Bay Street and toast themselves. Entertainment of a novel variety is being arranged by a committee headed by John Healy. Following the banquet the "Forumers" will journey to the home of Margarita Williams, 232 Broadway, for an informal social evening.

Students interested in attending the affair should see Healy or Doris Speroni and sign up. Price of the banquet is 60 cents.

At the club's meeting last Friday, Dr. Dorothy Mercer was given a tremendous ovation in appreciation for her help and interest in the group. She is leaving for Europe this month where she will travel and study for a year.

VALE!

You to the right and I to the left.
For the ways of men must sever.
And it well may be for only a day.
And it well may be forever—MASEFIELD.

USING the editorial "we" for the first and last time this semester, we are endeavoring to express a feeling that is old as time, yet ever new,—"Farewell"!

We could write the usual piece, complimenting here thanking there, and in general wax sentimental all over these editorial columns in which it has been our privilege and pleasure to expound our ideas for the last few months, but instead, we shall merely say:

The success that may or may not have come to The Guardsman this semester, has not been the result of any individual effort on any one person's part, but rather the concerted, coordinated and wholehearted response of a sincere and hard-working staff.

Speaking for the members of The Guardsman staff who are writing their last bits today, we convey this message to the members of the faculty and student body to whom we are bidding adieu at this time. For Florence Murphy, Jean Page, Anne Rabinowitz, Don Mix, Elwin Marg and Dick Simpers, we say "So long!"

Of the glories, accomplishments, and triumphs of this, the most eventful semester in the history of San Francisco Junior College (at least in our humble opinion) we can only turn to the preceding issues of the paper:

Orientation Week "... on the titanic program are the Freshman Smoker slated for tonight at the California Hall, the inter-class brawl on Friday afternoon and the semi-formal that same evening at the Clift Hotel."

Construction Begins: "... witnessed by only a few workmen and four students who arose in the cold grey light of dawn to fight their way through the slimy mud of Balboa Park to a windy hilltop that was the scene of activity, the first work on the site of the new college got under way last Thursday morning."

P. G. & E. Library: "... new quarters of the college library and study hall in the Pacific Gas and Electric Company building, Sutter Street near Powell, opened last week and were immediately filled to capacity."

Editorial: "... Executive Council has worked long and hard over the new articles, and their task has been one of necessity and not of choice. It is only fitting that the persons for whom the job has been done should attend this meeting and register their honest vote on the proposition."

New Constitution: "... final approval of the new constitution came last Thursday when the student body as a whole met in general assembly and gave its sanction to the document ... passed immediately into effect as the fundamental law of the college."

Club Advisory Board: "... at the first business meeting of the Club Advisory Board held late last week."

Hotel Division: "... last week marked the publication of the third bulletin of the Hotel and Restaurant Management Division ... addition of new courses and new instructors."

Social successes: "... second in a series of teas to be given by the Associated Students this semester ... will be held Tuesday, March 8."

"... the Sophomore Formal will definitely take place on next Friday evening, April 20, at the San Francisco Country Club."

"... at the Women's Athletic Association semi-annual banquet last Thursday ... co-educational for the first time was more successful this semester than ever before."

Election: "... final election of new officers will take place next Friday, May 9 ... Mix says, 'members of the election committee have worked long and hard ... rest is up to the voters of the college!'"

And so, it may be easily seen by anyone caring to look back and view the events of the semester in retrospect, that much has been accomplished, much remains.

Those who are leaving, many of whom have contributed much to the college, are flinging a torch to those who remain. Be it theirs to carry it high!

Vale!

PROGRESS

Although the goal of 500 votes was not quite reached at last Friday's election, a definite upturn in student interest was demonstrated when the college registered the largest total in the last four semesters.

It may be said that while the stated objective was not reached, the increased interest of the students in the affairs of their own government make all the tedious work of the semester worthwhile. A degree of progress has been attained that forecasts great things for the college in future years.

The election's details were handled with a maximum of efficiency by Stan Adams and his appointed committee, who all demonstrated a fine willingness to assume a necessary responsibility.

Out Of The Fog

By Mac

With the tears falling fast, we turn sorrowful fingers toward our typewriter to inform the few faithful readers who have followed this column from its infancy to this, its demise, that we cannot go on with our startling expose of conditions at the college. We felt the heavy hand of public opinion definitely raised against us, so in an honest endeavor to present a few literary crumbs in lieu of our first planned effort, we give you without further ado, a thrilling dramatic production. "Absolutely the last word," says Esquire; "It's a bird (foul)", says Pulitzer Committee. "Read on", say we!

"Farewell To Alma", or "The Ghost Goes—" (Playing in "Won" Act)

Characters:

"Tom" Mix—an itinerant politician.
"Five Star" Mygarter—a down-at-the-heels newspaperman.
"Wee" Havtoreedit—student body of Small College.
"Bean" Drowne—Dean of Small College.
"Hey" Wakeupthere—faculty of Small College,—does not appear.

Scene: (Several days before commencement exercises, finals are still going on, and everybody at Small College is dashing around bidding the customary, tearful farewells. Curtain finds Mygarter studying for an examination, in a downtown park, as Mix walks up.)

Scene One.

Mix—Hello "Five Star", how are you hitting your ex's? Mygarter (mumbling to himself)—Plato thought—oh hell, who cares what he thought! (Glancing up). Oh, hello, Mix-ture! Answering your question, not so good. (drops his book and stares off into the sky) Gee, just think, pretty soon we'll be leaving dear old Small! Gosh, "Tom" I can hardly believe it.

Mix—(sitting down beside the other and nodding in sympathy) Yes, I know exactly how you feel, it's cutting me to the quick, too. Besides, I may have to go to work now! It's awful!

Mygarter—(jumping up suddenly) My Gosh, I never thought of that. (burying his face in his hands and sobbing) I can't stand the thought of work, "Tom". I simply can't stand it! (beginning to pace up and down excitedly) You see, that's what we get for being so smart. I tried so hard to stay here, even made a special effort to flunk, but old Wakeupthere wouldn't let me get away with it. Dammit anyway! (flings himself down on the bench again and glowers at the world at large) There ought to be something we can do. Let's go see "Bean" Drowne about it.

Mix—Good idea. Why didn't I think of that before? (rising and helping the other to pick up his books) What's this? Notes? Why, Mygarter! Tut, tut, old man, I never thought you would sink that far. Ah, well, it all goes to show you. (Mygarter makes no answer, but rises and the two exit, talking animatedly, waving their hands in the air.)

Scene Two.

Drowne—(shaking his head wearily) It's no use, boys, I'm afraid you will have to graduate. (raises his hand as they start to protest) Now, I'm really sorry, I tell you, but you've been here seven terms apiece, and that's as much as we can allow you to flunk. It's too bad, we would like to have you, but there is no way out. Again I say I'm truly sorry! (dismisses the two with an airy wave of his hand) Exit.

Scene Three

Mix—And again I say to you, my gullible friends, I mean my lovable friends, I'm overwhelmed with grief at the thought of leaving. (aside) and just when it looked like I was getting somewhere with that blonde, too—(aloud again) Again I say to you, I said that before didn't I? Well, what are you going to do about it? (stalks arrogantly up and down behind the footlights, dodging various missiles which appear to be over-ripe fruit and vegetables, he grabs a likely looking banana on the fly, and calmly peels and eats it) It looks suspiciously like I'm going to graduate, so I am preparing to bid you all a sincere thanks for the lack of cooperation which you haven't given me, while I haven't studied at this would-be college! (sits down amid a barrage of tomatoes and thunderous Bronx applesauce, that, is applause) Thank you, thank you, you beer friends, I mean dear friends! (Havtoreedit jumps to his feet, lifts his hands to the heavens, and begins to shriek.)

Havtoreedit—Allah, Allah, alla guy has to do is be a big shot, and then he thinks he can give farewell speeches. It isn't right. (turns and exhorts the audience.) Let's lynch Mix and Mygarter.

Audience—(waking up with a start) Huh, oh yes. (goes back to sleep)

Mygarter—(coming forward into the glare of the footlights) Workers of America, (aside) hell, that's the speech I made last night at the Young Communist and "Redboys" meeting (to the audience which has now waked up again and is beginning to file slowly out of the auditorium, as a matter of fact, there is no one in the place but Mygarter) "Let's see, where was I? (at this moment, a bell begins to ring, and Mygarter starts running about the stage swinging furiously at imaginary foes) Curtain.

Well, if you can forgive us this one, you deserve a medal. Seriously, to all the student body, so long and good luck. This is Mac, making "thirty" out of five happy semesters!

DEDICATED TO SEVERAL PEOPLE

Gee it's been fun, pal, just knowing you
And doing the things that we both like to do.
Taking long walks and going to shows,
Having long talks and comparing our woes.
Sharing our sorrows and dreaming our dreams,
Planning tomorrows and scheming our schemes,
Singing and laughing, and having our fun,
Getting a laugh out of many a pun.
So here's to our future, however it ends,
I only hope, pal, we'll always be friends.

Now that this question of the ideal girl and ideal man of our fair institution has been set aside, for a while at least, someone has suggested that we select an ideal instructor.

Offhand, we'd say that he (or she) would be as easy to look at as ——— ———, as easy to talk to as ——————, as easy to understand as ——————, as much fun as ——— ———, and as understanding as ——————.

(Now all you smart people will have to do is fill in the above blanks with the names of those in charge of the finals you are about to take, flaunt it about a bit, and—well, it's an idea anyway!)

RECOMMENDED, BUT HIGHLY ... Speech 55, which is NOT a public-speaking class, but a course in the history of the theatre from the early Greek up to "Now Playing", and a very interesting one at that. If you have a gap in next semester's program and want a three unit course with a definite carry-over value, give it a try ... The Popeye cartoon accompanying "Tom Sawyer" at a down town theatre. We think it's the funniest we've seen in years or maybe it's the mood we were in! ... A peek at your neighbor's copy of the Forum Club magazine in case you were unfortunate enough to neglect buying a ticket. A fine piece of work and lots of posies to everyone involved in its publication.

In a moment of weakness we promised somebody that we would put his name in this column if he wore a suit to school. Well, he wore half a suit for the Block SF initiation last week so we can give half his name—Kenneth!

365 DAYS AGO TODAY

The Forum Club presented its first edition of its student magazine containing fiction, poetry, articles and features which represented the cream of the crop of literature submitted by students of the college.

Don Mix was elected editor of The Guardsman for the fall semester at a meeting of The Guardsman editorial staff.

Building plans for the new college were given to Registrar J. Paul Mohr for approval, by the administration. Educational practicability and architectural symmetry were combined in these plans.

Ten wins, and one loss was the splendid record set up by Coach Tom Wilson's tennis team. The team which was composed of Bill Lazzeri, Kay Lyman, Al Altfeld, Bill Cardinal, Chandler Ennis, and Harold Mitchell won the Northern California Junior College Conference championship.

During the summer vacation J. Graham Sullivan and Chef Joseph A. Beyl, instructors in the Hotel and Restaurant Management division of the college, went to the University of California at Los Angeles to instruct in the trade and industrial classes at the summer session.

Celebrating its second anniversary, the San Francisco Junior College Faculty Association held a semi-formal dinner dance in the Gold Ballroom of the Western Women's Club.

The Household Arts Association held a "Bon Voyage" party because many of the members were graduating or leaving the college. An added incentive for the chosen theme was that as soon as the college closes Claire Cuneo, the HEA adviser, was leaving for the Orient.

CABBAGES AND KINGS

WELL, this is it. Finis is being written to the most eventful semester the junior college has ever known, and the end has come to the sojourns here of some two hundred members of the sophomore class. Looking back in retrospect at the semester just past, we feel safe in saying that it has witnessed more progress along all lines than any preceding one.

Long strides have been taken toward the realization of the dream of the college's founders, the securing of a permanent campus for the institution. With foundation work well under way on the site at Balboa Park, completion of a modern educational plant for the wandering students looms as a certainty in the not-too-distant future. Although it has been sort of fun skipping about the city for two years, we cannot help but envy the freshmen who will remain to enjoy the super junior college now in the process of construction.

A new high in efficiency has been hit by Student Body President Don Mix and his assisting student body officers. Affairs of government were handled capably, and the formation and acceptance of a new and improved constitution marked another forward step in the college's development. Organization of the Club Advisory Board filled a need of long standing and, under the presidency of Johnny Julius, it appears destined to make itself a potent factor hereafter.

A long dormant organization came to life when the Block SF Society, under the leadership of Jerry Flamm, was resurrected and became active in both political and social affairs. If Jerry's successors follow in his footsteps, this group should continue as a progressive and important part of junior college life.

Foundation of a chapter of Alpha Gamma Sigma, state-wide scholarship society, was another high-light of the spring. Under the presidency of Jerry Flamm (wolf!) and the guidance of faculty sponsor Alice Cooper, Alpha Gamma Sigma has already won for itself a place of prominence, and seems likely to accomplish even more in the future.

The social events were both numerous and enjoyable, thanks to the sterling work of Norma Parent, Al Williams, Barbara Randall, and their associates, who provided a series of dances and similar affairs which eclipsed all previous functions in providing entertainment. The rallies were all outstanding successes, thanks largely to the yeoman efforts of yell leader Stan Adams.

(Note: This sounds like an awful lot of bouquet-throwing, we know, but we mean it all, s'help us.)

Clubs and societies enjoyed a banner year, while the WAA flourished bigger and better than ever, winding up in a blaze of glory with Tourney Week (whatever that is).

Ram athletes came through with stellar performances in all sports, but we'll leave that end of it to Mix, who, after all, must have something to write about.

So long.

Public Schools Week Program Gets Praise

Mr. A. J. Cloud, President
San Francisco Junior College
Francisco Street and Van Ness Avenue
San Francisco, California.

Dear Mr. Cloud:

The San Francisco Committee for the 1938 Observance congratulates you and your faculty on the very successful program which your school contributed to the Public Schools Week Observance. Your cooperation this year, as well as in previous years, is sincerely appreciated by this Citizens' Committee.

Again thanking you and wishing you continued success, we are

Very sincerely yours
S. F. Public School Week Committee
(Signed) James Leo Hailey,
General Chairman.

Dear Editor:

Some months ago I made use of these columns to voice my disgust with the set-up of the clubs within the college, which, at that time, were existing in a rather haphazard fashion, without any semblance of organization. If I may be permitted to state another opinion, I should like to retract my previous accusations and express hearty approval of the formation of the Club Advisory Board, which, in the few brief weeks of its existence, has shown promise of becoming one of the largest factors in the development of extra-curricular activities. It fills a need of long standing in the college, and has eliminated entirely the regrettable situation to which I referred in my earlier epistle. More power to it!

Charlie.

Dear Editor:

During my two years of attendance at San Francisco Junior College I have never had the misfortune to witness as disgusting a spectacle as that presented at last week's election rally by certain members of the "Block SF" society and their cronies. If I remember correctly, the pre-election rally last semester was marred in a similar manner by these loud-mouthed oafs, who apparently enjoy nothing better than an opportunity to embarrass or humiliate someone.

After the activities of the society during the past semester, I was inclined to believe that the members of the society had turned over a new leaf, but last week's exhibition showed plainly that, regrettably, such is not the case. If there is no way in which these rowdies can be restrained from their uncouth demonstrations, I suggest that some action be taken to insure their absence from all rallies and assemblies hereafter.

Sickened.

Presidential Notes

By Don Mix

If we were the type that could be dramatic successfully we would heave a huge sigh and then drop our chin on our chest and murmur, "It is finished." But since we lack the attributes of thespian greatness we will merely wind up our session by calling the meeting adjourned, picking up our papers, and going home.

Because we were privileged to work with an outstanding corps of student officers and an interested and cooperative student body the semester that has just passed was one of considerable activity and some accomplishment. It can be said truthfully without any traces of political gladhanding that each member of the Spring semester Executive Council did fine work not only in their specific field but as elected representatives to a legislative and executive body they functioned with unusual initiative and cooperation.

So, to the entire student association as a whole, but especially to those people who were vital factors in the semestern work we offer our sincere thanks—Norma Parent, Florence Murphy, Barbara Randall, Dorothy Canavan, Stan Adams, Al Williams, Jerry Flamm and John Julius.

We are also deeply grateful to administration and faculty for helping us over some rough spots and to Editor Bob MacArthur for his active and intelligent interest in student governmental affairs.

* * *

To our successor, Bob Fex, congrats and the best success in your program next fall. Not merely because we've known Bob for some twenty years, but because we've observed his fine work in the last six months we are certain he will be a capable and worthwhile leader.

That finishes our business for the day but you may be quite certain that we have a very choking feeling of regret at leaving our Powell Street alma mater.

AFTER DARK

By John Ward

As it must to all things, death comes this week to the 1937-38 music season. And, as in all such matters, the concert house has been shut up for the summer. Not until the opera season in October will the spirit of the gaudy season be resurrected as 1938-39. Meanwhile we have a little summer music.

For those initiated into the secrets of chamber music, no advice need be given. But for those who are not acquainted with the ways of two violins, a viola, and a cello, let us say this: some of the greatest musical literature is written for this combination, and if you know it not you should begin at once to hear it. That chamber music should be the most difficult of all music to approach remains one of the strange mysteries of art. Nearly all young music lovers find it dry, unimaginative stuff, and turn to the more easily comprehended types of music. Only after a good, healthy exposure to quartets does the thing become one of the most vivid of tonal experiences. And we suggest the initiated take advantage of the coming summer's rich display of chamber music.

Certainly, the bay region is one of the world's finest centers for quartet concerts. The famous Pro Arte group of Brussels will again reside at the Mills College summer session giving Sunday afternoon concerts of mixed composers (mostly moderns) beginning June 26. Also, they will present a Beethoven cycle on Wednesday evenings beginning on June 19.

The fabulous Kolish quartet will present five Schubert-Bartok concerts at the University of California, starting June 16. This festival is presented to the University by the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation of the Library of Congress, and the concerts are open to the public. Season tickets may be obtained at the University early in June upon presentation of a student body card. If you do not have tickets, however, it is possible to get seats by arriving early. The concerts take place at Wheeler Hall and begin around 2 p. m.

A third famous quartet, the Roths, will present a series of at least 16 concerts at the Stanford University beginning sometime in June. As far as we can ascertain this series, also a present of the Coolidge Foundation, will be open to the public. This leaves only one concert more to be added to the list, that of Yehudi and Haphtibah Menuhin in their first local appearance together in a sonata recital. This is to be held in the San Francisco opera house on June 21.

Thus music's highest art is promised a magnificent season, and any music lover would be a bit of a fool to pass it up. It nothing else can convince the uninitiated that they should at least sample it, let them merely ponder on the fact that all these concerts will be well attended

Success Story! Tom Wilson has coached two tennis teams and two soccer teams in the last four semesters and brought home just that many championships. Quite an average.

Best Athlete

Since this is the last time we will trot out our sportcasting there are several little tidbits that we want to get off our chest. During the many long years that we have haunted the gym with an eagle eye cast over bemuscled athletes, we have been searching for the best all around athlete in the college. To fit the bill for this post the man must be an outstanding competitor in two sports, have a good competitive temperment, coordinating factors that enable him to learn quickly, and a fine sense of real sportsmanship.

There were not too many who managed to raise themselves to this peak of athletic efficiency but there were enough to make our task plenty tough.

There was Tony Scafani, footballer and baseball man; Ernie Loustalot, basketball and track star; Jumbo Jubinsky, soccer and weight man; Bubbles Egelhofer, Duke Worsham, George Warren, Bob Fex, Harold Mitchell and one or two others who rank very high in athletic efficiency.

But despite this impressive looking list of past and present greats we would name a lad who has developed mainly within the last year as the college's outstanding athlete, one Walt Boitano, he of the powerful legs and notorious beak. Boitano held down the tough post of fullback on the varsity in husky fashion, and then blossomed out in a one-man track team this spring. His mastery of two sports proves his athletic aptitude, his fine record vouches for his temperament, and we will go to bat for his fine sportsmanship. A fine athlete, definitely.

Ribbers Et Al

Further awards and degrees go to cents who were extremely proficient in other less basic forms of athletic activity. The cum laudae for rib artistry goes unquestionably to the brainy and brawny one, Jerry Flamm. When the elongated "Jer" really turns on the pressure you can feel the poise it took years to build up just melt away.

For outstanding work as an unwilling stooge we give the cotton handcuffs to Dan'l Weichers, the silver throated lad from Redwood Bowl. He was the victim of more gags than any other three inhabitants of Powell Hill.

Treacy Slattery, the hoopster who wears a map of Erin between his chin and forehead, receives the degree in foreign language for the mastery he exhibits over his mother tongue.

The unusual degree of C. C. C. (constant clown) is awarded jointly to the amusing pair from the outer Mission, Bob Egelhofer and Duke Worsham.

Traveling

Many of the better athletes are slated to take up their chores in bigger colleges and universities next fall. Ed Curcio will do his basketballing for Santa Clara; Worsham and Egelhofer will don the cleats for Fresno State, Merv Weiner will hold down a tackle spot for Pacific, George Bedrosian will double-up in the hoop court and gridiron for Stanford, El Pearce and Wes Olson are fog belting for UPS, and Flamm will pack his talent up to Montana.

NEWLY FORMED LEAGUE INVITES RAM BOWLERS

Junior College bowlers, including members of Joe Amori's P. E. kegling classes, those intending to take it next term, faculty members, and other men (and women!), students, are invited to participate in a novice league starting Wednesday, May 18, at Golden Gate Recreation.

The new circuit, popular on all alleys during the summer months, will be conducted via the handicap route, with no minimum work for averages. Competition will be held weekly at Golden Gate, with the teams shooting a round-robin schedule. Interested parties should consult Amori or Jack Schmale in Dean Browne's office. Experience is not necessary.

Golf Team Finishes In Second Position

Coach Louis "Dutch" Conlon's newly organized golfing team finished in second place in the Northern California Junior College meet held at Stanford last Saturday with a score of 333. The Menlo Collegians annexed the crown in the four man team contest by totalling the low score of 291 and Sacramento finished third with 338.

Dee Peploglo of Menlo Junior College won the individual championship when he defeated Charles Finger, defending champ also of Menlo, 3 and 2.

RAM NETSTERS IN CLEAN SWEEP!

RAMS FAIL TO PLACE IN MEET AS OUTSTANDING STARS OUSTED

Ineligibility of Boitano, Star Sprinter and Weightman, and Mitchell, Mile and 880 Man, Rob Sweet's Men of Only Possible Scoring

Because of the scholastic ineligibility of the two outstanding local entrants, Coach Russ Sweet's college track team failed to place in the Conference Meet which was won by Sacramento Junior College on last Saturday. The Capital City thinclads annexed 71 points to second place San Mateo's 46½.

Walt Bointano, ten second dash man and leading shot putter, and Harold Mitchell, distance man deluxe, were the victims of the scholastic chopping block when they were declared ineligible for competition in the conference meeting at Modesto.

Modesto was third with 31¾ markers, Marin and Santa Rosa tied with 2 points and Menlo scored one. Placer, along with San Francisco, failed to place.

EISANMEN WIND UP MEDIOCRE SEASON

By BOB FEX

Baseball season came to a close with yesterday's games with Sacramento. The team was a good one, and although it did not win the championship it did very well for itself with the material on hand. A compliment must be paid to Coach Lee Eisan for his untiring efforts in behalf of his team. Good work, Lee!

The team only finished fifth in the conference, but many bad breaks kept them from doing better. Players were very successful in their practice season losing only three games out of fifteen played.

The highlight of the season was the barnstorming trip to Los Angeles; the team played the best baseball in the history of the institution in the games with Compton and Los Angeles junior colleges.

We must bid such outstanding veterans as "Mickey" Berman, Paul Hjort, Ray Egelhofer, and Dave Johnson adieu. These boys have played their last games of baseball for our dear old junior college.

Berman has played great ball at first base for two years and should by all indications be placed on this year's all-conference team. Hjort has also been a decided asset to Coach Eisan for the past two years. Egelhofer came back this year and proved himself to be the most improved player on the squad. Dave Johnson was laid low with injuries just when he gave promise that he was going to have a great year.

Coming back next year to give the Junior college a great chance for the conference title will be such outstanding members of this year's mound staff as "Big Ed" Curcio and Ossie Gardner, both these boys have pitched very good ball this year, and with the experience they received, should go great guns next season.

Eisan will probably build his next year's infield around "Arni" Banta and Kent Baird, these lads showed they are the kind of players that will burn up the league with this year's experience under their belt. Frank Nilan will be back for outfield duty and should be one of the best in the conference next year. Weaver Galbraith will also return to assume the catching duties. Also returning will be Jim Coen and Bill Williams. Neither of these boys saw much action this year, but should break into the first string lineup next year.

Block SF Banquet Acclaimed Success, 70 Members Attend

Last Wednesday night more than 70 persons affiliated with the Block SF Society gathered together over the festive board at the most successful banquet in the history of the college. The banquet, which took place at My Rendezvous, was attended by such dignitaries as Archibald J. Cloud, President of the San Francisco Junior College, Dean of Men Edwin Browne, Coaches Lee Eisan, Jack Gaddy, Tom Wilson and Russ Sweet, all of whom made short speeches at the request of Toastmaster Jerry Flamm, Block Society Prexy.

The large attendance by both old and new award winners definitely proved that the formerly lifeless organization of athletes is once again on its feet ready to hold its place as the banquet and winners of the coveted foremost college society.

Election of officers took place at the guiding positions will be announced at the Block SF Rally to be held at Galileo Auditorium this afternoon.

SPEED AND SWAT

Trackmen and baseballers closed their season during the past weekend. Action in last week's State meet shows Walt Boitano (center right) romping to second place behind Theofeld (not shown) in the fast time of 21.9. In the lower photo an usual action shot of Catcher Weaver Galbraith with Ed Curcio on the mound for the Eisanites.

Boitano Stars For Tracksters As State Cops Annual Contest

San Francisco State's strong squad of spikemen literally ran away from the college track team and won decisively, 82½ to 39½, their annual track and field meet held at Kezar Stadium last Tuesday afternoon. After postponements and many changes of meeting places the meet was finally run off before a handful of spectators. The Ram's team was only able to get two first places as compared to the Gaters 12 firsts.

One of the college's first places, the shot put, was made because of the work of Walt Boitano, veteran and faithful point-gatherer of the team. Boitano, with 12 points, held high point honors for the local team by winning the shot put, placing second in the 100, second in the 220, and third in the discus.

Emery Stars

Tom Emery also starred for the Rams. His 20 ft. 10 inch leap in the broad jump was good enough to put him in second place. He also stole second place in the high jump and his 6 points put him second on the list of the college point-earners. Emery has been a consistent point-maker for the squad this season and deserves credit for his fine efforts.

Art "Swede" Nelson surprised everyone-including himself by placing third in the mile, the first big race he ever ran in. Considering that the winning time was 4:34.8, Nelson made a fine showing.

John Carolan, distance runner, looked good in taking second in the mile and third in the 880.

Sanderson also surprised by placing second in the high hurdles.

State's Future

With one "iron man" leaving and another one coming up to fill his shoes, State seems to be well fortified for years to come. Luther Theofield is slated to take over the task of Hopkins. Theofield was high point man for the meet Tuesday, collecting 16½ points by winning both the sprints, the broad jump, and running a lap on the winning relay team.

RESULTS

100 yard dash—Won by Theofeld (S); second, Boitano (SFJC); third, Wilkes (1). Time, 10 seconds.

220 yard dash—Won by Theofeld (S); second, Boitano (S); third, Hopkins (S). Time 21.9 seconds.

LAZARE, ALTFIELD WIN TITLES IN CONFERENCE TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIPS

By DICK SIMPERS

With the conference championship already in the bag, the Ram tennis team last Saturday made a clean sweep of the individual championships held at Stanford, San Francisco players emerging victorious in both the singles and doubles finals. Star of the day was the invincible Bob Lazare, who carried off the crown in the singles division and then returned to team up with Alvin Altfield and score a triumph in the doubles.

Victory in the individual events came as the climax to a highly successful season, which saw the Red and White netsters carrying off first honors in the "A" division of the Northern California Junior College Conference for the second consecutive year. Under the guidance of Coach Tom Wilson, the Rams went through their conference schedule without tasting defeat once, and also succeeded in registering wins over a number of other colleges in non-conference tilts, both here and in the South, where the team traveled during its barnstorming trip last month.

Lazare Spectacular

Enjoying one of his "good" days last Saturday, Lazare encountered no great difficulty in winning his way through to the finals in the singles, where he collided with the San Mateo star, Frank Pisale, and turned him back by taking three sets in a row, 6-3, 6-3, 6-2. Bob Kun of the Rams advanced to the semi-finals of the singles before being stopped by Pisale, and Al Altfield, the other San Francisco entrant, went out in the quarter-finals, beaten by Jack Dixon of Modesto.

The doubles championship match saw Altfield and Lazare taking a hard-fought battle from the Modesto team of Jack Dixon and Jerry Hyain, 0-6, 6-1, 6-4. The San Franciscans were slow to get going, but when Altfield really hit his stride they drew away to score an easy victory.

Six Teams Compete

Entrants in the tournament came from among the outstanding players of six northern California junior colleges, San Francisco, San Mateo, Modesto, Santa Rosa, Marin, and Menlo, all of which entered men in both the singles and the doubles.

Absent from the Ram line-up for the event were two of its mainstays, Harold Wagner and Chandler Ennes, who were unable to make the trip. Despite their absence, however, Coach Wilson had a strong enough combination in Lazare and Altfield to carry off all the laurels, and supply a fitting climax to the most successful season in the history of the college.

Second-year men on the squad included both the champions, Altfield and Lazare, as well as Ennes. These three have finished their competition for the Rams with two titles to their credit, the former two with the highest honor it is possible to win in local tennis circles. Returning next year will be Bob Kun, whose classic profile will be found elsewhere in this issue, Ray Berns and Bob Christiansen.

WOMEN'S SPORT PARADE

By JEAN PAGE

Silently slipping into a silly sentimental mood of memories we give you what is left to us of a year's work as drum major of the "Women's Sports Parade":

IMPORTANT PEOPLE:

1. Last semester's president, Gloria Swiegood. Presidents are always important and Gloria was even more important than that.

2. This semester's president, Dot Canavan. In her various positions and her proficiency in sports Dot has reaped in every WAA award there is to reap in and done it easily.

3. The gym instructors who are without a doubt the hub of the WAA wheel.

4. Margaret Wormsell as the best all-around sport in the WAA and who typifies its spirit better than any one we know. Despite the fact that she has had some tough breaks she is still very definitely one of the important people.

5. All of the managers who toil at their duties harder than anyone not connected with the organization realizes and who get little recognition.

6. The four block award winners and Dot Canavan, Margaret Park, Virginia Kwiatt, and Ellen Cumming. If there is any question as to why they win this special recognition, it is only necessary for the doubting Thomas to read over the Block Award qualifications and all will be clear.

7. The past and present officers who have certainly earned the honor of being an officer.

8. Gail Hanna whom we would like to nominate as the person who merits much more recognition than she has obtained. Gail is the first vice-president we have ever known who has actually worked. She has handled the sign-ups, the elections, and all the publicity. Gail has furnished all the meat which has been ground out in this column, and if many times the result has been hash, it has ben the fault of the columnist and not Gail. So far all star performer for the spring semester we pick Hanna.

THINGS TO REMEMBER:

My first by-line on the column. What a thrill!

Both of the final banquets. What a success!

Editor Markovits Wins Shooting Post

College Rifle and Pistol Club executive officers were named by that group at the election held last Thursday and Friday. Howie Markovits, editor, sportsman, and sure-shot, was unanimously chosen as president of the club for the fall semester, succeeding George Dieser, who has held that post for a year.

Markovits succeeded John Julius as editor of the microscopic weekly paper of the Rifle and Pistol Club, "The Ricochet." He has worked in that capacity for the past several months and is also known as a sharpshooter. He is also a member of the California Junior Fish and Game Patrol.

Other elected officers are Vice-president Marion Dondero, Secretary Edna Wedam, Treasurer Bob Darr, and Board of Control members Louise Binford and John Julius.

HORSEHIDE FOLK DROP TWO TILTS TO SAN MATEO

Ram baseballers had a very sad week, losing four straight conference tilts.

On last Tuesday they encountered a snarling Bulldog from San Mateo and lost both games, the first 5 to 4, and the second 7 to 4. The Rams came back on Thursday and proved just as consistent by losing both ends of a doubleheader to Marin at Kentfield. The score of the first fray was 8 to 6, and the nightcap 12 to 5.

In the San Mateo games it was the breaks that sent the Rams down to defeat. Big Ed Curcio hurled masterful ball in the first San Mateo encounter, allowing only four hits, but sloppy playing in the field let in four of the Bulldogs' five runs.

Etezel, Bulldog leftfielder, hit a homerun and a triple to be the big gun in the San Mateo attack. Frank Nilan of the Rams also hit a home run.

The second game found the San Mateo boys hitting Ossie Gardner for nine hits and seven runs, again sloppy fielding in the crucial spot led to the downfall of the San Francisco team. "Arni" Banta hit a home run for the Rams.

Marin proved that they are a definite threat for the conference title by taking the Rams in both ends of the scheduled doubleheader. Johnny Allen, Bill Adams, and Charlton Hoberg proved to be too powerful with the willow for the Rams.

AFTER COLLEGE WHAT?

By Anne Rabinowitz

Because conditions have changed today, many of us are eager to claim that opportunities have lessened too. Although our geographical frontiers are exhausted, and the professions of law, teaching, and medicine are overcrowded, new frontiers are opening up to youth.

The necessities of this age have developed new, imaginative professions. Much progress is being made in the field of industrial design. Over ten million people are employed directly or indirectly in industries which scarcely existed in the last century: moving pictures, automobiles, radio, air conditioning and aeronautics are examples. Tireless research and active experimentation were responsible for this. But this does not mean that the work for laboratory workers, engineers, designers, and inventors is through. The fact that within five years every piece of radio equipment will most likely be obsolete should insure work for many active minds and hands.

Specialization in the planning and erection of houses will prove profitable for some persons if the housing plans in the United States for the next ten years are carried through.

To quote Harry Woodburn Chase of the New York University, "When the frontier is not geographical, but technological, training becomes imperative. The properly trained person—and I mean trained in imagination and resourcefulness as well as technical skill—has tremendous advantage today in all fields of opportunity that are attractive."

Because of military and commercial reasons, factories are filled with orders for planes, but personnel managers must scour the country for properly trained men. With the use of the all-metal plane, it has become necessary to train new workers from the ground up. For aircraft construction, comparatively new metals have been used. No large number of men has been educated in their use. All schools that have been established recently by airplane manufacturers welcome graduates of approved aeronautical schools who have received practical courses in welding, sheet-metal work, blueprint reading, engines, ignition, carburetion, as well as general courses in airline operation, and so forth. These schools supply the trained workers, who are more than assured of employment.

In past years, the farmer's task was to learn how to grow more of the same thing; more wheat, more corn per acre. Now he must experiment on growing new things. Any new product which can be grown in this country will provide a prosperous industry for its discoverer.

As mentioned before in this column, new opportunities revolve around some specific, and often overlooked need. The man who will supply the need for decent reliable garage service is awaited anxiously by an American public which dreads bringing cars to present-day mechanics. A more than comfortable living is guaranteed the man who will organize a garage of skilled mechanics who can assure Mr. United States what was the matter with his car, exactly what was done about it, how long it took, and why it cost what it cost.

Many people send their camera films to distant states because developing costs too much in their own district. Energetic photographers may be overlooking an opportunity here.

The "breaks" crop up in unexpected and unusual places. The next time something goes wrong with the kitchen sink or you have to wait an hour for a broken film at the movies to be repaired, say to yourself, "Maybe I'm the fellow who can fix that." There's gold in them, thar skills.

Pi Mu Gamma Eats At Dawn May 21

Banquetting at the Dawn Club, the Pi Mu Gamma pre-medical society will end the semester on Saturday evening, May 21, 1938.

The program will consist of dinner, the presentation of Honor Keys, followed by dancing and perhaps a midnight show, as was planned by the pre-nursing students belonging to the society.

Candidates for the Honor Keys are: Jack Gilkey, retiring president; Joe Walsh, former president; and Bernard Uzelak and Joe Coccellato, both by reason of their exceptional scholarship.

Glenn Noble, the society's faculty adviser, said:

"If all dues are fully paid up by the end of the semester, the club treasury will share half the expenses of the banquet."

German Students Attend Picnic

All members of the German Society attended an outing at Lagunitas in Marin County last week. Eric Moeller and Annemarie Delfs, members of the faculty and sponsors of the society, also attended.

Faculty Association Banquet Tonight At Hotel Mark Hopkins

This evening at 7:30 p.m. in the famous Peacock Court of Hotel Mark Hopkins, the Faculty Association of the college will dine and dance in the final meeting of the current year.

Among the invited guests are: President and Mrs. Archibald J. Cloud; Leland Cutler, chairman of the Board of Trustees of Stanford University and Mrs. Cutler; Richard E. Doyle, president of the Board of Education and Mrs. Doyle; Joseph P. Nourse, Superintendent of Schools and Mrs. Nourse; Mayor and Mrs. Angelo J. Rossi, Dr. Robert Gordon Sproul, president of the University of California and Mrs. Sproul, and Dr. Ray Lymond Wilbur, president of Stanford University and Mrs. Wilbur.

Climaxing his invitation extended to members of the faculty association and their friends, Joseph Williams, president of the organization said, "We owe it to ourselves to enjoy an evening of good fellowship in fine company topped off with gustatory delicacies."

The principal speaker of the evening will be Leland Cutler, and as he is president of the Golden Gate International Exposition, his talk will probably concern the forthcoming "Pageant of the Pacific."

Entertainment will be furnished by an accomplished artist, Flossita Badger, member of the faculty. Music for dancing will be that of Anson Weeks and his famed orchestra.

Geologists Dig Fossils, Study Coal

Fossil digging and study featured a field trip taken by 25 students of the local geology department on a trek to the Mt. Hamilton region last Sunday.

Under the leadership of George Green, Geology instructor, the group of amateur scientists also studied coal mines, the Hetch-Hetchy water system and the land fault that formed the Santa Clara valley.

Fossils and coal of the Plistocene Age were observed in their natural state near Mt. Hamilton after the Prune Valley fault had been under surveillance and noted.

An expert on the subject, Green traced the course of the Hetch-Hetchy tunnel through the Livermore Hills, explaining its construction and present function in the metropolitan water system.

Nominating Jack McGoey, Bert Bertolero, Leroy McCormick and Gerry Stewart for the office of president, the college forestry club held its last meeting of the semester last Friday afternoon, May 6.

Dick Dahl, retiring president, announced his intention of entering Oregon State University next semester and gave this as his reason for declining his renomination.

Summing up the activities of the organization for the semester Dahl said that they had participated in several interesting field trips and talks by various forestry officials. He expressed a hope that there would be students among the entering Freshmen interested in forestry so that the organization can be enlarged.

Members of the Newman Club will elect club officers at the next meeting. A committee with Doris Speroni as chairman has been chosen to present the candidates for the various offices.

This event will climax a successful semester of club meetings and social events at which many members have attended.

It is the hope of Bob Fex, president of the club, that the fall semester will be as successful as the spring semester has been.

NYA Workers Warned To Apply

Members of the NYA must be sure to sign up for work for next semester before school closes May 20, stressed Helene Turner, association sponsor. "We must have a list made out before school starts next fall," she said.

Army-Navy Convenes Friday; Porter Leads Peace Society

Concluding a semester of diversified activities, the Army and Navy Club will hold its final meeting at the home of John Stewart, 2320 California Street, on May 13.

Election of officers for the coming semester and a discussion and review of the accomplishments of the present semester will be the main themes.

Many members of the organization are planning to enter and participate in the Citizens Military Training Corps camp to be held at Monterey from July 8 to August 6. Full particulars to any non-members of the organization who may be interested in attending the camp can be found elsewhere in this issue.

Bob Porter was elected president of the Peace Society last week to succeed Ray Valdez, retiring president of the group.

Other officers chosen to serve during the fall semester were: Elizabeth Rehbock, vice president; Miriam Frazier, secretary-treasurer and Dorothy Pilgrim, corresponding secretary.

As gifts in appreciation for fine service to the cause of peace, President Valdez and Secretary Doris Speroni each received a book from the society. Both students will complete their junior college studies next week.

Other business discussed at the meeting was a review of the spring semester's activities and plans for the future.

Italians Play Santa Clarans

Bob Nicco, manager for the basketball team of the Italian Club, announced that they would play the Italian Club of Santa Clara in the near future. Nicco said: "Santa Clara has not yet definitely set a day for the game, but it will probably take place after finals. After winning the game from St. Mary's, this game with Santa Clara should be a push-over."

THE THINKER . . .

By A. J. Cloud

President, San Francisco Junior College

It could easily become a mere formality for us of the faculty and administration at the San Francisco Junior College to extend greetings at the beginning of a semester to entrants and returning students. I feel safe in declaring, however, that such a procedure is not in harmony with the spirit of the institution. Hence, I deem it a distinct privilege, in response to a courteous invitation from the editor of The Guardsman, to welcome wholeheartedly both newcomers and upperclassmen at this season when we enter upon our fourth year of life as the topmost section of the public school system of San Francisco.

An observation or two at this time may throw further light upon that spirit of the institution to which illusion has been made.

Teacher-like, may I ask a batch of questions—such as: What have you in mind to do at the College? What to gain? What to give? What to share?

To answer such questions, even in a preliminary way, you will have to think. It is hard to think. The renowned sculptor, Rodin, recognized that truth when he wrought his statue "The Thinker", which you can see in one of our city's parks. Go, make a close inspection of it. Realize that, to think, probably differentiates man from beast.

It is not too early, nor yet too late, for you to begin to think very definitely upon the subject of the place you would undertake to occupy in the world's affairs. You may well, now and here, begin to study your strengths and weaknesses, and to analyze your aims, ambitions, and aspirations.

The faculty and administration of this College will most cheerfully give their best service in aiding you to attain all legitimate purposes which have come forth from your thinking. They could not do your thinking for you, even if they would. Once you have done some thinking of your own, they can offer you the benefit of their experience in meeting and solving problems whether of an educational, or social, or a personal nature. You are free to call on them for counsel and advice in relation to those problems. They are your friends, eager to help you fix the directions upon your chart of life.

A. J. CLOUD

BUILDING PROGRESSES

Work on the college campus has been temporarily halted. The foundation, pictured above, has been completed but so far nothing has been done to erect the superstructure. A football practice field is ready for use. The sign in the photo says "keep off," nohody will play there anyway, at least not until other facilities are provided. Latest developments are explained in the story below.

FOUNDATION, FOOTBALL FIELD DONE; CAMPUS BUILDING READY NEXT YEAR

With the foundation already constructed, the grading of the Balboa Park site completed, and a football practice field ready for use, the college campus should be ready for occupation next year, according to President Archibald J. Cloud.

Deadline for the beginning of the main building is January first but President Cloud believes that construction will begin sooner.

Further action at the site has been delayed because of the failure of the federal government to make a decision as to a grant applied for by the Board of Education and its schools building program. However, whether the Public Works Administration decides to help the city or not work will begin, and it will start even if the PWA grant is still undecided by the beginning of 1939.

In addition to the $900,000 the Board has already set aside for the junior college plant, $500,000 will be included in the coming bond election set for September 27. The total school bond issue will amount to almost three million dollars. If the bonds pass, a two thirds majority is necessary, the college is assured of the erection of two gymnasiums and recreational facilities for both men and women.

"College Foremost"

In the cross section of opinion of various civic groups the Board of Education has found that completion of the junior college plant is foremost in the minds of San Franciscans President Cloud said.

"We are doing all we can," he emphasized, "but these things move slowly and therefore we must be patient. The plans for the campus are almost completed and the situation is more optimistic today than it ever has been. Our long struggle for a higher institution of learning in the San Francisco Public Schools System is now bearing fruit and it is truly gratifying. Progress is being made faster than it appears to people who are not acquainted with all the details involved."

Educate Citizens

The next immediate objective, President Cloud intimated, is to educate the city's citizens with the worthiness of the bonds, and thereby secure the approval of their issuance, following which San Francisco Junior College will benefit as well as the entire city.

Enrollment Grows In Hotel Division As 40 Sign Up

J Graham Sullivan, coordinator of the Hotel and Restaurant Division announced at the end of the registration period, a record enrollment of 40 students for full time instruction and several part time students enrolled in various departments of hotel and culinary work.

"The division has made great strides since the spring semester of 1936 when eight students and two instructors comprised the entire branch of Hotel and Restaurant Management instruction in junior colleges of the United States," Sullivan said.

Instruction in the division is noted for its completeness and practicability. Leading restaurants and hotels in Northern California have recognized the ability, business education, and the specialized knowledge of the Hotel and Restaurant Management graduates so that almost all of the students who have taken the course since its inauguration have been placed on or before the completion of their instruction at the college.

Because the demand for the well-trained graduates of this technical course in Hotel and Restaurant Management has become so well known, more students attempt to register in the division than can be handled. Enrollment, therefore, is so limited that a careful selection of applicants is made by Sullivan and his staff.

The Hotel Management Division office is on the north end of the Galileo building. It can be reached by the Van Ness and Bay street entrance.

ORIENTATION WEEK:

GRIFF WILLIAMS FEATURES WAA, AWS PROGRAM

Rally, Tea To Introduce College Women's Social Season 2:30 Thursday

Griff Williams and members of his band will head the Orientation Week program for women tomorrow afternoon in the gymnasium at Galileo High School, when the clubs and societies of the college, under the direction of the Associated Women Students and Women's Athletic Association, will sponsor a rally and tea. The program will start at 2:30 p.m. and last until 5 o'clock.

"We want all of the new women to become acquainted with those here last semester," said Margaret Parks, WAA president. "Although the rally is especially for freshmen, all of the women are invited. Speeches, skits, music, and other entertainment will be presented. Colored posters will inform the new women of the wide scope of sports available, and small handbooks, similar to those handed out last semester, will give further information."

FOUR STUDENTS WANTED

Ward M. Nichols, of the finance staff requests that students who hold the following student body cards call at the Associated Student Bank at Galileo High School. The numhers of the cards are: 1415, 1480, 1520, 1548.

Play Rumored

It is rumored that the Newman Club will again present "Joe's Jay See", a "Classic Epic" which was introduced during the spring semester of 1938. Dorothy Sanderson, WAA vice-president, has agreed to do the Highland Fling if enough requests are received.

Julie Sherwin, singer in Williams' band, also does mimicking. She was a college coed in a southern university when Williams signed her with his band. Helen Nast will sing Still as the Night in German and An Old French in French.

Games, Refreshments

A demonstration of various athletic activities will be given by the Physical Education majors, with the possibility of freshmen joining in the games. Refreshments will be served cabaret style since the program will be continuous.

Representatives of the AWS who will act as hostesses are Barbara Curryer, Lorraine Johnson, and Marie Hoager, vice-president, secretary and treasurer of the organization. Others are Marie Heiser, Barbara Randell, Jane Mitchell, Denise Dupre, Jerry Fisher, Harriet Marker, Mary Sarratt, Mary Louise McNutt, Betty Roth, Evelyn Lacey, Adele Kuhn, Lois Rasmussen, Matina Ellis, Margie Wright, Marian Yager, Jacklyn Kramer and Marion Andervitch.

New Policy

Participation in Orientation Week events, until this semester, has been enjoyed by the men only. The brawl, wearing of rooting caps, and men's smoker are a few events that take place every semester. Women are onlookers in two events and barred from the third.

This week they will have a program strictly their own. The presidents of most of the organizations in the college, according to Miriam Dunne, AWS president, will be introduced.

Los Angeles Gets A City College

Los Angeles Junior College is no more. The Board of Education of the Southern California city has re-christened that noble institution "Los Angeles CITY College".

Asked to explain the change, students of that school explained that the purpose of the new name was to add dignity to their alma mater. Another reason given, but not official,

Freshmen Welcome Rally Slated At Galileo Tonight

Program Includes Jam Session Trio; Class Elections Follow Promising Heavy Competition

Frosh Welcome Rally and election of class officers, the highlight of Freshman Orientation Week, will take place tonight at 8 o'clock in the Galileo Auditorium, announced Hugh Waité, Chairman of the Rally Committee. Outside talent is expected to provide the entertainment, featuring Eddie Murphy, whose orchestra plays for the dance Friday evening. He will offer a "Jam Session Trio" and the vocalists of his band.

Following the rally there will be an election of officers to succeed Irving Amstrup, high soph president; Muriel Mills, low soph; Frank Verudeci, high freshmen; and Marvin Berliner, low freshmen.

New Method

"Election of all class officers in one evening is something new in the method of choosing officers in the college. Through the larger representation made possible by tonight's rally, elections will be more the majority's opinion than has been in the past. At the close of the rally, rooms will be assigned to the four classes where they may elect their respective officers," Waite said.

At the Executive Committee meeting held last Friday, Bob Fex, Associated Student president, appointed the following students to the election committee: John Julius, low frosh; Peggy Park, high frosh; Miriam Dunn, low soph, and Treacy Slattery, high soph.

"Probables" Listed

High Sophomore candidates:

Bill Gibson, Stan Tobiason, Paul LeBaron and Art Nelson, president; Jackie Cramer and Muriel Mills, vice president; Ruth Graham, Betty Roth and Howard Markovits, secretary-treasurer.

Low Sophomore candidates:

Frank Verducci, and Charlie O'Brien, president; Phyllis Learned and Jackie Davis, vice president; Camille Candrott and Harriet Marker, secretary.

High Freshmen candidates:

Dan Baker, president; Barbara Curryer and Janet Ball, vice president; Adele Kuhn and Dorothy Trood, secretary.

Low Freshmen candidates:

Ray Diehl and George Jones, president; Emily MacArthur and Rita Bann, vice president; Dorothy Obanesser and Pat Healy, secretary.

"High sophs and low sophs will be assigned a room in the Galileo building to hold their elections, while the freshmen will have the auditorium. Nominations will be accepted from the floor," Treacy Slattery of the Election Committee said.

The Rally Committee urges every student to be present to see that the candidates he favors are elected to represent him.

New Leaders Presented

During the rally itself, the new Associated Student officers will be presented. There will be community singing and last semester's Women's Trio will again display its vocal talents.

Waite also announced, "Associated Student cards will not be necessary to gain admission tonight. You may bring your friends or parents if you wish. The main purpose of the rally is to instill the spirit of Freshman Week and Friday's Brawl into the incoming Frosh."

Dance Scheduled In Colonial Room Of St. Francis

Low Freshman students will be honored at the Freshman Semi-Formal Dance, featuring the music of Eddie Murphy, Friday night, August 26, at the St. Francis Hotel, according to Barbara Randall, vice-president of the Associated Students and chairman of the college Social Committee which is sponsoring the dance.

The affair will be held in the Colonial room and Miss Randall expressed the hope that all freshmen would plan to attend this dance which honors their entrance into the college social activities.

Bids for the dance will use the Frosh identification buttons as a model, and will be done in the traditional red and white college colors.

Admission is by one student body card per couple. The dance will start at 9 o'clock, lasting until midnight.

All women are requested by Miss Randall to come in semi-formal costume.

NYA Offices To Be Located In P.G.E. Building

Headquarters of the National Youth Administration, formerly located at the Galileo High School, will move locations today to occupy new quarters in Room 726 in the Pacific Gas and Electric Company building at Sutter and Powell Streets, according to an announcement from Edward Redford, assistant chief of the NYA here.

All students having business with Redford or the NYA office will please note the following schedule, giving Redford's hours:

Monday and Wednesday—Room 726, P.G.E. Building—10 to 12 o'clock.

Thursday and Friday—Room 726, P. G.E. Building—8:30 to 10:30 o'clock.

Friday—Room 726, P.G.E. Building—10:30 to 1:30 o'clock.

Wednesday—Galileo—1 to 5 o'clock.

An announcement will soon appear when those students who have already signed up can start work, Redford said. Work will start immediately after official work is received.

Any faculty members having mimeograph or typewriting work to be done should contact Redford, as he has a few students available for this work at the present time.

SMOKER, BRAWL PLANS LOOM AS 'COLOSSALS'

Soph-Frosh Battle Friday On Soldiers' Field Ends Initiation Period

This week's frosh smoker and brawl will be "the biggest, best, and most colossal in the history of the college," according to Mickey Berman, President of the Men's Club, and instructor Joe Amori, its adviser.

Plans for the smoker, which is to be held tomorrow night at the Italian Athletic Center at Stockton and Green Streets, are practically complete, and a scintillating entertainment program is reported to be on tap for all freshman men students. A 12-piece orchestra has been secured for the occasion, and there will be boxing matches, exotic moving pictures, a magician, and several special stunts, one of which will be a pie-eating contest with the largest and sloppiest pies available. There will also be an ample supply of goodies for all who attend.

Melee Planned

The purpose of the smoker is to arouse the freshmen to fighting pitch for their traditional brawl with the sophomores on Friday. Despite the fact that the sophs have won the event every year except one, hopes for a frosh victory are high. The brawl, to be held at Soldiers' Field at Bay and Van Ness at 3:30 o'clock, will be staged in a large mudhole and will include a tug-o-war, a sack fight, and a flag rush. There will also be a large fire-hose for whichever side is able to use it.

Classes Excused

Opposing forces in the brawl will be led by their respective class presidents, and teams are to be organized at today's class meetings. All 3:30 o'clock classes will be excused for the occasion, and, according to Amori, it is advisable that participants wear old clothes.

The smoker, which is open only to freshman men, will start at 8 o'clock, and Men's Club officers are preparing to accommodate the largest crowd in the history of the event.

$50 Scholarship Again Offered By Service Society

Again this semester the Women's Service Society is offering a fifty dollar scholarship to any student having a 1.5 average or better, according to Margery Wright, WSS president. Those interested are requested to apply at the registrar's office in the Galileo building. Money for the scholarship is raised by a rummage sale held each semester. Anne Rabinowitz won the scholarship last semester.

Members of the society assisted the faculty advisers in making out the freshmens programs during registration week. Assistant counselers were Miriam Dunne, Phyllis Learned, Margery Wright, Joy Anna Mack, Jane Mitchell and Margaret Park. Working in the cafeteria were Marion Yager, Barbara Randell, Jacqueline Kramer, Beth Woodman, Betty McAllister, Margery Culp, Muriel Dodsworth and Lily Philips.

COLUMBIA EDUCATOR OPENS LECTURE SERIES FOR STUDENTS, FACULTY

Students of the college and instructors alike are invited to attend a series of lectures entitled Relation of Learning to Life, by William H. Kilpatrick, Professor Emeritus of Columbia University Teachers College, given at the John Muir School, Page and Webster Streets on Tuesdays and Thursdays at 4 p.m.

The next lecture will be given tomorrow afternoon, August 25. There are three lectures following and admission is one dollar for the series.

Professor Kilpatrick taught at the Stanford Summer Session this year. He is also well known in the bay region. Sponsoring the lecture series is the Board of Education Committee, of which Paul M. Pitman, assistant to President Cloud, is a member.

Statement of Policy For Ensuing Semester

UNDER the present hardships which the college is functioning The Guardsman's position takes on added importance as the unifying factor of all student and administrative activities. It will be the duty of this newspaper not only to present news and features but to assist the college in achieving a high degree of efficiency, particularly under the harassing conditions of a scattered campus (?).

A cardinal point in The Guardsman's program this semester will be to work for cooperation among the students, faculty, administration, and San Francisco at large for a real junior college. The situation as it is now allows for only an approach toward an institution that is more than a glorified high school. Students and faculty are to be commended for the way they have built this educational unit, and for the activities that have been successfully pursued, both curricular and extra-curricular.

The Guardsman is the official publication of the Associated Students of San Francisco Junior College, and will assist in improving student government and activities. It will also strive to increase the interest of the student body in extra-curricular activities.

Not only will The Guardsman contain full coverage of matters of interest to the college through news stories, editorials, columns, and features, but it invites members of the college to express their opinions through the columns of the Ram's Horn, and through contributing guest editorials and articles. Contributions will be printed at the discretion of the editor.

Any ideas expressed in these columns are not necessarily the opinion of the Associated Students or the college. All signed contributions are the opinion of the writer, unsigned editorials are those of the editor. Constructive criticism calculated to improve the character of The Guardsman will always be welcomed.

All organizations within the college will be given equal opportunities for expression as will likewise all individuals. The Guardsman will attempt, as far as possible, to present a thoroughly non-partisan review of any and all issues pertinent to the affairs of this college.

Summarizing the policy of The Guardsman for this semester, it may be said that the editor will work toward a greater institution by issuing a newspaper that will strive to unify the college and its activities by means of cooperation; a journal that will contain "all the news that's fit to print" and that will be of interest to all the students; a publication of, for, and by the students, for the greatest good of the greatest number.

Now Is The Time To Become Active

ONE of the most active weeks in the short history of the college is now occuring in an effort of the Associated Students to welcome old and particularly new students. With the growth of the college, a fuller and better program of extra-curricular activities is being developed. The plans have been made, it is up to the new students to participate in them to insure success.

In the past there has been an indefinite attitude on the part of many toward student activities. A program as varied and complete as this week's should dispel much of that "who-cares?" attitude and arouse an interest in student government. Congratulations are in order to those conducting this week's affairs.

To the newcomers we say get active in student affairs, join a club that arouses your interests. You are welcome and will find much that you can do to occupy your time, enjoy what you are doing, and improve the life of the college.

There has been much criticism of student government in former years. The fault lay partly with critics for their lack of participation and consequently the work fell on a few people. Another factor in improving the Associated Students organization lies in the readiness of officers to accept suggestions and help.

Remember that studies are not the only thing in college. Extra-curricular activities are also an important part of the educational program in developing an intelligent and well equipped citizenry.

Book Expenses Can Be Reduced

ONE of the problems that faces students at the beginning of each semester is the expense involved in the purchase of books. Discussion of methods of reducing this item of cost has been in existence ever since the problem arose. Of all the solutions offered the plan of a used book exchange seems to be the most practical.

Because the exchange would be simple to operate and involves very little expense it seems to be the most feasible. All that would be needed is a room and some student workers for the first two weeks of each semester. Through this agency students could acquire and dispose of used books at very reasonable prices. To assure good organization and fairness, the project could be directed by the college administration. Employees could be furnished by the NYA.

The present student store could continue to operate with a fair profit as the student exchange would not order new books or sell supplies and would be open for only two weeks at the beginning of the semester. We understand that plans have been made for a cooperative store in the new building when it is erected. This shows that the administration recognizes that an undesirable condition exists. Since such is the case why not at least attempt to alleviate the situation by doing something about it?

We propose that a little action be substituted for all the talking that's going on. We wonder what the student body, which has been complaining all week about the situation, thinks; instead of merely shouting, something constructive should be done.

Some Suggestions For Dies' Committee

INSTEAD of bringing forth the worn out red herring, the congressional committee investigating un-American activities would do well to get down to brass tacks and do a little enquiring with facts.

At the time of this writing newspaper reports indicate that Representative Martin Dies and has group have done nothing but listen to wild accusations by an untrustworthy American Federation of Labor official and an "ace" investigator. So far there has been a lot of smoke as evidenced in the monotonous cry of "Communism" but there seems to be little fire when the true facts are examined.

Incomplete information on the German-American Bund, a Fascist organization, has been rendered, with one Nazi being permitted to leave for Germany before being cross-examined. An AFL member of 30 years standing an "old line" Democrat and a San Francisco city employee has been named as a CIO organizer and a red. The American Civil Liberties Union which but recently aided the Nazi Bund and the Los Angeles Times has also been accused of being a Communist organization. These are but a few instances of the unreliability of Chairman Dies and his committee.

Thus far the committee has done nothing to justify its expenditure of public funds. However it is not too late for that group to do some constructive work and clear itself in the eyes of a laughing country. It is peculiar, to say the least, that so far only labor and its leaders have been "investigated".

Some groups could stand a little probing which in the past have been maligned but not subject to a thorough examination. How about Mayor Hague and his Jersey City domain? Coming closer to home about the California cities of Westwood and Nevada City in their denial of freedom of speech and labor's right to organize? How about the various vigilante bands and so called 100% patriotic organizations? There are grounds for suspecting groups which are over zealous in their patriotism.

If the committee can't become a fact finding body quizzing persons accused of subversive activities, there is only one face saving thing to do; help balance the budget by disbanding and going home.

Consider The Trouble Of Our Hosts

BY THIS time the building situation of the college has come to be an accepted fact, and one is prone to forget that some people are making sacrifices that this institution may exist and continue to grow.

It should be remembered that we are in somebody else's building and are imposing upon them with our presence. A little consideration in our conduct and the treatment of the property of our hosts will be the best way of showing our sincere appreciation for their hospitality and patience. It is needless to say that we appreciate the sacrifices of others that we may learn.

Everything is being done to speed erection of buildings on the barren Balboa Park site. The last six months have seen more action of a constructive nature than all the time since the college was founded. Let us hope that progress increases it momentum. In the meantime we will have to wait and make the best of the situation for ourselves and others.

Blue Pencil Bill

As the new semester opens we wonder if:—

the Powell Street stairway will be blocked as usual,—we will have to carry our umbrellas and raincoats on rainy days because there is no more room in the checkroom as usual,—the little Latin gent with the game leg will drive up the alley on Powell Street and lift himself up the iron stairway to get the wooden boxes from behind the Safeway Store during the 10 o'clock lecture as usual, —Pasquallette will come to school unshaven as usual. (By the way, at registration time he came to school fresh from the barber.)—the WPA workers will be picking out the weeds, one by one, from the car tracks at Fort Mason while Miss Weber's pupils play Robin Hood as usual,—J. A. with the blond hair and green jacket will be losing his shirt on the ponies as usual,—the students of the college will take an extra copy of The Guardsman to sit on while they eat their lunches in Union Square on Wednesdays as usual. We shall stop there because the mere thought of the students of the college misusing this glorious hunk of journalism leaves us in a state of acute melancholia. (—and when you feel like that, take ————'s Little Liver Pills. It does the work of calomel (pause) without the danger of calomel.) We feel better already.

About Buying Textbooks

It's textbook buying time on Powell Street. A lot of sharp deals have been put over on the gullible Frosh by the old, accomplished textbook traders. Advice to newcomers:—Offer one-third less than the asking price and work up from there. This was written only because we were THE gullible Freshman last semester.

* * *

About Pasquallette

Seen at registration time.—Ken Pasquallette, the Campus Clown and all-around Chief Character, trying to persuade some of the football players not to go out for the tackle position so that he can get a first-string berth this season. The fur-faced kid is dead earnest about his football career so watch his dust.

Apologies to everyone in general. No issue of The Guardsmon would be complete without a mention of Pasquallette. Had he been born four hundred years sooner, Falstaff would have had to be satisfied with second honors.

* * *

A couple of weeks ago we spotted Al Williams dancing to the music of Griff Williams' orchestra at the Mark Hopkins. At first we just charged it to the law of averages that there could be two guys named Williams in the same room, but a second look showed a definite resemblance. It is bothering us immensely, so will you own up Al? Is he your brother? (Watch for the answer in the next issue.)

Presidential Notes

By Bob Fex

We wish to express our heartiest welcome to all old students returning and to the many new freshmen who are entering the portals of our junior college for the first time.

Great things were done last semester by our predecessor, Don Mix, and the spirit showed by the student body was very gratifying, but that was last semester. This year we are looking forward to the biggest and best one ever, and it is up to each individual student to do his part. The men's and women's organizations of the college have planned events for the freshmen and 100% attendance is expected.

Monday was spent in acquainting newcomers with our campus (!). Yesterday students had a chance to witness our instructors in action in their gruelling softball contest with the Block Letter Society.

Tonight things really get under way with the huge night rally at the Galileo auditorium. A great program has been arranged by the rally committee and it will be well worth your while to attend. Immediately following the rally class elections will be held; this is a new procedure and we are looking forward to the best turnout at class elections since the beginning of the junior college. So be sure to come to the rally and be ready to nominate and vote for your class officers.

Tomorrow afternoon in the women's gymnasium a general get-together for freshman women is being held, soponsored by the W. A. A., assisted by the other women's organizations.

AFTER DARK

By John Ward

Some time ago it was announced that Hollywood was on the verge of belching forth some hard, glittering truth. There followed some flag raising and some preparations for turning the other cheek. The publicity blurbs came thick and fast with the director made out to be the big bad wolf of the ungood things in life; a man with the courage of the Lone Ranger and the mind of Zola.

We forget who the man was but the picture he directed was called "Blockade" and they are picketing it in New York and a few other towns these days.

Now, we should very much like to know what anyone can see in "Blockade" to censor. In the first place it is made up of something like ten plots —all of them leading in opposite directions: the evils of drink, why a lady can't be happy with a peasant, why she can, how to make the army pay, etc. And nowhere do the ideas of peace or war receive any kind of sustained treatment, no actually vehement denouncement or acclimation. There is so much plot that there is little time left for propaganda save in occasional comments and scenes.

To be sure, there are certain episodes where starving children are seen begging for pennies—but such unpleasant scenes are quickly forgotten in the burly of the spy chase that follows. Even the "terrible" bombings add nothing but a new angle to the love interest.

As for the final cry for peace with which "Blockade" ends—it falls absolutely flat because it has no build up. It is a bit like someone telling you about monkey heaven and then suddenly exclaiming; "Down with the teamster's union!" This is the whole trouble with "Blockade," it has no consistency. It is as much for love at first sight as it is against starving a city of civilians during a war.

And so, we'd like very much to know how the Catholic Worker and the Knights of Columbus can find "Blockade" so full of awful war propaganda? And what would they do is an honest, full gutted presentation of the horrors of war were to be made—a film 100% for peace? Would they run for their signs and parade like mad in the name of some strange cause, rolling up their sleeves for the name of unliberty and so forth? Well, they did it for "Blockade."

We would have a good deal less contempt for them, however, if they were picketing "Blockade," not because it is bad propaganda—but because it's just plain bad cinema. Hollywood obviously set out to make a picture primarily attacking the barbarous methods used in the current Spanish civil war. But it appears to us that Hollywood lacked the actual intestinal fortitude to see a fine intention to its real conclusion.

RAM'S HORN

Purpose Outlined; Registration Praised

There isusually something occuring in the college that raises someone's ire. The same is true of almost every issue of The Guardsman. There's bound to be something that will make some reader go wild with rage. To afford an opportunity to "let off steam" this department, the Ram's Horn, exists.

As in most cases there are certain rules that must be followed before your little comment will see the light of print.

The letters must bear the signatures of the author but upon request the writer's name will not be published. Names will be kept absolutely secret upon request.

Students and faculty sending in their comments are urged to avoid lengthy letters as space is limited. Say what you have to say in a few words. Your argument, or compliment, will have a better chance of getting into the paper and will have a much better effect upon the readers.

Messages should be put in The Guardsman boxes at the Powell Street office and the mail box office at Galileo, or in The Guardsman office, W. J., opposite room 261 in the Galileo High School building.

Many a battle has been fought in these columns, though there is a question as to whether any have been won. That is something that only each individual reader can decide.

Wanna get somethin' off your chest? Are you breathing hard? Blow the Ram's Horn, a sure cure is guaranteed!

—The Editor

Dear Editor:

As a newcomer to this junior college, I would like to use the columns of your publication to voice my whole-hearted approval of the very efficient and orderly manner in which registration here is carried on. My experience with such procedure in other institutions which I have attended led me to expect a period of confusion and chaos, but I was pleasantly surprised to find that the whole process of registration is conducted with such smoothness that it becomes almost a pleasure.

The simple and workable system used here is an advantage in more ways than one. Besides its fundamental important function, that of making the process of arranging a program less complex, it undoubtedly must make a good impression on new students, many of whom expect to undergo an ordeal. Getting off to a good start is important in anything, and a registrant can scarcely help having a more cheerful outlook if he is able to get under way with a maximum of effort and bother.

In my opinion, the entire group responsible for this condition is entitled to the gratitude and appreciation of the student body.

—Old-Timer

In the evening the Men's Club is holding its smoker for all new men students and it will be to the advantage of every man to attend.

Friday afternoon is the time for the traditional brawl and it is the time when the frosh will get a chance to show their power and may even beat the sophs and win the trophy; they did win, once.

Friday evening the week's activities will be brought to a very pleasant close with an enormous semi-formal dance in the Colonial room of the St. Francis Hotel. Very good music has been secured and everyone will spend an enjoyable evening.

The one thing that will determine the success of this orientation week is attendance so make up your mind to participate. You will not be sorry and you will not soon forget your first Orientation week.

FUNNY? Some Thought So

"I'm tired of this routine existence," exclaimed the fraternity brother to his roommate. "Let's do something extraordinary, startling, magnificent; something that will make our brains whirl, our pulses throb, and our hearts leap."

"Oke," replied the roommate. And so they studied.

By Fred Vast

Just in case you might have missed it, the finest example of genuine American liberalism was given last week by A. L. Wirin, one of Southern California's outstanding "radical" lawyers.

Wirin, whose principles are in almost direct opposition to the Los Angeles Times in every case, appeared in court Friday to speak at the trial of the Times on contempt of court. Said he:

"Attorney T. B. Cosgrove, for The Times, said yesterday that he considers it 'the finest daily journal in the English language,' I consider it the worst."

After which he proceeded to defend The Times for its action in printing articles about certain trials, holding that the constitutional guarantee of freedom of the press covered the case.

There is true Americanism—defending an enemy for a democratic principle. How cheap and shoddy windshield stickers look alongside such an action!

—Azusa Herald.

Yes, and how cheap and shoddy do some of our "great" journals and individuals look in their examples of intolerance while they rant about saving American liberty and democracy. Wirin and the organization he represents, the American Civil Liberties Union, have often been attacked by institutions like the L. A. Times because of their defense of radicals.

It was just a few years ago that Wirin went to Imperial Valley to defend some labor leaders and he was thrown out of the district, his car being smashed and he barely escaping with his life. Despite such un-American assaults, Wirin and his organization have not been deterred in their purpose. Recently the A. C. L. U. defended Harry Bridges, arch-enemy of the Times.

They are not defending any person or organization because they agree with its aim or objectives, but because they see a threat to democracy in the various attempts of one group to quell another.

This is a group that deserves the praise of every believer of liberty and democracy. It is doing something that most of us would never think of doing or have the courage to do, defend our enemies. Wirin and his group are performing a real service for what most of us mouth phrases about but never act upon.

That is an example of genuine liberalism.

The main thing here is that persons and institutions like The Times don't really need the aid of men like Wirin because they have plenty of money to hire legal counsel. The ones who really need this aid are the labor, liberal, and radical groups which don't have vast financial resources. And so the Union is always being attacked for its radicalism when it is perhaps the outstanding defender of democratic rights.

But that's nothing new, advocates of progress and liberty have always been maligned and labeled radicals. Only later has their true value been recognized.

RAMblings

By JACK SCHMALE

The footballs are out of the mothballs once again, and close to 75 very welcome grid candidates of sundry experience are rapidly assuming the proportions of the most impressive squad it has been Russ Sweet's privilege to direct during four years of fall campaigning under the Ram banner.

Funston Field, for the past seven noon-times, has been the scene of spirited workouts in preparation for a grueling ten-game schedule, the most ambitious pigskin program Sweet and his co-mentors have attempted in their respective careers at the college.

A squint at the daily practice sessions reveal a distinguished looking gathering. There are transfers, frosh, veterans, reserves of varsity and Flying Lamb heritage and around 25 aspirants who have yet to respond to the tweet of the Referee's whistle in actual combat.

Just who can wear the label of "most outstanding" among the candidates is a question Sweet and his mentoring mates will not attempt to answer.

* * *

* * *

The capacity of this column is not sufficient to bestow even bare mention of each and every individual falling into the "frosh talent" category. However, among those with established reputations in local prep circles are Frankie Nilan, ex-Balboa halfback galloper; George Jones, Lowell tackle; Tom Regan, 190 pounds of all-city tackle from Galileo in 1934; Dan Baker, who quarterbacked for Poly; Al Flaherty, St. Ignatius tackle; and Jim Hickson, guard and George Jensen, fullback, both from Mission High.

* * *

In the transfer division, U. S. F. contributes a pair of de luxe halfbacks, 175 pound tri-threat, and Les "Mush" Mullins, a small consignment of greased lightning, who passes and carries the ball with finesse. St. Mary's sends Art Ringholm, 180 pound end, formerly with Balboa High, while San Jose State's offering is fiery Andy Moore, who held down the center spot at Lowell. The well known mite, Frankie Verducci, is a product of San Mateo J. C., and will vie with cousin Johnnie for the signal calling assignment. Urban "Shackle-foot" Mason played tackle for Iowa U. Frosh.

* * *

From outside communities come Larry Patton, all-city center from Oakland Tech; Frank Davenport, University end; Bill Lohson, guard from the same school; Jim Carroll, another center from Hanford; Terry Sandelin, guard from Ukiah, and many others.

* * *

Perhaps the best way to acquaint potential rooters with the squad is to suggest a visit to Funston Field any one of these days between noon and 2 o'clock. In fact today might be a very opportune occasion, as the initial scrimmage is slated to start around 1 o'clock.

* * *

In case you miss the workouts, come around Saturday and see the inter-squad game at Galileo Field, tentatively set for 2 o'clock. Sweet plans a regular contest, with four teams participating, although the respective elevens will not be determined by any special category, but picked on ability.

* * *

The gridders will bear the click of the Pullman wheels over a traveling schedule measuring almost 3,000 miles this fall. After meeting Cal. frosh in a preliminary to the Bear vs. St. Mary's game September 24, the boys will jaunt to Los Angeles October 14, and partake of Thanksgiving turkey in Ogden, Utah, immediately after measuring Weber College by six or eight touchdowns. October 21 will see another 200 miles clicked off en route to Sacramento.

* * *

Possibility of stretching the schedule to eleven games lies in the answer of the College authorities to pleas of Marin J. C. for a gridiron get-together on November 4, presently designated as a week of rest or open date. The addition of Marin, a pretty fair rival in its day, to a heavy schedule, however, is not likely.

Prospects For Successful Season Considered Good

Many Returning Vets Boost Hopes of Grid Squad

Thudding of pigskins against leather and the grunts emitted by colliding players sounded again last week at Funston Field, as football practice, under the direction of Russ Sweet, got under way with some 70 candidates striving for recognition.

Bolstered by several returning veterans from last year's squad and with a number of potent newcomers, the Rams spent the first week in running through light drills and concentrating on fundamentals, with the first actual scrimmage scheduled for today or tomorrow.

Sweet and his assistants, Lee Eisan and Jack Gaddy, hopes that the scrimmage will give a definite impression of the team's ability in actual competition and an idea of which combinations perform most efficiently together. No definite selection of a first team has been made, as yet, however.

Veterans Return

Back for another season are Bob Fex, left half and passer de luxe, and Walt Boitano, crashing eagle-beaked fullback, both of whom are regarded as almost certain starters in the Ram backfield. Fex, laid low by injury last year, is reported to be in good shape, while Boitano is at present the chief hope as a line-smasher.

The Verduccis, Johnny and Frank, are definite threats for backfield positions for the second time, while veteran linemen are "Moon" Burke, burly guard, Mel Peterson, all-conference center last year, and Bud Wiechers, the Apollo-like end whose place-kicking ability is expected to garner many a point before the season ends.

Nelson Switched

Stan Beirwidth, Fuzzy Swanson, and Art Nelson also return, the first two to battle for tackle spots and Nelson to try his hand as an end, although he performed as a halfback last year.

With these old-timers as a nucleus, Sweet hopes to build a team with the more proficient of the new arrivals and graduates from last year's goofs. He expected to secure an eleven that will function as a unit.

"With these veterans, and with the new talent coming in, San Francisco should be able to present a strong line-up by the time the season opens," said Sweet, "and if we get our share of the breaks, I see no reason why the season should not be a successful one."

"DUTCH" CONLAN

"Now," said the lad to his father at the college football game, "you'll see more excitement for two dollars than you ever saw before."

"I don't know," replied the old gent, "that's what my marriage license cost me."

—Arizona Kitty Kat

ROYAL FLUSH

What's in the cards for Russ Sweet and his gridiron forces this season? Only time will tell, but the five stalwarts pictured above will undoubtedly have something to say about it. They are: Ace, Johnny Verducci; King, Bob Fex; Queen, Walt Boitano; Jack, "Red" Hanrahan; and the tenspot represents another of the Verducci clan, Frank. All are candidates for backfield positions, and are relied upon to take many a trick for the Rams this season.

Marksmen To Shoot Intercollegiate Competition

Intercollegiate matches in addition to the usual league shoots will feature the fall season of Bill Hancock's Rifle and Pistol teams, it was learned late yesterday.

"A Central California Junior College League is being formed and regular shoots will begin soon," said Hancock. "Also, we expect to keep up the rivalries which were instituted last year in postal matches with Eastern Universities."

As usual, the college Rifle and Pistol Club will enter two teams in the San Francisco Small-Bore League "which has just reason to fear the local marksmen," said Hancock.

Women Eligible

Any student member of the Rifle and Pistol Club is eligible for positions on these teams. This includes both men and women. Although a good number of veterans are returning, there are still openings on all of the teams for both managers and shooters. More information can be had by seeing any of the club officers or by calling at the rifle range in the Galileo basement any afternoon but Wednesday.

It was also pointed out that membership in the club is the only requisite for shooting on the teams although enrollment in the rifle classes is also desirable.

Socially Active

Besides all of the above mentioned shooting activities, the Rifle and Pistol Club is considered to be one of

Soccer, Bowling Under Way As Coaches Train Men For Fall Competition

Amori Signs Up Record List of Kegglers; Plans Season

With a larger number of enrollees than ever before, Physical Education classes in bowling got under way last Monday under the direction of "Coach" Joe Amori. Held four days a week at the Golden Gate Recreation alleys on Jones Street, the classes are reported filled to capacity, and Amori has high hopes of organizing a team capable of making a showing in several Bay Region tournaments which he plans on entering.

A new institution in the college athletic field last semester, bowling has become one of the most popular activities offered, especially since last semester's team succeeded in placing high up in the big Inter-State tournament at San Jose in May. This year the classes have been divided into two sections, one for the advanced bowlers, which will include veterans from last semester and especially proficient newcomers, and one for beginners, for those who have had no previous experience in the sport but are desirous of learning.

Amori plans on organizing a team to represent the college from the more expert of his pupils, using as a nucleus several veterans from his "champions" of last spring and building around them with whichever newmen show to best advantage. Outstanding pin-smashers who return to bolster the Ram line-up are Dick Simpers, Hugh Waite, Walt Leporsky, Lou Reinthaler, and Sylvester McAtee, all of whom have distinguished themselves in competition and are counted upon to act as mainstays for the rest of the squad.

No definite selection of a first team has been made yet, as final choice will be based upon average scores made during class. Those bowlers with the highest averages over a period of time will comprise the first team, and it is possible that a second team will also be sent to some of the events in which Amori plans to enter his keglers.

Block SF Meets

Main topic of discussion was a dance to be given later in the year. The night following the Pasadena football game has been set as a tentative date.

A committee was appointed to make arrangements for the dance with Walter "Moose" Boitano in charge of preparations.

Officers for the society for this semester are Treacy Slattery, president, Walter Boltano, vice-president, and Bud Wiechers, secretary treasurer.

Wilson To Try Second Title Year; Few Vets Return

With several able veterans of last season returning and a number of promising newcomers out for the squad, Coach Tom Wilson started practice for the soccer team last week at Funston Field.

Defending titlists for the second consecutive year, the Ram booters are scheduled to collide with several of the local high school squads in "warm-up" contests before the conference season opens.

Experienced players from last year's eleven include Jim Mull, who went through the season at outside left and was ranked as one of the best defensive men in the league, Frank O'Connor, all-conference right

LOCALS SCORE WIN IN WEEK-END TOURNEYS

Helen Crienkovich led the parade of local athletes into the win column last week-end as the Rams turned in brilliant performances in open competition.

Miss Crienkovich, her cheeks flushed with fever, entered the finals of the Far Western Springboard for women on Sunday, easily triumphing over Ruth Jump, Los Angeles, who had beaten Helen on Saturday.

In third place of the same event was Patsy Robinson. Both women competed for the Fairmont plunge. Also in the swim meet was Marion Falconer, representing the Crystal plunge, placing fourth in the 100 meter back stroke.

Harold Wagner, number one man on the varsity tennis squad and Junior Davis Cup player, won the junior boys' title in the City championships. He defeated Ronald Edwards 6-2, 12-10, 6-4.

An Englishman returning from a trip to America was telling some of his English friends of the interesting things he did while in America. He told his friends about the time he went to a movie. "They play some of the [illegible] games in America, especially in the moving picture houses."

"What is it called?"

"I really don't know the exact name, but I think they call it 'Oh, hell'."

"OH, hell? What kind of game is that?"

"Well, as you go in they give you a card with a lot of numbers on it, and during intermission a man gets on the stage and calls out some more nubers. Soon somebody yells 'Bingo!' and everyone else in the audience yells 'Oh, hell!'."

—Kitty Kat

Marin Withdraws Junior College Competition

With the withdrawal of Marin last spring, the 1938 football edition of the Northern California Junior College Conference will be a "vest pocket" volume.

Only San Francisco, incidentally defending the grid title with co-holder Sacramento, the Panthers, Modesto and San Mateo remain, leaving but three conference games for each contender.

Sacramento and the Rams will be well equipped for their mutual defense of the crown, which should be settled in the Capital City on October 21. While the locals lost a representative number of veterans last season, their respective places will be amply filled by an impressive group of frosh newcomers and sophomore transfers.

The Panthers claimed a powerful squad last season, and will have many aces returning for another attempt at first place. Modesto will have fair material, while Murius McFadden has few veterans returning at San Mateo.

Women Buy Costumes

An increasing number of women students have purchased the regulation costume for sports. It consists of shirt and shorts in white and red, the college colors. Entering students are requested to purchase them. The tennis classes have adopted this uniform almost entirely.

Newcomers Show Promise As Coming Gridiron Stars

Mullins, Diehl, Hanrahan Fight For Posts In Backfield

By DICK SIMPERS

If any stock is to be taken in early season indications, the outlook for Coach Russ Sweet's football forces this year is rosy indeed. Never before has such an array of new gridiron talent gladdened the eyes of the Ram mentor.

Backs and linemen in profusion flock daily out to Funston Field, among them many of last year's outstanding prep stars and a number of highly promising transfers from other colleges. Should these newcomers come up to expectations, it seems likely that some of last year's veterans may be hard put to retain their positions on the first eleven.

Diel Promising

Leading the new backfield candidates is Ray Diel, the 190-pound blond Adonis who was the mainstay of last season's Poly High team. A fullback, Diel bids fair to give the veteran Walt Boitano a real tussle for starting honors at this position, while another former Polyite, Dan Baker, is performing to distinct advantage in the backfield. Although he is not a newcomer, this is Baker's first year out, and he may become a fixture at either quarterback or right half.

Two transfers from U. S. F., Les Mullins and "Red" Hanrahan, are also in the thick of the fight for varsity backfield berths, at left and right half respectively. Hanrahan is not eligible for conference competition, but is expected to see plenty of action in non-conference games, which comprise the bulk of the schedule.

Lowell Boys Shine

Andy Moore, diminutive ace from Lowell High, is among the leaders in the race for the quarter-back post, where Sweet hopes to turn his speed and elusiveness to good advantage.

LEE EISAN

Another ex-Lowell player, George Jones, will probably annex a first-string berth at one tackle, while Tom Regan is the outstanding candidate to act as his running mate. Regan is from Galileo. Both men performed creditably in the prep loop last year, and appear to have the inside track on the other aspirants, although Ed McGovern, versatile lineman from Poly, looms as a possibility.

Urban Mason, Iowa transfer, is expected by some to crash the first team before long at tackle or end, while Art Ringholm of Balboa is among the foremost bidders for a flank spot.

WOMEN'S SPORT PARADE . . . . girls only please

By CAROL PICKERING

With more women registered in sports this semester in three days than in any one semester in former years, the Associated Women Students and the Women's Athletic Association are welcoming the freshmen women to the college with a rally tomorrow afternoon in the girl's gym at Galileo High School.

Fun and entertainment will begin at two-thiry and last until five. All of the oldsters are anxious to meet the new women, and according to reports, have prepared a spirited reception.

* * *

WAA sign up begins today and will continue until September 2. Students taking elementary sports should go to class the first day, WAA prexy Margaret Parks advises. Freshmen are not restricted to freshmen activities only but may sign for as many sports as they want. Women are allowed to go into advance rifle and pistol this semester, which opens a new field. Folk dancing and Hockey-Soccer are also new courses.

Equitation, which begins Friday, will be held at the San Francisco Riding Academy at Stanyan and Haight streets instead of the St. Francis Academy as was indicated in the College catalogue. Anyone who is taking equitation, whether for fun or credit, should go to the first meeting so as to gain full instruction. The horses couldn't wait for WAA sign ups so a moonlight ride is in the planning for the first night with a full moon.

* * *

The social dancing class has a promising enrollment, according to co-instructor Vera Spencer. Only absolute beginners are allowed to enroll, which ought to draw out the more timid folk of this learned institution.

* * *

Another badminton class has been created for students who were unable to sign up the first part of the week. It will be held on Friday afternoon from 2:30 until 5 in the girl's south gym at Galileo.

NEW STUDENTS URGED TO JOIN SCHOLASTIC, SOCIAL ACTIVITIES

By Dorothy Trood

If the new students of the college have not heard about the various clubs and activities going on, they soon will. All the clubs are anxious for the new student to enroll in a club or group which will afford him a little social life or work in his vocational field.

There are many language clubs for all who are interested in Spanish, French, German, Italian, Chinese, and Japanese. These various clubs enjoy dinners, plays, movies, and get-to-gethers. The days and time of meetings are posted on the bulletin board of the Powell Street building.

Shooters Organized

Membership in the Rifle and Pistol Club is open to both men and women for nominal dues. Shooting facilities with expert coaching is available for all members.

Members of the Army and Navy Club do not restrict themselves to work in this college alone, but they participate in and are active members of the Organized Reserve, Citizens Military Training Corps, National Guard, and the Naval and Marine Reserves.

Musicians, Astronomers, Athletes

Students are urged by Flossita Badger to join the Music Club. Little or no experience is required as the songs rendered are fairly simple. There is also a chorus for Men and Women, and the A Cappella Choir.

For all women taking a Physical Education Major, there is the Physical Education Club which is very active and takes part in sports with other colleges.

If you are interested in Astronomy, see the stars with the Astronomical Society. The members receive one unit of university credit for the time spent.

Both men and women students are eligible for membership in the Geology Club. The fall semester will consist of field trips, lectures and various events furthering the interest of geology and mineralogy.

There is the Newman Club for all Catholic students and all who are not of that denomination are also invited to attend. Last semester the Newman Club sponsored several social affairs.

All students who are interested in Home Economics will find it very profitable to become associated with the group. The organization visits various stores during the semester and invites several guest speakers to talk before the club. The Home Economics classes are also invited.

With a record breaking sign-up of new students this semester, the sororities and fraternities of the college are busy getting their pledge lists ready for the new semester.

Economists, Artists, Foresters

Omicron Phi Pi, college economics honor society, is open to all those who have completed six units of economics and who have a "B" average. Anyone who is eligible and who wishes to join the society should contact Dr. Michael Zarchin, faculty sponsor of the organization or one of the members at once.

Aim of the Sketch Club is to conduct and carry on field trips for the purpose of landscape painting, to attend current exhibitions in a group and to conduct social events, particularly pertaining to landscape painting. Any interested are invited to join.

The college Forestry Club is fast becoming completely organized, and all who are interested in this subject are cordially invited to sign up. There are many interesting speakers on the subject of trees and this club should be attended by all who are interested in Forestry.

All Pre-medical, pharmacy, and pre-nursing students are urged to join the Pi Mu Gamma, the college pre-medical fraternity. Meetings are on Wednesday evenings at members' homes. See Mr. Noble, faculty adviser, for information regarding membership.

Newman Club Meets Monday Night

According to President Dave Johnson, the Newman Club will meet for the first time this semester on Monday night, August 29, at 8 o'clock in the basement of St. Mary's Cathedral. Main order of business will be to plan for a Welcome Frosh meeting to be held in the near future. All old members are requested to attend.

For Thinkers

For those people who like to spend their spare time in heavy concentration the Chess Club should answer their desire in a nice way.

Students interested in discussing current and vital topics will find that the Forum Club is the place for their arguing and contacts. First meeting of the group will be held Friday night, September 2, at the home of William Goss, economics instructor. Subject before the house will be "Decline of the West."

Faculty members are banded together in the Faculty Association. Their activity includes luncheons, and listening to outside speakers. English instructor Edward Sandys won a close election race last semester to become president.

College Has More Campuses Than London University

San Francisco Junior College has a scoop on the University of London, one of the largest institutions of higher learning, Paul J. Pitman, assistant to President A. J. Cloud, revealed in a recent interview.

The University of London has but seventeen campuses in the whole of London, while S. F. J. C. boasts of eighteen!

Pitman declared that among many improvements made at the Powell Street building the one of greatest interest to the students is the redecoration, installation of indirect lighting and sound proofing of the study hall.

Because of the large increase in enrollment, the halls, stairways, and washrooms are unduly crowded. It is, therefore, more than necessary for student to follow the one basic rule of conduct, consideration of the other fellow," Pitman pointed out.

In conclusion, Pitman stated that during the three years that the San Francisco Junior College has been in the Powell Street building, there has occurred less damage to property, accidental or otherwise, than occurs in the average high school in one month.

Lockers will soon be installed at the Palace of Fine Arts for the convenience of College tennis players. Bertha Keller and Lewis Conlan are to be thanked for this. An equipment cabinet has already been installed for racquets, especially those belonging to commuters.

The enthusiasm for fall sports has become contagious, in that enrollments have swelled beyond the average mark. Could it be that the energetic coeds want to show off a summer tan? Achery is as popular as ever with badminton running a close second.

Students interested in play and recreation might find a desirable vocation in it. The college has great possibilities in recreation and training. A course has been set up to coordinate with the Community Commission of Recreation, the members of which have been generous in creating and providing facilities for this type of training. Four new courses, listed under recreation, in the college catalogue, will be introduced this fall. There is still opportunity to sign up for them.

the most socially active organizations in college. Dances, parties, weenie-bakes, ice and roller-skating parties are but few of the activities planned and carried out each semester by the large membership of over one-hundred college men and women.

President of the club is Howie Markovits, who has recently issued an invitation to the college at large to "join the club, learn to shoot under capable instructors, and take part in the numerous social affairs."

Club Affiliation Begins To Function

Newest addition to local student government and brain child of last semester's Mix Administration, the Club Affiliation has commenced to function as an important cog in the college machine.

Officially called the Club Advisory Board, the affiliation was formed in order that there be a central authority for all college organizations and to thereby give those organizations a voice in the student administration.

As the first step, the Affiliation elected as its president and delegate to the Executive council John Julius, of Guardsman and Rifle Team fame. Also chosen were vice-president Merv Wiener of the Block Society and Gordon Sollman of the Army-Navy Club as Secretary.

Duties Explained

Actual duties of the Affiliation are to award charters to new organizations, to check up on old club organizations to see that they have been filling requirements and to act as a clearing house for all organizational matters.

According to Julius, the first fall semester meeting will be held next Friday with several important matters on the docket already. Advisers and officers of the various chartered and unchartered clubs are urged to see that their organizations are represented. However, only chartered groups have a vote.

Qualifications Listed

Julius also made it known that the following qualifications still hold for charter granting:

1) An organization must have 15 active members.

2) An organization must have at least two regularly announced meetings a semester.

3) An organization must have a faculty sponsor.

4) An organization must have an outlined program of activities planned.

Julius pointed out that old organizations must show that they currently fulfull the requirements and that blanks will be handed out at the next meeting for a check-up.

Dean's Message

GREETINGS!

The increased enrollment in our junior college indicates a lively interest and friendly feeling on the part of our students. I know I speak for the faculty when I say that this interest and friendly feeling is mutual.

Our student body activities are sufficiently broad that each student should be able to find some interest in addition to his classroom work in which he could develop himself.

It is my hope that the office of the Dean of Men will be used by every student in furthering his junior college objectives. It is an opportunity if you will identify yourself with the social activities of our program. It is an opportunity for you, as well as for others, and you will be rendering a service to the San Francisco Junior College through your participation.

The office of the Dean of Men is always open to you. It will be a pleasure to meet you and serve you in any way possible.

EDWIN C. BROWNE,
Dean of Men

New Instructors Supplement Faculty

New Instructors appointed to the faculty of the college during the summer, are Thomas Porter, Fred McFarland, Marie Weller, William Marsh and Robert Prout. Porter and Prout, of the University of California, were appointed to the Botany department, Prout also instructing Zoology classes. McFarland will be adviser in the study hall and assist in physical education, Marsh will teach Salesmanship, Insurance and Merchandising.

Marie Weller, from George Washington High School will assume the Management of the Reserve Book Room. She is also chairman of the Pageant Committee for the school department participation in the 1939 exposition.

Peace Society Active During Summer

Summer was no barrier to anti-war activity for the College Peace Society, as that organization turned towards cooperation with civic groups in preparation for two conventions.

The Society joined the San Francisco Peace Counell, an organization of all city organizations opposed to armed conflict, on invitation of the Council's executive committee.

Ray Valdez, former junior college peace leader, and Miriam Frazier and Dorothy Pilgrim, Peace Society officers, are members of the Youth Committee of the World Alliance for International Friendship through the Churches. That body is now preparing for the American Goodwill Congress which will convene in San Francisco during the week of November 6 to 11.

One thousand young people are expected to attend the sessions which will be held in the Palace Hotel. Adult delegates from all parts of the world will be available as speakers throughout Northern California.

The College's pacifists also aided in preparations for the meeting welcoming two Chinese delegates enroute to the World Youth Congress, which is now conducting sessions at Vassar College.

President Bob Porter announced that "all students interested in studying the methods of maintaining peace and carrying on activity for peace are invited to join the Society." The group will hold its first conclave September 8 at Porter's home, 3234 Pacific Avenue.

half, and Wilton Latz, forward. Although hard hit by the loss of such outstanding stars as Eddie Fredlani, Mike Klebanoff, Walt Leporsky, and "Sandy" Lim, Wilson has hopes of assembling an aggregation capable of successfully defending the laurels which the Rams have held for the past two years.

There are still several positions to be filled, however, according to Wilson, and anyone who wishes to try out for the team may still do so with a good chance for success. Practice is held at Funston every day from 1:00 to 2:30 and players receive regular physical education credit.

Psychologist Explains Tests

Aiding students to select their respective vocation is one of the major problems of the psychology department of the college, according to Harold Luenberger, college psychology instructor.

The psychology department endeavors to gather enough knowledge about the abilities of a student to make it possible for the faculty adviser to use this information and to guide the student into a vocation which will suit his abilities.

Information is derived from a series of five tests. Subject A Examination, The Strong Vocational Interest Test, Psychological Examination, High School Achievement Test and a Reading Test.

Subject A

The test which concerns the student moft is the Subject A Examination. If the student fails to pass this test, he is required to take a course variously entitled English A or Subject A, which deals with grammar and sentence structure. This test is passed by an average of about one of three students.

Combined with the preceding test is a reading test. In this examination, the student reads a paragraph in a limited number of minutes and answers questions on the material read. For students who do poorly in this quiz there is a course, Psychology 50, which increases the speed and comprehension of reading. This course is not required, but it is advantageous to a student to learn to read rapidly and intelligently, educators believe.

"So much reading is required in college, the student who can read and assimilate the most knowledge will in all probability receive the best grades," Luenberger said.

Vocational Interest

One of the most important tests of the group is the Strong Vocational Interest Test, Leuenberger believes. This examination is one of the main factors in aiding the faculty adviser of the student to place him in a suitable vocation. The quiz is several pages long, and is composed of objective questions, some of which are seemingly senseless, but which in reality, help to determine the student's psychological reaction to a certain profession or job. This test is not fool-proof but is a fairly accurate means of reasoning.

All entering students are required to take these examinations and the results may be found by consulting the faculty adviser or the registrar.

REGISTRATION RECORDS BROKEN AS 1843 SIGN FOR FALL TERM

With a new high already set in registration records, the college is preparing for another deluge of entering students this week. "We expect by the end of the week when registration closes to have an enrollment of between 1800 and 2000 students," said J. Paul Mohr, Registrar and Director of Personnel.

After a checkup early this week, it was found that last spring's total had already been surpassed by about 200, the number being 1843 enrollments. The number for the spring semester of 1938 was totaled at figures between 1677 and 1700 enrollees. The college also set a new figure in the records of the institution by welcoming into its halls about 360 freshmen on Tuesday, while the amount swelled close to 600 by Wednesday when more aspiring entrants were received.

"We have had the best reports in the history of the college on the way that the new students have adapted themselves in getting their programs straightened out," Mohr emphasized particularly.

It is estimated that more than six hundred or approximately one-third of the students who have registered this semester live across the bay. Those students who do not return to the residence of their parents or guardians daily are required to secure the approval of Dean Browne for accommodations. The Dean's office has a list of approved accommodations available.

Rules Given

To further increase the record number of students enrolled at the college is the large number of late registrants expected at the deadline of the registration period tomorrow and Friday.

All students who have changed their addresses since registration are required to inform the Registrar's office.

Students are responsible for the courses checked on their trial study lists and will not be given credit for any others. If a student fails to appear in a class and does not take out a drop slip, he will automatically receive an "F" grade at the end of the semester. Students are also reminded by the Registrar's office to file their registration books on or before the date stamped on the cover.

Holidays will make the semester six days shorter. One day each for Labor Day, Admission Day, Columbus Day, and Armistice Day, and two days to eat Thanksgiving meals will give students brief respites from their classes.

Several Groups Meet This Week; Join An Activity Now

Vol. VII WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 31, 1938 No. 2

College Uses 22 Locations For Learning

Most recent survey of the numerous plants now being used to harbor classes of San Francisco Junior College reveals that there are no less than 22 different locations to which students must wend their way one time or another in search of education. Spread over practically the entire city, these combine to give the college one of the largest campuses in the world, and undoubtedly the most variegated one.

Familiar to all, of course, are the extension Building at 540, Powell Street and Galileo High School, which two house a large majority of all students enrolled, but a little less well-known are some of the more remote corners of the metropolis where the pursuit of learning is carried on by the instructors and their disciples.

Plant Lore Flourishes

There is, for example, the greenhouse at 23rd Avenue and Quintara Street where floriculture classes delve into plant lore; there is the Lick-Wilmerding Building in the Mission where engineering students trek to run down the intricacies of that science, and there is, of course, 447 Sansome Street, the print shop where grimy journalists spend their Saturdays slopping paste about and snipping diligently away with scissors so the Wednesday's Guardsman will be ready for the reading public.

Girls' High School is among the more frequented spots, with business classes being held daily until 1 o'clock, while Funston field accommodates the athletically-inclined every morning. NYA offices, study rooms, and the reference library occupy the seventh floor of the Pacific Gas and Electric Building at 447 Sutter, and bowling classes are held four days a week at the Golden Gate Alleys at 115 Jones Street.

Seven More Listed

Women physical Educational students make use of the Y.W.C.A. pool daily for swimming, shoot arrows into targets (sometimes) at Fort Mason, and bat tennis balls at the Palace of Fine Arts. Riding classes sally forth from the San Francisco Riding Academy on Stanyan Street on Fridays. Male water-splashers dabble in the North Beach Pool at Lombard and Columbus, while the crew works out on the waters of Yacht Harbor and the tracksters dash along the cinder path at Kezar Stadium.

Hotel and restaurant classes are conducted at Marina Junior High School and at 825 Brannan Street, where students are instructed in the fine points of meat cutting. Radio engineers disport themselves at the Samuel Gompers Trade School, and, until this week, dance lessons were held in the Native Sons' Hall at 414 Mason Street.

And On In the Night

The building at 518 Powell contains the main college library and the women's lounge, and just about winds up the list—Oh, no! There's a class in Industrial Chemistry which is held at Commerce High School at NIGHT!

PICTURES EXPLAINED

Pictured at right are 16 of the 22 locations where students of the college travel to get their education. Reading from top to bottom the various places are:

(1) University of California Extension Division, better known as "Powell Street". (2) The Lombard Street swimming pool, where men students paddle in the water. (3) Lick-Wilmerding Junior College accommodates the engineers. (4) Women play Robin Hood at Fort Mason. (5) Where equitation classes convene. (6) The Palace of Fine Arts houses tennis classes. (7) NYA office, reference library, and study hall on 447 Sutter Street. (8) Pin smashers go through their routine. (9) Galileo and the familiar crowd. (10) Funston field, where college gridders practice. (11) Another Powell shot, headquarters of college library and where women's lounge is located. (12) Green houses come in for their share of education. (13) Radio Engineers use Samuel Gompers Trade School. (14) Crew members use Yacht Harbor. (15) Girls' High School houses the bulk of the business classes. (16) Mermaids swim in the YWCA plunge.

Waite Holds Yell-Leader Tryouts

Galileo Auditorium To Be Scene of Annual Competition

Aspirants for the two assistant yell leading positions, will compete tomorrow afternoon at the Galileo auditorium, before head yell leader Hugh Waite in an effort to be chosen as assistants to him, and as members of the rally committee. "The main purpose of these yell leader tryouts," Waite declared, "is to pick prospective leaders for next year's yell leaders, as this position will increase in importance with the growth of the college."

To those men who are trying out for these positions tomorrow, Waite wishes to announce that they are not necessarily required to lead a college yell. Any high school yell will serve adequately.

Waite Pleased

"We were well pleased with the large turnout at last week's night rally," said Waite. "Many rallies are now being planned for the future. Although not definitely set as yet, the next rally will be held about mid-September."

Twelve newly selected men, outstanding in activities and representatives of various organizations have been chosen by Waite to serve on the rally committee. The two yell leaders who have yet to be chosen and head yell leader Waite will comprise the remainder of the committee whose duty it will be to officiate at rallies and games. The following names are of those men who have been selected as members of the committee: Howard Cloud, Stanley Tobiason, Barney Viner, Eddie Canepa, Frank Verducci, Jack Schmale, Treacy Slattery, Sylvester McAtee, Dave Johnson, Dick Simpers, and Ray Diehl.

David Moonie Awarded Business Scholarship At Chicago University

Climaxing a brilliant collegiate career, David Moonie, honor student of June, 1937, has recently been awarded a full scholarship toward a degree of Master of Business Administration at the University of Chicago.

This latest honor is not the first that has been accredited to Moonie. As honor graduate of this college in 1937, Moonie was designated a scholarship in the University as a business student. Vindicating this choice on the part of the University of Chicago, Moonie distinguished himself in his junior year by boasting a 3.9 in his business student to attain a straight "A" average, and in his senior year by becoming president of the Chicago Alpha Pi chapter of the Phi Kappa Sigma business fraternity.

His latest accomplishment, made possible by Chicago's system of elective examinations in place of course requisements, consisted of passing the senior graduating examinations after only six weeks of study.

Paul M. Pitman, assistant to President Cloud, expressed his approval of Moonie's record declaring, "This proves that Chicago made no mistake in selecting Moonie and that he is well representing our college. His pre-business training, taken here at San Francisco Junior College, was undoubtedly more than adequate and his record speaks well for us."

Forum Club Considers West's Decline Friday

Decline of the west will be discussed by the Forum Club next Friday night, September 2, at the home of William Goss, 1495 Seventh Avenue, accessible by cars N and 6.

This meeting will be the first one of the semester. Leading the discussion will be John Ward and Helen Garby, who will present arguments, pro and con, on the subject. Following the talks the students attending will give their views on the topic.

"Students interested," said Goss, faculty adviser to the group, "are invited to attend the confab and become members. They will find the discussion both informative and stimulating."

ALL 11 O'CLOCK CLASSES TO BE DISMISSED FRIDAY FOR CAMPAIGN MEETING

President Archibald J. Cloud Issues Order After Executive Council Takes Action To Discuss Bonds

Acting on the request of the Executive Council, President Archibald J. Cloud yesterday issued an unprecedented order authorizing the dismissal of all college 11 o'clock classes for a monster student campaign rally Friday morning at Powell Street. Purpose of the assembly will be the launching of a proposed drive to assure the success of the bond issue providing for the second and third units of the new college plant. The issue will be placed before the voters of San Francisco at a special election September 27.

A special meeting of the executive body was called by President Bob Fex on Monday afternoon. It was at this important gathering that plans for the campaign were first discussed, then resolved, and finally, in a swift succession of events, presented to President Cloud for his approval.

Cloud Enthusiastic

The President heartily endorsed the proposal and immediately assured Fex his full co-operation and that of the administration in any undertaking along those lines. The rally was the first move. "This campaign will mark the first opportunity given the students of the new school," said Fex. "It is hoped and trusted that the Associated Students will show their loyalty to San Francisco Junior College and get into the spirit of this worthy cause," he continued.

President Cloud was enthusiastic. "I wish to commend heartily Bob Fex and the members of his Executive Council for their wonderful work in presenting this plan to the students," he exclaimed, "and the purpose of this rally is to discuss, rather than announce, the plans for the campaign."

All Locations Affected

This dismissal order affects not only members of those classes at Powell Street Friday morning, but every meeting in each of the 22 locations of the college, according to Fex.

To accommodate the entire student body, the rally will be held in two divisions, simultaneously, one in the Lower Auditorium and the other in the Lecture Hall at Powell Street. Fex is working with Hugh Waite, college yell leader, today, on a suitable program for the affair.

FEX WORKS TO REDUCE BOOK EXPENSES; PLANS COMMITTEE FORMATION

Associated Students' President Bob Fex declared his intention of appointing a committee to investigate means of reducing book expenditures last week, but at press time he had not yet named its members.

He explained the delay in choosing the group by saying he needed more time to think of possible candidates. Fex decided to act after an editorial which pointed out the situation, appeared in last week's Guardsman, and student protest developed.

Asked what he thought about the proposal, Paul Pitman, assistant to President Cloud, replied: "Appointing a committee to investigate the possibilities of reducing student expenditures is a very good idea. We are very interested in seeing costs reduced and it is pleasing to see the students doing something."

Resentment against high prices has long been an issue in the college. Many arguments have arisen over the problem and various proposals have been made. Fex's action will be the first step taken toward a solution.

"I can see the necessity for something being accomplished," the student president said, "and we will do all within our power to rectify the situation. The committee will make a complete investigation of all angles. Out of the findings we should be able to revise some means of reducing expenses."

Dr. Dexter Featured Speaker at Assembly; Dignitaries Attend

Dr. Walter F. Dexter, State Superintendent of Schools, was the honored guest and head spokesman at the first college assembly of the new semester held last Friday at 10 o'clock in the Lecture Hall.

Dr. Dexter, as guest speaker, was introduced by President A. J. Cloud, as were other dignitaries seated on the speaker's stand, Walter Schmidt, Assistant to the Superintendent; John F. Brady, Chief Deputy Superintendent, and J. P. Nourse, Superintendent of Schools.

Dr. Dexter's subject was: How Can the Group Succeed Without Stifling the Individual? He also spoke on the reverse side of the subject: How Can the Individual Succeed Without Disrupting the Group or Society?

Dr. Dexter stated, "no group should stifle the individual and will never do so if it knows the intrinsic value of said individual. Every person should say to himself, 'I am an individual of intrinsic value and worth'."

Three More Dances Planned For Semester By Social Committee

Omicron Phi Pi To Hold Initial Meeting Tomorrow Evening

Omicron Phi Pi, college economics honor society, will hold its first general members' meeting of the semester tomorrow evening at the home of Dr. Michael Zarchin, faculty adviser of the organization.

Charles Vaughn, president, announced that the committee examining the eligibility of candidates for membership in the society had approved the following people: David Moonie, Albert Graves, and William Hoppie. Initition will be held September 8.

In order to gain admission into the society it is necessary to have completed six units of economics with a grade average of "B" or better.

Plans for the semi-annual dinner are under way, President Charles Vaughn announced.

The bi-weekly meetings of the Omicron Phi Pi feature discussions of current economic subjects of major importance in the world today.

CONSTRUCTION PLANS

To eliminate any confusion that may exist relating to the erection of buildings at the Balboa Park site, Ocean and Phelan Avenues, for the college campus, The Guardsman herewith presents the following information:

1. First building to be constructed is the academic unit for which $900,000 has already been set aside. The foundation and grading are completed.

2. Second in order of construction will be two buildings to house the college gymnasiums, for which $500,000 is included in the Bond Issue to be voted September 27.

Book Expense Committee Should Investigate Thoroughly

CONSIDERABLE interest has been expressed in the idea of something constructive being done to reduce book expenditures. At last action is being taken towards remedying a pressing student problem, President Bob Fex is appointing a committee to make a study of the situation.

Since it is already too late in the semester to institute some form of cost saving enterprise a student investigating body is the only reasonable form of action. If a used book exchange or some other money saving project were organized now it would likely be faulty in many aspects because of the lack of time for making complete plans. Besides, the time element of almost all business having been transacted during the first two weeks of the semester is an obstacle. If an enterprise is to be successful it must start to function as soon as registration begins.

The investigating committee must not leave one stone unturned in its research on this highly important matter, one that vitally affects the entire student body. Student cooperatives at nearby institutions, used book exchanges, and similar undertakings should all be carefully studied. Queries should be made of the administration, faculty, students, and outside commercial interests.

When the committee is ready to report to the Associated Students' executive council, it should not only have made a complete study of the problem but should submit all the facts for consideration. In light of whatever evidence the group unearths specific recommendations should be made as to what can be done to reduce expenses, just how the project should be organized.

This is one of the most important tasks the student administration has ever undertaken. Everything should be done to make the job a successful one. It is an excellent opportunity for something constructive being accomplished.

It is the duty of the entire student body at large to cooperate, assist, aid and encourage the investigating committee to make a step in the direction of the solution of a problem which has long been a sore spot to the college. Although the results may be of no immediate benefit this semester they will be invaluable later.

A good beginning has been made, let's make an even better finish.

Politics And Academic Freedom

WHEN final results of yesterday's primaries are tabulated there should be a few good candidates left in the field to contest office. The final outcome should result in competent, honest, progressive, and fearless officials being selected.

But politics don't always work as they should, the only assurance for the right kind of office holders being elected is an informed and intelligent voting population. The citizenry must actively participate in the administration of the government, using their power to enforce and promote progressive legislation.

Yesterday's field of candidates probably had as many bad, if not more, as good men. Many are nothing but politicians living off the backs of the people and finding it a very lucrative occupation. One need only read reports of the recent lobbying investigation to know how profitable politics are. A few candidates are sincerely interested in solving the State's problems.

We can only hope that the voters of the state, and the nation, look upon the task of casting a ballot as a very serious and important one, that they make their vote count by actually voting, and see to it that their representatives follow the will of the people and not certain vested interests.

One of the best means of insuring a wide awake and intelligent body politic is for the present generation in the colleges and schools to take an interest in government and in student government now. How they can be interested now may mean much in their future activity as voters.

Develop good citizens today for good government tomorrow. And that means free discussion of all pertinent issues, examining every side of every question. It means encouragement of groups who take up the social problems of today for they are stimulating interest which leads to consideration of problems and ultimate solution.

The student who is eager to discuss merits praise. The ones who say they "are not interested in politics" or say "what can you do" are only to be pitied. Discussion today will probably mean solution tomorrow.

Therefore, it is only logical that academic freedom is an important right for both faculty and students, a right that must not be infringed upon if there is to be progress, if the nation is to continue to grow and develop for the benefit of the people.

Teachers Make Intelligent Approach To Fascist Problem

THE teachers are at it again—discussing the place of education in democracy. One thousand of them from all sections of the country gathered at Columbia University and decided that American education is swayed by fascistic influences. Made by members of the educational system, this is a serious charge.

Actually what they called fascistic influences might not be recognized as such by certain organizations—say the American Legion and the D.A.R. Professor J. H. Newlon, former president of the National Education Association listed eight characteristics of education for Fascism. They are in the teaching only of facts supporting an approved view, the inculcation of fascist ideals and attitudes, a conditioning of obedience, lack of free discussion in the classroom, an autocratic school administration, a limited library, the prohibition of teachers participating in civic life and the law that every teacher must pledge loyalty and subserviance to a controlling group.

Most of the thousand teachers answered in the affirmative when asked if they found any of these characteristics in American schools. They agreed that some schools have all of these characteristics, that most of them have some. There were no case studies or quantitative data introduced at the discussion. Without these the conclusions reached may be easily ignored as just another charge against the nation's schools.

The significance of the conclusions, however, is that the teachers took an intelligent approach to the problem. The threat of democracy via education is not met by name-calling and references to Berlin, Rome or Moscow gold. The threat to democracy is the threat inherent in loyalty oaths and all types of teacher-limitations. It is the threat of group pressure on the educational system.

Congratulations Due Student Promoters

LAST week's orientation activities were the most complete ever offered and were ably managed. Success can be traced to the enthusiasm and willingness to work and participate in the activities.

If the attitude that prevailed last week continues then we are assured of a successful semester of extra-curricular functions. Now that a good start has been made it is easy to sit back and rest on one's laurels, to lose the enthusiasm and the ambition that make for perfection.

Associated Students' officers can be helped to maintain the spirit of activity by wholesale participation in student affairs of old and new, sophomores and freshmen.

Worthwhile watchwords would be improvement and participation. Each project should be better than the last, each activity should have a greater number of students involved.

Orientation week went off with a bang. Congratulations, officers; keep up the good work!

Looks as if the college is off to another series of overcrowded dances this semester judging from last Friday's over-successful social affair. It brought back memories of one of last semester's semi-formal dances when we were in the thick of the 11 o'clock dance mob and felt a strong elbow in our ribs. Turning around, we looked straight into the face of our groceryman who shook our hand and —ASKED WHAT WE WERE DOING AT THE DANCE!

ABOUT AN INHERITANCE

Emil is an old Belgian who lived in a little shack near Chutes at the Beach. His gaunt, ragged figure was a familiar sight at night when the concessions closed. He would gather the discarded cardboard boxes and carry them home to use for a fire in his junk-pile stove. Everyone at the beach knew old Emil and although they treated him well; they never gave him any extra thought.

Came one day when a distant relative died and left to the beggar Emil a sizeable fortune—even when the taxes were taken out. Right away he bought a large country home, an elegant town dwelling and a new Cadillac.

Now Emil comes out to the beach, that is, in the fall, after he is tired of staying in his country home, and shows off his new clothes to the boys at the beach and incidentally, patronizes their games. It's a funny thing but Emil's smart new clothes on his gaunt figure still make him look like a beggar and so he has lost his taste for expensive things. What a man of his age can do with the rest of his money after buying the homes and Cadillac is unpredictable.

Wonder what we would do if we had that much dough thrown in our lap? We don't think it's worth worrying about because if we have any rich relative, it would be just our luck that he isn't aware of our existence.

ABOUT IDEAL GIRLS

It was the custom for the column that occupied this space last semester to carry on a periodical consensus of opinion on what gentlemen prefer. We were just so much dust in the way of that honorable columnist and therefore did not get our two cents worth of comment in. So here's two cents worth:—

The ideal girl
For the college student
Is the girl who belonged
To the guy who sang
"My baby don't care for clothes
"My baby don't care for shows
"My baby just cares for me."

Presidential Notes

By Bob Fex

Orientation week is over, the time has come for us to settle down, keep up in our studies, go to our classes, and do our work.

The Freshmen are to be congratulated upon their fine attendance at the different affairs during Orientation week. Their cooperation was very gratifying and if they will go through the rest of the semester with the same vim and vigor that they showed in the first week we cannot help but have a successful administration.

Also to be congratulated for fine work are the different organizations which handled the affairs of last week so ably. Hughie Waite, our yell leader, for a perfectly swell rally; Mickey Berman, A. M. S. president, for a fine frosh smoker and a great brawl; Miriam Dunne, A. W. S. president, and Peggy Park W. A. A. president, for starting a tradition by getting the women of the college to take a definite part in Orientation week. And last, but not least, to Barbara Randall, our vice president, for an outstanding dance that will be long remembered by those who attended.

AFTER DARK

By John Ward

One of the most amazing discoveries a young musician will make is when he discovers that most professional musicians are appallingly dumb. Not, however, in the sense that they lack brains so much as that they lack any extensive knowledge of their field. And while this condition may not be prevalent in the musical world alone, still music seems to suffer the most extensively.

It is not the dilettante we object to —he is a harmless dabbler who cancels his negative actions with his equally negative thoughts. No, we are dealing with the typical piano teacher, the typical symphony cellist, the typical high school music teacher. One does not expect the dilettante to know much, but for a person who makes his money, and it is considered very respectable money by most, in the field of music to be ignorant of whole sections of his subject! Well, some there are who call music the greatest of the arts.

Unfortunately, there is just enough of the intangible about music to make it an easy mark for the mentally lazy. Nothing exemplifies this better than the every-street-has-one piano teacher with her numerous brood of unhappy children. Often the teacher is unable to play the instrument herself and as for understanding or knowing the theory, history, and repertoire of more than the elemental piano literature—that is an unheard of phenomenon.

And yet such, dare we say, musicians (?) form the vast majority of the American musical world. They never advance beyond their first subscription to "Etude," and they may have gone to some opera or at least one concert many, many years ago. Since then they have stayed away from the opera house as though it bred communists. Ask them who Stravinsky is and they think it's something to eat.

And what's to be done about them? As a matter of fact, what can you do about them. Well, for the teachers—the private kind who brow beat little Willie—it would be excellent if the state made it necessary for all such citizens who desire to augment the files of rank pianists to pass a comprehensive musical examination, before so much as even mentioning a major scale to someone's brat. (Today all an ambitious widow or unemployed high school graduate has to do to gather in the pupils is hang out a shingle and wait.) After all, the only people who want proof of the teacher's abilities are little Willie's parents and they probably know as little about music and the teacher, so

As for ignorance in a performer—the root of that misfortune is not in the performer's approach, so often, as in the school or conservatory he attended. This decade is seeing the first attempts to reform this stupid condition. Too long has it been the practice to teach music like one would teach an apprentice to make shoes. A conservatory has stood for regimentation far too long. (At that, how many teachers and performers reach even the conservatory stage?)

The attitude that music is only a field of teachers and performers should not be taken literally. Let the approach to the art of music be through the channels of appreciation and of evaluation and of theory as well as the technique of performance. When this is accomplished not only will the quality of musical reproduction be improved but the whole attitude of the teacher and pupil, the potential public, be finer and keener.

You have only to heighten and sharpen the critical faculty of the audience and the art will improve and grow and thrive as it cannot do when there is no critical taste to satisfy—too technical a demand to meet.

SO SORRY

Dear Editor:

Upon perusal of your current issue of The Guardsman, (August 24, 1938), I notice that on page four of the paper, column one, you have a list of the associations and societies of the San Francisco Junior College.

However, this list is not a complete list. You do not mention the Society of Radio Engineers of San Francisco Junior College, one, I feel, of the most important clubs of the junior college. This club is the main link between the students of the Radio Engineering College and the other colleges of our school.

It is a purely social club open to membership only to present or former Radio Engineering students, but the members may bring their friends to any meeting. By this means social contact is maintained by the S. of R. E. of S. F. J. C.

If you will publish this in the paper, I am sure you will accomplish two purposes. You will acquaint the students of the Junior College with our society, and you will remove the slight placed on us.

—Vincent Sherman, President

Editor's note: If there are any other organizations that have been slighted, we offer our humble apologies. The best method of insuring mention of your group is by doing something, by becoming active, so that you can't be missed. If any other group has been overlooked, send in your news and it will be duly attended.

By Fred Vast

"Pins and Needles" deserves attention for two reasons: the quality of content and performance, and the type of actors and sponsors. To examine the musical review on its content is important but in our opinion not sufficient.

For "Pins and Needles" is not put on by an ordinary cast, that is by regular actors and actresses, but by ordinary working people. Their performance is as good as could be expected from a professional troupe. The cast consists of young men and women from the garment shops of New York, members of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

That a union can sponsor such a play and achieve such an outstanding success and win nation-wide acclaim is a tribute to the labor movement and to forward looking members of organized labor. There is much room for labor in the cultural and social fields besides economics and politics.

Unions that can sponsor projects like plays, choruses, athletic teams, and educational classes, and in the meantime represent its workers in industry are more than worthy of their existence. Men and women who have never had the chance to really enjoy and participate in cultural activities now have an opportunity to do so, and they do it well. They are doing something they are interested in, living their parts, and thus they substitute for what professional proficiency they may lack.

The musical review itself is very good, presenting scenes of American life as they occur every day. One can't help laughing at the various sketches, though he knows he is in reality laughing at himself.

It took a labor union to present a real criticism of things as they are and do it in a very clever fashion. Only a labor group would sponsor a production of "social significance", which is the real value of the review. It deals with events that are making the headlines of the dailies and with events most working people feel or experience.

Sketches depict 100% Americans, strikes, the girl who couldn't make a success though she tried all the advertisements, four little angels of peace depicting Mussolini, Hitler, Hirohito, and Chamberlain, and other scenes of every day life.

Presented in an amsuing manner the show is truly a hit. For enjoyment of something different in every sense of the word, don't miss "Pins and Needles".

If other unions follow the lead of the garment workers, enrichment of the cultural life of the nation, collectively and individually, is assured. Unions that do embark on a program of sports and education, merit the praise of the entire American public for what they offer to both workers and outsiders.

WHAT'S WRONG WITH MATHEMATICS?

The following two statements are correct:

2 dimes equal 4 nickels
3 dimes equal 6 nickels.

Mathematics tells us that equals multiplied by equals will give equals. Multiplying the left and the right sides, respectively, of the two identities, we get:

6 dimes equal 24 nickels.

Your banker will tell you that the last statement is wrong. What's wrong with mathematics? (Answer next week).

Pie-Eating Is Highlight Of Men's Smoker

Over 300 Frosh Witness AMS Extravaganza Thursday

More than three hundred freshman students got their first glimpse of the Men's Club cordiality last Thursday night at the Italian Athletic Club where the Associated Men Students held their Freshman Orientation Week Smoker.

Highlight of the evening was the pie eating contest which was won by Jerry Flamm after a pie fight against Walt Boitano. Flamm received a free bid to the sophomore formal.

Amori Battered

The boxing matches featuring Eddie Baca vs. Joe Nash and Lionel Cade vs. Sterling Silver provided many exciting moments, but the free-for-all which started with a wrestling match between John Verducci and Ray Diehl and ending with the huge "Fifi" Balestracci and referee Joe Amori also in the ring proved to be the big entertainment of the evening.

Hugh Waite, head yell leader, sang "Nobody Makes a Pass at Me" from the show "Pins and Needles", with appropriate gestures, accompanied by Dr. Henry D. Soule at the piano. They later led the community singing. Further entertainment was provided by Harold Lloyd and Charlie Chaplin moving pictures.

Investigation Due

A pie-throwing scandal that will soon be investigated by the Dies Committee as being un-American took place at the Men's Club Smoker last Thursday evening between Jerry Flamm and Walt Boitano. Which of the following views concerning the pie fight is true has not yet been determined.

Jerry Flamm: "It was that eagle-beaked Boitano's fault. He hid my pie and anyway he hit me first."

Walt Boitano: "It's a lie! And anyway a guy with a nose like Flamm's shouldn't have been allowed in the pie eating contest."

Joe Amori: "Those two guys are nothing. Wait'll you see my boxing class. I have a couple of champs there."

Hughie Waite: "Nobody makes a pass at me."

The entire Freshman class: "We shoulda won the Brawl—it musta been fixed."

WOMEN'S SPORT PARADE girls only please

By Carol Pickering

Late signups for sports in the Women's Athletic Association will continue the rest of this week, at the check room window at Powell street and the girl's gym at Galileo High School. Actual practice will start Saturday, when the Palace of Fine Arts will again become the mecca of the College tennis players. Beginners in the Saturday morning class are asked to come at 9:00 o'clock. A ladder tournament will be held during the next few weeks for practice purposes, after which the usual singles, doubles, and mixed singles tournament will begin.

Incidentally there are three unclaimed tennis racquets at the Palace of Fine Arts. Will the owners please contact Miss Keller? The racquets must be accurately described.

Volley-ball Changed

The Tuesday-Thursday volley-ball class has been changed from 4:30 to 3:30 on the same days. WAA volley-ball teams will participate at the same time. Freshmen - Sophomore competition ought to give new life to the games, since this is the first semester it has been tried.

Physical Education majors will hold their first meeting this semester at sponsor Bertha Keller's apartment tomorrow evening at 7:30. The address is 233 Cervantes street.

Frosh Offered

All entering freshmen who plan to become PE instructors should take advantage of the many experiences offered by this organization. One of last semester's most interesting projects was the teaching of badminton at Everett Junior High School.

Although the hockey class has a large enrollment there is still room for more women according to instructor Verrill Weber. The players enjoyed the game so much at the last meeting that they broke one of the balls.

It is imperative that new women keep their Physical Examination appointment, since participation in certain sports cannot be obtained without it.

Bowlers Make Strides; Early Match Planned With San Mateo

The college will collide with its old Peninsula rival, San Mateo, in another branch of sport this fall, when Joe Amori pits his Ram pin smashers against the best the Bulldogs will have to offer in the way of strike and spare.

San Mateo is following Amori's pioneering on the alleys this semester. The Blue and White pinmen will toss the alley grapefruit at the palatial new Darcy Sport Center, equipped with 11 alleys.

Joe Contacts

Amori is contacting San Mateo officials on a date for the contests, which in all probability will be held late during the semester, as the Peninsula collegians must be allowed sufficient time to adept themselves to the facts and fundamentals of bowling.

Meanwhile the two classes bowling daily at Golden Gate Recreation will be formed into separate respective leagues. Dominic Manfredi, ace from last term, appears to be the best of the advanced group at present, while a newcomer named Gardner bids fair to extend completion aplenty to all seeking it.

Seek Candidates

Amori has been approached by several city league sponsors and secretaries seeking candidates for their sessions in the San Francisco Bowling Association novice five-man circuits. Any student bowlers interested may contact the pin mentor for further particulars.

Boitano, Verducci Injured In Initial Scrimmage

The Reds emerged with a 6-0 victory over the Grays in the initial inter-squad varsity scrimmage contest Saturday at Galileo Field, as many of the newcoming gridders demonstrated ability and two slight casualties were reported.

Walt Boitano, veteran fullback, was removed from the fray with an injured left hand, cut by a cleated shoe in a pile-up. Frankie Verducci, diminutive quarterback candidate, suffered a wrenched knee. Both will be back in harness some time this week.

Connors' mate from Manteca, Howard Barber, gave the opposition all it wanted in the way of defense from his right end position. Little Les "Mush" Mullins, U.S.F. transfer and Mike Hanrahan, with the same record, were also aces in the backfield department.

Late Football Flash!

Football will pop up on three fronts this week, with an important inter-squad game and two Lamb vs. high school tilts featuring the action.

Tomorrow afternoon Jack Gaddy's reserve crew will entertain Mission High gridmen at Galileo Field at 3:30, while the Lambs will return to competition on Saturday morning, facing Commerce on the Bulldog grid at 10:30. Saturday afternoon at 2, the varsity will engage in another revolution with itself at Galileo Field.

RAMblings

By Dick Simpers

Now that the helter-skelter of registration has somewhat abated and programs have been more or less straightened out, scenes around the campus begin to take on a more familiar aspect. Bull sessions have been resumed at Foster's, much to the disgust of the management, and taller tales than ever are being circulated over the hamburgers. Mel Peterson is still button-holing people on Powell Street to listen to his rare bits of humor, and Fischer and Slattery are still breaking dozens of high school hearts over at Galileo every afternoon, while Wiechers receipts for his usual "boobing" with his ears as red as they ever were. Except for a few new faces here and there and the absence of a couple of old ones, the prospect hasn't changed much.

• • •

With the advent of "Big Al" Flaherty on the football horizon, a challenger has finally appeared for the title of "Schnozola King" which has been held undisputedly by Walt Boitano ever since Jerry Flamm bowed out of the picture. If we remember rightly, the nick-name of "Moose", a label attached locally to Boitano for some time past. At this stage of the game it is hard to predict which contestant will ultimately gain recognition as champ, but we are awaiting developments with bated breath.

• • •

Speaking of Flamm, we might as well inform all of Jer's friends and admirers (?) right now that the giant tackle plans to leave next week for Iowa to attend Cornell College, a little corn-country school which last year boasted one of the few unbeaten and untied teams in the nation. Jer plans to make the trip by motor.

With Helen Crlenkovich, sensational diving artiste, now enrolled here, it looks as though San Francisco Junior College has practically a monopoly on the feminine natatorial stars hereabouts, since Patty Robinson, high frosh, is also among the top-notchers in local water-splashing circles.

A visit to Funston field during grid practice finds a number of the Ram stalwarts of yester-year lurking on the side-lines and giving the new crop of aspirants a critical once-over. Among the old-timers noted were George Clark, one of the best backs ever to perform for the Red and White, Tony Scafani, diminutive quarter now attending LaVerne, Randy Osborne, Will Dolman, Flamm, and Bob Fex.

Tom Wilson grins broadly and chuckles when questioned as to the prospects of his soccer team. Although the taciturn mentor refuses to commit himself too deeply, it is understood that his lads must be conceded a good chance to knock over their third straight title this season.

A forlorn sight are some of the young hopefuls who sallied forth a couple of weeks ago with new cleats and visions of universities battling each other for their services after this season. Bruised and battered from serving as dummies for the first four teams during practice, the poor chaps limp disconsolately into the showers with expressions which would wring tears from a stone monkey. Alas for the illusions of youth!

Newcomers Comprise College Soccer Team; Turnout Small

New members of the college will comprise the greater part of the soccer team this semester as many of the veterans have been lost through graduation.

Many high school stars have entered college and have turned out for soccer. Such talent as Jim Chiesa, former goal keeper for Poly; Mario Salacone, fullback, Campbell, forward have signed up and are practicing daily at Funston Field.

Team Prepares

The team is preparing for soccer meets with Lowell and Galileo varsities. The encounters will be held some time this week, the Lowell game being held at Beach Chalet, and the Galileo game at Funston or Galileo Field.

Coach Tom Wilson is having the men practice dribbling and passing each day from 1 to 2:30 o'clock at Funston Field.

Turnout Small

As the turnout this year is surprisingly small, the squad is yet to be chosen and there is much room for newcomers to make a place on the team. Circle blocks are given each man who plays 116 minutes during the season which covers approximately 20 games.

CHAMP HELEN TAKES OFF HIGH BOARD

Tennis Hopes High As Champions Return

The greatest team in the history of the college! That seemed to be the consensus of opinion as the varsity tennisers began practice last week at the Palace of Fine Arts courts.

Three lettermen return from last semester's championship outfit: chubby Hal Wagner, San Francisco city junior champion and junior Davis cup ace; Bob Kun, semi-finalist in last year's conference tourney, and Ray Berns, former Galileo star.

Prominent Ones

Most prominent of the new additions to the team are Ed Amark, former Poly High ace who this year gained the Oregon State and Pacific Northwest Men's singles titles, and Bill Canning, another of Northern California's junior Davis cuppers, who hails from Alameda.

Other aspirants for positions on the six-man squad include Carl Christianson, returning veteran, Ray Kline, Berkeley club player, John Garton, semi-finalist in the recent high-school tourney, and Bill Madamba, Commerce High's outstanding player.

Some Shine

Interesting to watch will be the scramble for positions with Amark and Wagner appearing to have the inside track for the No. 1 spot, leaving Canning, Berns, and Kun to fight it out for the next three places.

The Oregon State Men's doubles champions, Amark and Wagner, loom almost a certainty for the top doubles position, while Bill Canning will probably team with either Kun, or Berns, to handle second doubles.

While the conference season does not start until next semester, Coach Tom Wilson is planning practice matches, as well as a college tournament, during the next few months.

Block SF Boys Act Nice; Yell Leader Waite Happy

After last Wednesday night's rally, Head Yell Leader Hughie Waite was high in his praise of the athletes due in no small measure to their complete cooperation with him.

Waite said, "I'm proud of the boys and hope that they will continue to be as cooperative in the future.

"You know," Waite continued, "it is mighty hard to have a decent rally when you have to keep waiting for the hecklers to quiet down a bit and give the speakers or performers a break. All of the Yell Leaders in the past have been trying to get the cooperation that I had the other night and now that we have it I hope that it will continue that way."

Waite then rambled on and on about the great things he could do now that the rally setup is fixed, and he was still talking as darkness fell.

FACULTY TEAM BEATS BLOCK BOYS; 30 FANS WITNESS OVERWHELMING DEBACLE

In a history-making contest, the faculty soft-ball team defeated the Block Society, four to three, at Fort Mason field a week ago yesterday.

The fans (all 30 of them) were kept in a continual state of frenzy as the teams vied to see who could make the most errors.

The affair started as a soft-ball game and ended as a three-ring circus, with the campus clowns being in their element.

Faculty members who contributed to the fun included Dean Browne, Registrar Paul Mohr, Joe Amori, Lee Eisan, Jack Gaddy, Tom Wilson, and Edward Redford, while amusing antics on the part of the Block Society were contributed by Bobby Fex, Jerry Flamm, Willie Blackfield, and Larry Korchet.

The final addition to this cast of comedians was the umpire—none other than Hugh Waite.

HANCOCK TO SELECT THREE TEAMS NEXT WEEK FOR LOCAL RIFLE LEAGUE

Three rifle teams to be entered in the fall matches of the San Francisco Small-Bore League will be selected from college shooters the first part of next week, said William H. Hancock, coach and range officer.

"Any college man or woman who thinks he or she can shoot is invited to come down to the rifle range and try out any afternoon but Wednesday," he said, "Also, we will teach anyone to shoot, no special talent or gift being necessary.

Everything Free

"Since this is Tryout Week, the college Rifle and Pistol Club will furnish ammunition and loan shooting coats, and rifles absolutely free of charge.

"This offer lines up with our annual invitation to the school at large to give rifle and pistol club activities a try for a limited amount of time without cost."

Ragged Play Costly To Gaddymen: Pass Brings Tally

Led to slaughter in the season's opening grid tilt last Saturday at U.S.F. Field, Jack Gaddy's Flying Lambs dropped a 12 to 6 contest to the snappy Wildcats of St. Ignatius High.

It was a story of disorganization versus coordination, with the clicking Cats popping over a pair of touchdowns in orderly fashion while the Lambs were wasting opportunities with ragged play.

Santucci Scores

St. Ignatius gathered its first score when Al Santucci, husky fullback, traipsed outside right tackle for 15 yards late in the second quarter. McGowan's place kick for the extra point was low.

The Ignatians returned in the third session to stretch their lead to 12 points, scoring on a short drive paved by a poor Lamb punt. Diehl's kick from the San Francisco five yard marker sailed out of bounds on the 14. From this point Coleman, Wildcat halfback, reached the three on an off-tackle try. Santucci made two, before adding the final yard into pay dirt. This time George Jensen rushed through to block McGowan's placement offering.

Lambies Score

The Lambs took to the air for their score. On their own 43, they marched to the rival 43, where Aleo tossed a long one to Seymour Mauber, end, who advanced to the 11. A five-yard offside penalty against the Hilltoppers carried the oval to the six. Jensen made one, then two. Aleo added another and Jensen reached the one yard line for a first down.

Aleo passed into the flat to Urban Mason, who switched from tackle to end for the play, and a touchdown was registered on the first down. Aleo's aerial offering to Charlie O'Brien was misdirected for the conversion try.

Many Gains

The Lambs, despite the score, showed plenty in the ground gaining column, and chalked up seven first downs to the Wildcats' four. Ed Forrest, veteran St. Ignatius center, was the star of the contest.

Bob Craigie, Jensen, Diehl and Aleo impressed in the backfield, while Mel Chicazola, Harold Mahoney and Mason were outstanding among the forwards.

Helen Crlenkovich, National Diving Champion, Now Enrolled Here; Considered Olympic Games Prospect

Helen Crlenkovich, nationally famous diving star whose picture appears above, is now a full fledged "Freshie", having registered at the college as a pre-legal major.

Miss Crlenkovich, a recent graduate of Mission High, is considered one of the two best women divers in the country, and an exceptionally outstanding prospect for the 1940 Olympic Games. Competing under the colors of the Fairmont Plunge, Miss Crlenkovich rose to stardom under the expert guidance of Phil Patterson, coach of the Fairmont swimming and diving team.

Among other titles, Miss Crlenkovich won a second place in the women's national springboard diving championships, when she could have had at least a tie with Marjorie Gestring, Olympic and national springboard diving champion against whom she was competing. As it was, Miss Crlenkovich lost by a scant seven points. The score was 142 to 135. In diving the champion is always conceded at least five to 10 points by the judges so on that score our Helen was equal if not superior to the defending champion.

Two weeks ago Helen added the Far Western diving crown to her rapidly growing list of championships, although at that time she arose from bed with a fever and had no business diving. Nevertheless, she proceeded to go right ahead and glom the title. Quite a lady!

Helen Crlenkovich, Patty Robinson, Marion Falconer, there's athletic ability and pulchritude plus. Two star divers and a scintillating swimmer, and they are all students at the home of the Ram.

San Francisco Junior College challenges any other school in the country to match the beauty and athletic ability of these three mermaids.

CLUBS HOLD INITIAL MEETINGS; FRESHMEN URGED TO ATTEND

With the semester getting well under way the clubs are beginning to hold meetings and all the students are urged to attend. Special welcome is extended to the new students, and they are urged to join a club and get better acquainted with college, faculty, and the students.

Tomorrow, September 1, the French Club will hold the first meeting of the semester to discuss plans and social affairs for this year. The club is primarily for conversational purposes for the advanced students, but all who are taking French A are welcome. Place of meeting will be posted on the bulletin board at Powell Street.

Geologists Meet Today

Everybody is welcome to attend the first meeting of the Geology Club, better known as the Pick and Hammer, today in room 404 at 2:10 o'clock in the Galileo building. The only prerequisite to join this organization is one semester of any college geology. George Green, faculty adviser, is planning on a field trip to Yosemite Valley.

At the first meeting of the Astronomical Society, Dr. Louis Berman, club adviser, planned an extensive program for the society this semester including trips to observatorys, lectures and varied programs. A great deal of new material has been purchased which will allow the students a great range of study.

Musicians Gather Tonight

Tonight at the Galileo Little Theatre, the Music Club, in conjunction with the A Cappella Choir, will hold an informal program, and a reception afterwards for any of the students interested in music, and especially for the new members of the music classes. "We are anticipating a good turnout this semester, and this program will give those interested an idea of our activities," said Bill Jackman, president of the A Cappella Choir.

Next Monday between 3:20 and 3:30 o'clock, the Camera Club will hold its first meeting in room 406 at Galileo. All students interested in photography are cordially invited.

Peace Society, Rifters

Learn about the horrors of war and the uncertainty of peace at the first meeting of the Peace Society, September 8, at 8 p.m. The place of meeting is 3234 Pacific Avenue. Take the number three car and get off at Presidio Avenue.

"If you have never seen or handled a gun, come down to the Galileo Rifle Range and try your skill," urges Howard Markovits, club president. Free shooting and excellent instruction are offered every day except Wednesdays. This is open to all students wishing to try out, until the middle of September.

Applications are now being taken for all those who wish to join the Army Navy Club. Initiation proceedings are usually very comical, but not hard to take. Club sponsors are Captain James Hughes, Captain Frederick MacFarlane, Commander Grant Marsh, and Carl F. Stough. Captain Hughes and MacFarlane are active in the Army Reserve, while Commander Marsh is retired.

Business Women Organize

The Associated Business Women of the college serves a twofold purpose; it aims first to benefit the individual member educationally, vocationally and socially; and secondly, it seeks to serve and promote, wherever possible, the interest of the college.

Members meet once a month at a dinner. Social functions of various types are planned from time to time and enjoyed by all the women.

All those who are working or who have finished a business course are urged to join. The women who are taking a business course now at the college are cordially invited to attend all the social functions.

The fall business meeting will be held September 14 at the Elizabeth Inn, at 6 p.m. Make reservations with Margaret Flourney, club sponsor, Eltrede Buckwald, president, Donna McPherson, secretary, and Ruth Carter, treasurer.

Red-Haired Boy Added To Ross Family Last Friday Afternoon

The reason for the big smile on the face of John E. Ross, Sociology instructor, last Friday afternoon, was that he had received the information that he had just become a father of a husky baby boy. The newest addition to the Ross family was born at 1 p.m. and according to Ross, he has red hair and weighs six pounds eleven ounces. All three are doing well, especially Mr. Ross, who now has a perpetual smile. Ross beamingly announced, "We are going to christen him Christopher Robert Ross."

Final Count of 2035 Enrollment Breaks All-Time Record

At the close of the registration period last week a record enrollment of 2035 students was announced by the finance office.

The figure is based on the number of paid Associated Students Cards. Last semester's record enrollment was

Assistant Registrar

Mary Jane Learnard

1778 making a total increase of 257 students or almost fifteen per cent.

Late registrants took their Subject A examinations last Saturday and will take their College Aptitude Tests on Friday, September 2, at 2:30 p.m. in room 458 at Galileo, Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar, said.

Students desiring to change their programs after the registration books close must secure official blanks from the Registrar's Office. A student who drops a course without the change of program slip will be marked as having failed in the course. Credit will not be given for courses taken but not entered on the student's official study list.

If it becomes necessary for a student to withdraw from the college before the end of the semester, an official leave of absence blank must be obtained, signed by all the instructors, and filed at the Registrar's office Wednesday, September 14, will be the last day for partial refund of Incidental Student Body Dues for approved withdrawals.

AWS To Get Radio For Women's Lounge

Some of the Associated Women's Society activities for this semester will be a tea dance and a vocational interest tea, according to Miriam Dunne, AWS president. The dates have not yet been definitely decided upon.

The AWS has also planned to obtain a radio for the women's lounge sometime soon.

SOPHS HANDED QUESTIONABLE DECISION OVER FROSH AT ORIENTATION WEEK BRAWL

Surrounded by a gathering of 500 hose-drenched spectators, Stan Tobiason's burly sophomores took the customary decision over the frosh mudmen in the semi-annual brawl last Friday at Soldiers' Field.

The sophs were awarded four of the six events, although one, jousting, was protested vigorously by Frosh President Ray Diehl.

Conceding the tie-up contest to the second year men, the frosh were victims of "questionable" decisions in the aforementioned jousting and the "Johnnie Jump the Long Horse" events. The tie-up result was also doubtful.

In but one event, the flag rush, was actually taken by the sophomores, according to the spectators, and, of course, the officials. The hero of the one was "Mickey" Bergan, Men's Club prexy, who all but swallowed the flag under a pile of hefty freshmen in the middle of the mud-hole.

The announcement that the sophs were victorious in the relay race was a downright mistake, according to concensus of opinion and also that of The Guardsman observers present. The frosh unquestionably captured the event when the rival four-man team stumbled and went down in a heap 15 feet before striking the finish line.

The tug-of-war was a definite frosh victory, although the upperclassmen resorted to attempts at having the event outlawed for some reason or other. The sophs were taken for a terrific ride through Howard Cloud's loosely wielded firehose.

In the "long horse" competition the second yearlings were handed the verdict, but on what grounds no one present was able to ascertain.

General opinion of the spectators was that the freshies might at least have been awarded a draw, to say nothing of the trophy.

Browne for his remarks at the opening of the program, to the AMS officers, to Howard Cloud, to Dr. Soule and Hugh Waite for the entertainment, and to Harry Wong of the Hotel and Restaurant Division for the refreshments, and to the twenty-five members of the faculty who attended.

"The next affair will be a Hallowe'en Barn Dance at the end of October with all the trimmings, (the boys are still working on it) and the Boxing and Wrestling Championships at the end of the semester. The boxing class is big this time and several of the boys look good already, so you can expect some real excitement at the Championship fights," said Amori at the close of the Smoker.

known marksman, will endeavor to teach the finer points of rifle marksmanship to all candidates with the help of his assistants. A Camp Perry National Match competitor of many years standing, Hancock, for the past several years has succeeded in transmitting his experience to the college team members who responded by taking top bracket positions in the various local leagues and championship matches. The sharpshooters also take part in various nation-wide postal matches with universities throughout the country.

Besides small-bore rifle teams, both 30-calibre and pistol squads are always competing.

NITE ELECTIONS PROVE TO BE SUCCESSFUL

Majority Opinions, Efficiency In Class Voting

Class elections this semester for the first time in the history of the college were conducted at night. Following the rally welcoming the new freshmen last Tuesday evening in the Galileo auditorium, class elections were held in four different rooms.

Low Sophomores with Miriam Dunne and faculty advisers Joseph E. Williams and Marion Turner conducting their election in Room 257, chose Frank Verdieck, president, Marie Heiser, vice-president, and Mike Henrahan, secretary-treasurer.

High-freshmen in Room 418, with faculty advisers John H. Ross and Claire Cuneo, and Chairman Peggy Parks elected Daniel Balter, president, Janet Ball, vice-president; Adele Kuhn, secretary-treasurer.

Low-freshmen under the guidance of John Julius and faculty advisers Nelson A. Wells and Verrel A. Weber elected Ray Diehl, president, Rita Bann, who was unopposed, vice-president, Pat Healy, secretary-treasurer.

Hugh Waite, chairman of the rally committee, declared that the large turn-out of students for the rally and the fine college spirit shown, not only made possible a better expression of the majority's opinion, but also made possible the successful and efficient running of the election.

In the Freshman class of one of our smaller schools, there were three American boys and one Chinaman who ate at the same table. The Chinaman being outnumbered was hazed quite a bit by the Americans. However, he never complained and the Americans, feeling bad about their pranks, approached the Chinaman one day, "Wong," they said, "we have decided to quit putting salt in your tea and pepper in your salad." Wong replied, "Velly well then I will quit spitting in your coffee."

NYA Director Swamped by Job Applicants

NYA office of the college files were swamped with more than four hundred applications as work officially began last week. Last semester approximately half this number were accommodated, consequently a waiting list has been formed, and late applicants will have to await their turns for employment.

Edward H. Redford, assistant chief of the NYA, announced that any student working without official sanction from his office will not receive any credit.

"There are some students," Redford declared, "who believe that since they worked last semester they can continue work now without first contacting me. These students I warn to see me immediately because they will not receive any compensation without first receiving my sanction."

An announcement when timeslips become due will appear in a later issue of The Guardsman.

The schedule of Redford's office hours is reprinted for those who may have missed last week's Guardsman.

Monday and Wednesday—Room 726, P.G.E. Building—10 to 12 o'clock.

Thursday and Friday—Room 726, P. G.E. Building—8:30 to 10:30 o'clock. Friday—Room 726, P.G.E. Building—10:30 to 1:30 o'clock.

Wednesday—Galileo—1 to 5 o'clock.

Beta Phi Pledging Now Under Way

"Pledging is now under way by the Beta Phi fraternity and a very successful semester is anticipated," announced Howard Cloud early this week. Newly elected officers are president, Howard Cloud; vice-president, Stan Tobiason, and secretary, Bob Kanter.

A railroad shopman had been drawn on a federal grand jury, and didn't want to serve. When his name was called he asked the judge to excuse him. "We are very busy at the shops," said he, "and I ought to be there."

"So you are one of those men who think the place couldn't get along without you," remarked the judge.

"No, your honor," replied the shopman, "I know it could get along without me, but I don't want it to find it out."

"Excused," said the judge.

Evelyn Glenchur of Coalinga took first place, typing 83 words a minute

Grant Marsh, chairman of the college commercial department, conducted the three contests in typing, shorthand and bookkeeping for the college.

Dean Browne Pleased With Rally Turnout

"It was very gratifying to see such a large gathering at the rally. The large response shows that a growing interest is being taken in the college assemblies," stated Dean Browne.

"I also want to commend the students on their interest in the class elections as choosing leaders is of great importance to the college and should be done by a majority of the students.

"The program at the Men's Smoker was as excellent as usual, and all the events were very entertaining. I'm sure a good time was had by all. The cooperation shown by the new students in registering and at the Frosh Welcome Rally was most pleasing. If the cooperation continues, as I am sure it will, we will have an enjoyable semester ahead of us."

Musical Auditions At 49 Taylor Street

Auditions are open for tenor saxophone players, and violinists at 1 p.m. Tuesdays and Thursdays at 49 Taylor Street, according to Lilburn Erb, orchestra leader.

The college's band is under student organization with Charles H. McKiernan as faculty supervisor.

J. Heyerdahl Hansen, San Francisco, has been named executive president of the Norwegian-American auxiliary, organized to secure Norwegian participation in the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition.

Enthusiastic Student Body Greets School Bond Rally

Community Singing, Faculty and Student Speakers Feature Two Hall Meeting; Literature Distributed

By Dick Simpers

Enthusiasm ran high last week as the campaign for passage of the school bond issue in the coming election got under way with a monster assembly for the entire student body. Men students met in the study hall, while women gathered in the lecture hall. Both groups participated in community singing and listened to several speakers on the bond situation and its significance to all members of the college.

Literature on the importance of the issue and stickers urging its passage were distributed by members of the rally committee, and an announcement was made of a contest for the best poem, song, or cartoon urging support of the issue. The winning entry will reward its creator a prize of three dollars and a bid to the sophomore formal.

Waite, Fex Preside

Associated Students' President Bob Fex and Yell Leader Hugh Waite presided at the men's and women's assemblies respectively. Featured speakers were President Cloud, Claude A. Shull, speech instructor, Edward E. Sundys, English instructor, and Louis Conlan, instructor in law and basketball coach. Student speaker was Bob Blackwell, who presented the student's viewpoint of the present situation and its inconveniences.

All of the speakers stressed the supreme importance of the bond issue to the college and its significance to the future existence of the institution. It was pointed out that its passage will insure the completion of the college plant within a reasonable length of time and will eliminate the red tape which has delayed construction for so long.

Students Enthusiastic

Following the assemblies, many signs of enthusiasm were observed among the students, as an campaign to acquaint the public with all aspects of the issue really got under way. Passing out of the stickers and literature began immediately and form letters are being prepared to mail to voters throughout the city to enlist their support.

All students were urged to do their best to "spread the word" regarding the election, and to do everything in their power to interest their families and neighbors in the cause.

Welkin Resounds

Evidence that school spirit is running high came after the assemblies when groups of students wandered the streets bellowing the choruses of Dean Browne's "theme song" which he wrote especially for the occasion, and plastering stickers on every available inch of unoccupied space.

Should this spirit continue to way strongly, it is the opinion of school officials that the issue stands more than a fair chance for success at the polls on September 27, when it will be presented to the voters for acceptance or rejection. The wholehearted co-operation and support of every student is badly needed and will undoubtedly have a large influence on the final outcome, so let's each do his part!

Waite To Continue Yell Leader Tryouts Today

Such exceptional yell-leading talent was exhibited before Hugh Waite, head yell leader, last Wednesday, during the yell leader tryouts, that he has found it advisable to hold another tryout this afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Galileo auditorium.

"The talent was exceptionally good," declared Waite. "I have not chose my assistants as yet, because four or five of the aspirants were so good, it is difficult to make a decision. I have also learned that there are a few men who are anxious to try out and did not have an opportunity to do so last week. Therefore, I though it dreamable to hold another tryout today. Those men who tried out last time however, are not required to appear today."

Friday, September 16, has been set as the date of the next rally. Entertainment is now being planned.

Prominent Hotel Men Speak To Students In Management Division

Want a salary of $1000.00 a month? Tell the operator of a class "A" metropolitan hotel how to show a profit in his catering department.

George Smith, operator of the Mark Hopkins and Fairmont hotels, made the above statement when addressing the students of the Hotel and Restaurant Division of the college last Tuesday.

The speaker, chairman of the advisory committee, which guides the making of courses of study for the vocational division, laid special stress on the need for trained help. He looks to the hotel course at the college to fill the need for trained help who will bring American thought and methods to the catering departments of American hotels.

Cafeteria service is open to college students at the Galileo faculty cafeteria from 1 to 2:30 p.m. every day. Patrons are asked to come in for service before 2:30 to enable the student workers to reach their classes on time.

Second speaker in the series of weekly guest lectures offered in the Hotel Division will be Don Bangs, manager of the Sir Francis Drake Hotel.

These series of lectures take place on Tuesdays at 2:30 o'clock and are open to interested students from any department.

Hotel division students also receive an opportunity, today, of attending an arbitration meeting between hotel owners and hotel employees. Attorney Robert Lither is to be the main speaker for the occasion.

Trips Contemplated

The Division is further contemplating a series of trips for its students this semester. A demonstration in testing canned food products at the S&W food packing plant the middle day will be the first. A night visit to Borden's Dairy is also planned, so that students can see how a modern dairy efficiently operates.

J. Graham Sullivan, co-ordinator for the division, is planning on attending the hotel greeter's meeting at Hotel Leamington in Oakland in the near future with a few students from the division.

Architect Accepts Plans

Plans for dining room and kitchen layout and equipment as designed and specified by students in the division, for the college building at Balboa Park, have been passed on and approved by Architect Timothy Pflueger, Sullivan added.

These plans were drawn under the supervision of W. R. Adams, instructor in hotel engineering and hotel drawing. Equipment specifications were checked by Ernst Hjorth, instructor in catering and dining room management.

Schools To Participate In Next Year's Exposition

Schools of San Francisco will soon be preparing for their part in the 1939 International World's Fair on Treasure Island, Marie Welter of the college faculty and director of San Francisco school participation in the exposition, disclosed recently.

Approximately 400 students, to be chosen from dramatic, speech, and dancing classes of the college and of several of the high schools will depict episodes from California history.

The episodes accompanied by musical and choral effects will form and tell the whole history of California in a colorful and exciting pageant.

CLUB ADVISORY BOARD MEETS NEXT TUESDAY

All Clubs Urged To Send Délegates. Use Powers Provided By Constitution

As the coordinating unit for all chartered college organizations, the Club Advisory Board will have its first full meeting next Tuesday morning, Powell Street. All clubs are being urged, through their faculty advisers, to send delegates to the meeting.

This body, as provided in the new college constitution, has the power to initiate legislation which will be carried to the E-Council through the voice of the Club Advisory Board President.

According to President John Julius, "there are some important matters on the docket scheduled to be brought up at the first meeting."

"Also," he said, "as a vital department of the new student government structure, the Club Advisory Board will give regular recommendations and reports to the Ex-Council through the voice of its single seat in that body.

"In this way, the entire college, through the various organizations, can have direct voice in the executive department of the Associated Students."

Julius also stated that although only chartered groups can vote, all organizations may send representatives.

The following list of organizations comprise all of the chartered groups of the college and are urged to send delegates:

Alpha Delta Epsilon, Army and Navy Club, Beta Phi, Chinese Students Club, Forum Club, German Club, Home Economics Association, Hotel and Restaurant Management Club, Iota Chi, Japanese Students Club, Lambda Chi, Le Cercle Francaise, Newman Club, Omicron Phi Pi, Peace Society, Phi Beta Rho, Pick and Hammer Club, Phi Mu Gamma, Rifle and Pistol Club, Society of Radio Engineers, Tri Epsilon, Women's Service Society, Women's Athletic Association, Men's Block Letter Society.

Newman Club Promises Good Time At "Welcome Meeting" For Freshmen

Entertainment, refreshments and an all around good time are promised for all who attend the "welcome" meeting of the Newman Club on next Monday night, September 12, President Dave Johnson announced. The meeting will be held at the club room in St. Mary's Cathedral, Van Ness Avenue and O'Farrell Street, at 8 o'clock.

Johnson, with the assistance of Father Scanlon, club adviser, has lined up entertainment which will include performances by Hughie Waite, Kay Lloyd, and the Newman Club "Ham Actors" in a repeat performance of the old, but ever new, stage play, The Villain Still Pursues Her, starring Marge Meader and Bob Fex, supported by Frankie and Johnnie Verducci, Al Flaherty and others.

"All Catholic students, whether freshmen or sophomores, are cordially invited to attend," Johnson said.

REMEMBER!

1. The date of the school bond election is September 27.
2. A two-thirds majority is needed to carry the school bond issue.
3. Favorable action on the school bonds will mean that the junior college will have three buildings within a year instead of one only. (The construction of the first unit of the college plant, or group of buildings on the Balboa Park campus arrangement is not dependent on passage or rejection of the bond issue.)
4. If the school bond issue should fail, ten years may pass before the total plant can be built; if the bond issue should carry, the COMPLETE COLLEGE CAMPUS MAY BE REALIZED WITHIN A PERIOD OF THREE YEARS.
5. In other words, the school bond money will allow a definite SPEEDING-UP of the college building plans so that a larger part of the total plant may be occupied at a much earlier date.

Paste Them On! But What Does 4 Mean?

"Sure you can paste them on, girls,—But what is this '4' business?" inquire Bob Fex, Associated Student President, of Dixie McCormick, left, and Jack Schmale, behind the wheel, of Dolly Bernthal, right, when the women students follow Dean Browne's suggestions in the college housing campaign. The above pictured students are but four who can explain what the '4' means. CAN YOU?

Police Tag Powell Parking Outlaws; Will Continue Until Laws Are Obeyed

Students who bring their cars to school with them better keep a wary eye on the color of the curb-stones where they park from now on, as the police department has issued an ultimatum to the effect that hereafter all automobiles parked in red or yellow zones will be tagged and their owners will be hailed into court.

Much to the discomfiture of several student drivers, the John Laws went into action last Friday, tagging all cars parked in the alley adjoining the Extension building. This procedure will be continued until the practice is finally discouraged, according to Dean Edwin C. Browne, who made the announcement following the receipt of an official warning from headquarters.

Warning was given that registration slips be placed in prominent positions in automobiles, preferably on the steering wheel. Officers indicated that swift action would be taken if slips are not properly displayed.

Scholar Society Eligibles Asked To Sign At Powell St.

Phyllis Learned warned all students who are eligible for membership to the Alpha Gamma Sigma to sign during this week with Thomas O'Neill at the Powell Street office.

Low freshmen are eligible if they were members of the California Gold Seal Honor Society on graduation from high school.

All others may become members if they had 30 honor points last semester, not counting Physical Ed in any form.

FACULTY ASSOCIATION MEETS TO LAUNCH 24 DAY DRIVE FOR SUCCESS OF SCHOOL BUILDING BOND ISSUE

Launching a 24 day intensive effort to make the voters of San Francisco conscious of the housing needs of the college, Edward E. Sandys, president of the Faculty Association, called the members of his group together, at a dinner meeting on Thursday night.

After the dinner which was served in the faculty dining hall, at Galileo, by the students and staff of the hotel and restaurant management division, President Cloud sounded the keynote of the campaign, that of united effort, subsequently summarized in the Latin "e pluribus unum".

C. Harold Caulfield, Board of Education member, presented ineligible economic arguments in behalf of the proposed "10-year school bond issue," to be voted on at the special election, September 27.

George Mullany, Director of Publications, of the San Francisco Schools Department, pointed out briefly the relationship of the bond issue to the homeless college student body.

Representing the "homeless student body" were the two elected Associated Student president, Bob Fex and Jane Mitchell, secretary, who made earnest and sincere presentation of the work planned by the student organization in presenting the school bond issue to the voters of the 27th Assembly district.

Redford Warns Students To Fill Out New NYA Forms Now; Timeslips Due Sept. 16

Because of a recent change in application blanks, from the government, all NYA students who have not as yet filled out these entirely new forms for this semester, are warned by Edward Redford, assistant NYA director to immediately obtain said applications at his office.

"It is imperative that all students who have not filled these two applications with me, do so at once," announced Redford. "Payment of wages will be delayed until students comply with this new rule. All those students who filed applications with Miss Turner last semester will have to file these new applications also, under penalty of non-payment of wages due. If in doubt, see me immediately."

Since time slips become due on Friday, September 16, these new applications should be filed before this date.

Students dropping from school have considerably reduced the number of applications. The office files are still considerably swamped with applications, however, and only over a short period of time can all applying students be taken care of.

Home Ecom Group Election This Afternoon At Galileo

To elect a new president, there will be a special meeting of the Home Economics Association today at 2:15 o'clock, in Room 317 at Galileo High School, according to Claire Cuneo, sponsor.

"Our former President, Barbara Allin, has not returned," Miss Cuneo stated, "as she plans to marry, September 11."

She further added that arrangements for the opening tea, and other term affairs will be discussed at this time.

Members of the club are requested to refer to The Guardsman for dates of future meetings, and are urged by Miss Cuneo to attend the special session as many original ideas are needed.

Debate Society Invites Spectators To Tuesday Afternoon Forensics Show

Meetings of the college debate fraternity will be held every Tuesday between 2:30 and 4:10 o'clock. Meetings are open to anyone, as a course for credit, or as extra-curricular.

Lloyd D. Luckmann, faculty adviser of the fraternity, said that in May of 1938 the debate team of the college traveled almost 1800 miles. Luckmann added that in May the fraternity became a Charter Member of Phi Rho Pi. Phi Rho Pi is the national honor debate fraternities for junior colleges. The college debate society is the only one in California north of Modesto, admitted to the order. More than 100 junior colleges belong. Joe Meeko and Charles Vaughn are both eligible for full membership.

Members of the college debate team who are not yet eligible for full membership are: Robert Blackwell, Rema Corbit, John Ellis, James Henry, Russell Henry, Bill Jackman and Leslie Mullin. These members will be admitted to the Phi Rho Pi in two years.

No schedule of debates has been made to date, but there will probably be two new colleges on the list. Porterville Junior College and Los Angeles City College, will be those on the new list.

Council Bans Student Card Transfer

Judicial Body Will Enforce New Ruling

At the Executive Council meeting held last week, six lenders of Associated Students cards were severely chastised by Dean Edwin C. Browne. It was decided that in the future, punishment for the misuse of student body cards should be drastic.

"Nothing could be done about the offenders, outside of the 'bawling out' because first of all, they were only a small number of the three hundred persons who crashed the dance and should not bear the full punishment for the crowd, and secondly, they hadn't sufficient warning to make punishment necessary," said Hugh Waite, Associated Students yell leader and prominent member of the council, "but hereafter the Judicial Committee will deal out the punishment for misrepresentation of student cards."

Students Blamed

"This action of the Executive Council is necessary for the protection of the students. Lending of membership cards will lessen the enjoyment of social events, as illustrated by our recent Freshman Welcome Dance," was Dean Browne's opinion expressed to the Executive Council at the meeting.

Bob Fex, Associated Students president was of the opinion that the outsiders made the difference between a student affair and an overheated, overcrowded public dance. Fex declared:

"The fault for the crowded and overheated conditions at the college dances lies with the students of the college who enable outsiders to enter with their student body cards. Therefore a system of identification will be necessary at the remainder of the Associated Students' dances this semester."

Identification Committee Favored

At the meeting, various students suggested that each person should have his photograph on his card, and identification be made by comparing the photograph with the person presenting it for admission, but the plan was rejected because of the expense involved. Another plan which was also rejected was a rubber stamp on the hand of the person intending to go to the dance, stamped in the afternoon before the dance.

The plan most favored is the personal identification by a large committee composed of student notables and faculty advisers, who, in gantlet fashion, will look over the membership cards and at least one of the committee will be able to identify the student. It is hoped that this personal recognition method will discourage any attempts at misusing the Associated Students cards.

Confiscation of Cards

In order to carry out the plans of the council to its final end, a judicial committee, which was suggested last semester by former President Don Mix in his "four point program" and which is now in the Constitution of the Associated Students of San Francisco Junior College, was appointed early this week by President Fex of the Associated Students.

The judicial committee will be directly responsible to Fex and the officer authorities. The judicial body, in order to make it impossible to gain entrance into college affairs with a borrowed card, will confiscate the lender's card for the remainder of the semester.

The authority for this action is printed on the reverse of every Associated Students card. The exact wording is:

"This card is NOT TRANSFERABLE, and the bearer agrees to identify himself, by signature or otherwise, when requested to do so. If presented for admission by any other person it will be FORFEITED, taken up by the gateman (and in the case of athletic contests) full admission price collected."

Every student of the college, upon receiving his card, signed, signifying his acceptance of those conditions. This will be the first semester that this authority has been used.

A Student And An Admiral Look At War

WAR, you have become the foundation of all human virtues;
Nations have chosen cohesion in war and dispersion in peace;
Training in war and betrayal in peace.
War, you teach men how to die, while peace shows them only how to live.
War, you cleanse the world; peace litters it with corruption.

—From "An Apostrophe To War" written by Rear Admiral Yates Sterling Jr. of the Third Naval District and recited to the New Netherland Chapter of the D.A.R.

* * *

War, you teach men how to die, in the classroom of the trenches splendidly equipped for instruction with mustard gas, guns, hand grenades, cooties and fat, ravenous rats.

* * *

It must be splendid so to die, crawly with vermin, with one's insides twisted out by an enemy bayonet, and slow corrosion of poison gas eating into the flesh.

Begone, peace, which teaches men only how to live.

* * *

What are the delights of life, sunlight, of flowers, of labor and love compared with the supreme thrill of being blown into shreds by shrapnel or dying by inches in a stinking hospital?

* * *

That is the highest glory, so to die, and a pity it is that none who thus died survived to write how grand it felt.

* * *

However, rear admirals, jingling with medals, love to tell of the grandeur of a soldier's death, and some fat old ladies love to listen.

* * *

War, you have become the foundation of all human virtues.

* * *

It is well known, is it not, that in war-time, there is no greed, no blood-lust, no torture, rape, plundering, prostitution, pillage or profiteering.

* * *

No indeed; war is pleasant. Something like a church strawberry social.

* * *

Nations have found wisdom in war and deception in peace.

* * *

Surely, there can be no greater wisdom than to pick ten million healthy men and slaughter them off with ammunition, and to blockade millions of women and children and slaughter them off with starvation, and to spend billions upon billions of dollars and burden posterity with a debt millstone, and to hurl the world into economic chaos, and to carve nations into smaller nations, each with a set of hatreds, new armies, and thus plant the seeds which will perpetrate the greatest wisdom of all—war.

* * *

War, you cleanse the world.

* * *

Ah, how you cleanse it. With majestic cannon you demolish cities, cottages, and cathedrals; with sanitary machine guns you mow down millions of men who clutter up the earth; with disease and famine you decimate populations behind the lines. What a cleansing is there!

* * *

And give us a few more great, wise, virtuous wars and the cleansing will be complete; the earth will be shorn of humans, and rats and vipers will prowl among the ruins where rot the corpses of those happy people whom war taught how to die.

* * *

War, you cleanse the world.

Cooperation With Police Urged

FOR a long time the parking problem of students who bring their automobiles with them to college has been a sore spot, especially in the vicinity of Powell Street, where traffic is heavy and the streets are often congested. Driven to desperation by the lack of space within walking distance of the college, too many have decided to "take a chance" and leave their cars in red or yellow zones where parking is forbidden or limited.

The long-suffering police department has finally issued a conclusive edict, declaring that all automobiles found in such zones will be tagged and their owners will be held responsible. Remonstrances from time to time have been found to have but little effect, so the police are substituting a policy of action as a last resort to bring an end to the practice.

Further complaint or action should not be necessary to bring students to a realization of the fact that by parking in painted zones they are seriously inconveniencing many people and are liable to prosecution as traffic violators. One warning should be enough, and there is no excuse for any further violation of parking rules.

Songs Effective In Election Campaign

WITH the campaign for passage of the School Building Program now on in full force, and students of the college enthusiastically participating in the drive for a campus, songs are an effective method of stimulating interest.

The Guardsman is cooperating wholeheartedly with civic groups and the entire school system of San Francisco to pass Proposition Number 4 at the special election, September 27.

The following "ditty" written by Dean of Men Edwin C. Browne to the tune of Old MacDonald Had a Farm aptly describes the dilemma of higher education in the city of the Golden Gate.

S. F. J. C. has no home—eeyi eeyi oh
All o'er the city we do roam—eeyi eeyi oh
With one class here and another class there
Here a class, there a class, everywhere you find a class
Our Junior College has no home—eeyi eeyi oh

S. F. J. C. has no home—eeyi eeyi oh
For three years now we've had to roam—eeyi eeyi oh
With a street car here and a street car there,
Here a car, there a car, everywhere a street car,
Our Junior College has no home—eeyi eeyi oh

S. F. J. C. has no home—eeyi eeyi oh
We cry Oh Lord, How long? How long? eeyi eeyi oh
With a roll call here, and a roll call there,
Here a call, there a call, everywhere a roll call
Our Junior College has no home—eeyi eeyi oh

S. F. J. C. has no home—eeyi eeyi oh
And all day long our feet do moan, eeyi eeyi oh
With a hitch hike here and a hitch hike there
Here a hike, there a hike, everywhere a hitch hike.
Our Junior College has no home—eeyi eeyi oh

With one class here and another class there
Here a class, there a class, everywhere they try to pass
With a street car here and a street car there
Here a car, there a car, everywhere a street car
With a roll call here and a roll call there,
Here a call there a call, everywhere a roll call,
With a hitch hike here and a hitch hike there
Here a hike, there a hike, everywhere a hitch hike.

THIS PUZZLING WORLD

THE PEACOCK CLUB

A policeman, a grocer, a baker, and a candlestick maker were all members of the Peacock Club. Their names (not necessarily in the same order) were Dopey, Happy, Sneezy, and Sleepy.

1. Although they belonged to the same mutual admiration club, Dopey and the baker were not on speaking terms with Happy.
2. The policeman was very chummy with Sneezy and the candlestick maker.
3. Sleepy and the candlestick maker were good friends.
4. Happy and the grocer used to sell newspapers, when boys.

From the information supplied, tell who is who. (Answer next week.)

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE

Consider the following statements:
2 yards equal 6 feet.
3 yards equal 9 feet.
Multiplying, as we did last week, we get the INCORRECT STATEMENT: 6 yards equal 54 feet.

In this case, however, we can see easily where we made a mistake. The third statement should have read: 6 yards squared equal 54 feet squared.

Similarly, the third statement of last week should have read: 6 dimes squared equal 24 nickles squared.

This statement is correct. To the bewildered reader wishing to know what is a squared dime or a squared nickel the editors' reply is that we don't know and we don't care. Why anybody should want to multiply 2 dimes by 3 dimes is beyond our comprehension! But if he does, he must label the quantities consistently.

Joe Punch....College Boxer
Anita Cutey ....Beautiful Blonde Freshman
Mary Do-it-all....AWS President

(Scene: Doorway of Garlica High School. Charlie Cub, pencil in hand, has 15 minutes until press deadline to get class election story. Sees Prexy, who once wrote front page stories for The Collegian, observing the new batch of freshman co-eds, and runs up to him.)

Cub: Hullo, Mr. Prexy, can you help me out? I gotta write another two hundred words on the election story, maybe you can tell me who is running?

Prexy: Well, let's see—are there any block men around here? I'll fix you up. (Spots Joe Punch who is comfortably seated on the concrete wall outside the Registrar's office, conversing with an admirer.) Hey, Joe Punch! How would you like to run for High Freshman President?

Punch: (Still conversing with admirer)—an' in the third round, I come out and block his one-two an' give 'im a uppercut wid my right—(becomes aware of Prexy's hollering) What did you say, Pete? Me run for High Freshman President? Don't make me laugh. (ha! Ha! HA! HAH!) There ain't no prestiege in being a class officer. (Returns to admirer) Yeah, I gave 'im a left to the body an' down he goes for the count—(Prexy discovers Don Breadmaker, a block man, who, in turn, discovers another block man, who, in turn, discovers another block man, who, etc., etc. Soon a circle of block men surround Cub and Prexy. Prexy looks at the fellows in football coach fashion.)

Prexy: Which of you guys wants to run for class office? There's a lot of prestige in holding office. Taking myself for an example—

Punch: HAH! HA! Ha! ha!

Prexy: Disregard him. The block society will back you up one hundred per cent. (Silence is the only answer) I can see it's no use asking for volunteers, so I'm telling you, Don Breadmaker, to run for High Frosh President. (To Cub) Put his name down. Now, boys, we want some candidates for Low Freshman President. (Someone suggests a name) A prospective football man? Cub, put his name down. You have a football man, too, Don? Write down Phil Fullback also. Yeah, F-U-L-L-B-A-C-K.

(In a few minutes a full candidate list is made)

Cub: But, Pete, I want some women officers too.

Prexy: That's easy to fix. Hey, Joe Punch, what's your Freshman girl friend's name?

Punch: What's it to you? Find your own, you're a big shot.

Prexy: O. K. If that's the way you feel about it. (Pretty, blonde co-ed comes into view) Hm-m-m, I've never seen her before. What is YOUR name, my pretty little colleen?

Anita C: Anita Cutey.

Prexy: Are you a Low Freshman, cutey—I mean Anita? (She nods her head in affirmative) How would you like to run for low freshman vice-president? You would? O. K. Cub, put her down. You can go now, Anita, (Exit Anita)

Punch: Hey! You can put my girl's name down for secretary. Come over here, Charlie, I'll whisper her name in your ear.

Prexy: And for the rest of the women officers see Mary Do-it-all.

(Mary gives Charlie Cub a list of names which she got by picking from random in the AWS files.)

Twenty four hours pass, Charlie Cub receives the results of the class elections. When he discovers that all the names he wrote down for his story were elected, he quits college and takes a one-way passage to a Trappist monastery in Northern Africa.

It's GO and GO and GO
Oh we ramble, we ramble, Praying for a place to call our own.

AFTER DARK

Presenting Prejudices . . .

Prejudices are fine to have, hard to keep, and should always be open to change, withdrawal, or destruction on any and all occasions. Quite often we have taken time off to compliment ourselves on the fact that we have several rather well-fed prejudices. It has been our lot—though there are some who will cry a violent "nay"—to have kept few thriving. As a matter of personal experience, one good, sound prejudice is fifty times more difficult to hold than six lasting enthusiasms. No sooner do we form one magnificently adverse opinion then something bobs up and pops it off ever so neatly.

For instance: we worked up a lovely loathe for Bellini's opera Norma some time ago. At that time it was a monstrous example of superficial dullness as far as we were concerned. Then, the San Francisco Opera Company performed Norma and we immediately forgot our fine prejudice and enjoyed ourself immensely. Boom!

It is not that we advocate prejudices as the coming thing. But, while we have bad music and bad musicians, prejudices are (or should be) a natural process—something akin to the survival of the fittest. If one is to have prejudices let one be careful that said prejudices are easy to handle, easy to lose and ready for over-hauling at a moment's notice.

Exhibit A . . .

Often a prejudice will get one a nice pack of trouble. On such occasions one should minutely inspect the culprit and find out why and wherefore and how come. Take Nelson Eddy as a horrible example—we've disliked him from scratch, actually since he sang "thelastroundup" as an encore to one of his concerts years ago. That is, he sang it and sang it badly. Since then we have heard him in two other concerts, an opera, and two or more movies and we still believe he can't sing. Hard as we try we fail to find him any asset to the musical world so he's safe among our better prejudices.

Now, what does all this show besides, perhaps, a personal idiocyncracy? Just this, we surmise. A prejudice is only worth what it represents. To elucidate, two listeners dislike a work by a radically contemporary composer. The first listener claims it doesn't sound like last year's music and the second listener complains because the music does sound like last year's music. The first poor soul has just folded his tent like the Arabs; he is only interested in what he knows. The second listener dislikes the music because it seems to him nothing but an imitation.

The first listener loves his ignorance (it probably keeps him warm on winter evenings), the second loves music for its growth—he dislikes all rehashing and restating. To our way of thinking the second listener's prejudice represents a rather keen mind and the first listener's dislike represents a superficial, lazy mind.

Parable . . .

And now that our parable is done let us go the limit and draw an unsightly moral. If one wishes to be known for a fine musical taste one should have an open and ready ear as well as the courage to accept and reject and re-accept on all occasions. One should be prepared to discover a prodigal son in all things musical should the truant prove himself worthy.

Presidential Notes

By Bob Fex

A crisis has appeared in the existence of the college. At a special election on September 27, there will appear on the ballot a bond issue for $2,800,000 for the public school system of San Francisco of which $500,000 is for the completion of the college.

This bond vitally concerns us as members of the junior college, because we will profit a great deal on its passage.

Its passage will insure the completion of the new college buildings without delay.

It is not going to be an easy task to pass this bond issue as it takes a two-thirds majority to see it through; that means we must secure two votes for the bond, to one vote against it. Fifty per cent would be easy, but when you go beyond that figure you run into many difficulties.

The time has come when we must work together 100 per cent to do all that we possibly can to assist the passage of these school bonds.

We have the backing of every member of the faculty, the assistance of practically every important civic and improvement club throughout the city, and Parent Teacher organizations. Still, it is going to be a hard task and every student should do his share to lighten the burden; see your relatives, your friends, your neighbors; explain the purposes of these bonds and enlist aid in insuring their passage.

RAM'S HORN

Letters to this department are welcome. All contributions must be signed by the writer. If the author desires, his identity will be kept confidential. Refrain from lengthy dissertions; short letters will be given preference. Leave contributions in the Powell Street office, the mail box office at Galileo, or in The Guardsman office, W. J. (opposite room 261, Galileo). Deadline for Wednesday's paper is the preceding Friday.

Editor, The Guardsman:

At a recent bull session on the Powell Street sidewalk the question of "who are the dances for anyhow?" was discussed. The following indisputable facts were arrived at:

1. The representation at our dances consists of ⅛ students, ¼ former students, and ⅝ conglomerate (U. S. F., S. F. State, U. C., office workers, high school students, and "free dance moochers".)

2. The J. C. students enjoyed themselves sitting and watching the "guests" dance. Some J. C. students are foolish enough to even attempt to dance.

3. We pay $6.00 a semester to watch our "friends" dance.

After considerable discussion of proposed solutions, we decided that requiring each student to have his picture of him, taken by the school, pasted on his student body card. This would eliminate the mob of non-students at the dances.

Before the next dance all students who plan to attend the coming affairs would present their S. B. cards at the registrar's office to have their picture attached.

Undoubtedly there are other solutions to the problem, probably some are better than the above suggestion. If there are, why not voice them? We all want our $6.00 worth and we all want to have a good time at our S. B. functions.

We've been discussing this problem since J. C. started. Let's do something! Some action now will give us freer action at our dances.

Editor's note: Because of the length of your letter it had to be edited and shortened, however the gist of your comment still remains. Also, your letter couldn't be printed last week because it was submitted too late. Deadline for Wednesday's paper is the preceding Friday.

GUARDSMAN SPORTS

Gaddy's Lambs Play Ragged Ball; Shellacked By Poly And Mission

Doubleheader Sees Reserves Lose: Lack of Sustained Drive

Ragged and uncoordinated playing last week proved fatal to the hopes of Coach Jack Gaddy's Flying Lamb football team, as they dropped two decisions to local high school squads in as many games.

Playing Thursday at Galileo Field, the Ramlets receipted for a pasting from "Pop" Elder's Mission High Bears and then came right back to lose a one-sided contest to Poly. Both tussles ended with the score 12 to 0 in favor of the opposition.

Inability of the Lambs to put together a sustained drive in either game, played a great part in the rout: Although the college had the edge in the Mission game in first downs, 4-2, two came on penalties, and they were unable to roll up two in a row. Poly had a 6-2 margin in first downs.

First Game

The Mission contest, first game of the double-header, was played almost entirely in the east end of the field, kickers on each team being helped, or hindered, by the strong wind from the west. The Bears tallied the first of their pair of scores on the last play of the quarter, after a sustained drive by left-half Tony Klodovich from outside the 30-yd. mark. Klodovich, finding a weakness on the left-side of the Lamb line, pounded at tackle and guard, finally going over tackle from the 2-yd. stripe. Carroll, San Francisco center, blocked Klodovich's conversion attempt.

George Bacich, Bear end, skirted right end late in the third period for 32 yards and the second score. He attempted to plow through center for the conversion but was squelched by a host of Lambs.

Nelson Plays

Harry Aleo and Art Nelson put on the only even partly sustained San Francisco drive of the contest in the fourth period. Aleo tossed a pass to Nelson that was good for 35 yards and a first down. Aleo then was forced out of bounds after picking up six on the right side of the line, hit right tackle for two more, saw Nelson stopped at left guard, and then tried a pass, which fell incomplete to end the drive.

The Poly game found a well-coordinated Parrot eleven running all over the Gaddymen, who were lucky to hold the score down as far as they did, Poly losing several scoring opportunities because of penalties at vital moments.

Mattson Opens

Harold Mattson opened the festivities early, when midway of the first quarter, he ploughed through center from the 1-yd. mark to score. Tom Kilday's kick was wide.

San Francisco fell a victim to time in the first half, their only real scoring threat of the game being stopped by the end of the half with the ball inside the Parrot 5-yd. mark. Poly scored in the last period, third-stringer Leslie Warren tearing around right-end from the ten. The conversion attempt was at the same place but was smothered.

WOMEN'S SPORTS PARADE

By Carol Pickering

Elections start tomorrow! Elections for what? For sports managers in the Women's Athletic Association, of course. Polls will be set up at the check room window at Powell Street and in the girl's gym at Galileo High School. Every WAA member is eligible to vote, not only for one sport but every one on the list. See you at the polls.

* * *

Tomorrow, besides being the first day for elections, is the last day for nominations. This was necessary because the Thursday classes have no other time to choose their candidates.

* * *

The next important date on the semester program is the Initiation Luncheon to be held September 13 in the faculty cafe at Galileo. In a tip to the freshmen we say this is one of the most important events of the season. The luncheon is held especially for the freshmen and other new members, as the name indicates. After the entertainment and food, those present will sign the membership book, which makes them a full fledged member and eligible for a striking emblem, triangular in shape and red and white in the college colors. There is a catch, however. Besides abiding by the rules and regulations closely, only first team students, that means the best, will receive the emblems.

* * *

WAA council will meet this week to elect a luncheon committee. To freshmen who may still be puzzled about the functions of the Association, the small handbooks given out during Orientation week are still available at the gym office in the Galileo building.

* * *

Will the women who signed up for committee work at Powell Street please do so again? Some brainstorm took the first list and it is still missing, making it necessary to sign again.

* * *

A warning to tennis go-getters. The tennis classes have grown beyound their limits, thus creating a long waiting list for that sport. Students who have signed up for the course and do not attend regularly, will be dropped immediately and their place filled by one in the waiting list.

* * *

Hockey, not a very old sport in the college catalogue, now has two teams, enough for a rousing good game and lots of competition. Members, especially beginners, of each team ought to be applying for membership in the Black and Blue club soon.

* * *

The B and B club, by the way, is a brand new organization. The idea originated in the conk (brain-center) of Jane Mitchell, vice-president of the Associated Students and ardent volley-baller. According to fellow teamsters she is a good hack stop, but according to Jane her hack doesn't feel so good. Charlotte Nield caught one on the jaw. She didn't duck fast enough. Only an honorary member is Peggy Starr, star of the freshies.

* * *

Construction work may have stopped on the college site at Balboa Park, but plenty is going on at the Palace of Fine Arts, where tennis enthusiasts take their exercise. The faulty courts, those with humps, bumps, and dips, are being torn up. It is impossible to converse because of the racket, what with steam shovels, scrapers, and those things that break up the cement.

Block SF Takes Steps In Bond Issue Campaign; Treacy Slattery In Charge

Meeting in special session last night, the Block SF Society pledged itself as a whole to stand solidly in back of the campaign for the passage of the school bond issue and to do everything in its power to aid in bringing to the public a realization of the bond's importance.

According to President Treacy "Lergy" Slattery, the Block Society is taking charge of the sticker campaign and endeavoring to circulate stickers among all automobile owners.

Treacy Dims

"We aim," said Slattery, "to have a sticker on every windshield in San Francisco before the week is out, and a good many on other places, too. The Block Society is really serious about this project, and is going to do its very best to put the bond issue over."

Plans were discussed at the meeting for securing a large truck to be plastered with stickers and driven around town to publicize the issue and impress its importance on the public.

Placer a Breather? Schmale Says No—Certainly Not

By Jack Schmale

Those statistical minded persons who draw up schedules made a disastrous mistake in billing Placer Junior College to meet the Rams in the season's opener next week, if it was a breather they were after.

Four husky veterans are forming the nucleus of the Miner eleven, and an impressive collection of former prep stars will join them in their initial attempt to blast the locals off the gold standard in the Seals Stadium night contest a week from Saturday.

Good Boys

Jay Gold, end from Roseville, Fred Sexton, Dunsmuir quarterback, Neil McLellan of Auburn, a shifty character in the backfield, and Elmo "Butch" Crandall, said to be the "Tarzan of the team", at running guard, include the veteran material.

Importations

Sexton imported a pair of his buddies from Dunsmuir, namely Rebelle Baldo and Armand Trafton, to get into the spirit of things. Les Cook and Marvin Addy commute from Colusa, Ivar Hanson dropped in from Grass Valley, while 225 pound Stanley Londquist from Exeter is said to be the outstanding candidate of the freshie group.

Harold Fitch of Barstow, Cal., is showing a great deal of speed along with Homer Biggs of Nevada City. Both are track experts.

Boys Names Baffle

How'd you like to be the public address announcer at the Ram games this fall?

Imagine the job in store for him with such conflicting pronounciations as Barber for Baber, Verducci for Verducci and Bourke for Burke.

Yes sir, we have Ed Baber at quarter and Howard Barber at end. Frank Verducci and Johnnie Verducci will be alternating at quarter, while Barney Bourke also barks 'em, with Tom Burke playing guard.

What a sweat Sweet'll be in!

Wilson's Soccer Stalwarts Held To Scoreless Tie In Lowell Game

Coach Tom Wilson's soccer stalwarts were held to a scoreless tie at the Beach Chalet field a week ago yesterday by a fighting Lowell High team.

Only sensational stops by the college goalie, Chiesa, former Poly star, saved the Ram shinkickers from an ignoble defeat.

Lose Opportunities

The Rams played as individuals rather than as a unit, and several scoring opportunities failed as a result of poor teamwork.

Two veterans of last year's championship outfit, Bob Nicco, and Hal Stoltze, showed to advantage at the inside right position, while a newcomer, Sandy Shotwell, proved a capable center half.

Inexperience Tells

Wilson's squad was noticeably weak, however, both defensively, and offensively, in the fullback and halfback spots, with inexperienced men covering those positions.

Several positions on the team are still open, and anyone wishing to try

Baseball Will Be Revived Monday Afternoon When All Prospects Report To Coach Lee Eisan For Practice

Baseball supposedly dead for the season at the college will be revived on Monday afternoon at 2:15 when all prospects will report to the office of Coach Lee Eisan who plans to get in some fall practice.

Returning lettermen for all but three positions and with the presence of a few outstanding prep performers who are certain to be in the fold next spring make the Ram nine one of the teams to beat.

Newcomers

Outstanding among the newcomers is Bill Mustandish, all-city catcher from Commerce High, easily the most sensational and finished backstop to perform in the local high school league in quite some time, Mickey McMahon, shortstop and second sacker from Poly High and muchly sought after semi-pro player.

Rueben Friedkin, long, rangy, first sacker from Washington High who hit a cool 400 in last season's high school pennant scramble.

Experience Too

The rest of the team will be a veteran one with experienced men at each position. Arnie Banta, third sacker, is performing in Eastbay leagues as is Ed Curcio, last spring's starting hurler who is raring to go. Kent Baird, shortstop, Weaver Galbraith, outfielder, and Frankie Nilan a fleetfooted, versatile infielder, outfielder and pitcher will form the nucleus of a very formidable aggregation of horsehiders.

Coach Eisan will have the boys working out as a unit once or twice a month just so that he can fit the newcomers into the scheme of things and get off to a flying start immediately. Other than semi-monthly practice the boys will be playing all over the bay area on outstanding semi-pro teams while waiting for the junior college loop to get under way.

Football Goes Big Time; Roster Or Time Table

Ram football goes "big time" this fall!

For the varsity roster will look like a railroad time table of Northern California and way points. San Francisco itself will be well represented, but outside communities will contribute talent aplenty to Russ Sweet's squad.

From Healdsburg, on the Russian River, comes big Joe Laughlin, 185 pounds worth of fullback. Berkeley lends Frank Davenport, first team end, and Alameda Jack McCullough, a tough customer at tackle. From Oakland you'll find Stan Bierwith, Jack DuFosse and several others.

Maxie Teel, the Golden Glover, who is due to report for a guard assignment, hails from Willows, Calif.

P.S. Frank Verducci resides in Daly City!

RAMblings

By Jack Schmale

Memos of a press agent:

The Chamber of Commerce of the thriving little community of Manteca in the San Joaquin Valley is due this fall for some fine sport page publicity through the efforts of one of its sons, a Mr. Jim Connors. Young Connors, all that a football coach could ask for, will be the Ram left halfback this season. He'll be one of the best ball carriers in this section, colleges included!

* * *

The Examiner sport pages very shortly will carry a little story to the effect that rival linemen had better behave themselves when opposing the Rams this season. Russ Sweet will have at his disposal a pair of guards named Mel Chicazola and Max Teel. Chicazola was Golden Gloves light heavyweight boxing champ on the same squad with Teel, the middle weight title holder!

* * *

Spectators at the Placer tilt at Seals Stadium September 17 will see two ball games. The Lambs will collide with Commerce High in a 6.45 preliminary that evening, according to present plans. It will be the second meeting of the two, a replay of last Saturday's skirmish on the Bulldog grid. Arrangements are under way for a struggle with Lowell on another twilight twin bill.

* * *

If football stadiums were built without seats the constructors would hear a unanimous complaint from Mr. and Mrs. Public. Yet why must the spectators adorn the field time after time when plenty of empty seats are wasting away in the stands? A youngster narrowly escaped injury last Thursday in the Lamb vs. Poly game, when sitting on the sidelines, several players fell over him.

* * *

Do you realize that varsity football opens next week? Yessir, its only a week from Saturday that the Placer Miners migrate down from the hills of Auburn to open the schedule. Incidentally, note the Auburn. There is no junior college in Placerville.

* * *

It has been suggested that the college purchase a hospital ward for disabled footballers if the injury jinx doesn't lift. Walt Boltano, veteran fullback, "Bud" Welchers, end, and Frankie Verducci, quarter, are benched with scrimmage wounds. All will return shortly, however. George Jensen, Lamb fullback, is likewise attending practice in street clothes.

* * *

Latest units in Ram pigskin parade are Joe Laughlin, a fullback, and Barney Bourke, a quarter. Laughlin is fast. He weighs 185 pounds, kicks and passes besides handling his ball carrying assignment well. He's from Healdsburg High. Bourke barked signals for Lowell three years back. He scales around 175.

* * *

Although its a little premature for basketball gossip these days, it might be remarked that ten of the twelve Rams who assisted in the major upset of St. Mary's in the P. A. A. tournament last season are back with us. Only Treacy Slattery and Bill Phelan, alternate forwards, will not return. Coach "Dutch" Conlan has big plans for a great team next winter.

Traditional pageantry of Great Britain, her colonies and her dominions will be presented on Empire Day, May 27, during the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition.

Reserves' Losing Streak Broken With 6-0 Victory Over Commerce Bulldogs

Hard-Fought Game Decided By Davies' Last-Minute Score

By Dick Simpers

Breaking a scoreless tie with a sensational long-distance thrust at the goal-line on the final play of the game, Jack Gaddy's Flying Lamb footballers last Saturday emerged from their contest with the Commerce High School varsity with a well-earned 6-0 victory, their first of the season.

Play throughout most of the tussie see-sawed back and forth evenly, and most of the spectators had given up all hope for a score as the teams went into the last minute of play with the Lambs in possession of the ball on the Bulldogs' 35 yard line. A thrust at the line having proved unavailing and with only a few seconds of playing time remaining, Dan Baker faded back and flipped a perfect pass to Temple Davies, halfback, who gathered it into his arms on the 20-yard line, slid away from the frantic clutches of a would-be tackler, and scampered unmolested into the end zone for the first and only tally of the day.

Bulldogs Threaten

Early in the contest, the blue and white gridders from Van Ness Avenue menaced the Lambs' goal on three different occasions, driving the Gaddymen within their own 10-yard marker with power plays through the line. Each time, however, the "Goofs" dug in and managed to hold their rivals for downs, finally reaching safety when Davies rooted out a tremendous boot of 90 yards to set the opposition back deep in its own territory.

The Gaddy lads also blew a golden opportunity in the second quarter when they secured a first down on the Commerce five as the result of Mel Chickazola blocking a punt and recovering the ball at that point. Three attempts to penetrate the line resulted in a net gain of exactly nothing, and the threat sputtered out when a pass into the end zone on fourth down fell incomplete.

Ellis Rambles

Just before the gun sounded ending the first half, the Lambies again found themselves in a position to accomplish something as Ward Ellis intercepted a pass and carried it back into the vicinity of the goal, but the crack of the time-keeper's pistol brought the threat to a sudden end.

Again at the outset of the third quarter the Gaddymen loomed dangerously, passing and running to within the Bulldog 20, but again a last down pass fell incomplete. Passes from Baker to Al Huffnagel and Jim Molich carried the collegians down-field steadily, but the attack bogged down at the crucial moment.

At this point Ed McGovern went into the game at tackle for the collegians, but he did not remain there very long.

Bartlett Commerce Ace

For the rest of the contest neither team had any appreciable advantage until the final conclusive attack of the Lambs broke up the game at the last moment.

Outstanding for Commerce was the speedy colored halfback Wilbur Bartlett, who caused no end of trouble to the Red and White linemen. A tricky

Manager Hoffman of New Water Polo Squad Issues Call; Goalie Bob Fex and Fish Simpers Answer; Also Others

When Marcus Hoffman, manager and captain of the newly formed water-polo team issued the call for candidates for the rollicking, roly-poly sport, seventeen aspirants answered the call for the newly innovated Ram sport.

Among those who signified their intentions of coming out for the team and who have had experience are: Norwood Forte, Ian Stoddard, and Gene Carriker, hailing from the Olympic Club; Marcus and Mitchell Hoffman, and Bob Kahn, from the Jewish Community Center team. From way down south comes Charley Martin of the Santa Cruz Seaside team.

All Champs

These boys all were members of the 1938 Ram swimming team who distinguished themselves by sensational victories over the Olympic Club, Menlo Junior College and the Jewish Community Center teams.

New names that will be mentioned quite frequently in aquativity this year are: Ned Eiselman, Bob Mandel, Larry Korchet, Bob Dolman, Don Cox, Bob Hagen, Gino Tricoli, Treacy Slattery, Goalie Bob Fex, and Dick "Human Fish" Simpers. None of these boys are known to have any previous experience in water-polo.

Under Way Soon

Though the water-polo season doesn't start until October, practice will get right under way as soon as the team can find an available pool and time to suit the members of the team. Hoffman has tentatively lined up Jewish Community Center, Y. M. C. A., Stanford and California teams for games in October.

Any students desiring to come out for the team should see either Hoffman or any members of the team.

Rifle Open House Goes Over With A Bang-Bang

Feminine Annie Oakleys and masculine Daniel Boone's flooded the college Rifle and Pistol Club's range at Galileo last week and this week as that organization offered free shooting to the school at large.

"What eye do you use," and "Hey, where's the trigger," were some of the greenhorn remarks which emanated from the range.

However, after a little instruction, the "Tyro" beginners were popping the "X" ring regularly. So regularly, in fact, that coach "Wild Bill" Hancock has already detained some of the prospects for future service on the college teams.

"Our free offer to all college students to come down to the range any afternoon and try some shooting under the supervision and instruction of our expert coaches will continue for another week," said James Hughes, instructor.

Said Howie Markovits, Rifle and Pistol Club President, "Our Open House Week went over with such a bang, we will continue the offer for an indefinite amount of time.

"Any college man or woman may come to the rifle range in the Galileo basement any afternoon but Wednesday and shoot absolutely free of charge. We have both rifles and pistols. Everybody's welcome!"

Final Check Shows Total Registration of 2044; Old Record Shattered

At the close of the registration period last week a record enrollment of 2035 students was announced by the finance office and by the Registrar's Office. A final checkup late last week revealed an increase of nine students to bring the sum total registration to 2044 students.

"Of the total number recorded last fall being 1644 and of the number of last spring, 1790, the ratio between men and women has steadily increased each year," announced Mary Jane Learnard, assistant registrar.

Students desiring to change their programs after having filed their registration books are warned to secure official change of program slips from the Registrar's Office and any student dropping a course without the change of program slip will be marked as having failed in that particular course.

Late registrants had their pictures taken last Friday at the Galileo building, which brings all registration activity to an end.

Below are the final figures for the semester of 1938. The number in parenthesis indicate the semester in which each group of students belong.

For every hundred dollars authorized under the bonds, forty-five dollars will be an outright gift of the Federal Government.

Proceeds of the bonds will aid in a realization of the following Public School building program:

A HINT—The last time the people voted on school bonds was in December 1933 when they authorized a $3,000,000 issue (three million dollars), forty-five per cent of which was an outright gift from the Federal Government. The total YES vote then was 69,377. Proceeds of the bond issue made possible the erection of new schools which are in use today. However, the total number of citizens eligible to vote at the special election, Tuesday, September 27 is 321,000.

Peace Society Convenes At Porter's To Discuss Plans For Semester

First meeting of the Peace Society will be held tomorrow night, 8 p.m. at the home of Bob Porter, 3234 Pacific Avenue, near Presidio, accessible by the 3 car.

Main topic of discussion will be the plans for the ensuing semester. The tense European situation is also expected to be discussed. The world is nearer the verge of war now than it has been for some time, Porter explained.

He emphasized that all students interested in studying the methods of maintaining and establishing peace and carrying on activity for peace are welcome to attend the meeting tomorrow and become members of the society.

Officers of the organization are: Porter, president; Miriam Frazier, secretary-treasurer; and Dorothy Pilgrim, corresponding secretary. Faculty advisers of the group are John Ross, William Goss, and Gertrude Bolton.

The society is still active, Porter says, in working with civic groups preparing for the American Goodwill Congress to be held in San Francisco the week of November 7-11.

"Luxury Limited" Planned For Big Sacramento Trip

On to Sacramento!

Little time is being wasted on plans for a bigger and better second annual jaunt to meet the Panthers, via Ram Special, come Oct. 21.

Based on the success of last year's excursion, Jack Schmale, College Publicity Director, in charge of arrangements announces that this year's Southern Pacific rattler will be a veritable limited, equipped with dancing, lounge and observation cars, in addition to seven standard coaches.

The train will leave from the Oakland Mole immediately following the arrival of the 4:20 boat from the Ferry Building, and will reach Sacramento about 6:45, without a stop en route. It will return from Sacramento around 11:30, arriving in San Francisco shortly after 1 a.m.

Barney Harvey, S. P. Passenger Agent, announces that a more reasonable rate than last year's $1.80 fare may be obtained.

Landscape Architecture Class Is New Institution

An entirely new class originated this semester under the instruction of John Hermann, and is known as the Landscape Architecture Class. This group is working under an advisory committee of labor and employee groups. Classes are held at a greenhouse located at 23rd Avenue and Quintara Street, and maintained by the Hollowell Seed Company. Thirty-six students have registered in the new course.

A meeting of the nursery division advisory committee was held to discuss the following problems: (1) the need for this type of training, (2) employment possibilities, (3) curriculum and subject content, and (4) the teaching technique to be employed.

Present at the meeting were the following members: Hans Plath; Mr. Overlach; Toichie Demato, representing the Central California Nursery Committee; Ray Millaney, of the Landscape Architecture department of San Francisco Public Schools; Albert Schick, of Surveyment's Union 1183; Anita Day Hubbard, of the San Francisco Examiner; and Jean Boyd, of the San Francisco Garden Club.

An orchid display for the 1939 Golden Gate International Exposition on San Francisco Bay will be the most elaborate ever to be held in America.

Conlan's Golfers To Begin Practice; Sign-ups Early

Although the official season does not roll around until next semester, Coach Louis "Dutch" Conlan announces that the golf team will start practice soon.

With the Romey twins, holdovers from last year's squad, as a nucleus, Coach Conlan expects to produce a strong team to compete in the conference championships next May.

There will be an early signup and all golf hopefuls are asked to watch the bulletin board for further details.

A $1,250,000 Chinese Village is being planned for the 1939 Gold Gate International Exposition on San Francisco Bay.

WAA Members To Elect Managers Tomorrow At Powell and Galileo

Members of the Women's Athletic Association will elect their sport managers tomorrow at the Powell Street building in the morning and in the women's gym at Galileo High School in the afternoon, according to the officers of the organization. The elections will continue on Monday, which is the last day. Tomorrow is also the last day for nominations, because the Thursday classes have no other time to assemble.

More than one hundred women have joined the WAA this semester, making it one of the largest organizations in the college. The policy of the group is to develop talent and a liking for all sports instead of specializing in one field. Fourteen different sports are taught at the college which include archery, badminton, dancing (tap, modern, and folk), fencing, golf, hockey, riding, rifle, social dancing, swimming, tennis, and volleyball.

The administrative duties connected with each sport are carried out by a manager. This woman is elected from her classes and is the representative of the participants at the WAA council, at which time she meets with the other sports managers and officers. Managers are expected to arrange for extra activities, keep records of participants and attendance, and at the end of the semester to turn in a full and complete report of the past semester to the council. A manager takes all suggestions and requests from her group to the council, and from all council meetings she takes back what information is necessary to her own group.

Pictures of the candidates will be posted at the polls at both buildings. During the initiation luncheon to be held September 13 the newly elected managers will be introduced.

UTAH REGISTRANT SIGNS-UP BY LONG DISTANCE; WONG CATERS

Student Enrolls In Hotel Division After Checking Requirements By Phone

Qualifying for entrance over long distance telephone from his home in Richfield, Utah, last Friday, Lester Asbury arrived at the college last Wednesday and immediately enrolled in the hotel and restaurant management division.

Young Asbury's father, operator of the Hotel Johnston, in Richfield, decided on this college, as the one for his son, when he heard the hotel division, highly recommended by San Francisco Hotel men, at a recent meeting in Utah.

Tom Caswell of Raffle's Hotel in Placerville; Tom Duffey of Berkeley; Albert Floyd of Berkeley; Elice Francoeur of San Francisco; Eva Goldine of San Francisco; Ernest Godfrey of Yreka, California; A. S. James of the Hotel Pacific Mills of Vancouver, British Columbia; Robert Klinger of the Bristol Hotel in Boise, Idaho; Jean Miller of Berkeley; Tony Sandelin of the Palace Hotel in Ukiah; Sterling Silver of Watsonville; Thorwald Thomsen of Redwood City; Lester Asbury of the Johnson Hotel of Richfield, Utah; and Janet Teter, Robert Walker, Kathleen Calverly, and John Bass all of San Francisco.

Graduate Is Instructor In Science of Planning For Social Functions

Although not known to some students, there exists in the hotel division of the college, an excellent catering service maintained by Lawrence Wong, a graduate of the hotel and restaurant division.

Wong has been catering to clubs for several semesters and recently completely took care of the epicurean needs at the Men's Club function.

The only kind of catering agency in any college of the country, Wong specializes in weddings, receptions, parties, dinners, and banquets, and is especially seeking college club trade.

If desired, he will plan the entire affair, which includes making up the menu, purchasing, preparation, and the host of responsibilities connected with an occasion of this sort.

Wong has already earned a reputation for his efficient service and epicurean delights. He is capable of planning the food for up to three hundred people.

His office is located at 689 Clay Street. He can be contacted, however, through the hotel and restaurant division office at Room 104 in the Galileo building.

ECONOMICS SOCIETY INITIATES NEW MEMBERS TOMORROW; MEETING TO FOLLOW CEREMONY

Tomorrow evening at Galileo High School at 7:30 o'clock, Omicron Phi Pi, college economics society, will initiate new members into the organization, Charles Vaughn, president, announced.

William Marsh, instructor of insurance, William Hopple, a student at the University of California, David Moonie, and Albert Graves are the candidates eligible for membership who will be initiated.

Following the initiation ceremony the neophytes and members of the society will gather at Dr. Zorelin's home for a short meeting and social.

Student members from the University of California as well as members in the college are expected to attend the initiation ceremony and meeting, President Vaughn said.

Students who have completed six units of economics with a grade average of "B" or better and who wish to join the society may attend the ceremony on invitation from a member of the organization, President Vaughn disclosed.

E PLURIBUS UNUM!

By A. J. Cloud, President San Francisco Junior College

Freely translating the title of this article into English, we have: Out of Many, One. The words appear on coins of the United States, signifying the union of many parts to form one nation.

The spirit of oneness in the student-body of the San Francisco Junior College throughout its history has been a cause of rejoicing. This spirit was again made manifest to me recently upon holding an interview with the President of the student-body and other representatives of the Executive Committee. They assured me of their deep interest in the success of the current "housing" campaign out of which the college stands to benefit largely, and of their earnest desire to enlist actively in the promotion of ways and means of securing favorable returns from the voters when the election is held on September 27 next. They repeated these assurances and presented constructive suggestions afterward at a Faculty Association dinner, gaining instantaneous approval of their plans. These student leaders then proved that they gave true expression to the beliefs and wishes of their constituents by gaining full and enthusiastic endorsement of their program at an overflow student meeting.

Such unity spells success.

Take the situation at a tug-of-war. One team of several contestants is hitched to a long, heavy rope. Another team is hitched to the opposite end of the rope. The two teams pull, or tug, against each other until the team that best pulls together drags the opponents bodily across the central markers to its side of the fighting ground. The winners may be lighter in weight and less husky in frame than the losers. Not infrequently they are. It is unitedness of form and spirit that gain the day.

The illustration has varied applications. In the immediate instance, it relates itself to a drive which calls for the same kind of concerted, coordinated effort as the tug-of-war team needs in order to win. The voters are well-disposed, in general, but largely uninformed, and not wholly alive to the total situation. Too many of them remain away from the polls on election day.

You who are now approaching adulthood may render your friends and neighbors of the electorate a valuable service by enlightening them upon the subject of the college building program, and urging upon them the desirability of casting a vote. From the point of a view of developing a sense of civic responsibility through active participation in a worthy movement, you will find such an experience a valuable element in a college education.

In the spirit of oneness, then, we go forward—students and faculty, side by side—to realize our high hopes of success in this present enterprise.

The Shortest Distance Between Two Points Is A Straight Line, But There's No Straight Line To The 18 Points On The "Campus"

'Yes' On Proposition Number 4 September 27 Means A Straight Line To San Francisco Junior College

By JACK SCHMALE

One year, one month, two days, five hours: That's exactly how long it would require 2,000 students of the college to make the circle tour of the 18 "campi", if they were dispatched one at a time.

So relates the statistical report compiled by your Guardsman reporter who made the jaunt by automobile last week, accompanied by Bob Fex, Associated Students' President.

It would cost each student just 95 cents in car fare to complete such a journey. In an automobile the expense would run around $2.14, at the rate-of six cents per mile.

It took the experimental party two hours and 34 minutes, actual running time, to complete the trip, exclusive of extra parking mileage and stops at the 18 locations.

The street car trip, referred to in the opening paragraph, would necessitate riding on 15 trolleys, making six transfers en route.

After arriving at Powell Street from home, the lengthiest jump thereafter in the circle is the 4.7 mile stretch between Samuel Gompers Trade School at Twenty-second and Mission to the Greenhouse at 23rd Avenue and Quintara. It took the auto 16 minutes for this one, traveling at a rapid clip.

Suppose you had a 10 o'clock Business class at Girls High School, were dismissed at 10:50, and due at the North Beach Pool for swimming at 11. It would take you, roughly, 31 minutes by street car. You would arrive at 11:21. By the time you performed a quick change into natatorial attire and hit the water the clock would show around 11:30. Class is over at 11:50, so you have to be out of the water ten minutes previous to that time. You would swim for ten minutes.

If you had a class at Lick Wilmerding, and were "allowed" ten minutes between points, it would be a difficult task to reach the Greenhouse Horticultural meeting in time for roll call. The distance is just a mere 6.2 miles, and the street car time 53 minutes.

On the street car tour "through our school", there are 27 blocks to be traversed between connections. That represents 2.7 miles of footwear. To 2,000 students it would mean a composite "hike" of 5,400 miles, or almost the distance from San Francisco to Chicago and back!

The college bowlers, to their Physical Education classes at Golden Gate Recreation on Jones Street, walk just 280 miles, commodiously every week, between the alleys and Powell Street.

It is rumored that should Number 4 not carry, the college's newest location will be within the well known city limits of a place called Los Angeles. Some persons are thinking seriously of moving into Contra Costa County with a couple of courses right now!

REMEMBER!

1. The date of the school bond election is September 27.
2. A two-thirds majority is needed to carry the school bond issue.
3. Favorable action on the school bonds will mean that the junior college will have three buildings within a year instead of one only. (The construction of the first unit of the college plant, or group of buildings on the Balboa Park campus arrangement is not dependent on passage or rejection of the bond issue.)
4. If the school bond issue should fail, ten years may pass before the total plant can be built; if the bond issue should carry, the COMPLETE COLLEGE CAMPUS MAY BE REALIZED WITHIN A PERIOD OF THREE YEARS.
5. In other words, the school bond money will allow a definite SPEEDING-UP of the college building plans so that a larger part of the total plant may be occupied at a much earlier date.

MEETING CALLED AT GALILEO TONIGHT TO FORM STUDENT COMMITTEES

Formation of a student workers' committee to take charge of various projects pertaining to the passage of the school bond issue in the forthcoming election will be the main business of a meeting tonight in room 458 at Galileo High School.

Associated Students' President Bob Fex has requested that any student who feels a real interest in the campaign and is willing to devote some of his time to the cause of putting it over make it a point to appear at the meeting tonight at 7:45 o'clock. Assignment of students to the different projects will be made, and activity will be started with a minimum of delay.

Faculty Active

The faculty committee for promotion of the bond issue has already begun to function, under the leadership of its chairman, Louis Conlan. It is planned to have speakers at all local high schools to address the students on the importance of the issue to all San Francisco schools. Conlan, law instructor, spoke last week at Commerce High, and other speakers are scheduled to make similar addresses at other schools.

Subdivisions of the student committee to be formed tonight will be appointed to handle different phases of the campaign, according to Fex. Each group will be in charge of a certain activity and will be responsible for carrying it through to completion.

Distribute Literature

Distribution of literature and stickers urging the bond's passage, and of "throw-away" cards and pledge cards will be under the supervision of a committee, as will the task of making arrangements for radio broadcasts on the subject. There will also be a speakers' committee and a stenography committee, as well as committees to handle the many other aspects of the campaign.

"Need For College Apparent"

That there is a definite need for the college is quite apparent. What is not so apparent, however, is the fact that a college cannot operate to its fullest capacity while holding classes at 18 locations.

The task of rushing from Girls High to Galileo to Powell Street to Funston Field to Marina Junior High and innumerable other locations has become a habit to the 638 women attending school at the present time. We must be content with a small room in the basement of the Book Store as our only refuge. The fact that we must suffer inconveniences at this time is insignificant, however, when paralleled to possibility of a school and campus of our own in the near future.

The fulfillment of that possibility rests with the voters on September 27. It is our duty to make certain that the result of that election will provide the housing facilities we need. Use the fine cooperation you have displayed in all women's activities toward furthering the successful passage of Proposition 4.

Miriam Dunne, President
Associated Women Students

Round and round the city searching for an education between times of travel go 2050 San Francisco Junior College students. Most of them, if planning to visit the eighteen locations of the college campus would follow the route as indicated on the above map.

1 is Powell Street, where the college borrows from the University of California for its morning headquarters, from the book store and the P. G. and E. building for its library. 2 is the 828 Brannan Street location for hotel division meat cutting classes. 3 is Lick-Wilmerding, Seventeenth and Potrero, home of future engineers. 4 is Samuel Gompers at 22nd and Mission for radio engineers. 5 presents a problem that puts many a student in a major dilemma. How will he reach the greenhouses at 23rd Avenue and Quintara Street for his horticulture class before which lies a tunnel, hills and no direct route?

6 is Kezar for track and basketball, and 7 the San Francisco Riding School, 234 Stanyan. If an airplane would get you there in time for 8's tendance in the complete business study offered at Girls High School, Scott and Geary Streets. 9, again across the city, is Marina Junior High School, Fillmore and Chestnut, for the hotel division. 10 is nearby Funston where both men and women meet for Physical Education. 11 is Yacht Harbor, scene of crew practice by the Gaddrmen. 12 offers archery targets at Fort Mason for student contestants. 13, the Galileo High School at Van Ness Avenue and Francisco, administrative and afternoon headquarters. 14, at Lombard and Columbus, is the North Beach Pool for men swimmers, while 15 is the Columbus, is the North Beach Pool for men swimmers, while 15 is the women's pool at the YWCA building on Sutter Street. 16 provides bowling at 115 Jones Street. Thence to 17, High School of Commerce, where Industrial Chemists study at night. Now to turn in the route, back to 18, The Guardsman headquarters at 447 Sansome Street, where the firm of Strehl and Olivier prints the college newspaper.

"Let People Know The Truth"

In asking that all students cooperate and work together during this school housing campaign, we do not believe that we are overstepping our bounds.

Success of anything, no matter how large or how small, depends on everyone working together toward a specific end.

The hardships that students now undergo in order to attend college in the 18 different locations in this city, which is known throughout the world as "the city that knows how," are not fair to these young men and young women in their search for higher education.

The great majority of people are not aware of the conditions under which the college is operating, and if people did know of them they would do something to straighten out their circumstances.

It is up to us, as members of the Associated Students and the ones who will benefit by the building program, to let these people know the truth about existing conditions.

Men and women of the college, we are now ready to go. Contact all the voters of the city. Get them to go to the polls on September 27, and vote YES on number 4!

The Uncast Vote Makes the Decision

IN CONDUCTING the campaign for passage of the school building program an effort must be directed toward getting citizens who are registered to go to the polls on September 27 and vote YES on proposition number 4. This is particularly important since a bond issue must receive a two-thirds majority to pass.

Past elections show that the uncast vote often decides the outcome of an election, particularly, are participated in by very few voters, and these are usually principally against spending money; therefore they cast a ballot. The opposing force is usually more vigorous in its opinion and acts, whereas the forces favorable to the issue are interested but are inclined to be passive in their activity.

The school bond issue coming up before the people at the end of this month is essential to the existence of the college and it is imperative that members of this institution put every ounce of energy into the campaign if San Francisco Junior College is to thrive.

The last time San Francisco voted on school bonds, passage was secured by a slim majority. Figures for the special election on December 19, 1933 show clearly the apathy of the public. Of a total registration of 265,482, a total vote of 101,241 was cast. 69,377 voted yes; 30,530 voted no.

Thus less than fifty per cent of the registered voters in 1933 went to the polls. It was indeed fortunate that enough social-minded citizens acted. It seems to have been more by luck than anything else that education was victorious. If fewer people had voted it would have meant defeat for the extension of educational facilities to the youth of the city.

Reports from other California cities indicate the indifference of citizens to their civic duty in recent special elections, where between 70 and 75 per cent of the registered voters remained away from the polls, leaving the ultimate decision on bond issues to the 25 of 30 per cent minority. Commenting on this point, the San Jose News remarked:

"If we have any quarrel at all, it is with the 75 per cent of the voters who did not bother to go to the polls and vote. Twenty-seven per cent —9,879 votes out of a registration of 37,055, is a very small number of voters to pass on an issue as important as spending half a million dollars of the people's money for new schools."

It is clear then, that members of the college, both students and faculty, have a two fold task to perform: to acquaint the public with the nature of Proposition Number 4 and the situation the college is now in, and to get the public to vote yes en masse.

We can be reasonably certain that if the majority of voters has its say, the bond issue will be accepted by more than the necessary two-thirds majority. It is a question of informing the public and stressing the necessity of casting a ballot. Remember, the uncast vote can lose an election.

Neither A Borrower Nor A Lender Be

AFTER the last dance given by the college, cries of protest were long and loud against the over-crowded condition at the affair, caused by the presence of large numbers of persons who had no actual right to attend but were present on borrowed student body cards. Aroused, at last, to a realization of the fact that this practice of lending cards is spoiling the dances for regular students who attend legitimately, the Executive Council has announced that such lending will no longer be tolerated.

For too long has this condition prevailed at the college's dances; butchers, bakers, and high school students have flocked in and rendered conditions intolerable for those for whom the dances are supposedly given. Now we are assured that such will not be the case hereafter. Steps have been taken to insure that everyone who presents a student-body card at the door will be presenting his own student body card, not one borrowed from a friend who is not sufficiently interested to attend. Anyone caught trying to gain entrance in this way will have his card confiscated immediately by an identification committee at the door, and the owner of the card will be brought before the Judicial Committee for punishment.

A policy of passive remonstrance against the practice has been found to be ineffective; the situation has reached a point where definite action has become necessary in order to prevent a recurrence of the debacle which took place at the St. Francis. From now on, students who lend out their cards will not escape with no more than a wrist-slapping; as a last resort, an actual penalty will be imposed on those found guilty of perpetuating such trickery. It will not be the borrowers who will suffer most; it will be the lenders.

"Bonds Hasten Campus Completion"

Establishment of a Junior College in San Francisco has been the concern of the Parent-Teacher Association for many years. It is imperative that this college be completed at the earliest possible date. Our children must not be compelled longer to travel hither and yon throughout the city to attend classes. This bond issue will hasten the day when the students will be housed in one complete school on their own campus.

We solicit the support of everyone to bring about this happy consummation.

"Makeshift System Inefficient"

The San Francisco Junior College, established in 1935, holds classes in 18 separate locations awaiting the erection of permanent buildings at Balboa Park. As a business man, no argument is needed to convince me that this makeshift system is inefficient and one which works a distinct hardship on college students and faculty as well. Plans for these structures have already been drawn and work will begin when the citizens approve a short term bond issue on September 27 providing quarters for 2,000 young people who might otherwise be denied the advantages of a higher education.

James Leo Halley, Chairman of Public School Week

"College An Economy Measure"

Citizens of San Francisco demanded over a period of years that the Board of Education establish a junior college as an economy measure to save costs of sending students from home during the first two years of college. The college has paid its way in savings in tuition formerly paid by San Francisco to other counties and has conservatively saved parents of students $360,000 a year formerly paid for transportation and other expenses of maintaining these boys and girls in college. Public demand has created the college. Public approval should now be given to the proposal to erect permanent buildings for this institution.

PICK 'EM UP AND LAY 'EM DOWN

Mr. A and Mr. B, having at hand a large rectangular table and more poker chips than they know what to do with, play the following game:

Mr. A places a chip flat down on the table, and Mr. B follows suit. There is no restriction on the spot where the chip may be placed, except that one chip may not overlap another, nor displace it. Each player alternately continues putting down chips, until the time comes when there is no longer any room left for a chip. The player who finds himself in this embarrassing position loses the game.

Is there any system which the first player may use, whereby he is always assured of victory?

A NICKEL HE DOESN'T

Nick Nickel, a student in Professor Ionic's chemistry class, has to get a B in the course in order to get into college the following semester. So far in the course, Nick has taken four quizzes, with grades 64, 58, 51, and 47. Nick asks the Professor what he has to do to get the B, and Mr. Ionic replies: "You have to have an 85 average, with six quizzes and the final still coming up. The final counts as two quizzes. You can figure out the rest yourself".

Can Nick get into college next semester?

ANSWER TO LAST WEEK'S PUZZLE

Sneezy is either the baker or the grocer.

Dopey is either the grocer or the policeman or the candlestick maker.

Sleepy is either the baker or the grocer or the policeman.

Let us suppose that Sneezy is the grocer. Then Sleepy must be the baker. Also, Happy must either be the policeman, and Dopey the candlestick maker, or Happy the candlestick maker, and Dopey the policeman. But neither of these two alternatives can be true, because we are told that Dopey is not on speaking terms with Happy, while at the same time, we are told that the policeman is very chummy with the candlestick maker.

Therefore our original assumption is false, so Sneezy must be the baker. For the same reason as before, Sleepy cannot be the grocer, so he must be the policeman. Dopey, consequently, must be the grocer, and therefore Happy the candlestick maker.

To sum up: the candlestick maker is Happy, the policeman Sleepy, the grocer Dopey, the baker Sneezy, and the Editor Weary.

Blue Pencil Bill

Apologies to Treacy Slattery and the Block SF Boys for the dirty dig we gave them in last week's column. They're doing a peach of a job in distributing the stickers for the "Junior College Housing Campaign". The rest of the college can do well by catching the spirit that these fellows have.

ABOUT "DUSTY"

In an effort to set a new style for young college men, a High Freshman known as "Dusty" to his intimates is seen around Powell Street between periods with an Austrian pipe that looks as if it came out of one of Rube Goldberg's cartoons. Watch for him, but don't let him talk you into any of his bright ideas.

* * *

Recently, when the "Gaddy Lambs" were playing against one of the high school teams, "Fur" Pasquallette and "Chick" Chicazola came out of the game and the stands roared their approval of the two lads' efforts. Upon observing this, one of the bench warmers remarked, "I guess you have to be a character in order to have a big following."

Whoever said it knows who he is, so we address him—the offer still goes, we'll make a character out of you in ten days or your money will be refunded.

ABOUT SOB STORIES AND SOLICITORS

We met an old friend who is a solicitor for any and all newspapers on the Pacific Coast and inquired as to how the world was treating him. He answered that he never sold so many subscriptions before in his life. The reason?—"I seen that people are suckers for a sob story and so I give them one," he said.

His procedure, he explained, was this: He would dress in ragged clothes and the tough look on his young face added to his makeup. "No tears, that makes it look too sloppy," he told us, "I just act like I'm a tough kid trying to do the first sentimental and decent act in my life. They go for that. Then I tell them my father died in Vallejo and I'm trying to get up enough money to bring the body over to San Francisco so's my mother can bury him here."

When he finishes working San Francisco, he goes to Oakland, then to Portland and back down the coast again. And that's only one example of how a sob story can make you open your purse. Outside of the desire to make a profit or get a bargain, sympathy is the strongest force in making a person buy something he doesn't want.

Next time a solicitor with tears in his eyes rings your doorbell, watch his performance and notice how close you come to crying yourself. It might be that you are taking a subscription because you are ashamed and embarrassed to be seen with tears in your own eyes.

be selected will attend to the staging of rallies to promote enthusiasm for the issue, and to the formation of an automobile parade to drive around town just before the election. Entertainment will be provided for both of these events, and it is believed that the A Cappella choir of the college will sing Dean Edwin C. Browne's songs to the assembled populace, further to emphasize to the voters the need of a complete junior college plant.

Fex was particularly emphatic as he stressed the point that all the helpers available will be sorely needed, and that the more students volunteer to serve, the better are the chances of the issue being passed at the polls on September 27.

"We need every bit of help we can possibly get in this project," said Fex, "and the assistance of anyone who feels willing to aid us will be deeply appreciated. We are counting on a good turn-out tonight, and hope to get things started as soon as possible in our effort to convince the public that a new junior college is nothing less than a necessity in San Francisco."

The meeting tonight will be presided over by Fex, who will be assisted by members of the college Executive Council.

"Oh, yes," said the pilot of the steamboat, "I've been on this river so long I know where every stump is." Just then the boat struck a stump which shook it from stem to stern. "There," he continued, "that's one of them now."

AFTER DARK

By John Ward

We should like to pay a rather belated tribute to the Victor recording company for issuing the Slavonic Dances of Antonin Dvorak some months ago. Asking, meanwhile, why they weren't recorded years ago and why the leading orchestras of these United States haven't been playing them regularly all these years—especially on those unfamously programmed pop symphonies.

It is not alone, however, for the Dvorak dances that we praise Victor —elegant though the dances be—but more do we praise Victor for opening a whole literature of the 19th century much forgotten by musicians. Too often do music lovers fail to find an honest laugh and a little unintellectual enjoyment in good music. We must either weep theatrical tears with Tschaikowsky, or sit in grotesque adoration before the mock altars of Bach. As for the mere pleasantries, the nothing but tunefullness of Dvorak's dances, they are not for MUSIC lovers.

Once every so often our ears need lubricating—the better to hear how accessible music can and should be. Actually, there's only one way to get at the greatest music and that's to roll up the sleeves, find a very comfortable chair, relax and just listen. When something deserves or demands repeating, repeat it, and all in all make music an intimate pleasure.

It takes things like the Slavonic Dances to help us remember. Audiences at any "serious" concert (watch 'em) rarely appear to enjoy themselves. And how is it possible to hear some music, certain Mozart for instance, without laughing or crying like mad—at least giving some of the joy one inbibes from some sort of outlet?

We know a fugue of Bach's, one of the best of the great organ fugues, that has a theme that is innately funny; it forces a laugh. The second theme of the last movement of Beethoven's Erioca symphony again, is outrageously delightful. But, have you ever seen an audience even smile when it is performed in public? Hardly. Beethoven, so we are told, is a "divine master". Few will deny this, but who will admit that Beethoven is also as human as the men who play his music? Perhaps some, but few there are who will show it.

Take music out of its glass case in the temple museum—give it a little fresh air. No one knows how extraordinary the sensation can be who has never taken part in one of these traditional crucifixions. There is a wonderful feeling when you can say, without fear of heavenly wrath, that you think Brahms is "the nuts". It may not mean much as far as thought goes, and you may reverse your opinion in two minutes; still the experience will take a great deal of the awe out of listening to great music.

Now, we are not advocating musical anarchy. Nothing could be more undesirable than a loud, demonstrative audience (though such an audience might have some beneficial effect on program makers). It would be, however, a good sight to see an audience taking music with a pinch of the human approach, tearing down the psuedo-religious scaffold from Bach.

Because we admire a master of music and honor his memory with much ado, there is no reason for our fossilizing his music as well as his memory. If Dvorak can give us exercises in just enjoying music, let's have more of the same and see if it doesn't make the classics, the master works mean more to us.

Inquiry About Book Expense Committee Made

Letters to this department are welcome. All contributions must be signed by the writer. If the author desires, his identity will be kept confidential. Refrain from lengthy dissertions; short letters will be given preference. Leave contributions in the Powell Street office, the mail box office at Galileo, or in The Guardsman office, W. J. (opposite room 261, Galileo). Deadline for Wednesday's paper is the preceding Friday.

Editor, The Guardsman:

A short time ago I read in your publication about a movement started which would bring about a reduction in our text book expenses. What has happened to this movement? Have they stopped right in the middle of a much needed cause? If so why?

I would like to hear more about it, and see it encouraged in The Guardsman.

Isn't it possible for someone on the committee to let the school know what they are doing?

Editor's Note: We owe Jimmy Preovolos an apology for omitting an "o" from his name (at the end of his letter) in last week's edition of the "Horn". He was quite indignant over the horrible discrimination and demanded a public retraction. We hereby oblige. "I can understand your shortening of my letter but does that mean you have to reduce the length of my illustrious monieker?" he asked. To this we can only reply that we are firm believers in equality, if we shorten the letter we must also shorten the signature.

PRIZE OFFERED STUDENT GUESSING YES VOTES IN SCHOOL BOND ELECTION

To the San Francisco School Student guessing closest to the actual number of YES votes which will be cast for the authorization of $2,800,000 school bonds at a Special Election on Tuesday, September 27, a

FOUNTAIN PEN AND PENCIL SET

The school bonds are issued for a ten year period—that's considered a short term bond issue—the amount $2,800,000—two million eight hundred thousand dollars, but require a two-third "yes" vote in order to carry, that is 67 "yes" votes out of every hundred cast. For every hundred dollars authorized under the bonds, forty-five dollars will be an outright gift of the Federal Government.

Proceeds of the bonds will aid in a realization of the following Public School building program:

San Francisco Junior College Buildings	$3,000,000
George Washington High School Completion (Park-Presidio)	754,000

A HINT—The last time the people voted on school bonds was in December 1933 when they authorized a $3,000,000 issue (three million dollars), forty-five per cent of which was an outright gift from the Federal Government. The total YES vote then was 69,377. Proceeds of the bond issue made possible the erection of new schools which are in use today. However, the total number of citizens eligible to vote at the special election, Tuesday, September 27 is 321,000.

Presidential Notes

By Bob Fex

Tonight at 7:45 o'clock in Room 458 of Galileo High School building there is going to be a meeting of all students interested enough and willing enough to give part of their time to the furtherance of the school housing program.

We would like to see an overflowing crowd, so don't be afraid to come, as Room 458 is large and will accommodate a great many students.

The purpose of this get-together is to get the school housing campaign under way. All students attending will be placed on committee's of one sort or another.

A great campaign has been outlined, but for it to be successful we must all work together.

All are welcome and those who do come should be prepared to go to work for the good of San Francisco Junior College, and insure the construction of our new college campus.

FIRST GRID CLASH SATURDAY NIGHT

Varsity Drubs Reserves 39-6 In One-Sided Practice Contest

First-Stringers Come Back To Mangle Goofs After Early Set-Back; Laughlin Scores Twice

Victims of a powerful running attack and a stone-wall defense, Jack Gaddy's Flying Lambs last Friday receipted for a merciless shellacking from their "big brothers", Russ Sweet's varsity men, in a game played at Galileo Field. The final score was 39-6 in favor of the first team, but the victory was not secured without the occurrence of some worried moments for Coach Sweet and his stalwarts.

With the game only a few minutes old, the Lambs threw a real scare into their opponents when they took a 6-0 lead as the result of a pass from Jim Molich to Joe Aleo. Good for 11 yards and a touchdown, this thrust put the "goofs" out in front, and it was only a few minutes before they were again menacing the goal of their supposedly superior rivals. A passing attack carried them back again to the 11-yard marker, but here misfortune overtook them, and they lost the ball on downs.

Connors Cuts Loose

On the next series of downs, the Gaddymen saw their visions of a glorious triumph crumble away, as Jim Connors, varsity half-back, went over left tackle and, with the aid of superb blocking by his team-mates, rambled 89 yards into pay dirt. Bud Wiechers was rushed into the contest to try a place-kick for the conversion, but his effort was low and the count remained at 6-6.

Upon receiving the kick-off, the Lambs again took to the air in an effort to advance down-field, but their spurt was cut short when Les Mullins intercepted a pass on their 49 yard stripe and lateraled to Johnny Verducci, who returned to the 16 before being dragged down. From this point Fex made five, Boitano made seven, and then Boitano crashed the remaining four yards to another score. Wiechers again missed the try for point.

Freakish Touchdown

The first-stringers lost no time in increasing their advantage. They kicked off and the ball rolled into the end zone, where Dan Baker fell on it for another touchdown. Under the present rules, the defense is allowed to play the ball on a kick-off, if it can get to it, and Baker took advantage of this little-known fact to ring up another six points. Wiechers missed again.

For the next few minutes play see-sawed back and forth, but it wasn't long before the varsity again took command. Starting from their own 30, the Sweetmen rolled down field with Bob Fex and Baker ripping off sizeable gains until they hit the reserves' 35. At this point Joe Laughlin, fullback from Healdsburg, broke away to the goal line, but the play was called back because of a clipping penalty. Not to be denied, the Rams kept driving, and, a few plays later, Laughlin went over from seven yards out. Wiechers finally came through, and the score stood at 25 to 6.

Hanrahan Goes Over

Taking to the air for their next score, the "big-timers" increased their advantage when a pass from Connors to Hanrahan clicked for eight yards and six points. This time it was Connors who added the point, with a place-kick squarely between the uprights.

The determined-looking visages above are those of what Russ Sweet has announced as his tentative starting line-up for this Saturday's opening tilt with Placer. The line, left to right: Jim Barber, Stan Beirwith, Jim Hickson, Mel Peterson, Tom Burke, Gomer Jones, and Frank Davenport. In the backfield are Mike Hanrahan, Johnny Verducci, Joe Laughlin, and Jim Connors. Although the actual starters will not be definite until later this week, it is considered certain that all above gallopers will see action some time during the contest.

RAM CHOPS

By Jack Schmale

When the Rams take the field against Placer in the Seals Stadium grid opener Saturday night, you'll notice Mel Peterson, veteran center, adorned in jersey number '39, apostrophe and all. Between plays, while not engaged in handing the Miners a tough time, plain etiquette will demand that Mel extend them personal invitations to the World's Fair. Whether or not he will, however, is a question.

* * *

Speaking of attire, the pigskin boys will draw the "ohs and ahs" of the crowd Saturday when they take the field. Silk will be the order of the evening, with everything manufactured by little Oriental worms except the shoes. Panties, jersies and even the white numbers will show a silken hue under the arclights.

* * *

This paragraph should he of interest to Flying Lamb candidates. It concerns jersey number 55. No one's wearing it so far, meaning there's a spot open on the varsity squad for some fortunate Lamblekin who can convince the coaching staff of his ability. Peterson was slated for it, but switched to '39 at the request of World's Fair officials.

We have been beseeched by many potential rooters on a rate for the California vs. St. Mary's game September 24, a prelude to which will feature the Ram varsity and Cal. Frosh. A letter was dispatched last Friday to Ken Priestly, California graduate manager, to the effect, and next week's Guardsman will carry the answer.

In an adjoining column Dick Simpers will relate the story of Saturday's 39-6 massacre of the reserves on the Galileo turf. Some pertinent statistics on the 1938 varsity, gathered during the scuffle, will follow.

Jimmy Connors, the Manteca commuter, skipped all over the field from his left half position. Connors lived up to his advance reputation. He carried the ball eight times for an average of just 15.1 yards, including a beautiful 89 yard gallop around left end for the varsity's initial score. Bob Fex stepped into Jimmy's shoes and clicked off 8.2 in four tries, showing plenty of improvement over his 1937 performances.

* * *

Joe Laughlin, blond hombre from Healdsburg shone brightly at the fullback spot on the second eleven. He averaged 12.2 in eight tries, including runs of 32 and 36 yards, one through the middle, the other around the end. Laughlin scored two of the six touchdowns. Veteran Walt Boitano, first fullback, averaged 4.7 on four trips. He has added even more power to his smash of last year. Made one score.

* * *

The varsity's pass defense appeared woefully weak, allowing the reserves to complete six tosses, one for a touchdown. Downfield blocking, however, showed well, especially the knock-down work of big Howie Barber and tiny Johnnie Verducci. The latter, incidentally, clicked well at both fullback and quarter positions.

* * *

Broken field running by Connors and Mike Hanrahan gave the onlookers a few thrills during the contest. Mike returned an intercepted pass for 43 yards on one occasion, and a few plays later Connors grabbed a misdirected flip and wiggled for 33. Les "Mush" Mullins intercepted one and returned 15 yards before tossing a lateral to Johnnie Verducci, who added 18 more.

Incidentally, the Ram starting team

Soccermen Beat Poly In Close Battle; Score 1-0

Old Man Fortune smiled on Coach Tom Wilson's soccerites as they scored a 1-0 victory over Poly High at the Beach Chalet field last Thursday.

The bucket was scored early in the second half during a mixup in front of the Poly goal, as Hal Stoltze, covering the inside right position for the Rams, took advantage of a momentary lapse on the part of the Poly goalie and scored the winning tally.

The victory was noteworthy in that it was accomplished without the aid of Bob Nicco, Hal Fischer, and Bob Campbell, first-stringers, who failed to put in an appearance.

Incidents which caused Coach Wilson's face to beam, however, were the discovery of a new center-forward, Thompson by name, who played excellent ball; the fine performances tendered by the veteran, Wilton Latz, and the newcomer, Sandy Shotwell, and continued sterling defensive play on the part of the college goalie, Chiesa.

To date, the Rams have a record of two victories and one tie, all three games having been played against local high school teams.

WATER POLOISTS PREPARE TO LAUNCH CAMPAIGN NEXT MON.; PROSPECTS BRIGHT

With a practice game lined up with the Jewish Community Center water-polo team, Marcus Hoffman, manager and captain of the newly formed college team, has the task of selecting a starting team for the game.

Hoffman and younger brother "Mitch" Hoffman are assured of starting berths because of their more experience.

Game On Monday

The game is set for 8 p.m. next Monday evening at the Jewish Center pool. Not only will these positions be fought for by the above mentioned but another scramble will be made by Mandel, Korchet, Dolman, Cox, Hagen, Tricoli, and Simpers. Those with experience, however, will be given preference over the others.

The team had their first practice session of the season last Friday afternoon at Fleishhacker pool, with practically everyone showing up who signed up.

Those with experience scrimmaged against the second team and showed themselves to be far more superior as the score showed.

Chance For All

In the game next week, Hoffman will give everyone coming out an opportunity to show what they can do. "The squad will not likely be cut and those who keep coming out to practice and to the games will be excused from their physical education classes," said Hoffman.

A meeting will be held some time this week at Galileo Gym with Russell Sweet, coach of the team, in charge. All members are urged to be there and those wishing to come out for the team should also attend.

Other games with Jewish Community Center, Y M C A, Stanford, and California will follow next week's tussle.

FEX PLUGS BOND ISSUE WITH JERSEY

For Bob Fex, student prexy, will be known as number 44 at his left halfback position.

So while Mel, is drumming up business for the World's Fair, Bob, as student campaign director on the Bond Issue, Proposition number 4, will be gathering votes for the cause.

Meet the Coaches! No. 1, Tom Wilson, Takes His Bow

Coach Thomas D. Wilson, better known as "Tom", in addition to having hygiene and physical education classes, is the college's soccer, tennis, and junior varsity basketball mentor.

Tom is 27 year of age, is married; was born in Napa and attended both grammar and high school there.

He then went on to a brilliant athletic career at the College of Pacific at Stockton, and will long be remembered at Stockton as one of the Pacific immortals.

His greatest glory in athletics was gained on the gridiron as he was placed on the All-Coast football team at a halfback spot in 1932, and then again in 1933, received honorable mention on the All-American team.

The outstanding feat of Tom's career was the completion of a 65 yard forward pass against Loyola in 1933. This pass went down in the record books as the longest of the year.

Although the college has been in existence but a short time, Wilson has the enviable record of having already coached four championship teams.

Two of his soccer squads, and two of his tennis teams have gained the championship, while his junior varsity basketballers established a brilliant record last season.

Wilson's Boys Down Lions In Shin-Kicking Festival

In a hard-fought contest, the Ram soccer squad defeated Galileo High School, 1 to 0, at Galileo field a week ago yesterday.

The center half position was well-handled by Bob Campbell who played brilliant defensive ball, while Sandy Shotwell, converted center half, played good ball at the left halfback spot.

Wilton Latz, and Eads patrolled the inside left position in an efficient manner, and Chiesa, goalie, once again made many brilliant saves.

The Galileo Lions on three or four occasions were directly in front of the Ram's goal and had an opportunity to score, but in each case blew their chance with wild passes.

BLOCK "SF" SOCIETY PLANS DANCE FOR EVENING OF NOV. 11; TAITS' PROBABLE SCENE

Definite selection of November 11 as the date of the Block Society dance, and tentative selection of Tait's at the Beach as its scene, was made at last week's meeting of the Block SF Society.

The dance will be held on the evening following the game with Pasadena, and will serve as a reception for the members of the visiting squad, according to President Treacy Slattery.

Theme Undecided

The theme has not been definitely decided upon as yet, but the affair will be informal.

Working in conjunction with the rally committee on arrangements for the dance is a committee of block men composed of Slattery, Dick Simpers, Stan Tobiason, and Dan Wiechers.

It is expected that the final decision on the scene of the jig will be made sometime this week.

Doing Utmost

The Block Society has also been active in the campaign for the passage of the school bond issue, and, according to Slattery, is doing its utmost to "spread the word" regarding the issue's importance.

Block men have been distributing stickers during the past week throughout the city, and plan to aid still further in the later stages of the campaign.

BOITANO, VERDUCCI AND CONNORS ALL OK AGAIN

In case the invaders from the hills of Auburn might be interested, injuries have healed completely and the Rams will be at full strength for the inaugural contest. Walt Boitano's hand, Jim Connors' leg and Frankie Verducci's knee are all registered in that okeh department again.

SWEET, EISAN INSTRUCT IN GRIDIRON SCIENCE

For the benefit of anyone who feels the yen to learn a bit about the intricacies of the game called football, Ram coaches Russ Sweet and Lee Eisan will be present next Saturday morning at the Roos Brothers gridiron school. Eisan will speak on the fine art of quarter-backing an eleven, a subject on which he is singularly well informed, having directed the destinies of several California teams from the quarter-back post about eight years ago.

Anyone desirous of acquiring a little "inside" knowledge of the game is welcome to attend the class in gridiron lore, which will be held at 11 o'clock and which is free to one and all.

Ram Footballers Engage Placer Under Lights At Seals' Stadium

Little Known About Opponents' Style Of Play; Local Gridders Conceded Advantage As Newcomers Start

Down from the hills of Auburn, in California's rugged gold country, come the hardy Miners of Placer Junior College Saturday night to test the metal of the 1938 Ram varsity, proclaimed as the best in the four year history of the college. The tussle starts at 8:15.

The public, excluding Minerology experts, should be instructed that Placer is a form of mining, in which water pressure is used to undermine mountains and then gather the gold from the wash. The placer gang, it is therefore to be supposed, might attempt to apply the hydro-therapy method to the Rams in their thrusts toward end zone pay dirt.

Saturday evening, to the Rams, means the first step up a ten-rung ladder toward an undefeated season. Russ Sweet's squad is three deep at every position. His line averages 185 pounds per man, his backfield 171, his team 171.

Connors To Start

The eyes of Saturday evening's spectators will be focused on several Ram newcomers. In the limelight and under the arclights before watchful eyes will be Jimmy Connors, left half, Joe Laughlin, fullback and Howard Barber, end, all out-of-town frosh from whom great things are to be expected. They're the "two boys".

Connors will wear number 52, Barber 72 and Laughlin 62. The latter, however, will not be in the starting lineup. Veteran Walt Boitano will open at the fullback spot.

Line-up Tentative

Maybe its because the Pony Express was late, or something, but the Placer publicity department had not been heard from as The Guardsman went to press. So the visitors will at least have something in the way of a surprise.

RAMblings

By Dick Simpers

A new hustle and bustle has been noticeable of late during grid practice, for, with only a few days remaining before the crucial test with Placer, competition for starting berths has become hot and heavy. Grim, determined expressions have supplanted the cheery grins of a few weeks ago, and that old "do or die" look is much in evidence.

Even Moon Burke has been observed to show signs of activity, so there really must be something doing.

* * *

With his injured hand now almost as good as new, Walt Boitano bids fair to be the big gun in the Ram attack again this year. A terrific smasher, "Big Walt" is always good for a couple of yards when the going gets tough, and it means a lot to a team to have a reliable "power-house" of Boitano's type who can come through with the yardage when it really counts. Walt also has quite a reputation as a booter, and when it comes to blocking—well, he slings a mean pair of elbows.

* * *

Mel Peterson, husky center, avows that he is going to think twice before he goes through any more arterials on Van Ness Avenue at 45 m.p.h. One of the city's boys in blue turned up at the wrong moment last week and made things rather embarrassing for Pete, despite the persuasive efforts of his slick-tongued passenger, Frankie Nilan.

* * *

Recent reports inform us that there will be a novel situation if Bud Wiechers, local end, plays against Pasadena in their game here November 11. Holding down a tackle spot for the southerners will be one Frank Stepp, who, we understand, is a full first cousin to Wiechers and great chum of the latter. Sentiment, however, has no place on the gridiron, and Bud says that he is going to play just as hard as he can.

* * *

The newly-organized water polo squad has been rounding into shape nicely. A new institution at the college this semester, the sport has met with a cordial reception, and matches are planned with Stanford, Cornell College, and C.C.N.Y. Foremost among the mermen at present are Treacy Slattery, slithery offensive star, and Bob Fex, chubby goalie, who boasts a record of never having been scored on in competition.

* * *

A group of fellows who deserve a good deal more credit than they are ever likely to get is the reserve football squad. Struggling along with a maximum of effort and a minimum of glory, the lads on the "goofs" seldom receive much praise or attention, but, in reality, they comprise the backbone of the squad, and it is from their ranks that many of the stars of tomorrow will arise.

* * *

Among the freshmen now playing on the reserves are several who will undoubtedly be heard from next year when another season gets under way. Particularly promising to date have been Ed McGovern, genial tackle, Temple Davies, speedy halfback, and Al Huffnagel, foxy end. Keep these chaps in mind for next season.

* * *

Another bad break for Russ Sweet was the untimely injury of Bob "Lefty" Craigie, southpaw halfback who will be on the shelf with an injured arm for the remainder of the season. A deadly passer and a clever runner, Lefty's absence may be sorely felt, especially should any more bad breaks be visited on the first-stringers—which heaven forbid!

WAA Elections Still On; Voters Urged To Ballot

Women's Sports Parade

By Carol Pickering

Vote for your favorite candidate today!! Elections for managers in the Women's Athletic Association are finally under way after four postponements. The change in program was necessary, however, because of the intervening holidays. The elections will continue tomorrow and Friday. Ballots may be cast at the women's gym at Galileo High School, and at the check room window at Powell Street. Freshmen in the organization are not only eligible but encouraged to vote. WAA is one of the most active groups in the college, having an enrollment of more than one hundred students, both men and women.

The scholarship eligibility of all high freshmen who received blocks last semester has been checked. Owners of the triangles may call for them now at the WAA office in the Galileo gym.

Before The Guardsman goes to press again the Initiation Luncheon will have been held. It takes place September 20 in the faculty cafe at Galileo. Anyone who regards her membership in the WAA as important stuff will be present. The hotel and restaurant division is concocting the food, as good a concocter as ever concocted concoctions.

We might dub the Friday afternoon social dancing group the Co-ed wrestling class, except that the trippers of the light fantastic are learning right fast. The introduction of the course this semester has turned out to be a huge success. Here's hoping it will do away with most of the sideline huddies at the college hops.

It's getting so that every time a college student opens his mouth you expect the bond issue to jump out, so we will put in our bit. WAA members trek to no less than seven different

PEP RALLY SCHEDULED TOMORROW

Football Will Be Theme Of Galileo Assembly

Afternoon's Festivities Include Dance In Women's Gym; Auditorium Program Begins At 2 O'Clock

Set for tomorrow at 2 o'clock in the Galileo Auditorium, the first football rally of the semester will take place with a diversified field of outstanding talent as its feature. All 2 o'clock classes will start at 2:45 o'clock.

To promote spirit for the Saturday night game with Placer Junior College at Seals Stadium, head yell leader, Hugh Waite, has rounded up a program of "sure-fire entertainment" to be followed at 3:30 o'clock by a dance in the North section of the gymnasium at Galileo High School. There will be no 3:30 classes dismissed.

Music Featured

Music, both at the rally and the dance, will be furnished by "Lilburn Elb and his Ram Swingsters". Aiding the spirit of the rally will be Marion McKillup, freshman singer, with a recital of popular songs. Russ Sweet, popular grid mentor and head coach of this year's football team, will discuss the team's possibilities for winning its first conference game of the current season.

An important feature will be the introduction of the two assistant yell leaders recently selected by Waite. The two men to be chosen from a field of seventeen aspirants are Arthur Pomares, former head yell leader of Oakland High School, and Bob Hunt, head yell leader from Sacred Heart High School in San Francisco. These men will be given an opportunity to demonstrate their ability during the rally by leading the student body in college yells and community singing.

Waite Pleased

"I was well pleased with the large turnout for the two assistant yell leading positions," announced Waite. "The talent was exceptionally good and lots of spirit was shown. I would like to thank all men who tried out for these positions and am looking forward to a complete student body turnout tomorrow. I also want to thank Miss Keller for her gracious consent in allowing us to use the gymnasium for the dance."

Miss Keller announced that because of the rally and dance, all of her 3:30 volley ball classes will be dismissed. None of her other 3:30 classes will be dismissed—all girls must report to their 3:30 gym classes announced Miss Keller.

Women's Service Society Closes Applications For Semi-Annual Scholarship

Applications are closed for the $50 scholarship to be given by the Women's Service Society, according to Margery Wright, WSS president. Decision as to the eligibility of the applicants will be made final this week by the scholarship committee.

Mary Jane Learnard, Dean Edwin C. Browne, margaret Dougherty, Paul Pitman, J. P. Mohr, of the faculty, and Margery Wright and Jackie Kramer comprise the committee.

A 1.5 average was required for this scholarship, which is awarded every semester, the money usually being raised by a fummage sale which was done last semester by the WSS.

Saturday, September 24, is the date set for the Women's Service Society's rush tea at the home of Verral Weber, faculty sponsor for the WSS.

Former Student, Fred Wright, Wins Scholarship To Accounting College

Fred Wright, graduate of the class of December, '37, has been awarded a four-year scholarship in accounting at San Francisco College of Accounting.

J. Paul Mohr, registrar, Ward Nichols, comptroller, Carl Stough, Grant Marsh, and James Hughes of the faculty, the committee that awarded the scholarship, decided after due consideration, that Wright was an ideal candidate.

Wright is working during the day as a junior accountant for a large firm in San Francisco and will attend the college at night.

While attending San Francisco Junior College, Wright was outstanding in scholarship and student affairs. He was a member of the Army and Navy Club, and held the position of treasurer in the Rifle Club.

The scholarship will be awarded annually and is designed to aid students and further education in the field of accounting.

places to participate in sports activities. If the college had a complete campus, the only sport missing is horseback riding. Transportation is one of the average students' biggest bug-bears, especially when she has to get from Funston Field to Powell Street in ten minutes, which is well nigh impossible. Result is that many women do not enroll in their favorite sports because of the distance and time shortage. We'll bet this is one time when the Co-eds wish they could add a few years to their age. But just for voting day, of course.

Hotel Division Graduates Placed In Responsible, Well Paid Local Positions

Proof that training in the Hotel and Restaurant Division of the college does definitely help the student secure employment in these industries is shown by the following spring graduates of the division who have already been placed in responsible, well paid positions.

Collins Overlands is now employed in the front office of the Fairmont Hotel; Wenzel Peck has been placed as a chef at the Oakland Women's City Club; Harley Johnson is employed in the kitchen of the Hotel Empire. Trevitt Wilson has secured a position in the front office of the El Cortez Hotel; Louis Aber is working as a receiving clerk at the Whitcomb Hotel; while Naomi Giffin has been appointed as the assistant dining room director of the Encina Hall at Stanford University.

—FOUR FOR 4—

—And 4 for 2,000. That's the answer to the question asked in the same picture in last week's Guardsman. The meaning, of course, shows that in the upper caption, the four students in the picture (left to right) Bob Fex, Dixie McCormick, Jack Schmale and Dolly Bernthal, are FOR Proposition Number 4, the school bond issue.

The 4 for 2,000 means that you and you and you—all 2,000 of you, will benefit by the passing of the issue.

Since you're tired of commuting and since you want a new campus, why not DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT? Come to the important student campaign meeting TONIGHT in Room 458, Galileo, meet Chairman Bob Fex and put your shoulder to the wheel!

REPRESENTATIVES ASKED TO BRING CLUB ADVISORY BOARD BLANKS TUES.; SPEAKERS FEATURE GROUP MEET

John Julius, club advisory head, expressed appreciation of the attendance of clubs at the first meeting of the board held yesterday. Blanks were given to each representative of an organization, to be filled out and returned at the next meeting. "I'll tell you I won't have this room," protested the old lady to the bell-boy who was conducting her. "I ain't going to pay my good money for a pig sty with a measly little folding bed in it," she exclaimed. "If you think that just because I'm from the sticks . . ."

Profoundly disgusted, the boy cut her short. "Get in, mum, get in. This ain't your room. This is the elevator."

New Choir Class Accommodates Waiting-List

Meets Monday Nights At Galileo; Also Open To Former Students

Because of the increased interest in the A Cappella Choir, Flossita Badger, instructor in music, has announced a new class in choir work. The new class will meet on Monday evenings at Galileo High School, and is open to all former members and any new comers who were unable to enter the regular section.

"This year's choir," says Miss Badger, "will probably surpass that of last year in ability. The section has been closed because of lack of facilities and at present our choir is limited to 56 members. However, it is hoped that our new section will develop sufficiently so as to accommodate those on the waiting list."

The success of two former music students, Dorothy Roberts '36 and Mary Helen Markham, has been such that they have been invited to sing with the San Francisco Opera Company during the coming season. Miss Roberts was soloist at the graduation ceremonies in June, 1936.

Men Outnumber Women, Registrar Reveals; Nichols Wants Students

Men outnumber the women registered in the college two to one, it was revealed by Mary Jane Learnard, Assistant Registrar, last week.

"The reason for this," Miss Learnard explained, "is the fact that many parents will not allow their children, especially their daughters, to attend this college because there are so many houses of education constituting the college, and therefore they think it better to wait until the campus is completed. Meanwhile their daughters attend other colleges."

Registration figures this week total 2050 students. J. Paul Mohr, Registrar, expressed appreciation of the cooperation among faculty and students that sped registration week with a minimum of difficulty and confusion.

will average 176 pounds per position. Starting line will scale 185, the backs 171. The unit system of four backs, seven linemen or even 11 men, will be employed generally throughout the season, beginning Saturday night.

So that's the dope, Mr. and Miss Ram. If it isn't sufficient to satisfy your gridiron curiosity come out to Seals Stadium Saturday evening and get behind the Red and White eleven. Remember, the kick-off's at 8:15!

Judicial Committee Now Functioning Body; Chosen At Ex-Council Meeting

Chosen after lengthy deliberation by the Executive Council last week, the Judicial Committee, composed of Dick Simpers, Howard Cloud, Margaret Wright, and Betty McAllister, is now a functioning body and will impose penalties for the misuse of Associated Students cards and other misdemeanors.

The officials of the committee fulfill all qualifications of membership in the Committee and are known for their capabilities. Dick Simpers is assistant editor of The Guardsman and is also a member of the Block SF. Howard Cloud is active in the ASS and is the president of the Beta Phi Fraternity. Margaret Wright is president of the Women's Service Society, and Betty McAllister is president of the French Club and Secretary of the WSS. Bob Fex, Associated Students President will head the committee.

All students owing notes at the bank are urged by Carl F. Stough to pay these notes at once. The bank is in the Galileo High School, adjoining Room 346, and it is open from 2:30 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. o'clock.

Good Blocking Feature of Inter-Squad Game; Barber And McGovern Stand Out

The final tally came after another sustained drive when Laughlin, again drove over to bring the total of points to 38. Wiechers' placement wobbled over the crossbar, and the count stood at 39 to 6 at the contest ended.

Outstanding throughout the tussle was the blocking displayed by the varsity. Both linemen and backs really went to town on clearing the path for the runners, mowing down their unfortunate opponents with regularity. Pass defense was practically air-tight, as evidenced by the fact that the attempted aerial circus of the reserves was singularly ineffective.

Practically all the men on both squads saw action at one time or another, with Barber, Davenport, Burke, and Peterson shining for the varsity, and McGovern, Pasquallette, and Ellis for the reserves.

WAA Election Of Managers Early Today

Initiation Luncheon Given Newcomers Tuesday, Sept. 20

After the fourth postponement, election of managers for the '14 fall season sports of the Womens Athletic Association started early this morning at the Extension Building.

Originally scheduled to begin last Wednesday and Thursday the elections were postponed because of the intervening holidays and because of conflicting physical education classes in the Galileo Building, Peggy Park, president of the WAA, said.

By continuing the election this afternoon at the Galileo Building and tomorrow morning and afternoon all members of the WAA and participants in the sports will have a chance to vote, Peggy Park announced.

All students engaging in WAA sports, whether they are members of the organization or not and all members of the WAA even though they may not be going out for a sport this term may cast a ballot, declared Peggy Park.

Freshmen women and new students will be aided in their choice of election by pictures of the candidates posted at both polls, Peggy Park said.

Results of the election will not be revealed to the student body until Tuesday morning, according to a recent decision of the WAA council.

Luncheon Tuesday

Entertainment, food, and information about activities are offered by the Women's Athletic Association next Tuesday, September 20 at their annual Initiation Luncheon.

Held especially for freshmen and other new members, a welcome will be extended by Margaret Parks, WAA president, and faculty sponsor Vera Spencer. The award system will be explained and one of the red and white emblems displayed.

Serving on the luncheon committee are General Chairman, Phyllis Learned; Decorations, Marian Dickie and Assistant Peggy Camper; Arrangements, Polly Trenk and Assistants Jane Mitchell, Jean Gross, Dorothy Pilgrim; and Re-arrangements, Sylvia Wall and Muriel Grinelle.

Freshmen as well as second year women are eligible for an award and are urged by the sports instructors to work towards that goal.

Frosh Sponsor Assembly At 2 p. m. Thursday

Speeches, Music, Magician Feature Galileo Program

An all college rally, sponsored by the low freshman class, to promote spirit for the Junior College housing campaign, will be held tomorrow in the Galileo Auditorium at two o'clock.

Ray Diehl, frosh leader and chairman of the rally, has announced that entertainment will be offered in the form of speeches, music, and a magician. "This event is the first of its kind ever to be sponsored by the low frosh," Diehl said, "and we promise it will be outstanding, not only because our class is sponsoring it, but also because a novel program has been arranged."

Instructors are expected to excuse their one o'clock classes a little early so that students may reach Galileo in time for the rally. If the assembly lasts longer than a half hour, 2:30 classes will not begin until the program ends.

Speakers at the meeting will be Bob Blackwell, low freshman; Verrel Weber and Nelson Wells, class advisers; Louis (Dutch) Conlan, gym instructor, and J. Paul Mohr, registrar.

In a spirited appeal, Wells asked all students "to make it your business to attend and put the rally over. We assure you a good time. Are you nice or are you mean? Show up and find out!"

Students will be given an opportunity to work for the housing campaign which culminates in the special city election next Tuesday, September 27. The various committees working to put over proposition Number 4 will ask for assistance.

Alden Smith Elected Member of California G. O. P. Central Committee

Alden W. Smith, instructor in political science, was named a member of the California State Central Committee for the Republican party last week.

Smith left immediately upon confirmation of his appointment for Sacramento to attend the first meeting of the group that day or tomorrow.

Duties of the committee are threefold. The committee determines policy, platform and campaign techniques, directs the campaign for the general state election; and conducts and manages the Republican Party between elections.

Smith, who joined the faculty of the college in 1936, is a graduate of the University of California, where he was President of the Associated Students in his senior year. He was active in Republican Party circles in Alameda County following his graduation.

Smith is a member of the Commonwealth Club, Knights of Pythias, Phi Delta Kappa, national education honor fraternity, the University of California Club, and Golden Bear.

Veteran's Bldg. Scene of Friday Night Dance

Football, Proposition No. 4 Will Be Theme of High Freshmen Jig

Football and the number "4" will be the theme of the High Freshman informal dance on Friday night at the Veterans' War Memorial Building in the Civic Center, Barbara Randall, chairman of the Social Committee, announced last week.

"To advertise the coming bond issue and enter into the spirit of the excitement razing in the college, the bids will picture a football player catching a football with the number '4' on it," Barbara Randall said.

Warren Regan, with an orchestra of ten pieces will act as maestro through the evening of dancing, starting at nine o'clock and ending at twelve.

"Admission to the dance, as in the last class dance, will be one student body card per couple," announced Barbara Randall.

"Action Friday night of the newly formed identifying committee will make it impossible for outsiders to crash the dance with a borrowed student body card," Miss Randall disclosed. "Physical education instructors who have large classes, and students of the college able to identify possible intruders from high schools will form the committee," she added.

Class faculty advisers and officers of the classes will comprise the receiving line at the dance.

Plans for the low sophomore dance are well under way and will be disclosed next week in The Guardsman, Miss Randall announced.

Hugh Waite Announces Talent Hunt For Future Entertainments

With an eye toward the future betterment of college rallies, Head Yell Leader Hugh Waite has announced a talent hunt to uncover outstanding talent in the entertainment field.

All students who can sing, dance, or entertain in any accepted way, are urged by Waite to leave their respective names at Dean Browne's office or with Waite.

"Two prizes for the best talent discovered will be awarded," declared Waite, "the contestant who is judged the winner will receive a round trip ticket to Sacramento, to be used on The Ram Special', when the Rams of the college invade that city. Second prize will be a ticket to the sophomore formal. The winners will be chosen by the student body at a future rally for that purpose."

The date for the preliminary tryouts will be announced in a later issue of The Guardsman. Meanwhile, all students possessed of entertaining talent should leave their names and phone numbers with Waite or Dean Browne.

AWS Sponsors Tea Next Thursday Afternoon

Thursday, October 6, a vocational interest tea will be given by the Associated Women's Students at the Century Club from 2:30 to 5:30 o'clock p.m., according to Miriam Dunne, AWS president.

The tea will be similar to the one held last semester, in that representative students from the high schools and women students of the college will attend.

Passage of School Bond Issue September 27 Will Insure Complete College Campus

Passage of bond issue Number 4 in next Tuesday's special election will insure the completion of the second and third units of the permanent junior college building. These units are composed of both men's and women's gymnasiums and a complete athletic plant.

The first unit of the campus, the science building, will be erected whether the bond passes or not, in the event that it fails to pass, construction of the remainder of the college buildings will be postponed indefinitely. The money to be received from the bond issue is to be used for completion of two gymnasium buildings, tennis courts, a football field, and a baseball diamond. The total cost of these facilities is estimated as $700,000, and will be almost completely covered by the college's share of the $2,800,000 appropriation called for by the bonds.

Gyms Elaborate

Plans for the men's gymnasium call for construction of a building containing a large basketball court, boxing and wrestling arenas, bowling allies, handball courts, fencing rooms, and an armory, in addition to showers, locker rooms, and rooms for hygiene classes.

The women's building will contain a dance floor, a game room, a terrace, a club room, and a basketball court, as well as shower and locker rooms.

The total cost of the buildings will be about $550,000, while the outside athletic fields and courts will cost in the vicinity of $150,000.

Field Available

Already at the disposal of the college is a large field suitable for the laying out of a football gridiron or a baseball diamond. This land, which is already leveled and equipped with a drainage system, was formerly used as a playfield by the Recreation Commission, and will probably serve the college in a similar capacity.

Above, in the model for the college campus at Balboa Park, the top arrow points to the location of the two gymnasiums which are in the balance until the school bond election September 27. Pictured in the lower right corner of the page is the plan for one of these buildings. The lower arrow shows the location of the first unit for which ground work has been completed. This building is again shown in the lower left hand corner of this page as it will stand when completed. A story below clarifies the reasons why passage of the school bond issue will not only insure a complete college campus, but will also save San Francisco a considerable sum of money.

Students Without "C" Average To Be Dropped From NYA Payroll

Predicting a new reduction in the long list of waiting applicants for work under the NYA, Edward Redford, assistant chief of the NYA, announced that all students who have below a "C" average at the conclusion of the first midterm period will automatically be dropped from the payrolls. Waiting applicants will thus be given an opportunity to secure work.

"The first check for payment of work should be in the mail by the 47th of this month," said Redford. "There may be a slight delay, as this is the first check issued, thereby making for some confusion at the Federal office."

PROPOSITION FOR SCHOOL BUILDING PROGRAM WOULD SAVE $100,000 YEARLY IF APPROVED

Passage of No. 4 at the coming election on Tuesday, September 27, has been endorsed by all large civic and improvement organizations as a money saving device for San Francisco. Although the City and the local Board of Education are committed to a pay-as-you-go policy, these groups feel that the City cannot afford to refuse the gift of $1,260,000 from the Federal Government which passage of this bond issue will automatically bring.

The need for schools is pressing, all agree. The $2,800,000 will have to be spent, whether it comes from a bond issue combined with government aid or whether it comes out of the yearly tax rate. To raise the $2,800,000 over the ten-year period for which the bonds are to be issued, if this proposal is defeated on September 27, will necessitate the appropriation of $280,000 per year. On the other hand, under the present proposal, the City will have to take from the yearly tax appropriation only $172,000 to retire the bonds in full and pay all interest charges—a positive saving of over $100,000 yearly for ten years.

This is the way it figures. Of the $2,800,000 which is being voted at this time, the Federal Government will make an outright gift of 45 per cent of $1,260,000. This leaves $1,540,000 for the City to pay. Divided by ten, this means $154,000 per year to retire the bonds, and, plus interest charges at 2 per cent, the City will pay only $172,000 instead of the $280,000 under a pay-as-you-go arrangement.

A further financial consideration enters the picture so far as San Francisco Junior College is concerned. At the present time hopes are high for an additional $960,000 outright gift from P.W.A. funds to be added to the million dollars which the City has already set aside for the school. If the bond issue passes, this $960,000 gift also is practically assured. If the City turns down the issue, however, there appears little likelihood that the Government will step in where San Francisco has refused to help itself.

It should be mentioned that these two gifts from the government — the $1,260,000 and the $960,000 — are from P.W.A. funds and that all work will be done by regular contractors and builders and by their regular employees.

Campaign Reaches Climax In Final Week's Activity

Student Committees Arrange Stunts, Distribute Newspapers And Parade In Drive For Campus

Campaigning for the passage of Bond Issue Number 4 reaches its height this week with parades, singing, and distribution of stickers and literature urging the voters to cast their ballots for the issue. Student committees appointed by President Bob Fex have been active in arranging stunts, and will wind up the drive this week in what Fex predicts will be a "blaze of glory".

A night parade is planned for either Thursday or Friday, and all students having cars or trucks are requested to be present. This project is in charge of Yell-leader Hugh Waite, and announcement of the time and meeting place will be made today or tomorrow in classes.

"We would greatly appreciate the co-operation of all students who are able and willing to assist us in the parade," said Waite, "as this parade will undoubtedly be a major factor in putting over the bond, and we need every bit of assistance that we can get."

Choir To Sing

It is planned to have the A Cappella Choir accompany the parade and sing Dean Browne's campaign song, and also to have it sang on the street corners in thickly populated districts. Steps have also been taken to secure a Ram, the college symbol, to accompany the caravan on its rounds of down-town San Francisco.

Speakers are active in addressing the student bodies of the various high schools of the city, and radio publicity is being secured by a committee headed by Jim Parsons.

Friends Welcome

Announcement was also made that all friends or relatives of students who wish to participate in the event will be welcome to do so. "The more the merrier," said Waite, "and every additional participant improves our chances for success just that much."

There is also a movement underway for a day parade, to supplement the night event, but nothing definite had been decided on this score as the Guardsman went to press. Should there be time enough announcement will be made during classes probably at the same time that the arrangements for the night, or "torch-light" procession, are announced.

Fifty thousand copies of the first pages of last week's Guardsman have been printed and are being distributed by students, while the Publicity Committee is contacting all local publications in an effort to secure their co-operation in the campaign.

Many Volunteers

"The turn-out at last week's meeting to get the campaign under way was most gratifying," said Fex, "and with the large number of student workers who volunteered to assist us, our chances for success appear bright. I would like to express my deep appreciation to all those who are helping us in this crucial campaign."

Committees Named

Committees appointed by Fex at the meeting last Wednesday to handle details of the campaign were composed of the following students:

Finance: Stan Tobiason, Betty Nelson, Ray Berns.

Workers' Committee: General chairman, Treacy Slattery, in charge of the following sub-committees:

Stunts: Hugh Waite, Barney Viner, Bill Blake, Jack Schmale, Bob Blackwell, Marge Wright.

Stenography: Jane Mitchell, Julia Spector.

Speakers: Paul Fechtner, Bob Blackwell, Ray Berns, Ed Hattey, Hugh Ryan.

Publicity: Fred Vast, Jack Schmale.

Clubs To Electioneer For Bonds; Block SF Leads Precinct Coverage

Preliminary pledges to "cover" the various precinct polls on the day of the special bond issue election have been made by members of the Club Advisory Board.

This "covering" will be in the form of all-day electioneering for Bond Issue Number 4. At stake in the issue are a number of needed public school buildings.

Treacy Slattery, Block SF president, volunteered 25 precincts or, "possibly more," Howard Markovitz, Rifle and Pistol Club president, reserved 15 precincts for his group while Dave Johnson of the Newman Club stated that his organization would handle 20 or more precincts.

All of the college organizations were urged to send delegates to the special Club Advisory Board meeting to be held tomorrow noon in the lounge below the book store — by President John Julius.

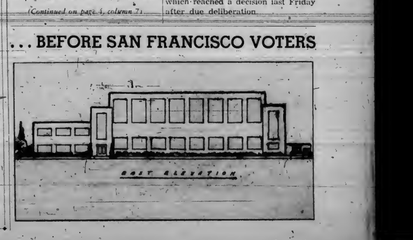
Purpose of the meeting will be to "line-up" the various organizations to electioneer the 110 precincts which are included in the 27th Assembly District.

Associated Students President Bob Fex, student campaign leader, gave the Club Advisory Board this important phase of the campaign and lauded the board and its many organizations for its willingness to work for passage of the issue which will mean a complete college campus.

The following organizations are asked to send delegates:

Pi Mu Gamma, Hotel and Restaurant Society, Physical Education Club, Home Economics Society, Der Deutcher Verein, Le Cercle Francais, Alpha Delta Epsilon, Pick and Hammer Society, Society of Radio Engineers.

Forestry Club, Chinese Club, Filipino Club, Japanese Club, Newman Club, Beta Phi Fraternity, Iota Chi Fraternity, Phi Beta Rho Sorority, Alpha Phi Omega Sorority, Lambda Chi Sorority, Tri Epsilon Fraternity.



Women's Service Society, Economics Club Society, Alpha Gamma Sigma, Rifle and Pistol Club, Forum Club, Army-Navy Club, Peace Society, and the Chess Club.

WSS Awards Annual Scholarship To Sports Editor John Julius

Mary Jane Learnard, Dean Edwin C. Browne, Margaret Dougherty, Paul Pitman, J. P. Mohr, of the faculty, and Marjorie Wright and Jackie Kramer comprised the committee which reached a decision last Friday after due deliberation.

Few Days Left To Inform Voters

ONLY a few days remain in which the campaign to pass proposition number 4 can be carried to a successful conclusion. These remaining days are tremendously important in our effort to convince the public of the necessity of accepting the bond issue.

The importance of the proposition to the college is well known. It is a milestone in the struggle to secure a campus for this institution. Although passage of the bond issue is not essential to the immediate erection of the main academic unit, it is important in insuring a complete campus. If proposition number 4 is not passed now it will mean more bickering and slow progress in achieving other necessary portions of the college. It will cap all the efforts on the part of the student body and the administration to bring a junior college with a home to San Francisco.

President Bob Fex and the Associated Students Executive Council have taken the lead in working for the passage of the bond issue. They have staged rallies and meetings, they have slashed $250 from the semester's budget to finance the campaign. They realize that a little sacrifice now means elimination of continued hardships for the junior college student.

The student body has responded and shown its enthusiasm for the bonds. Almost a whole week remains in which we may work for proposition 4. There is much to be done and it is up to the students themselves to do it. Preparations have been made for everybody to pitch in and help.

A special issue of The Guardsman is to be distributed, stickers to be given away, and a parade to be staged. Students of San Francisco Junior College are doing more for the success of this city-wide campaign than any other single group. We can be proud of that record. But it is not surprising that such is the case, for the college will be one of the greatest gainers from the completion of the school building program.

Cognizance of the great benefits to be received from the program should be all the more reason for working harder. The hardest workers in this campaign are the students who will never be able to enjoy the fruits of their labor by actual attendance at the new campus. They will be able to enjoy it by knowing that their work made possible the existence of the institution. They have endured the difficulties of a homeless college and therefore are fighting for a campus.

Passage of the fourth proposition on the September 27 ballot will save the city a large sum of money because the federal government will provide 45% of construction costs for the schools which must be built. Assistance from Washington can be obtained only by passing number 4. It is a question of whether the public wants to pay for all of the school expansion or whether it wants the burden lightened.

The schools must be built, anyway, to meet the increasing demand for more educational opportunities. If the bond issue is approved by the voters it means a speedier completion of the school program set forth by the Board of Education. If proposition 4 is rejected it means a stumbling block to progress. It is a question of meeting the demands of the modern age.

If the voters are informed of these facts and if they vote we can be sure of victory. It is toward that goal, of informing the public of the issue and the necessity of voting, that this week's activities are directed. If every student and faculty member does his part, success is assured. There are only five more days in which this can be done.

How Do You Know It Will Be Printed?

THERE is a tendency on the part of some student officials, either of clubs or of the Associated Students, to announce at meetings and affairs "it will be in The Guardsman". Many times such announcements have been news to the editor. And sometimes the announcers have been surprised when the paper has appeared without mention of their pet project.

What may seem to be news to a person engaged in some activity may not be news at all, while an event that may not seem so important to another individual is news. The sole judges of news and of what shall appear in The Guardsman is the editorial staff.

The Guardsman is the organ of the students and prints news for student enterprises and is always ready to be of service but it does not print anything and everything just because it happens in the college. If it's news it will be printed, but don't take anything for granted, maybe it won't appear in the paper.

When Freedom of the Press Becomes Important

FREEDOM of the press is a phrase that is continually being used, misused, and abused. Ever since the invention of the printing press the right to publish and distribute literature expressing one's opinions has been championed and challenged. It is one of the principles that were fought for in the American revolution. It is a right that has been maintained since the inception of the United States constitution.

It is but another application of freedom of speech and thought, it is the basis of liberalism and progress. So strong was the desire for it in 1776 that the framers of the basic document of American government were forced to include it in the constitution before the entire document would be accepted as law. The first amendment is probably the best known article of the U. S. Constitution. By no coincidence does that section read:

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances."

That article is a favorite subject for holiday orations but when the holiday is over too many people forget those sterling words. They speak of loyalty and patriotism but the moment someone expresses opinion contrary to theirs, and especially when it is written, they clamor for suppression voiding the very principles wherein they profess belief.

This has been found to be particularly true when an editor discusses a controversial subject and especially so if the opinions expressed are in opposition to those of the reader. It is precisely here where the right of freedom of the press becomes an important issue and it is usually in cases of this sort that the right is challenged.

Freedom of the press entails liberty to discuss any and all subjects; it demands that both sides of a controversy be given a fair hearing.

THIS PUZZLING WORLD

Edited by Milton J. Puzzletsar and Henry J. Riddleston

A HOT PROBLEM

Professor Thermal, the famous physiologist, after many years of experimentation finally succeeded in preparing a serum, which, on being injected into his veins, reversed the normal sensations of heat and cold. That is to say, he FELT uncomfortably warm during a blizzard, and uncomfortably cold on a hot summer's day. The question before us is: would the professor wear shorts in winter and red flannel underwear in summer?

SLOW BUT SURE

Mr. Smith and Mr. Jones both have to drive from San Francisco to San Jose and back, the total distance being 100 miles. Smith owns a 1912 Haynes, and so has to take it easy, but does manage to keep a steady pace of 30 miles per hour. Jones, on the other hand, boasts of a 1938 24 cylinder super-power Speedex. On the way to San Jose, however, he dawdles along, taking frequent time-outs for refreshments, so only averages 15 miles per hour.

Not to be outdone by Smith and his jallopy, however, he plans to make the time up on the way back, and manages to average 60 miles per hour coming home. (Don't ask us where the speed-cops were.) To his surprise, he finds that the total time for his trip was 50 minutes longer than Smith's. How fast would Jones have had to travel from San Jose to San Francisco in order to make the entire trip in the same time as Smith? Also, why on earth should anyone go to San Jose?

ANSWERS TO LAST WEEK'S PROBLEMS

The Poker Chip Game

Since there is only one asymmetrical spot on the table, namely the center, the first player can always win by placing his chip at that point. Regardless of where the second player places his chip, the first player then places his next chip on the straight line determined by the first two chips, and at the same distance from the center as the second player's chip. A moment's reflection will suffice to enable one to see that the first player, proceeding in this manner on every play, is always assured of a place on the table, and it is therefore evident that the second player must ultimately run out of room. If you didn't solve this problem, don't feel too sorry for yourself. Many good men have failed.

Nick Nickel

Since Nick has to average 85 to get a B in the course, then it is obvious that his total score for the semester must equal 12 times 85 or 1020. The 12 games from 10 quizzes and the final, the latter counting as two quizzes. After four quizzes, Nick's total score was 220. Therefore he must score 1020 minus 220 or 800 on the remaining six quizzes and final. He can only do this by getting a hundred on every one. Moral: if you want to become a doctor or lawyer or something, don't get sixties when you need eighties.

Seen while running for the "F" car: —a large, black limousine piloted by a gold-braided chauffeur turning left at Stockton and Sutter with only a tiny, insolent Pekinese pup for a passenger. As we mounted the step of the streetcar, the conductor signalled "ding, ding" and the car moved ahead with us hanging on with one hand. Immediately we thought of the spacious limousine with the little dog having all the room to itself and for a moment we saw RED.

HAS THIS EVER HAPPENED TO YOU?

Sitting opposite from us on the streetcar one morning was a young lady with a big smile on her face. Possibly she was thinking of something funny she had heard or read. Soon the smile grew into a giggle, then a laugh. Everyone on the streetcar turned and looked at her. She blushed, tried to hide her smile, and burst out laughing again. Some passengers gave her an icy stare, some laughed, and the others just looked; but looking only made matters worse. The girl turned her eyes down at the purse on her lap and tried to suppress the smile on her face. She succeeded.

In less than a minute, the memory of the joke returned, and a big grin appeared on her face. She didn't have to laugh this time to gain the passengers' attention, (ours included), because they were still watching her. She was a perfect picture of discomfort, turning her face away from one passenger directly into the gaze of another. Her face turned a deep scarlet and she got off the car. Odds are that it wasn't her destination.

Proof: Well, the other passengers just roared with merriment when she got off. Moral: Never remember funny things when you are on a public conveyance. Antidote: When you feel that you are going to laugh, bite your tongue.

Presidential Notes

By Bob Fex

We're into the stretch. It is these last few days that are going to count the most as to whether or not our student campaign will be a success.

Our most important work is before us; we have 110,000 copies of the school housing program edition of The Guardsman to distribute to the voters of San Francisco.

We are asking every student to help us see that these copies are put to the best advantage. We want every student to take at least 100 copies and place one copy at every house within the immediate vicinity of his home. This is an important item in our student program. So let's everyone do his part and sign up to take his 100 copies.

Other plans that will call for the cooperation of the entire student body are the pledge cards, and the telephone campaign.

A good attendance is expected at the freshman rally tomorrow and a fine program has been arranged by the committee in charge, so it will be well worth the while of all to attend. Our specialty numbers are all planned and should do much in helping us put-over our campaign.

So let's all work together to get our necessary two-third majority and put Proposition Number 4 over the top on September 27.

AFTER DARK

By John Ward

Max Reinhardt, lately of the Saltzburg festivals, is to return to San Francisco week after next accompanied by his "Faust" company. Four years ago he did his version of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" in the War Memorial Opera House—much to the delight of many audiences and the undelight of some critics. This time San Franciscans will have the opportunity to pass judgment on Reinhardt plus the great play of Germany's Goethe. Remembering Reinhardt's work from his previous visit, we may safely predict a very interesting and a very different kind of show.

When we go to see "Faust," however, we won't go for the play, or the actors, or even the music. Those are the ingredients of any ordinary entertainment—sometimes called drama. What we will look for in this (and any Reinhardt opus) will be not the usual, but the unusual. For Reinhardt is a master of stage setting and lighting and the use of mobs. He is an experimenter with the backgrounds of plays.

This was displayed in his "Midsummer Night's Dream." To be kind, the cast was adequate. The dancing and the music were excellent. But these were only the excuse for the play. It was Reinhardt's genius for color, for the atmosphere of Shakespeare that one admired. And so it will most likely be with "Faust." Certainly few directors can equal Reinhardt's ability for realizing the stupendous. And only Hollywood can out-do him—though the actual artistic achievement of Hollywood might be quickly questioned.

Reinhardt a Griffiths?

In other words, Reinhardt is the D. W. Griffiths of the legitimate theatre. His career is a sequence of colorful, decidedly different, expensive, and often artistic productions. He has discovered many artists who later justified his belief in them—Elizabeth Bergner, for instance. But He has rarely—or, at least not recently—produced plays notable for their thespian excellencies. It is likely that if such an event actually occured it would not be Reinhardt's fault. He is interested mainly in the very elaborate and involved stage set, the sensational lighting of that set and the symphonic movement of great crowds in that set and under the lighting.

A good example of his method is the manner in which he produced "Faust" in Los Angeles. On the stage —and probably off—he had constructed a rather complete and intricate German village of the middle ages, with a church and hall, many houses, streets, a river and bridge. With his lights he created a day, from morning to night. Through this village, as his artificial day progressed, he moved his players, his typical German villagers, in the ways of daily life during the Medieval period.

Compensation?

This is probably the plan for the San Francisco production of "Faust," with, of course, the necessary variations to meet the limitations of the Civic Auditorium. (Actually no two productions of Reinhardt are alike even though the play and cast be the same.) If one is to believe the Los Angeles critics, the staging of "Faust" will be the only compensation for a ponderous bit of dramatized German philosophy. However, a Reinhardt production is not to be passed up by any who consider themselves potentially art-minded. Certainly Reinhardt has much to offer not only to the beginner in theatrics, but to anyone who is interested in serious art of any kind.

Poor Rallies Cause Letter Of Protest

Dear Editor:

During my year and a half stay at the college, I have never had the misfortune to witness as disgusting a piece of discourtesy and poor manners as was exhibited at last week's rally by those members of the student body who rose and departed noisily before the conclusion of the rally. It may not have been the best rally in the world, I'll admit, but consideration both for the people on the stage and for other members of the audience should have been sufficient to keep them in their seats until the affair was officially brought to a close.

The rising practically en masse of about half the audience is bound to be discouraging to those attempting to stage the rally and bothersome to those who are attempting to enjoy it.

I sincerely hope that I will not witness a recurrence of such a spectacle at any more events. It doesn't reflect very well on the manners of the student body.

FED UP.

"Being ignorant is not so much a shame as being unwilling to learn." Quotation from Benjamin Franklin. Some students can do their homework in less than half the time it takes others. It isn't always the fault of the slow person. One person may have a brilliant mind for figures, problems, composition, etc., while another person may have the average intelligent mind but be slow to grasp new ideas, slow to adapt himself to the fast speed of modern educational systems.

There must be some solution to this problem which is present in many institutions of learning. Students are getting D's and F's when they should be getting B's and C's. The reason for the low grades is not necessarily a grudge against the student by the instructor. There is something definitely and psychologically wrong.

Here is a mere thought regarding the overcoming of this handicap:

Why couldn't a course be added to the college curriculum, entitled something like this—"Improve the speed and efficiency of your homework!" by Instructor Flapjack? A course of that type might come under the Psychology department of the college.

If you have hopes of being a future Paderewski, Crosby, or Grace Moore, please don't hold back your talents. Let us hear from you.

Please don't hesitate to make suggestions or criticisms about the rallies. They are your rallies — you should help run them. We need you. Don't be bashful. Come on out and let's have some fun.

Residents of the Bay region now have an admirable opportunity to hear some of the world's great music through the medium of the Federal Music Project of the W. P. A. in a bi-weekly presentation of the Bay Region Symphony Orchestra in a series of concerts, and what is more, at a price which is within the reach of practically anybody. More than two hours of symphonic music for ten cents is unique to say the least.

The hundred members of the orchestra, under the direction of Dr. Antonia Brico, are, in addition, receiving a valuable training which will doubtless do much to place them eventually in either the Oakland or San Francisco Symphony orchestras. The orchestras, in turn, will be able to take their choice of trained ensemble players when the need arises.

Sociological Aspects

As important as the foregoing points doubtless are, the sociological aspects are even more vital. It will not take much imagination to see the uplifting effect on the morale of these musicals. It is almost a platitude that musicians need an audience to enable them fully to utilize their abilities; what could be more suitable than these concerts to achieve this end?

From a purely technical point of view, it must be conceded that the Bay Region Symphony Orchestra does not rank with the San Francisco Symphony; however, it must also be remembered that the latter organization is one of some twenty-six years standing and what is more, it has had the opportunity of building its personnel as well as its repertoire over this relatively long period.

Popular Featured

The W. P. A. concerts, furthermore, are of the "popular" type, featuring mainly the better known works of the master composers set off now and then with an occasional novelty. They constitute a medium which can be appreciated and enjoyed by the musical initiate as well as by the seasoned concert-goer. The enormous audiences which have attended the two concerts to date are the most eloquent testimony of their "popularity". It is to be hoped that the ensuing weeks will find the Civic Auditorium filled to capacity that the fullest hopes of the musicians and the purposes of the organization may be realized.

Rams Collide With Bear Frosh In Next Saturday's Preliminary Game

Yearlings Favored To Take Measure Of Local Squad

By DAVE JOHNSON

It's only going to be a preliminary game, but what a game!

The kickoff is scheduled for eleven o'clock Saturday morning when the Ram from San Francisco Junior College invades the lair of the California Golden Bear for the express purpose of shellacking the Bear Cubs in the first gridiron meeting of the two institutions.

All this is to take place to whet the appetites of capacity crowd of 80,000 football fanatics who will be present to witness the yearly classic between California and St. Mary's later in the day.

Heavy Line

The Bear Cubs will undoubtedly have a big and heavy line averaging 181 pounds to the man. The backfield will weigh in somewhat lighter at a net of 170.

If the game is to be decided by kicking then the Bear Babes are IN. Giant Paul Holmes, a rejuvenated tackle will be seen plenty, even though only a second stringer. Holmes a former San Bernardino prep star is reported to be one of the oustanding kickers at the university.

For the Rambling Rams, Mike Hanrahan, an excellent right half will probably do the punting, but at best Mike is only an average booter. Ed Baber, former Commerce lad and the best kicker on the Ram eleven may not be in the starting lineup.

Smasher Youdall

Pete Youdall, All-City prep from Lowell High and a terrific line smasher and defensive fullback will start at that position for the Bear Cubs.

Another local product will be the football playing basketballer, Al Derian of Poly High fame. Al is second team right half and a cinch to thrill the fans with his safety playing.

Two Los Angeles boys, Carl Leipzig, 180 pound end and Dick Folmer, star guard have shown to good advantage in practice as has Bob Hongola, another guard from Chico. These lads will no doubt make things interesting for Tom Burke and Jim Hickson, junior collegian guards.

The majority of the candidates for the Bear Babe eleven have had considerable experience, records reveal, with all-league players available for very position. If individual stars mean anything on a football team, Coach Clint Evans' gang is a sure fire cinch to wallop the junior collegians in grand style.

SCHMALE TURNED DOWN

Although the college plays the opener against U. C. Frosh for the Cal-St. Mary's game this Saturday, Ram rooters must pay the same toll for ducats as the general public, $2.20. Cal rooters go free according to Jack Schmale, college publicity director who tried unsuccessfully to get reduced rate privileges.

The Ramblin' Rams will cavort before 60,000 or more fans at California Stadium in the Cal Frosh tilt Saturday. Although it would be quite a difficult task to convince "Slip" Madigan or "Stub" Allison that their preliminary alone will be responsible for the presence of that many souls, the locals are confident that their play will draw at least a few bits of applause from the gathering.

Which brings to mind a sad note. There will be only one rate at the Berkeley contest. The sum is $2.20, and if you want to look at it conservatively, the fans, all 60,000 of 'em, will be permitted to enter the gates at that same bargain price. In other words, No Soap.

Last year the seating capacity of Roberts was embarrassed no little bit by an overflow crowd of 10,000. Besides, the facilities offered the college's supporters were anything but de luxe, in fact nothing but a tiny temporary stand seating little more than 500. What's your idea?

For the small sum of 25 cents, a student body card and the love of the game, college students will be admitted through the gates at Roberts Field this Friday night to see what State can do toward further assaulting Placer. It'll be State's opener. You've seen Placer, but the Haight St. outfit has a 217 pound line, they say, which might be worth investigating. Then there might be the comparative score angle, which means nothing, but is awfully good material for starting arguments.

Pin Smashers Point For San Mateo Encounter; Manfredi, Simpers Show Promise

Of interest to the bowlers of the College is the announcement that intramural competition will begin shortly.

It is expected that both the veteran and novice pin-smashers will start practicing to improve their game of bowling.

All college men are eligible to participate in the elimination contest out of which will be picked two teams to represent the college when it meets San Mateo Junior College keglers in the battle of the non-metalic cannon-balls. This meet will take place at the end of the semester.

Inter-City Too

Also of coming importance will be several inter-city bowling contests scheduled by the American Bowling Congress. It is probable that the two teams picked to represent the college at San Mateo will also be on the firing line for the matches to be played in the inter-city contests.

Among the high-score bowlers in the advanced class of Instructor Joe Amori are: Domenic Manfredi, Ben Popapietro, Lou Rienthaler, Dick Simpers, and Howard Cloud. These men have been consistent high-score bowlers of the group and it is probable that they will gain a place on the team which is to represent the college.

PE Credit

The men get their bowling practice in the form of a gym class which gathers at the Golden Gate Recreational Alleys located at 115 Jones St. As the alleys are undergoing a complete alteration the men are experiencing hardships and difficulties at their present quarters.

Tough Luck

This was exemplified by John Julius, who at the unlucky flip of a coin, had to substitute as a pin setter. These hardships only will have to be tolerated for a short while until the alleys are completed. Upon completion of the renovation of the alleys, they will compare with the most modern and up-to-date bowling spots in the city.

Several faculty members have been seen maple-smashing with men of the college. Fred Stough and Dean Brown along with Coach Joe Amori have been endeavoring to show the class just how it is done. Amori invites any other member of the faculty to come to 115 Jones St. and try his hand at bowling.

Gaddymen In 26-0 Win

Sacred Heart Crushed As Goofs Tally Four Times For Second Consecutive Season Win

Unleashing a barrage of passes that completely bewildered their opponents, Jack Gaddy's Flying Lambs overwhelmed Sacred Heart's Fighting Irish, 26 to 0, at Ewing Field last Wednesday.

The Lambs scored twice in the first quarter, once in the second, and once in the third, which added to two conversions gave the grand total of 26 points.

Play By Play

Approximately three minutes after the game started, Johnson, stellar Lamb guard, blocked a Sacred Heart punt which was recovered by Carroll, Lamb center, on the Irish 25 yard line. After two thrusts at the line which netted four yards, Harry Aleo, college half, dropped back and passed to Jim Molich, left half, for the score. A Sacred Heart defender knocked down Aleo's pass intended for Davis on the conversion.

Five minutes later, a pass, Molich to Aleo, was good for 40 yards, and another score. Molich made good on the conversion with a place kick that split the uprights.

Mattson Scores

Midway in the second quarter, Aleo lateraled to Molich, who threw a forward pass to Pete Mattson. Mattson caught the ball on the Sacred Heart 30 yard line and rambled the remaining distance for the touchdown. Molich again placekicked the extra point.

The final score was made early in the third quarter as Van Tagen, reserve tackle, recovered an Irish fumble on the Sacred Heart 18 yard line. Jack Frisch, fullback, drove over from the 4 yard line after three power plays had brought the ball to rest at that spot. The pass from Hanson to Bolger for the extra point was missed.

Gaddy Pleased

Molich, Aleo, Frisch, Johnson, and Carroll starred both offensively and defensively, as Sacred Heart was able to pass the midfield stripe but once during the entire game.

After the game, Coach Jack Gaddy declared that "he was pleased with the improvement of the team," and expressed the belief that "the lambs were the equal of any high school squad in the city."

Meet The Coaches No. 2, Russ Sweet, Grid, Track Mentor

By RAY BERNS

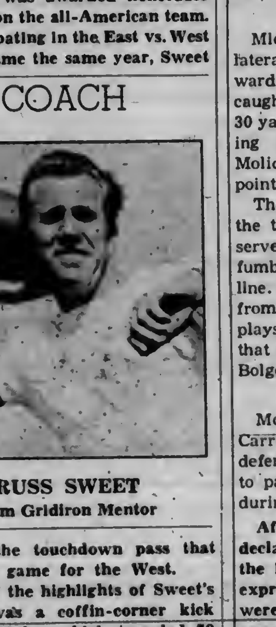
Born in Wisconsin 34 years ago, Sweet attended high school in his home town, Wisconsin Dells, a thriving metropolis of some 5,000 souls.

Russ then went on to Montana University, where he starred at left half on the football team for three years. In 1926, his senior year, he was awarded honorable mention on the all-American team.

Participating in the East vs. West Shrine game the same year, Sweet caught the touchdown pass that won the game for the West.

One of the highlights of Sweet's career was a coffin-corner kick against Idaho, which traveled 79 yards in the air and went out of bounds on the 1-yard line.



Sweet also gained recognition as a track man, and he still holds the Pacific Coast Conference record of 9.7 seconds for the 100 yard dash.

After graduating from Montana, Russ competed for two years with the San Francisco Olympic Club team.

His next stop was at Menlo Junior College, where he was a member of the physical education department for a period of five years.

Russ came to San Francisco in its infant year, 1935, coached last year's football squad into a co-championship, and is looking for a repeat performance.

Soccer Squad Held 2-2 By Strong Bulldog Team; Return Scoring After Weak Start

Ram soccer stars were held to a 2-2 deadlock by the Commerce Bulldogs at the Beach Chalet field a week ago Monday.

A weak backfield defense nearly proved disastrous for the Rams, as Commerce scored both of its goals in the first half and took an early lead.

Come Back Strong

Wilson's lads came back strong in the second half, however, with Eads, tricky inside left, scoring the first bucket for the college. The second Ram goal was scored by Cameron, right half, who made the bucket after a relay of cross-passes in front of the Bulldog goal.

Time and again, the Ram front line tossed away scoring opportunities as easy setups were missed.

Campbell Good

Bob Campbell turned in a brilliant game, both offensively and defensively at the center half position, while Chiesa, college goalie, played his usual steady game.

The team was noticeably strengthened as Cameron was shifted from center forward to right half, and Wilton Latz, inside left, assumed new duties at a fullback spot. Both men played outstanding ball at their new positions.

A certain diving enthusiast takes to the water like a duck. However, she doesn't meet it head first as is the usual back flip way, but prefers the feet first method. Vera (If you push me in I'll flunk you) Spencer, WAA head, is giving her plenty of coaching though, so the duck is likely to turn any day now.

Women's Sports Parade

By Carol Pickering

Officially initiated into office yesterday at the annual Initiation Luncheon, the new sports managers of the Women's Athletic Association will assume their duties and responsibilities today. Of the sixteen nominees vieing for office six were freshmen. Two of these lucky freshmen came out on top. They are: Peggy Starr for Volley ball and Thursa Scott for Rifle; and of the others Dorothy Pilgrim scored over her rivals in Badminton, Polly Trenk in swimming, Frances Herndon in Golf, Peggy Kamper in Archery, Alice O'Hannesian in Hockey, and Jackie Kramer in Tennis. The Riding manager is yet to be appointed.

The main staff of officers which were elected last semester are President, Margaret Park; vice-President, Dorothy Sanderson; Secretary, Annette Schunick, and Treasurer, Betty McKenzie.

The sports listed above are by no means the only ones. A few of the classes were not large enough to elect managers and of course the Spring

Crlenkovich Charged With AAU Violation; Hollywood Venture May Prove Fatal

Whether Helen Crlenkovich, No. 2 ranking diver of the United States will be allowed to remain in the category of divers will not be decided until the next meeting of the American Amateur Union which is scheduled soon.

Miss Crlenkovich, well known Olympic Games contender and San Francisco Junior College student, believes that her name will soon be cleared from the question of her status as to whether she will continue to be a member of the A.A.U.

Made Picture

As it is known, Mrss Crlenkovich recently completed a motion picture short along with Marjorie Gestring, No. 1 diving miss of America, and Ruth Jump, National Platform diving champion.

Miss Crlenkovich, through her coach, Phil Patterson of the Fairmont Hotel Plunge, secured permission of the local A.A.U. registration committee before making the film.

Hopes High

It is believed that Miss Crlenkovich will retain her amateur standing and that Misses Jump and Gestring will be questioned as to their standings.

It is also thought that Misses Jump and Gestring did not receive sanctions from the Amateur Association before going under contract to make the picture. Until the decision of the A.A.U. the statuses of these three diving queens will be pending.

And a bouquet of everything nice to Jane Mitchell, the Associated Students Secretary who is running the letter-writing campaign. Although we have to write the majority of the nine thousand letters to the voters of the Marina and Pacific Heights districts, Jane deserves a lot of credit just the same.

RAMblings

Another tough break for the football boys was the withdrawal from college last week of Jim Barber, who had been counted on to bolster the right side of the line. Domestic difficulties resulted in Barber hurrying back to Manteca on short notice, and Russ Sweet would have found himself in a bad hole were it not for the fact that Bud Wiechers, veteran, stood ready to fill the gap. While possibly not as strong offensively as Barber, Bud is a dependable man on defense and a place-kicker of no mean ability, so there appears to be no cause for worry.

John Julius, latest recruit to the ranks of the college's bowlers, has already distinguished himself as the "terror of the pin-boys". He almost decapitated several in recent workouts when they failed to get out of the way quickly enough, and now things have reached the state where they scurry for cover whenever they see him seize a ball. If he were as successful in hitting the pins as he is in hitting the lads who set them up, Johnny would be quite a formidable bowler.

Here and there: Gomer Jones attributes his physique to a diet of graham crackers and milk . . . Joe Amori is looking for the guy who stuck chewing gum in his favorite bowling ball . . . The Ram footballers may not be the best team in the state, but we'll bet they're the best-dressed . . . Things must be pretty bad when you have to go all the way to Oakland for it . . . eh, Bob? . . . Next Saturday is bargain day at Cal. . . . two games for the price of one, and we like the Gaels to win . . . don't say we didn't tell you . . . No water polo news this week.

Members of the football squad are bemoaning the hardheartedness of Russ Sweet. In a recent announcement Russ made it known that no varsity man is to attend the dance this Friday, as the team meets the California frosh the following morning, and he wants all the lads to be in bed early the night before. It's a hard blow to the jiggers on the squad, but, after all, it's for a noble cause.

A certain young footballer has aroused the indignation of our illustrious student body prexy by taking his place on the first string backfield. But what really troubles our prexy is that the young footballer is also attempting to steal his girl.

The return of Hal Fischer, gangly basketballer, to the soccer squad is a decided boost to the hopes of Tom Wilson's shin-kicking brigade. Teamed with such well-built boys as Bob Nicco, Joe Chiesa, and Will Latz, Fischer rounds out quite a formidable roster.

Hanrahan, Verducci, Jones, Fex, Baber Star For Ram

By GEORGE HOFFMAN

To the score of 19 to 6, San Francisco Junior College won its first football game of the season against Placer Junior College last Saturday night before 2500 Seals Stadium spectators.

Sparked by little Johnny Verducci, quarterback; Mike Hanrahan, halfback; and George Jones, tackle, the 1938 edition of the Ram's varsity football team made a successful debut by thundering over the Spartans from Auburn.

Hanrahan First

The Spartans held the college in check in the first half until Les Mullins broke loose for 35 yards inside right end. This play placed the Rams in scoring territory. Connors made one through left tackle; Laughlin for three over right guard, Hanrahan gained 12 on a reverse for a first down on the three yard line. Laughlin hit the line for one yard and with two minutes left in the first half, Laughlin crashed over left guard for the first score of the season. Connors attempted conversion was wide and the score remained 6 to 0.

Placer kicked off and picked up a fumble on the Ram's 20. On the next play McLellan, playing a sterling game for Placer, scrambled around right end, falling into the end zone with two tacklers on his back. The conversion was no good and the score was tied, 6 to 6. The half ended as Connors returned the kickoff 23 yards.

Near the end of the third quarter, Placer quick kicked into the hands of husky freshman Ed Baber, who rambled 72 yards up the sideline to score the second touchdown standing up. Dan Wiechers booted a perfect placement to make the score 13 to 6.

Placer Passes

The Spartan's passing attack opened up in the fourth quarter. Three perfect passes and as many first downs put the ball on the Ram's 17 yard line. The varsity held Placer on this series of downs and the Spartans never had another opportunity to score.

Here the fighting spirit of Verducci showed to the utmost as he led the Rams in a sustained march down the field that was broken only once.

"Prexy" Fex Stars

After an exchange of punts the college gained possession of the ball on the Placer 41 yard line. President Bob Fex was sent into the game and the Ram's power machine started to roll. Verducci went over left guard for two, then five.

Fex gained three, making it a first down. Following a line buck, Fex faded back and threw a 20 yard pass which was completed on the seven yard line. Verducci made three over left tackle. Fex took the ball, rammed it through the same spot, bounced off

POOR ROOTING-SECTION

Even though yell-leader Hugh Waite was greeted by a profusion of rooters at last Saturday's game, the response of the rooting-section to calls-for-yells was "anything but satisfactory." Those seeking a solution charge the fault with the yell-leaders. Others blame it on the "general conditions of a night game."

Special Meeting Of Club Advisory Board At Noon Tomorrow; Clubs Now In Midst Of Semester's Activities, Many Plan Entertainments

Meeting for the first time this semester, the Club Advisory Board convened last week under the leadership of President John Julius. Gordon Soliman, secretary of the board, read the minutes of the last meeting which was held last semester. The minutes were approved and seconded and nominations were in order for a vice-president. Only one student, Howard Cloud, was nominated and he was therefore elected to the office unanimously.

Cloud is also chairman of the committee for revising the constitution for the Board. Also on the committee are Jean Collins and Howard Markovits.

"The clubs were well represented," said Julius, "but I hope the next meeting will be attended one hundred per cent." A special meeting has been called for tomorrow at 12 M. The board will meet in the Women's Lounge in the basement of the book store. All clubs are urged to have a representative at this special meeting.

Newman Club . . . Dave Johnson said that he was well pleased with the large crowd that attended the last meeting of the club. "I hope that everyone will come out next Monday night. All are welcome to attend," said Johnson.
